Exemption of up to 400 critical top jobs from normal pay limits although these jobs will be limited to level I of the Executive Schedule unless the President grants an exception on a case-by-case basis;

Waivers of dual compensation restrictions on reemployed retirees in certain positions with exceptional staffing problems;

Staffing differentials to replace special salary rates;

Geographic differentials for high labor cost areas with area-wide staffing problems;

A special pay system for Administrative Law Judges and members of boards of contract appeals;

Waivers of limitations on premium pay for emergency and rescue work;

Advance paychecks for new appointees who relocate;

New uniform allowance provisions.

VIII. TIMETABLES AND MEASURES FOR TRANSITION TO NEW PAY SYSTEMS (ASSUMES REFORM PROPOSAL WILL BE ENACTED BY OCTOBER 1990)

The General Schedule will continue to exist in 1991, 1992, and 1993 and the current annual pay adjustment process will be used. The authority to establish geographic differentials will go into effect in January 1991.

Effective in January 1994, the General Schedule will be split and the transition to NS and LS pay system schedules will take effect.

The current General Schedule process will be used for adjusting the National Schedule in 1994.

In January 1994, LS pay system schedules will be adjusted in each pay area under the new permanent procedures.

Beginning in January 1995, the National Schedule will be adjusted by the New survey machinery, which includes the first use of State and local government survey data.

For the Federal Wage System, beginning in 1994, prevailing rates will be matched to the midpoint—step 3—on the FWS 5-step system, rather than step 2 as at present.

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself, Mr. DODD, Mr. KENNEDY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. ADAMS):

S. 2548. A bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to increase penalties for employers who violate the child labor provisions of such act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

CHILD LABOR ACT OF 1990

● Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the Child Labor Act of 1990. At the outset, I would like to salute the special efforts of Senator DODD. The Senator from Connecticut is a tireless champion of the rights of children, including their right to be free from exploitative conditions.

As we all know, the children of America are our future. But the ever-increasing number of child labor law violations casts an ominous shadow across that future. A preliminary report by the General Accounting Office documents that in 1987 and 1988, 128,000 children were injured and 59 were killed in the workplace. Only 37 of the 59 employers involved in these deaths were cited and fined for serious safety and health violations by the Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration [OSHA]. The average fine assessed for each workplace fatality was $740.

Recently, the Department of Labor increased its enforcement of child labor laws. In addition, Secretary Dole has made worker health and safety one of her top priorities. I applaud the Secretary for these efforts. But increased institutional will and enforcement will not fully address the problem.

Current child labor laws are woefully inadequate to protect our children in the workplace. If an employer willfully violates a Federal child labor law and that violation results in the death or serious bodily injury to a child worker, the violation is classified as a simple misdemeanor punishable by up to 6 months in prison. Further, I know of no employer that has ever spent 1 day in jail for a willful violation of child labor laws that resulted in death or serious injury to a child. Employers who willfully violate child labor laws must no longer be allowed to get away with the murder and mutilation of our children.

The Child Labor Act of 1990 will help bring these violators to justice. This bill establishes a maximum allowable penalty of 10 years for a willful violation resulting in death, and 7 years for a willful violation resulting in serious bodily injury.

Fortunately, most child labor law violations are not criminal felonies. However, civil violations are often serious and repeated. This bill will bar willful and repeated violators from receiving Federal grants and loans for a specified period of time, and from paying the subminimum training wage. Civil fines are increased from $1,000 to $10,000. Further, in an attempt to educate and warn the public, the Department must make available to schools the name and location of violators and the nature of the violation.

Mr. President, the disgrace of illegal child labor is nationwide. My home State of Ohio now ranks third in child labor law violations among the 34 States that compile such data. A large percentage of these violations were in the most dangerous category: Permitting teenagers to work in hazardous occupations. The Department intends to review its regulations on hazardous occupations for teenagers and close loopholes in enforcement. Our bill facilitates this process by adding poultry processing, fish and seafood processing, and schoolbus driving to the current list of hazardous occupations.

Finally, the Child Labor Act of 1990 does not seek to put an end to all child labor. Indeed, I applaud our young people who work because of economic necessity or the learning experience or both. Education, however, should be every child's first priority. Toward that goal, this bill requires that certificates of age that are already compiled for child workers must include certification that the child is at least meeting the minimum State requirements for school attendance.

I urge all my colleagues to support this important legislation. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2548

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Child Labor Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. CRIMINAL PENALTIES FOR CHILD LABOR VIOLATIONS.

Section 16 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 216) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) Any person who willfully violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, shall, on conviction be punished—

"(1) in the case of a willful violation that causes serious bodily injury to an employee described in section 3(l) but does not cause death to the employee, by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of title 18, United States Code, or by imprisonment for 7 years, or by both, except that if the conviction is for a willful violation committed after a first conviction of the person, the person shall be punished by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of such title 18 or by imprisonment for 14 years, or by both; or

"(2) in the case of a willful violation that causes death to an employee described in section 3(l), by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of such title 18 or by imprisonment for 10 years, or by both, except that if the conviction is for a willful violation committed after a first conviction of the person, the person shall be punished by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of such title 18 or by imprisonment for 20 years, or by both.".

SEC. 3. CIVIL PENALTIES FOR CHILD LABOR VIOLATIONS.

Section 16(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 216(e)) is amended—

(1) by striking "$1,000" and inserting "$10,000";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively;

(3) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation;

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person who willfully violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, on more than one occasion, shall, on such additional violation, be ineligible—

"(A) for any direct or indirect Federal grant or Federal guaranteed loan, for 5 years after the date of the determination; or

"(B) to pay the training wage authorized by section 6 of Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1989 (29 U.S.C. 206 note).

"(3) The Secretary shall post and otherwise make available to affected school districts the name of each employer who violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, together with a description of the location and nature of the violation.".

SEC. 4. CERTIFICATION OF SCHOOL ATTENDANCE FOR CHILD LABOR CERTIFICATION.

The first sentence of section 3(l) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1939 (29 U.S.C. 212(d)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "and certifying that the person is at least meeting the minimum State requirements for school attendance".

SEC. 5. HAZARDOUS CHILD LABOR OCCUPATIONS.

The Secretary of Labor shall find and declare that poultry processing, paper baling, fish and seafood processing, school bus driving, and handling power-driven meat slicing machines in restaurants (among other occupations declared by the Secretary) are occupations that are particularly hazardous for the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 for purposes of section 3(l) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.●

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to address an issue that should be a matter of historical curiosity, not the regrettable subject of today's headlines—the exploitation of children in the work place. Over 50 years ago we enacted a national child labor law to protect children from working at too young an age, for excessive hours, or in hazardous occupations. Unfortunately, recent GAO studies and special enforcement efforts by the Department of Labor indicate that child labor remains a modern-day problem. For thousands of children across the country, current law and current enforcement don't provide the necessary protection.

Therefore, today I am joining with my colleague, Senator METZENBAUM, in introducing a bill to strengthen our child labor laws. In addition, Senator METZENBAUM and I will be examining the issue in detail at a joint hearing on May 8 of the Subcommittee of Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism and the Subcommittee on Labor, both of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

The Fair Labor Standards Act [FLSA] and its regulation prohibit most paid employment under age 14, limit the hours which 14 and 15 year olds may work, and prohibit employment under age 18 in specified hazardous occupations, including meatprocessing, construction, operating power-driven machines, baking, and commercial driving. The Department of Labor enforces these provisions, and employers are subject to fines for violations.

Since the mid-1980's, there has been a dramatic increase in the violations of these child labor standards. According to a GAO study released last month, the number of children found to be illegally employed reached almost 22,500 in 1989, up from 9,200 in 1983, and remains above the levels reached during the late 1970's. For 3 days in March, the Labor Department assigned investigators across the country to focus on child labor violations. In that 1 week, they found over 12,500 violations. Almost half of the businesses investigated were breaking the law.

These violations are deeply troubling because of the damage done to the individual young people and because of what they say about the future prospects of this generation of America's youth. Tragic examples of exploitation, or injury, and even of death have surfaced recently.

A January New York Times story describes 11-year-old Maria Mendez on a Friday morning trimming threads from belts at a Manhattan garment factory. When the New York State Department of Labor asked youth across the State to fill out questionnaires on their work, three-quarters of the 400 thousand surveys came back, 56 percent of them documenting child labor violations. The stories spanned urban, suburban and rural settings. For example, a 15-year-old told of working as a cook up to 45 hours during a school week, where he lost a finger while using a slicer and suffered a third-degree burn on his arm from a deep frying machine. At a hearing last month before the House Subcommittee on Employment and Housing, Ms. Suzanne Boutros told how her 17-year-old son died while delivering pizzas in Indiana for Domino's Pizza. Needless to say, all these employers were breaking the law.

Equally troubling are studies that document the connection between excessive work demands and difficulties in school. After school and summer jobs are a time-honored tradition for American teenagers. This is a positive tradition, for such part-time jobs can help tremendously in developing a young person's confidence and skills, and in many cases the added income is important to family finances. But if children are too young, or hours too long, this employment erodes the child's success at school.

Today a majority of teenagers work while still in school, and many put in long hours. More than a third of 10th graders hold paying jobs and 60 percent of 12th graders are employed, working an average of 20 hours per week. About half of these teenagers work in restaurants or retail stores.

A study by researchers from the Universities of California and Wisconsin found that working teenagers have lower grades, do less homework, miss school more often and enjoy school less than their unemployed classmates. If work consumes too much time—more than 14 hours a week for sophomores and 19 hours a week for seniors—their grades drop by half to three-quarters of a point. Finally, although teenagers often benefit greatly from the skills learned at their jobs, they may be learning negative lessons as well. Increased use of cigarettes, drugs, and alcohol is most common among seniors who work more than 20 hours per week. Putting all this in perspective, the good news is that young people reap the benefits of employment with relatively small amounts of time on the job. But with longer hours teenagers pay an unintended and unacceptable price.

As we look toward the 21st century, we know that the skills required by our future economy will exceed those demanded today. In 1984 about 42 percent of the jobs in the United States required education beyond high school. Between 1984 and 2000, it is estimated, 52 percent of new jobs will require education beyond high school. Any policy that undercuts better education for today's youth is woefully short-sighted. During the same period, the labor force as a whole will continue to shrink, thus creating more pressure on employers to hire young people, and—apparently—to violate our existing child labor laws. Given these economic trends, it becomes imperative that we take a fresh look at our child labor laws and their enforcement. Our policies for education and youth employment must go hand in hand, helping young people to strike the right balance.

This bill would increase the civil penalties for violations, would subject the most extreme violators to criminal penalties, and would expand the list of hazardous occupations in which youth employment is restricted. Even with such strengthening of the statute, the law will be only as effective as are the enforcement practices. I hope the Labor Department's March strike force operation was just the beginning of a sustained increase in investigations, coupled with administrative strengthening of regulations on child labor. Only if employers take our child labor laws seriously and comply fully will we protect our Nation's youth from tragic and unnecessary losses, whether the loss of good health in an unsafe workplace or the forfeiture of their educational opportunities.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Child Labor Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. CRIMINAL PENALTIES FOR CHILD LABOR VIOLATIONS.

Section 16 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 216) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) Any person who willfully violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, shall, on conviction be punished—

"(1) in the case of a willful violation that causes serious bodily injury to an employee described in section 3(1) but does not cause death to the employee, by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of title 18, United States Code, or by imprisonment for 7 years, or by both, except that if the conviction is for a willful violation committed after a first conviction of the person, the person shall be punished by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of such title 18 or by imprisonment for 14 years, or by both; or

"(2) in the case of a willful violation that causes death to an employee described in section 3(1), by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of such title 18 or by imprisonment for 10 years, or by both, except that if the conviction is for a willful violation committed after a first conviction of the person, the person shall be punished by a fine in accordance with section 3571 of such title 18 or by imprisonment for 20 years, or by both.".

SEC. 3. CIVIL PENALTIES FOR CHILD LABOR VIOLATIONS.

Section 16(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 216(e)) is amended—

(1) by striking "$1,000" and inserting "$10,000";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively;

(3) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation;

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person who willfully violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, on more than one occasion, shall, on such additional violation, be ineligible—

"(A) for any direct or indirect Federal grant or Federal guaranteed loan, for 5 years after the date of the determination; or

"(B) to pay the training wage authorized by section 6 of Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1989 (29 U.S.C. 206 note).

"(3) The Secretary shall post and otherwise make available to affected school districts the name of each employer who violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, together with a description of the location and nature of the violation.".

SEC. 4. CERTIFICATION OF SCHOOL ATTENDANCE FOR CHILD LABOR CERTIFICATION.

The first sentence of section 3(l) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1939 (29 U.S.C. 212(d)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "and certifying that the person is at least meeting the minimum State requirements for school attendance".

SEC. 5. HAZARDOUS CHILD LABOR OCCUPATIONS.

The Secretary of Labor shall find and declare that poultry processing, paper baling, fish and seafood processing, school bus driving, and handling power-driven meat slicing machines in restaurants (among other occupations declared by the Secretary) are occupations that are particularly hazardous for the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 for purposes of section 3(l) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.●

By Mr. SYMMS:

S. 2549. A bill to temporarily suspend the duty on certain radio tape player combinations; to the Committee on Finance.

S. 2550. A bill to extend the temporary duty suspension on certain entertainment broadcast band receivers; to the Committee on Finance.

TARIFFS ON CONSUMER ELECTRONICS

● Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I would like to introduce two bills to suspend the duty on certain imports of consumer electronic goods.

The products that fall into these categories are not manufactured in the United States. They are low end, unsophisticated models chiefly produced in Third World countries, by both United States and foreign companies, as a means of keeping costs down.

RADIO TAPE PLAYER COMBINATIONS

The 1988 figures on U.S. imports for consumption provided by the U.S. Department of Commerce put the value on this product category at $549 million. Projected 1989 totals would amount to $640 million. At the 1989 import volume, the U.S. duty loss of 3.7 percent on these products would be just under $20 million. Once that importers' cost reduction is passed onto the consumers, retail prices, based on usual markup percentages, would drop by $50 million at the same volume, and even lower if retail prices drive sales volume higher.

CLOCK RADIOS

According to industry figures, $200 million of the affected clock radios were sold in the United States in 1989. At that volume the duty loss of 6 percent on these products would be $12 million. Without the continuation of the existing duty suspension, increased costs to American consumers based on normal markup ratios would be $36 to $42 million.

Unlike some other industries that rarely lower prices as costs are reduced, the history of price decreases in the consumer electronics industry over the past decade demonstrates that any importer savings would likely be passed onto the consumer. Whereas the index for all products listed in the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Consumer Price Index [CPI] as of December 31, 1988, had increased to 120.5 versus 100 for the CPI base period of 1982–84, the index for sound equipment dropped to 91.9.

Buyers of low end entertainment products such as radio tape player combinations and clock radios are especially likely to make purchasing decisions based on cost factors. Such buyers would benefit from the duty suspensions as they would make the affected equipment that much more affordable.

Mr. President, I hope my legislation will receive favorable consideration later this year by the Finance Committee and the full Congress.

I ask unanimous consent that the two bills be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2549

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. RADIO TAPE PLAYER COMBINATIONS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new subheading:

"9902.95.05	Radio broadcast receivers capable of operating without an external source of power, combined with tape players which are incapable of recording (provided for in subheading 8527.11.11).	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendment made by section 1 shall apply with respect to goods entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, after the 15th day after the date of the enactment of this Act.

S. 2550

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ENTERTAINMENT BROADCAST BAND RECEIVERS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States is amended by inserting the following in place of existing Subheading 9902.85.27:

"9902.85.27	Entertainment broadcast band receivers valued not over $40 each (provided for in subheading 8527.19.00 or 8527.32.00) incorporating timekeeping or time display devices, not in combination with any other article, and not designed for motor vehicle installation.	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendment made by section 1 shall apply with respect to goods entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, after the 15th day after the date of the enactment of this Act.●

By Mr. SYMMS (for himself and Mr. DOLE):

S. 2551. A bill to clarify the application of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to personal use of airplanes; to the Committee on Finance.

TAX TREATMENT OF TRAVEL ON COMPANY AIRCRAFT

● Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, together with Senator DOLE, I am introducing legislation to remedy an unfair situation in the Tax Code that should have been redressed long ago.

Similar language was agreed to by the Committee on Finance last year as part of the budget reconciliation legislation for fiscal year 1990, but it was, unfortunately dropped, along with several other meritorious changes in the tax laws, when the Senate decided to adopt a bare-bones package. As a result, we are introducing this Finance Committee approved language as a free-standing bill.

At the outset, I would like to bring up the problem the Finance Committee addressed in some perspective.

BACKGROUND

Prior to the Treasury Department's recent regulations, many companies had a longstanding practice of allowing employees and their families to fly on a space available basis in otherwise unoccupied seats when the company plane was on a business trip.

No income was imputed to these employees or to their family members and, generally, there was no challenge by the IRS. If there was ever an issue with the IRS, it was usually whether the aircraft was on a valid business flight, not whether a "hitchhiker" on a business flight had to report income.

In 1984, Congress codified the tax treatment of many types of fringe benefits in order to resolve an ongoing dispute with the Treasury Department that had resulted in the enactment of a moratorium on Treasury regulations and efforts to tax various benefits.

One of the types of fringe benefits that was codified as tax-free in 1984 was the tax treatment of free or reduced fare rides by airline employees on aircraft owned by their employer or by other airlines.

Because of the magnitude of this benefit to airline employees, the explicit statutory provision may have been understandable. Unfortunately, it created an implication that "hitchhikers" on company aircraft were taxable on the value of their flights.

THE 50-PERCENT-OF-CAPACITY RULE

After the fringe benefit legislation was enacted, the Treasury Department published temporary and proposed regulations which attempted to establish values for flights by "hitchhikers" on business flights on company aircraft. These regulations proved our worst fears were justified. The regulations were very controversial, and the Senate explicitly rejected them in a record vote in 1985.

Recognizing that its position had been contrary to congressional intent, Treasury modified its position. In letters to Senator DOLE, Senator PACKWOOD, and Congressman ROSTENKOWSKI, then-Assistant Treasury Secretary Pearlman conceded that Congress did not intend to tax the value of these flights. However, the letter provided that the Treasury would value these flights at zero for tax purpose only if 50 percent of the seats of the aircraft were occupied by employees flying for business reasons. This "50 percent of capacity rule" has been incorporated in the Treasury regulations.

WHY THE CURRENT REGULATIONS ARE MISGUIDED

The 50 percent-of-capacity rule was an effort to make the job of the IRS easier. It was a "Bright Line" test to determine if a flight was being made for business reasons.

Unfortunately, the test does not work. Having 50 percent of the available seats occupied by employees does not, in itself, make a flight a business flight. Some or all of those employees might not be flying to further the company's business. Thus, the taxpayer must still establish facts to prove the flight was a business flight.

All the 50-percent-of-capacity test accomplishes is that companies no longer can offer employees and their families the ability to ride tax-free on a company plane when there are seats that otherwise will remain empty and despite the fact that there is no additional cost to the employer.

If the issue is whether the flight is made to transact business, the 50-percent-of-capacity rule is not an appropriate way to make the determination.

We all know that a plane can be on a real business trip with only one passenger. I know in my State a company often will have to send an engineer or other expert to a remote mining site, for example, and no one is ever going to question whether or not the trip is for business reasons. It wouldn't matter if the plane could have held 8 or 10 passengers. If the company needed that one employee at the site, the flight was a business flight.

If the goal is to encourage taxpayers to report their income accurately on their tax returns, the appropriate way to accomplish this is either to audit taxpayers suspected of noncompliance or to increase penalties on those who fail to comply.

Over the last several years, Congress has both increased IRS staffing and added increased penalties on those taxpayers who do not comply with the tax laws. The substantial understatement penalty, for instance, was enacted to address just such problem. The 50-percent rule, on the other hand, is simply an arbitrary rule in the Treasury's regulations which does nothing to improve compliance with the tax laws.

THE 50 PERCENT OF CAPACITY RULE SHOULD BE DROPPED OR SUBSTANTIALLY MODIFIED

The legislation we are introducing today is the least we can do and is a very measured response to this all too real problem.

As a matter of good policy, the Treasury Department should change their administrative rule to provide that no "hitchhikers" on company aircraft should ever be taxed on the value of a flight so long as the aircraft is flying for valid business reasons.

But the legislation we are introducing today is a much tighter rule than that. It simply says that, for every business passenger, one "hitchhiker" can ride tax free.

This is not a big change, but it certainly would work better in the real world than the 50 percent of capacity rule now in the regs. For example, companies could allow employees to fly on a space available basis whenever the company has to fly on business. And a businessman-pilot could take his spouse along on a business trip.

There is no revenue impact to this change because companies have not been offering rides to corporate hitchhikers ever since the regulations have been out.

This legislation is the best of all possible worlds. It corrects an annoying problem in the regulations and it has no revenue impact. It should be enacted into law.●

By Mr. SIMON:

S. 2552. A bill to establish programs to improve elementary school instruction in foreign languages and cultures; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

GLOBAL ELEMENTARY EDUCATION ACT

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to improve elementary school instruction in foreign languages and cultures. This bill, the Global Elementary Education Act of 1990, has been introduced in the House by my good friend, Representative SANGMEISTER, and I look forward to working with him on this important piece of legislation. I want to thank my good friend and colleague, Senator DODD, for cosponsoring this bill. I am also proud to be a cosponsor of his bill, S. 1690, the Foreign Language Competence for the Future Act. I look forward to working with Senator DODD to move both pieces of legislation.

I am introducing the Global Elementary Education Act today because the need to understand global events and to communicate with foreign countries has never been greater than it is today. In order to meet this challenge we must address the deficiencies in our education system. America lags sorely behind other nations in foreign language competency due to a shortage of foreign language teachers and foreign language courses. In particular, we must encourage language study at the elementary school level, and we must provide incentives to our teachers to participate in the advancement of foreign language competency.

In its 1983 report, "A Nation at Risk", the National Commission on Excellence in Education wrote:

> Achieving proficiency in a foreign language ordinarily requires from 4 to 6 years of study and should, therefore, be started in the elementary grades. We believe it is desirable that students achieve such proficiency because study of a foreign language introduces students to non-English speaking cultures, heightens awareness and comprehension of one's native tongue, and serves the Nation's needs in commerce, diplomacy, defense, and education.

Exposing a child to languages at a young age enhances his or her proficiency in other languages and in the comprehension of their first language, therefore, improving overall school performance.

The Global Elementary Education Act of 1990 includes four major sections. The first section provides grants to establish language institutes to retrain elementary and secondary teachers to teach foreign languages and culture, geography, and international studies at the elementary school level. The second section will provide grants to higher education institutions to develop innovative and model programs to train students who want to become elementary school teachers of languages and international studies. The third section encourages the establishment of reciprocal elementary teacher exchange programs, with a preference given to nontraditional language study sites and to teachers who have never been abroad. Finally, the bill directs the Secretary of Education to designate an office in the Department of Education to coordinate and disseminate children's literature in other languages, videotapes, computer software, and teacher's kits relating to geography and international study.

International events of the past year will have substantial impact on America's future prosperity and security. The tumbling of the Iron Curtain, the future reunification of the two Germanys, and the unification of the 12-member European market will create new economic and trade challenges. As the world changes and communications become closer and more frequent, America must increase its competence in international awareness and foreign language ability. The unification of the European Community will create a unified market of 320 million consumers. This enormous economic restructuring will increase the European Community's national gross domestic product by at least 5 percent and will create an additional 2 million jobs.

In order to remain a world economic leader and to increase our influence in the world's marketplace, America must become more competent in its knowledge of international events, cultures and languages. Although English is widely spoken around the world, the ability to speak a foreign language will better prepare us to do business with foreign competitors. It may be easy to buy goods from a foreign competitor if we do not speak the language, but if we wish to sell our goods to foreign nations, we need to learn their languages. Language, in and of itself, is a form of advertisement. The Chinese would probably have found Coca-Cola much more appealing if they did not read Coca-Cola as "Bite the Wax Tadpole." Selling to individuals in their native tongue makes for better business.

America's deficiencies in the areas of foreign language and international studies have proven to be a roadblock to economic growth. Thirty-three percent of U.S. corporate profits are generated by international trade while four out of five new jobs are created as a result of foreign trade. Yet, the Coalition for the Advancement for International Studies [CAFLIS] claims that of the corporations responding to its survey, nearly 40 percent failed to take advantage of international business opportunities due to insufficient knowledge of foreign cultures and languages.

Our future prosperity and security is tied, to a large degree, to our ability to communicate with other nations. If we wish to protect this prosperity and security, we must begin by exposing our children to the languages and cultures of other nations.

Mr. President, America's competence in foreign language ability and international awareness must be encouraged. Americans have the ability and the incentive to do so and the Global Elementary Education Act of 1990 provides such incentive. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2552

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Global Elementary Education Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) due to the educational deficiencies of Americans in the areas of international studies and foreign languages, the United States is ill-prepared to meet the changing needs of a global society;

(2) studies have consistently shown that basic language and culture orientation should begin at the elementary school level yet only 17 percent of United States public elementary schools offer any form of foreign language instruction and 33 States report a shortage of foreign language teachers at the elementary or secondary school levels;

(3) over 48 percent of elementary schools, which do not currently teach foreign languages, are interested in offering them;

(4) the current United States trade deficit reflects the inadequate state of America international training and cultural awareness;

(5) 4 out of 5 new jobs in the United States are created as a result of foreign trade yet few American business leaders are able to speak any foreign language and as a result are hiring personnel from abroad; and

(6) the President's Commission on Foreign Languages and International Studies, the National Governor's Association, and the Council of Chief State School Officers have all stressed the need for increased training in foreign languages, geography, world history, and international studies to enhance our national security and economic competitiveness.

SEC. 3. FOREIGN LANGUAGE INSTITUTES.

(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to provide grants on a matching basis to eligible entities for the establishment and operation of foreign language institutes for the professional development and retraining of elementary and secondary school teachers for elementary school teaching in the areas of foreign languages and culture, geography, and international studies. Such institutes shall allow teachers from other fields to retrain as foreign language teachers.

(b) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—To receive a grant pursuant to this section an eligible entity shall submit an application at such time and containing such information as the Secretary shall require. Such application shall contain assurances that representatives of local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, teachers, and school administrators have been consulted in the development of the application.

(c) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants pursuant to this section, the Secretary shall give priority to applications which contain assurances that the institute established and operated by the eligible recipient shall—

(1) serve States or local educational agencies which serve high proportions of children eligible for assistance under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965;

(2) not serve more than 200 teachers; and

(3) supply not less than one-half the cost of the institute.

(d) REGIONAL CONSORTIA.—A consortia of States may apply to the Secretary to establish and operate a regional foreign language institute.

(e) FUNDS FOR INSTRUCTOR TRAINING.—The Secretary may permit an eligible entity to use to 10 percent of its grant for reasonable administrative costs and the training of institute instructors.

(f) ELIGIBILITY ENTITY.—For the purposes of this section the term "eligible entity" means a State, local educational agency, institution of higher education, or consortia thereof.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $22,000,000 to carry out this section for fiscal year 1991 and for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

SEC. 4. PRESERVICE TRAINING OF ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to provide grants to institutions of higher education to develop innovative and model programs in preservice elementary teacher education in the areas of foreign language and culture, geography, and international studies.

(b) PROPOSALS.—To receive a grant under this section, an institution of higher education, on behalf of its school of education, and in cooperation with a liberal arts department, shall—

(1) submit a proposal to the Secretary of Education at such time and containing such information as the Secretary shall require; and

(2) submit a copy of the proposal to the appropriate State educational agency or agencies that administer elementary, secondary, and postsecondary programs for review and comment.

The Secretary shall not take any action on a proposal until 45 days after submission of such copy under paragraph (2). The Secretary shall not draw any adverse inference from the failure of a State educational agency or agencies to comment on a proposal.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

SEC. 5. TEACHER EXCHANGES.

(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to provide grants on a competitive basis to qualified State and local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, nonprofit international exchange organizations, nonprofit education associations, or a consortia thereof, for reciprocal elementary teacher exchange programs. In making such grants, the Secretary shall give preference to nontraditional language study sites and to programs providing exchanges for teachers who have never been abroad.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

SEC. 6. DEVELOPMENT OF FOREIGN LANGUAGE AND CULTURE INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS.

(a) ASSIGNMENT OF RESPONSIBILITY.—The Secretary shall assign to the Office of Elementary and Secondary Education the responsibility for—

(1) coordinating the development of, and disseminating, foreign language and culture instructional material, including children's literature in foreign languages, videotapes, computer software, and teacher's instructional kits relating to international study; and

(2) expanding the use of technology in teaching foreign languages and culture at the elementary school level with a particular emphasis on expanding the use of technology in teaching foreign languages and culture at elementary schools that have few or no resources available for teaching foreign languages and cultures.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $6,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

SEC. 7. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this Act within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act. Such regulations shall establish procedures for the selection of grants for the distribution of funds, and for the evaluation and review of the results of the programs authorized by this Act.

SEC. 8. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—

(1) the term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Education;

(2) the term "institution of higher education" has the meaning provided by section 1201 of the Higher Education Act of 1965;

(3) the term "State educational agency" has the meaning provided by section 1471 of the Elementary and Secondary Act; and

(4) the term "local educational agency" has the meaning provided by section 1471 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.●

By Mr. LAUTENBERG (for himself, Mr. KASTEN, and Mr. DIXON):

S. 2553. A bill to amend the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, the generalized system of preferences, and section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 to require countries to maintain certain environmental standards; to the Committee on Finance.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND ENVIRONMENT

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Global Environmental Protection and Trade Equity Act on behalf of myself, Mr. KASTEN, and Mr. DIXON. This bill is the same as the amendment Mr. KASTEN and I offered to the miscellaneous trade bill. However, we withdrew that amendment in return for Senator BENTSEN's promise to hold hearings on our legislation before the August recess.

The bill would encourage environmentally sound economic development in both developing and developed countries. It also would help level the playing field for U.S. businesses who suffer a competitive disadvantage because of the costs of complying with U.S. environmental laws. The bill would achieve these goals by linking the grant of U.S. trade benefits to the adoption of effective environmental standards in recipient countries, and by making the failure to adopt such standards an unfair trade practice under section 301 of the Trade Act.

Specifically, the bill prohibits the President from granting Caribbean Basin Initiative or Generalized System of Preference status, which entitle certain products of eligible countries to favorable tariff treatment, to a country unless it does two things. First, it must enact effective natural resource protection and pollution abatement and control standards to protect air, water, and land. Second, those standards must be generally observed.

The U.S. Trade Representative, working with private industry, international and U.S. environmental groups, and information supplied by United States and foreign embassies, will determine what is an effective standard, and whether those standards are being generally observed. These determinations will be made in much the same way that it has been determined, for GSP purposes, that a country is affording its workers internationally recognized worker's rights.

However, these prohibitions are not absolute. The environmental requirement for CBI status can be waived if the President believes it is in our national security or economic interest to do so. The President may also waive the environmental requirement for GSP status if he determines it is in the national economic interest. These standards are consistent with the standards used to waive other requirements in the GSP and CBI statutes.

Second, this legislation makes the failure to establish effective natural resource protection and pollution abatement and control standards to protect the air, water, and land an act, policy or practice which is unreasonable under section 301. The failure to adopt such environmental standards will not be considered unreasonable if the foreign country is advancing in trying to establish effective pollution standards, or if such acts, policies and practices are consistent with the level of economic development of the country.

We are pleased to say that this legislation is supported by the Sierra Club, the National Wildlife Federation, the United Steelworkers of America, and the Development GAP, a nonprofit development policy and resource organization. These groups recognize the enormous responsibility America has as leader of the free world to assure that government sponsored economic development occurs in a manner consistent with a clean and healthy environment. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of their letters of support appear in the RECORD after my remarks.

Mr. President, our bill has two equally important goals.

The first goal is to encourage economic development that is environmentally sound, and in so doing, create a cleaner global environment. A clean environment cannot be created simply through the passage of environmental laws in our own country. It cannot be sustained even if every day were Earth Day in America.

That's because pollution of the air and water does not stop at a country's borders. We live in one world, a world that shares its air and water with many other countries. If Americans want to continue to breathe clean air, drink clean water, eat uncontaminated food and enjoy our forests and wildlife, we are going to have to encourage other countries to clean up their environment as well. To paraphrase a popular saying, when it comes to the environment, it's a small world after all. Especially with countries at the dawn of their development, like those eligible for CBI benefits, and for countries that are not yet fully developed, like those eligible for GSP, America can encourage environmentally responsible development through the judicious use of its trade benefits.

The people of the Caribbean nations are painting on a clean canvas. The newly developing countries still have a partly empty page. Do we want them to paint their development in the gray of soot and the brown of untreated water? Or do we want them to choose the green of protected forests, and the clear sparkling blue of water protected from sewage and sludge? Although we do not have absolute control over what they do, we can use the incentives we provide to help them make environmentally acceptable choices.

Ample evidence already exists that pollution is a global issue. An April 16 Washington Post article, hauntingly described how pollution even in one town can affect other countries. The pollution of Bitterfeld, East Germany, is so severe that its children fall ill soon after birth, and its people live 5 to 8 years less than the average East German. The drinking water contains many times the European Community standards for heavy metals and other pollutants. The air has killed so many trees that even the most ambitious cleanup efforts would not reverse the damage.

However, what's critical for this debate is that the pollution has not only sickened the people in Bitterfield. It has not only poisoned East Germany's forests, water, and air. According to the Post, the region "is one of the most prolific polluters in an industrial belt stretching from southern East Germany through southern Poland to northern Czechoslovakia—a region that scientists blame for much of the pollution damage throughout Central and Western Europe."

Studies have also "traced pollutants falling on Western European countries back to their source: East Germany and its neighbors." I ask unanimous consent that this article appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD following my remarks.

There are countless other examples of how one country has reaped the bitter harvest of another's environmental irresponsibility. According to the Congressional Research Service, the burning and clearing of tropical forests in Southeast Asia, Africa, and Brazil has caused a loss of biological diversity in many of the world's habitats. Experts predict that by 2000, some 15 percent of all plant species will be eliminated. Even more significantly, these fires may cause as much as 20 to 25 percent of the world's total carbon dioxide emissions, substantially contributing to the greenhouse effect and possible climate change.

According to State of the World 1989, an annual report by Worldwatch Institute, the excessive draining of the Soviet Union's Aral Sea for irrigation has hurt regional agriculture, fisheries, and vegetation stretching as far as Afghanistan and Iran.

Even soil erosion has effects beyond the borders of the country where it occurs. In Bangladesh, years of deforestation in the Himalayas by China, India, and Nepal increased soil erosion, causing more frequent and devastating floods. This could have been avoided if Bangladesh, India, Nepal, and China had cooperated with reforestation measures.

We in America are not the only ones who care about our environment. The goal of environmentally sound economic development is one which many developing countries support. Despite political and economic turmoil, Caribbean governments have responded to the region's environmental challenge; 23 of the 28 countries have Caribbean coasts, including most CBI countries, are signatories of the United Nations Environmental Program's [UNEP] Caribbean action plan. Originally focused on the problems of Caribbean oil spills, the plan is now addressing environmental impact assessments, public awareness campaigns and watershed management. Our own Environmental Protection Agency is working closely with the UNEP on this.

Last year, the leaders of CARICOM, a group of Caribbean countries whose goal is long-term regional development, affirmed the importance of environmental considerations in economic decisionmaking and resolved to take strong action to address these issues. Both Belize and Costa Rica have ministries of natural resources which encompass environmental concerns. El Salvador, Panama, and Guatemala have created environmental agencies. If these small countries can take steps to protect their environments, then so can others.

While some of our foreign trading partners already realize the importance of the environment, others are only beginning to appreciate the terrible long term costs of pollution. This legislation may speed that realization.

We in the United States learned the hard way about the human costs of pollution. We've seen our children, our friends and our family suffer from pollution caused illness. We are now witnessing the tragic legacy of disease and death caused by environmental neglect in Eastern Europe. We can point to our own costly burdens in cleaning up Superfund toxic waste sites. According to a recent EPA estimate, the cost to clean up the hazardous waste sites that we now know about is $18.6 billion. That number is expected to grow as more sites are identified and targeted for cleanup. We have already appropriated over $7 billion through this fiscal year on this effort. Other, poorer countries may not be able to devote such resources to cleaning up their environmental mistakes. For them, a million in prevention is worth several billion in cure.

America must take the lead in convincing our neighbors that cutting corners on environmental protection is a false economy. Just as we have encouraged the adoption of other American values around the globe, it is up to us to encourage countries to develop with respect for their environments. If countries expect preferential trade benefits in our market, it is reasonable to expect them to do certain things in return. They should clean up not only because it's in our interest. They should clean up becasue it's in their interest. The second goal of our bill is to help level the playing field for American businesses who are hurt in the world marketplace by the cost of complying with our environmental laws. In 1986, CRS estimates that American industry spent $12.3 billion on pollution compliance. That figure has already increased, and will certainly rise again as a result of the recently enacted clean air legislation.

That's money our industry cannot spend on research and development. It is money they do not have available to modernize their factories or promote their products overseas. It is money they must recoup by charging higher prices to their customers. In short, it is money they spent on protecting the environment, not on improving their competitive position in the world. Though it is money well spent, it leaves less for other things.

When foreign industry subjects its workers and citizens to pollution that we would not tolerate and which we require our industries to prevent—then American industry operates at a disadvantage. American industry loses sales because its costs are higher. American workers may lose jobs, as our industries move offshore where the environmental requirements are more lenient. Meanwhile, Americans lose as we suffer the consequences of others' environmental irresponsibility.

By conditioning trade benefits on the adoption of effective pollution standards in the developing world, and by making the lack of such standards an unfair trade practice, we are helping to minimize the competitive disadvantage under which American business operates, while encouraging a cleaner environment. We are making sure that foreign governments which tolerate environmental degradation do not reap economic benefits in our markets because of their lack of responsibility.

And, by making the failure to adopt effective environmental standards an unfair trade practice, we can also encourage the more developed countries, who do not qualify for GSP or CBI status, to also improve their environments.

Some may argue that including environmental criteria in the GSP and CBI is inappropriate because these benefits were intended to promote economic development in backward countries. However, many similar criteria are already included in the law. A country cannot qualify for GSP status if it has expropriated U.S. property, if it fails to afford internationally recognized worker rights, or if it serves as a sanctuary for terrorists. Similarly, a country is ineligible for CBI benefits if it lacks an extradition agreement with the United States, if it has expropriated U.S. property without compensation, or if it pirates U.S. television or movies.

These criteria were put into the law because a judgment was made that furthering these national policies was as important as furthering the economic development of GSP and CBI countries.

It is time we made the same judgment about protection of the environment. If we expect GSP countries to respect the rights of workers, and CBI countries not to pirate U.S. television or movies, I see no inconsistency in expecting these same countries to respect the environment. The health of our children, and our quality of life is at stake.

This bill does not force U.S. standards for clean air, water, and land on developing countries. It allows each country to determine for itself what sort of a pollution code best meets its needs, as long as that code is effective. I want the strongest possible environmental protection around the world. But I am not about to say that what is a good standard for the United States is necessarily good for every other nation in every case.

Some may have concerns about the ability of developing countries to assume the financial burdens of protecting their environment. Certainly there may be considerable short term costs. But the long-term costs of neglect are even greater, as we have learned here in America. These countries cannot afford not to protect their environment.

Consider what we spend each year to clean up our toxic wastes and to take care of those sickened or dying from pollution. Think of the human cost of shortened lives, stunted growth, people who can't breath and have lost hope. Developing countries cannot afford these mistakes.

I would like to turn now to the portion of our bill which modifies section 301. Section 301 applies to our trading partners in the developed as well as the developing world. Our legislation, as I have explained, would make the failure to adopt effective pollution standards an unfair trade practice. This is consistent with the existing law, which already defines unfair trade practices to include denying workers the right to organize and bargain collectively, failing to provide a minimum child employment age, and failing to provide standards for minimum wages, hours of work, and the occupational health and safety of workers.

Why should the failure to adopt environmental standards be considered an unfair trade practice? Because just as countries which exploit their workers are engaging in an unfair trade practice which results in lower production costs, so too, countries which allow the exploitation of their environment are reaping the benefits of lower production costs. Nonunion labor, child labor and lack of a safe working environment all save employers money, at least in the short term. That's one of the reasons we have labor standards as part of a trade bill.

We need to level the playing field for the cost of pollution abatement and control, just as we have done for the cost of fair labor practices. The lack of an effective environmental code is as unfair as the lack of a just labor code.

As to the argument that these requirements violate GATT, I would simply say that the amendment is modeled after the labor standards in section 301 and in the GSP law. To date, there have been no successful GATT challenges to the labor standards which this environment standard resembles.

Some may argue that adding an environmental requirement to 301 could cause retaliation. In other words, it could cause countries with different or stricter environmental standards to require that our products be produced in conformity with their standards. I find this very unlikely. First, this bill does not require that countries have the same standards for environmental protection as the United States, so it provides no justification for retaliatory actions by other countries. Second, past experience with requirements similar to this has proven that countries do not use them as an excuse to rataliate. For instance, we defined failure to respect international worker rights as an unfair trade practice, yet countries with different notions of worker rights from ours have not sought to impose their standards on us. This is because the worker rights provision of section 301 is carefully designed to respect cultural and national variations in labor codes and conduct. So too, is our proposed environmental requirement.

Before I yield the floor, I'd also like to inform Senators how this bill differs from one offered to the Clean Air Act by Senator GORTON. While this legislation shares many of the goals of that amendment, which I and 46 of my colleagues supported, it differs in several significant ways.

However, unlike the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington, it deems such practices effective under section 301 of the Trade Act if the country is working toward the adoption of environmental standards, or if its existing standards are consistent with the country's level of economic development. Thus, our bill provides greater flexibility for a country to receive trade benefits while working toward a more environmentally sound development policy.

This legislation is designed to promote and reward environmentally intelligent economic development while assuring a level playing field for American industry. I believe it is a modest effort, one that uses American trade benefits and trade laws to achieve an important national goal—a cleaner global environment.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2553

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. CARIBBEAN BASIN.

Section 212(b) of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2702(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (5),

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (6), and inserting "; and",

(3) by inserting immediately after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) if such country does not have effective natural resource protection and effective pollution abatement and control standards to protect air, water, and land or if such country's standards are generally not observed.", and

(4) by striking "and (5)" in the last sentence and inserting "(5), and (7)".

SEC. 2. GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES.

Section 502(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2462(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (6),

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (7), and inserting "; and",

(3) by inserting immediately after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

"(8) if such country does not have effective natural resource protection and effective pollution abatement and control standards to protect air, water, and land or if such country's standards are generally not observed.", and

(4) by striking "and (7)" in the last sentence and inserting "(7), and (8)".

SEC. 3. DEFINITION OF UNREASONABLE ACT OR POLICY.

Section 301(d)(3)(B) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2411(d)(3)(B)) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (ii),

(2) by striking the period at the end of subclause (V) of clause (iii) and inserting ", or", and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) constitutes a failure to establish effective natural resource protection and effective pollution abatement and control standards to protect air, water, and land.".

NATIONAL WILDLIFE FEDERATION,
Washington, DC, April 16, 1990.

Hon. FRANK LAUTENBERG,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LAUTENBERG: The purpose of this letter is to indicate the support of the National Wildlife Federation for your proposed amendment to the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2702(b)); the Generalized System of Trade Preferences (Section 504(O) of the Trade Act of 1974); and Section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974. The amendment, which promotes the adoption of environmental standards in countries seeking trade benefits made possible by this legislation, is an important way of assuring long-term, environmentally sustainable growth in this region.

The amendment prohibits benefits being granted to countries which do not have effective pollution abatement and control standards for air, water, and solid wastes. This corrects one of the deficiencies of U.S. legislation: a lack of attention to the severe environmental problems affecting the world. Your amendment will ensure that U.S. trade activities will not generate the kind of development that is based on the rapid degradation of natural resources rather than their environmentally sound, sustained use.

Your amendment is a welcome addition to the growing legislative interest in the relationships among trade laws, the negotiation of trade agreements, and social and environmental concerns. We look forward to your amendment becoming a part of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, the Generalized System of Trade Preferences legislation, and Section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974.

Sincerely,

LYNN A. GREENWALT,
Vice President, International Affairs.

THE DEVELOPMENT GROUP FOR ALTERNATIVE POLICIES, INC.,
Washington, DC, March 30, 1990.

Hon. FRANK LAUTENBERG,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LAUTENBERG: We have reviewed your proposed amendment to the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2702(b)) and are pleased to endorse this initiative. We consider it to be an important attempt to link improvements in U.S.-Caribbean trade with long-term environmental considerations, thus helping to ensure more sustained economic growth in the region.

In endorsing your amendment, we are mindful of the close similarity between your proposals and those of the representatives of several Caribbean organizations who addressed Members of the U.S. Congress at Study Missions sponsored by the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs in Barbados in 1987 and 1988.

We are also pleased to note that your initiative is consistent with the statement issued at the end of the first CARICOM Ministerial Conference on the Environment, which was held in Trinidad and Tobago on 31 May 1989. In that statement the Ministers affirmed their support for the priority now being given to environmental issues in the region and confirmed their resolve to take strong action to address these issues. Your effort to incorporate similar environmental concerns in the CBI, as well as in other trade-related legislation, is thus in step with views widely held throughout the region.

Although the amendment is sufficiently strong as it is, you may want to make it somewhat more comprehensive by including pointed reference to "inland and coastal waters and soils" as areas for special attention.

In closing, we would like to emphasize that we are very encouraged by your initiative and look forward to the successful incorporation of the amendment in the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act.

Yours sincerely,

ATHERTON MARTIN, Caribbean Coordinator.

SIERRA CLUB,
Washington, DC, April 30, 1990.

Hon. FRANK LAUTENBERG,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LAUTENBERG: The Sierra Club would like to endorse your proposed amendment to the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2702(b)) which we understand you will introduce to Congress this April. The Sierra Club supports your attempt to link sound environmental protection and pollution abatement measures with sustainable economic growth in the Caribbean region.

We further understand that the measure reflects a statement issued by the CARICOM Ministerial Conference on the Environment, held in Trinidad and Tobago on May 31, 1989. This CARICOM statement upholds the high priority that the Ministers present placed on environmental needs in the Caribbean region, and concludes by reaffirming CARICOM country resolve to address environmental issues. In short, your efforts to incorporate environmental concerns into the Caribbean Basin Initiative mirrors the high degree of commitment towards ecological protection already evolving in the region.

We look forward to rapid inclusion of this amendment in the Caribbean Basin Recovery Act.

Sincerely,

LARRY WILLIAMS,
Washington Director, International Program.

UNITED STEELWORKERS OF AMERICA,
Washington, DC, April 17, 1990.

Senator FRANK R. LAUTENBERG,
Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LAUTENBERG: USWA expresses support for your amendment to various U.S. trade laws which would condition trade flows upon the adoption and implementation of environmental pollution abatement and control standards established by our trading partners.

Environmental protection is not an advantage which can be pursued only by a few countries. The adverse consequences of pollution are now having global impacts. Even more onerous would be the flight of industrial activity to those countries with a less sensitive concern for environmental degradation.

Additionally, environmental obligation assumed by industry in some countries should not be a burden in international trade where the margin of competition is due to the lack of environmental regulations by our trading partners.

Your legislation addresses this concern by withdrawing trade preference from CBI and GSP countries, which do not have effective environmental regulations in place.

Workers and communities in developing countries, hard pressed for the measures to promote economic development, are also desirous that the need for foreign capital investments not be used as a license to ravage their environment and destroy their health. In many countries people are unaware that new industrial processes release toxic substances into the environment. The amendments introduced by Senator Lautenberg would focus the attention of governments on this problem.

Also using the Section 301 procedure to include lack of environmental standards, your legislation expands the scope of the measures which have trade impacts and which rightfully should be subject to scrutiny as being unfair trade practices. Petitions under a new Section 301 definition, however, do not necessarily involve mandatory actions by the government but will induce consultation with our trading partners over the failure to establish effective environmental standards.

The salutary impact from such a scrutiny will be beneficial to both trade and environmental policies, especially since the latter are increasingly more international in character. Your bill will provide an opportunity to challenge the legitimacy of such producers, insensitive to environmental concerns, to engage in international trade. USWA supports this initiative.

Sincerely,

JOHN J. SHEEHAN,
Legislative Director.

[From the Washington Post, Apr. 16, 1990]

EAST GERMANY'S BITTERFELD; GRIMIEST TOWN IN DIRTIEST COUNTRY

(By Marc Fisher)

BITTERFELD, EAST GERMANY.—Kurt and Christa Apel spent Good Friday sitting on the steps in the back of their soot-covered rowhouse, rocking their baby granddaughter, worrying that she will die before her time.

"Her eyes already water whenever, she's outside," Christa Apel said of Isabela, who is nine months old and is, so far, the only member of the family who has not developed bronchial problems. "This place is dirt, dirt, dirt—just filth."

Kurt Apel, a 57-year-old electrical worker who says he has been taken for 75, walked around the puddle of black water that separates his house from Bitterfeld's aluminum plant. "Look, even near the garbage," he said. "There's no mice, no nothing. Nothing lives here. Nothing can live here."

Bitterfeld, 110 miles south of Berlin, is the dirtiest place in the most polluted country in the world, according to government statistics and Greenpeace, the international environmental group. It is the capital of East Germany's chemical industry, a place where towering smoke-stacks release plumes of bright yellow, jet black and hazy brown smoke—a total of more than 15 times the East German average of sulfur dioxide and dust.

But Bitterfeld's pollution does not only sicken the people here and help poison East Gemany's forests, water and air. It is one of the most prolific polluters in an industrial belt stretching from southern East Germany through southern Poland to northern Czechoslovakia—a region that scientists blame for much of the pollution damage throughout Central and Western Europe.

Studies by the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, a U.S. and Soviet-founded research center near Vienna, have traced pollutants falling on Western European countries back to their source; East Germany and its neighbors.

In this grimy town, children fall ill soon after birth and life expectancy is five years below the national average for men, eight years below for women. The pollutants—waste from chemical and steel production and especially the outmoded brown coal that East Germany uses for energy—have deprived residents of the simple joy of a sunny day. Friday was partly sunny 10 miles away, but Bitterfeld sat under its constant grey haze.

"Nobody has any idea how to clean up Bitterfeld," said Jeffrey Michel, and environmental consultant who has worked for the East German government. "There's actually been talk of simply entombing the whole area."

Here, rivers flow red from steel mill waste, drinking water contains many times the European Community standards for heavy metals and other pollutants, and the air has killed so many trees—75 percent in the Bitterfeld area—that even the most ambitious clean-up efforts now being planned would not reverse the damage. East Germany fills the air with sulfur dioxide at almost five times the West Germany rate and more than twice the Polish rate, according to a recent study.

One chemical plant near here dumps 44 pounds of mercury into the Saale river each day—10 times as much as the West German chemical company BASF pumps into the Rhine each year. Every day, each one of East Germany's sputtering Trabant autos coughs as much carbon monoxide into the atmosphere as do 100 Western cars equipped with catalytic converters.

The extent of East Germany's environmental mess has become public only since the Communist regime was thrown out last fall. "In 1986, I was kicked out of East Germany when I was trying to get information on forest death," said Sten Nilsson, a Swedish forest ecologist who has collected data showing that many East German forests "are dead, completely. The country is on the verge of total ecological collapse."

Nilsson's East German colleagues knew what was happening years ago. But they remained silent on orders from their government. "Actually, the East Germans were in the very forefront of measuring the effects of pollution," Nilsson said. "They told their government. The message they got back was to plan to replant the forests because the government refused to get rid of the brown-coal heating system."

The East German government ordered scientists to develop species of trees that would resist pollutants. "But that is, of course, nonsense," Nilsson said.

The new East German government has admitted its problems—symbolically renaming its Ministry of Environmental Control the Ministry of Environmental Protection—and developed an extensive plan to slow the pace of damage.

But countries in the throes of transition to a market economy are in no position to invest heavily in environmental controls. East Germany spends less than half of one percent of its budget on the environment. The comparable figure in West Germany is 1.2 percent of a much larger budget.

East Bloc countries need foreign investment, and scientists around the world are trying to convince Western governments that it is in their interest to help.

"Spending money on cleaning up your own country is like throwing away money if the pollution comes from somewhere else—and it does," said Robert Pry, director of the Vienna institute. "Now Holland is seriously considering shipping their equipment for cleaning up smokestack emissions to East Germany, not out of altruism, but for their own protection."

The West German government has pledged about $600 million in environmental aid to East Germany, including money to scrub smokestack exhausts, decrease the amount of brown coal being burned, and extract mercury and other metals from water before it is dumped in the Elbe river. But the West German Institute for Economic Research estimates that it could cost $200 billion during the next 20 years to clean up East Germany's ecological catastrophe.

Bonn has begun to cut back on its own contribution to the East German disaster, slowly reducing the amount of trash it dumps there—a practice the Communist regime found to be a steady source of hard Western cash. Last year, West Germany sent 4.5 million tons of garbage over the border; this year, that figure has been reduced by about one-third.

Reversing the unnatural death of East Germany will be slow, expensive and at times politically unpopular. "With every bit of information we get, the situation looks gloomier," said West German Environment Minister Klaus Toepfer. "It will take a good decade just to get to grips with the worst pollution."

The impending rush of Western investment also worries East German environmentalists. "They are scared that Western companies will come in and do things they're not allowed to do at home." Pry said. "And they will. It's up to the Western countries to help the East Bloc prevent their economic turnaround from raping the environment."

Both East and West Germany are trying to do that. Environmental officials in both Bonn and East Berlin want to change East German laws as quickly as possible to make standards as strict as in West Germany.

There is, so far, broad popular support for action. Ecological concerns were a primary force behind last fall's popular uprising in Eastern Europe; in East Germany, crowds demanded statistics on the health effects of their poisoned air and water even before turning their wrath on government corruption and the Stasi secret police.

But despite the spreading recognition that places like Bitterfeld are the globe's festering wounds, neither Germany has figured out what to do. Even as scientists collect data showing frighteningly high levels of nitrates in infants born in the Bitterfeld area, governments are trying to balance economic and ecological needs.

Shutting down polluting plants means losing thousands of jobs. Already the East German government has announced it will close 10 percent of Bitterfeld's decades-old plants, laying off nearly 1,000 to 17,000 workers. That frightens Bonn politicians wary of any act that might cause more miserable East Germans to move West.

And it frightens plant managers, who have posted billboards in the town square exhorting residents to support local industry. "Chemicals are necessary!" the signs say. "Our desolate environmental condition is produced by extraordinarily high pollution of air, water and earth. But chemicals belong to our life and without them we cannot move to the future."

Some area residents have lived with the situation for so long, they don't know what to think. Ingrid Wurst, a 37-year-old assembly line worker, stopped a foreign visitor on the street and said, "May I ask a question please? Does it really smell awful here?"

But many Bitterfeld residents have used their new freedom to travel to cleaner places; often they return ready to sacrifice for less pollution.

"You come back and it's a worse than you ever realized," said Axel Roder, 26, whose 6-year-old and 18-month-old children have chronic bronchial infections. "I'm not leaving; my friends are here. But they have to shut down some of these places. Even if two-thirds of the people are let go." ●

By Mr. INOUYE:

S. 2554. A bill to include the territory of American Samoa in the Supplemental Security Income Program; to the Committee on Finance.

INCLUSION OF AMERICAN SAMOA IN THE SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME PROGRAM

● Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I am introducing an amendment to the Social Security Act, which will include American Samoa under the Supplementary Security Income Program to provide basic assistance for 1,600 aged and disabled individuals residing in American Samoa.

Many of the men and women I seek to help have been caught between two systems. When Social Security went into effect in American Samoa, this group of people was nearing retirement and did not contribute enough to qualify for minimum benefits. The territorial retirement system did not begin until 1971, and many of these people had already left the work force or had so little time remaining that they were also excluded from benefits under this system.

The Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands [CNMI] was included under the supplementary security income program in 1976. This has been fortunate for their handicapped and needy elderly. In 1988 there were 590 recipients in CNMI who benefited from the program.

American Samoa currently does not receive aid for dependent children or food stamp benefits, and there is no dire need for this form of assistance. However, the elderly and handicapped individuals, some 1,600 of them, have no personal resources and nowhere to turn. Even the territorial government is severely strained financially at the present time to meet their needs. This measure will help relieve the critical needs of these elderly and handicapped persons.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD. I urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. EXTENSION OF SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME BENEFITS PROGRAM TO AMERICAN SAMOA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The 7th sentence of section 1101(a)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1301(a)(1)) is amended by inserting "and title XVI (as in effect pursuant to the amendment made by section 301 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972)" before "also".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 1614(e) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1382c(e)) is amended by inserting ", American Samoa," before "and".

(2) Section 1614(a)(1)(B)(ii) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1382c(a)(1)(B)(ii)) is amended by inserting "or national" after "citizen".

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by section 1 shall take effect on January 1, 1991.●

By Mr. CRANSTON:

S. 2555. A bill to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the lower Merced River in California as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System; to the Committee on Energy and National Resources.

DESIGNATION OF LOWER MERCED RIVER IN CALIFORNIA

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I introduce for appropriate reference a bill to designate the lower Merced River as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. Identical legislation is being introduced in the House today by Congressman GARY CONDIT.

In 1987, Congress enacted legislation designating 71 miles of the main stem of the Merced River and 43 miles of the South Fork of the Merced River as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. At that time, I also was seeking wild and scenic river designation of the lower 8 miles of the Merced. But because of opposition from Mariposa County which needs an additional water supply, the final bill designated the lower Merced as a study river. Last week, however, the Mariposa County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved a resolution endorsing the inclusion of the lower Merced River in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System as proposed in this legislation.

Specifically, the bill designates 8 miles of the lower Merced River from 300 feet upstream of its confluence with Bear Creek to the maximum control storage of Lake McClure. It classifies 4 miles of the river as recreational and 4 miles as a wild river.

Additionally, the bill withdraws the entire length of the main stem of the Merced River and portions of the South Fork from mineral entry, subject to valid existing rights. This withdrawal is essential to protect the river's recreational use and prevent cumulative impacts of dredging in the riverbed.

Finally, the bill includes language directing the Secretary of the Interior to approve the Saxon Creek project, which is necessary to assure an adequate supply of water for Mariposa County. The project, which would pump water from the Merced River near its confluence with Saxon Creek, would not adversely impact the river's suitability for inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Mr. President, this legislation is supported not only by the Mariposa County Board of Supervisors, but also the Merced Canyon Committee, Friends of the River, American Rivers, and the Wilderness Society. I'm very pleased to introduce it and hope the 101st Congress will grant the lower Merced River the protection it deserves.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2555

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION OF THE LOWER MERCED RIVER.

(A) DESIGNATION.—Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end:

"( ) MERCED, CALIFORNIA.—The main stem from a point 300 feet upstream of the confluence with Bear Creek downstream to a point of maximum control storage of Lake McClure (elevation 867 feet mean sea level) approximately 8 miles. The Secretary of the Interior shall administer the lower Merced River as recreational, from a point 300 feet upstream of the confluence with Bear Creek downstream to a point 300 feet west of the boundary of Mountain King Mine; and as wild, from a point 300 feet west of the boundary of Mountain King Mine to the maximum flood control storage of Lake McClure, as generally depicted on the map entitled Merced Wild and Scenic River, dated April 1990. The requirements of subsection (b) of this section shall be fulfilled by the Secretary of Interior through appropriate revisions to the Sierra Management Framework Plan for the Sierra Planning Area of the Folsom Resource Area, Bakersfield District, Bureau of Land Management. For the purposes of the segments designated by this paragraph, there shall be authorized the appropriate sums as may be necessary for the acquisition of lands, interest in lands and for development."

"SECTION 2. WITHDRAWAL FROM MINERAL ENTRY.

"(a) In addition to the wild river segments covered by Section 9(a)(iii) of this Act, the recreational river segments on the main stem of the Merced River and the scenic river segment on the South Fork Merced River are withdrawn, subject to valid existing rights, from settlement, location, entry and appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. This withdrawal includes: (1) on the main stem of the Merced River from the west boundary of the Mineral King Mine, from the normal high water mark on the south side of the river to the northern margin of the Yosemite Railroad grade on the north side of the river, a distance of 22 miles, and (2) on the South Fork Merced River between normal high water marks on either side of the river, from 1.5 miles upstream of Hite Cove to 0.5 downstream of Hite Cove, a distance of 2 miles.

"SECTION 3. SAXON CREEK PROJECT.

"(a) To the extend and in a manner consistent with the purposes of this Act, including Section 7, the Secretary of Interior shall permit the construction and operation of such pumping facilities and associated pipelines as identified in Bureau of Land Management right-of-way application CACA 26084, filed by the Mariposa County Water Agency on November 7, 1989, and known as the "Saxon Creek Project" to assure an adequate supply of water from the Merced River to Mariposa County."

By Mr. CRANSTON (for himself, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. SIMON, Mr. DASCHLE, and Mr. BINGAMAN):

S. 2556. A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to expand the list of diseases presumed to be service connected in the case of veterans who were exposed to radiation from a nuclear detonation and to eliminate the requirement that the listed diseases become manifest within certain time periods; and to require that the Secretary of Veterans Affairs consider creation of similar presumptions for veterans who were exposed to radiation from other activity; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

RADIATION-EXPOSED VETERANS COMPENSATION AMENDMENTS

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I am pleased to introduce S. 2556, the proposed "Radiation-Exposed Veterans Compensation Amendments of 1990." This bill delivers on my promise on February 6—page S833 of the RECORD—to introduce legislation to modify the provisions in current law under which radiation-exposed veterans and their survivors receive compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs. Our bill is designed to reflect the latest scientific knowledge about the biological effects of radiation. Joining me as cosponsors of the bill are the following committee members—Senators DECONCINI, MITCHELL, ROCKEFELLER, GRAHAM, and JEFFORDS—along with Senator SIMON, long a leader in radiation-exposed veterans' issues, and Senators DASCHLE and BINGAMAN.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS

Mr. President, this bill contains three basic provisions—the first two of which would amend section 312(c) of title 38, United States Code—that would:

First, remove all limitations on the presumption period for the diseases listed in that section as presumptively service connected for radiation-exposed veterans.

Second, add to the list of diseases cancer of the salivary gland and cancer of the urinary tract.

Third, in a freestanding provision (a) require that, within 180 days after enactment, VA and the Department of Defense jointly develop a list of military activities that are likely to have resulted in exposure to ionizing radiation above background levels but are not included within the definition of "radiation-risk activity" in section 312(c) of title 38; (b) require the Secretary to direct the VA Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards to evaluate whether there is a reasonable possibility that there is an association between the maximum level of exposure from the activity and the diseases listed in section 312(c)(2); (c) require that, within 120 days after being directed to conduct an evaluation, the advisory committee report to the Secretary the findings of the evaluation and any recommendations it considers appropriate to assist the Secretary in deciding whether to establish presumptions of service connection; (d) require the Secretary, within 60 days after receiving a report on a listed activity, to establish a presumption of service-connection for each disease listed in section 312(c) for veterans who participated in that activity, unless the Secretary determines that there is no reasonable possibility of an association between the maximum level of exposure from the activity and particular disease; and (e) provide that, if the Secretary finds, on a case-by-case basis, that an individual's listed disease did not result from that exposure, the presumption of service connection will not apply to that individual's disease.

BACKGROUND

Mr. President, as my colleagues know, I have long been involved in efforts to address the needs of veterans who were exposed to radiation during their military service, including providing compensation for disabilities that might have resulted from that exposure. My efforts and those of other Members of Congress culminated in the enactment in 1988 of the Radiation-Exposed Veterans Compensation Act of 1988, Public Law 100-321. That legislation represented a compromise between House-passed legislation, H.R. 2616, and S. 1002, which I introduced and which the Committee on Veterans' Affairs favorably reported as title II of S. 9 and the provisions of which the Senate passed on December 4, 1987.

That law added to section 312 of title 38 a new subsection (c) that established a presumption of service connection for 13 diseases manifested in veterans who participated onsite in nuclear weapons tests or in the post-bombing occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. To qualify as service connected under section 312(c), the diseases must appear within 40 years after the veteran's exposure to radiation, except that leukemia must appear within 30 years.

The Senate bill relied heavily on the findings from the 1980 report of the National Academy of Sciences Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiation. That report—known as BEIR III—represented the best information available at that time on the cancer risks faced by individuals exposed to ionizing radiation. Various Members of Congress contributed proposals ultimately reconciled in the legislation that became Public Law 100-321. I believe the final result was both a compassionate and a fiscally responsible response to the serious and continuing needs and concerns of radiation-exposed veterans and their families.

In late December of last year, the National Academy of Sciences released the newest report of the BEIR Committee, BEIR V. This report contains new and important analyses of the effects of radiation, based on recently conducted studies using newly developed methods of analysis. First, the researchers had available 10 more years of information on the health status of the Japanese survivors of the atomic blasts. Second, a binational group of scientists developed a new way of measuring the doses received by individuals at various places in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, enabling scientists to adjust estimated exposures based on whether, for example, people were shielded by buildings. And, finally, the NAS Committee made use of new biostatistical techniques for analyzing the complicated array of available data.

The BEIR V findings are very significant. The report estimates that lifetime excess cancer risk following low-level radiation exposure is three to four times greater than previously thought. This has heightened concern about the health effects of low-level ionizing radiation and supports the approach to compensation Congress adopted in Public Law 100-321 and which the legislation we are introducing today would continue and expand.

At my request, the Office of Technology Assessment has reviewed BEIR V and found that "the information in the report is reliable and the analyses sound". Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that OTA's April 25, 1990 report on its review of BEIR V be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
OFFICE OF TECHNOLOGY ASSESSMENT,
Washington, DC, April 24, 1990.

Hon. ALAN CRANSTON,
Chairman, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR ALAN: Enclosed is OTA's review of the National Research Council Report, "Health Effects of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiation," the fifth report of the Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiations (BEIR V). We believe that the information presented in the report is reliable and the analyses sound, though we did not review the original data on which the analyses are based.

The BEIR Committee relied heavily on the work of the Radiation Effects Research Foundation (RERF), a highly respected collaboration of Japanese and American scientists responsible for following up the human consequences of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. They also relied on data from other well-studied populations of radiation-exposed individuals. Information from experimental studies on laboratory animals and other appropriate epidemiologic studies were referred to when they added significantly to the discussion.

Changes in the quantitative risk estimates for a number of cancers, as well as clarifications in the shape of the dose-response curves have occurred since the 1980 BEIR III report, the predecessor of BEIR V. These changes were brought about mainly by the results of continued followup of the exposed populations and by a 1986 revision of the dose estimates for Hiroshima and Nagasaki atomic bomb survivors by RERF.

The enclosed Staff Paper concentrates on the BEIR V findings for cancer risks. I understand this is of greatest concern to the Veterans' Affairs Committee, based on conversations between Michael Cogan of your staff and Hellen Gelband, of the OTA Health Program, who prepared the review. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have further questions (4-3695) or to have your staff contact Ms. Gelband (8-6590). I hope you find this review helpful in preparing your upcoming legislation.

Sincerely,

JOHN H. GIBBONS.

OTA REVIEW OF: HEALTH EFFECTS OF EXPOSURE TO LOW LEVELS OF IONIZING RADIATION, BEIR V

INTRODUCTION

"Health Effects of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiation," the fifth report of the Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiations ("BEIR V"), builds upon and updates work of earlier BEIR committees, most closly following the 1980 "BEIR III" report. (The 1988 BEIR IV report is about radon and other internally-deposited alpha emitters.) Of greatest interest to the requester of this review, the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs, the report contains an updated discussion of the risk of cancer after exposure to external ionizing radiation. BEIR V also covers genetic effects and somatic effects other than cancer, and effects on individuals exposed to radiation in utero. This review concentrates on cancer risks.

The BEIR V Committee relied heavily on the work of the Radiation Effects Research Foundation (RERF), a collaboration of Japanese and American scientists who have followed up the atomic bomb survivors in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The work of RERF, both in estimating exposures to individuals and in carrying out their "Life Span Studies" of the survivors, has been reviewed extensively and is considered extremely reliable. The other major sources of information used in BEIR V also are reliable and well reviewed. The conclusions of BEIR V appear to be consistent with the data available. The report outlines clearly the uncertainties still remaining and the potential for greater understanding as the exposed populations are followed further in time.

SOURCES OF EPIDEMIOLOGIC DATA FOR BEIR V

Conclusions about which types of cancer are considered radiogenic (inducible by radiation) are based on the long-term followup of several populations exposed to high doses of radiation in the past. The populations are well established and have been followed carefully for many years by respected researchers. The atomic bomb survivors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki make up the only general population group exposed to a single high dose of ionizing radiation (mainly gamma), and provide most of the information used in BEIR V for making quantitative estimates of risk by cancer site. The other cohorts are made up of people irradiated for medical reasons generally in the 1930s, 40s, and 50s. Of these, a large cohort of English ankylosing spondylitis patients has provided most information about a wide variety of cancer sites. The other cohorts, two of fluoroscoped tuberculosis patients and one cohort of women irradiated for postpartum mastitis, whose radiation was more confined, provide information on a more limited number of cancer sites.

Throughout the report, other epidemiologic studies and data from studies in experimental animals are discussed where appropriate, but heaviest reliance is placed on the studies mentioned above.

CHANGES SINCE BEIR III

The major sources of change since BEIR III stem from longer followup of exposed populations and new dose estimates for the atomic bomb survivors. Longer followup has led to larger numbers of cancer cases, allowing more precise estimates of risk, as well as initial information on long-term cancer risks for individuals who were very young at the time of exposure (particularly those who were children in Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the time of the bombs). Additional followup has also led to changes in the mathematical models that best describe the doses-response relationships for the various cancers.

RERF released new dose estimates for Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1986, which differed substantially from the estimates available before then. These estimates are widely considered to be more accurate than the previous ones, and the most appropriate basis for risk calculations. The new estimates benefited from detailed analysis of the nature of the two atomic explosions and the resulting gamma and neutron radiation that would have resulted from them. There were also changes in the assumptions made about the shielding effects of materials between the airborne radiation and survivors. The biggest change came from a reduction in the estimated neutron dose, which lowered dose estimates overall, and made negligible the contribution of neutrons in both Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The lowered doses had the effect of raising the risk estimates per unit of radiation (i.e., each unit of dose is, therefore, somewhat more potent than previously estimated).

SUMMARY OF RESULTS FOR SPECIFIC TYPES OF CANCER

Cancers showing elevated risk in human beings after gamma irradiation

Leukemia.—The risk for all types of acute leukemia and for chronic myeloid leukemia is raised by irradiation of the bone marrow. Age at exposure strongly influences the magnitude of the excess risk and its time course. In the atomic bomb survivors, excess leukemia mortality was seen only in those who received doses of 0.4 Gray (Gy) (40 rad) and above, and risks for individuals exposed at less than 20 years of age were initially higher (though declined faster) than for individuals who were older at the time of exposure. Excess risk of chronic lymphatic leukemia has not been seen in epidemiologic studies.

Female Breast.—Breast cancer risk in females is elevated by irradiation. The effect is strongly affected by hormonal factors and by age at irradiation. Excesses have been observed to begin about 10 years after irradiation.

Lung.—Lung cancer risk is elevated by irradiation, seen in a number of studies, including the followup of atomic bomb survivors. Age at exposure and sex do not appear to modify the excess absolute risk significantly.

Stomach.—Stomach cancer risk is elevated by irradiation. Age at exposure and sex significantly affect the magnitude of the excess risk. From the data on atomic bomb survivors, women are at high risk than men, and those exposed at less than 30 years of age have a comparatively higher risk than those exposed at older ages.

Thyroid.—Thyroid cancer risk is elevated by irradiation. Radiogenic thyroid cancers arise from a particular cell type (follicular epithelium), and are usually not fatal. The magnitude of risk is affected strongly by age at exposure and sex, with exposure at young ages (under 5) having the greatest effects, and the risk for women being higher than that for men. Higher incidence of thyroid tumors, though not mortality, is documented in the atomic bomb survivors.

Esophagus.—Esophageal cancer risk is elevated in several irradiated populations, including the atomic bomb survivors, but details of the dose-response relationship are limited. Risk for females appear to be higher.

Colon and Rectum.—Colon and rectum cancer risks are elevated after irradiation. The excesses are seen at beginning at least a decade after exposure. In the atomic bomb survivors, the increased risk of colon cancer is evident only in those who had more than one gray exposure. Evidence of an increased risk of rectal cancer among the atomic bomb survivors is only "suggestive."

Bone.—Bone cancer risks are elevated in medically-irradiated (gamma and x-rays) populations. The Japanese atomic bomb survivors have shown no excess of bone cancer, however.

Central nervous system.—Risks of central nervous system cancers, including malignant and benign growths of the brain, meninges, and peripheral nerves, are elevated after irradiation, particularly after medical exposure in childhood. No excess of these cancers has been seen among the atomic bomb survivors.

Ovary.—The risks of ovarian cancer are elevated in the Japanese atomic bomb survivors. Results from other cohorts are equivocal.

Urinary Tract.—Risks for cancers of the urinary tract, mainly the bladder, are elevated in several exposed populations, including the atomic bomb survivors (specific tumors included bladder, kidney, and ureter).

Parathyroid glands.—Risks for parathyroid gland cancers are elevated in some irradiated populations, though they occur less frequently than do nonmalignant abnormalities of these glands. Cancers occur very late, on the order of 30 years after exposure. No excess has been seen in the atomic bomb survivors.

Skin.—Risks for basal and squamous cell carcinomas of the skin are elevated in some medically- and occupationally-exposed (uranium miners) populations. No excess has been seen in the atomic bomb survivors.

Lymphoma and multiple myeloma.—Multiple myeloma risks are elevated among a number of exposed populations, including the atomic bomb survivors. Evidence for other types of lymphoma is equivocal.

Salivary glands.—An excess risk for cancers of the salivary gland is apparent in the major irradiated cohorts. Increased incidence, though not mortality, is apparent in the atomic bomb survivors.

Cancers not demonstrating elevated risk in human beings after gamma irradiation

Small Intestine.—No human irradiated populations have demonstrated elevated risks for cancers of the small intestine, though intensively irradiated laboratory animals have shown some increases.

Liver.—Significantly elevated risks for liver cancer have not been noted in gamma-exposed populations. Elevated risks have been seen in populations exposed to chronic irradiation by internal alpha- and beta-emitters.

Uterus.—While some population show a suggestive excess risk for uterine cancer, they are not statistically significant, and are difficult to interpret. This question is considered unresolved.

Testes.—No epidemiologic data suggest an excess of testicular cancer.

Prostrate.—Non-significant excesses of prostate cancer have been seen in some irradiated populations after long followup; any association would appear to be weak.

Nasal cavity and sinuses.—Gamma-exposed populations have shown no excess of nasal cavity or sinus cancers. There is evidence that internally-deposited alpha emitters can cause these cancers.

Pharynx, hypopharynx, and larynx.—The major epidemiologic cohorts have shown no excess of these cancers. Some evidence of excesses in small studies of very heavily radiated individuals does exist, however.

Pancreas.—Cancer of the pancreas does not appear to be elevated in irradiated populations.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, on January 23, 1990, I asked VA's Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards to advise me about its plans for reviewing this report. The March 5, 1990, reply stated:

I do not expect that the Committee will be able to consider the BIER V report before its fall 1990 meeting.

I regret that the Advisory Committee will not be responding more promptly to this important report.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my January 23, 1990, letter and the March 5 reply be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, January 23, 1990.

Mr. OLIVER MEADOWS,
Chairman, Veterans' Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards, Department of Veterans Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR OLIVER: As you know, the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences recently issued the fifth report of its Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiation—the so-called BEIR V report. The report, "Health Effects of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiation," expresses significant new concerns about the type and risk of adverse health effects that might result from exposure to low-level radiation. My understanding is that this latest report contains significant new findings regarding the risk of low-level radiation exposure, the diseases that may be associated with such exposure, and manifestation periods. I expect shortly to introduce legislation to make changes, based on BEIR V, in the Radiation-Exposed Veterans Compensation Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-321).

I would appreciate your advising me of the plans of the Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards to review BEIR V and the timetable for such a review. In your reply, please include a description of any assignment the Committee has received from the Secretary to review BEIR V or other radiation issues that might affect veterans' compensation or medical care.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this request. As always, I greatly appreciate your cooperation with regard to matters relating to veterans who may have been exposed to environmental hazards.

With warm regards,

Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON,
Chairman.

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS,
GENERAL COUNSEL,
Washington DC, March 5, 1990.

Hon. ALAN CRANSTON,
Chairman, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing in response to your inquiry of January 23, 1990, concerning the fifth report of the Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiation (BEIR V) and what, if any, actions the Veterans' Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards intends to take with respect to it.

As you know, following Secretary Derwinski's decision not to appeal from a court decision invalidating certain regulations implementing Public Law 98-542, the Committee's attention was directed toward assisting the Department in developing appropriate research evaluation criteria. Following that, the Committee met to apply those criteria to the question of whether there exists a significant statistical association between exposure to a herbicide containing dioxin and the subsequent development of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. At the Committee's next meeting in May 1990, we will be considering whether there exists such an association with respect to soft-tissue sarcomas and other cancers.

Based upon the magnitude of that task and the Secretary's interest in addressing the Agent Orange issue as expeditiously as possible, I do not expect that the Committee will be able to consider the BEIR V report before its fall 1990 meeting. Based upon conversations that I have had with Department staff, I fully anticipate that the Committee will be asked for its views on this important report at that meeting.

Thank you for your continued interest in the Committee.

Sincerely,

FREDERICK, L. CONWAY
(For Oliver Meadows, Chairman, Veterans' Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards).

BASIS FOR AMENDING CURRENT LAW

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, the legislation we are introducing today would expand the list of diseases considered presumptively service-connected—by adding cancer of the salivary gland and cancer of the urinary tract—and would eliminate the 40- and 30-year time limits set forth in section 312(c) of title 38 during which the diseases listed in section 312(c) must be manifested to qualify for compensation. The urinary tract, as used here, specifically includes the kidney, renal pelvis, ureter, urinary bladder, and urethra. It does not include the organs of the reproductive system.

Our goal is to continue to ensure that the Government's response to the health problems of veterans who were exposed to ionizing radiation from atomic detonations during their service takes into account the latest scientific knowledge about the true effects of ionizing radiation, while, of course, giving these veterans the benefit of reasonable doubt.

We believe that BEIR V provides ample support for adding these diseases and eliminating the latency-period restrictions in current law.

NEW PRESUMPTIVE DISEASES

Cancer of the salivary gland is rare in the United States. National Cancer Institute data indicate an annual incidence of 1.2 cases per 100,000 males. BEIR V found a dose-dependent increase in Japanese atomic-bomb survivors that indicated "relatively high" susceptibility of salivary glands to radiation-induced carcinogenesis.

Urinary-tract cancers are more common. For example, the annual incidence rate for urinary bladder cancer is 6.1 per 100,000 U.S. males; the incidence of kidney cancer is 4.6 per 100,000 U.S. males. BEIR V data demonstrate notable associations between bladder and kidney cancer and radiation exposure. The data show an especially strong, dose-dependent connection between radiation and bladder cancer.

In addition, previous studies, discussed in BEIR V, have indicated that cancers of other organs in the urinary system (such as the renal pelvis, ureter, and urethra) are associated with radiation exposure.

Mr. President, the bill does not propose to add certain other diseases that BEIR V indicates could be radiogenic. These were omitted for two reasons. First, the strength of the association with radiation exposure generally was lower or not significantly higher than for the diseases included in the bill. Second, the number of cases of the omitted diseases that might be radiation-related is extremely small compared to the number of cases that are most likely related to other risk factors, such as smoking and diet.

The standard we have applied in making these distinctions basically is the same one I described on April 25, 1988, during consideration of the final version of the legislation that became Public Law 100-321, when I stated that Congress should include presumptions of service-connection for any disease "shown to be strongly associated with radiation and which has not been shown to be strongly associated with any other risk factors."

The amendments contained in this bill are consistent with this standard, are fiscally responsible, and—in light of new scientific knowledge—are necessary to ensure that veterans receive compensation for diseases that may well have been incurred in service in the Armed Forces.

ELIMINATING LATENCY-PERIOD LIMITATIONS

Mr. President, this bill also would eliminate current latency-period limitations because BEIR V shows that these limitations are no longer supportable. The report presents results from a statistical model of Japanese atomic-bomb survivors indicating that, although the leukemia mortality rate peaked within 10 years after fallout exposure, a statistically signficant increased mortality rate "has persisted at a diminished level." This is consistent with another finding in BEIR V regarding patients who received x-ray treatment for ankylosing spondylitis. The report found that these patients were subject to higher-than-normal death rates within 2 years after irradiation, peaking within 5 years, then declining. According to BEIR V, however, "the excess death rate remained significantly elevated for more than 15 years, after which it appeared to persist with little change." BEIR V also found that the increased risk of death persists much longer than previously suspected—perhaps indefinitely in the case of certain other radiogenic diseases.

COST

The Congressional budget office has informally esitmated that the total cost for adding the two diseases and eliminating all latency period would be $6.3 million in budget authority and $5.8 million in outlays in fiscal year 1991. CBO estimates that the costs in the outyears would be $9.1 in budget authority and $8.4 in outlays for fiscal year 1992; $12.1 in budget authority and $11.1 in outlays for fiscal year 1993; $15.1 in budget authority and $13.9 in outlays for FY 1994; $18.8 in budget authority and $16.9 in outlays for fiscal year 1995. Our committee's March 12, 1990, fiscal year 1991 budget views and estimates recommended $11 million in new budget authority and $10.1 in outlays to provide for enactment of radiation-exposed veterans legislation.

OTHER ACTIVITIES INVOLVING EXPOSURE TO IONIZING RADIATION

Mr. President, the bill also would establish a mechanism to ensure that the compensation system continues to reflect the latest scientific knowledge about radiation and its effects. During the past year or so, we have seen an enormous amount of activity in this field. Reputable scientists, including some of those involved in the BEIR V report, have raised questions about many types of activities not covered by current law that might expose servicemembers or the general population to an increased risk of certain diseases, primarily cancer.

For example, an article in the March 1, 1990, New York Times reported that independent measurements of radiation received by flight crews on commercial—and thus, presumably, military—aircraft exceed some Federal radiation standards. The data, presented to the aviation subcommittee of the Society of Automotive Engineers aeronautical section confirms an estimate by the Federal Aviation Administration last year that some pilots and flight attendants absorb dangerous levels of ionizing radiation.

As chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I have received expressions of concern from veterans who were exposed to radiation during their service aboard U.S. Navy ships that took part in the disposal of radioactive waste and from veterans who served aboard nuclear submarines.

BEIR V's new data showing increased cancer risks even at "low" levels of exposure strongly suggest the need to re-examine many types of activities involving radiation exposure levels previously considered safe.

Mr. President, we do not yet have sufficient evidence of linkage between radiogenic cancers and these activities to justify our proposing the extension of section 312(c) of title 38 to cover those who participated in them. These concerns, however, must not be ignored. The record compiled in connection with the enactment of section 312(c) in 1988 indicates that the Government knew or had reason to know about the radiation risks of participation in nuclear tests, yet failed to warn or take even rudimentary measures to protect those who participated or to follow up on their health status. I would not be surprised to learn that a similar attitude prevailed with respect to other military activities involving ionizing radiation.

Section 3 of the bill would require the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, to compile, within 180 days after enactment, a list of all activities not defined under current law as "radiation-risk" activities but involving potential exposure to ionizing radiation that exceeds background levels. Immediately upon including an activity in this list, the Secretary would be required to direct the VA Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards to carry out an evaluation of whether there is a reasonable possibility of an association between the maximum exposure from the activity and the diseases listed in section 312(c)(2) of title 38. Within 120 days after being directed to carry out an evaluation, the Advisory Committee would be required to provide the Secretary with a report of its findings and recommendations. Within 60 days after receiving a report regarding a particular activity, the Secretary would be required to establish a presumption of service connection for those who participated in the activity and suffer from one of the diseases listed in section 312(c) unless the Secretary determines that the available credible scientific evidence clearly establishes that there is no reasonable possibility of an association between the maximum exposure from the activity and a particular listed disease. Where a presumption is established, VA could still overcome the presumption in an individual case by showing that a particular individual's condition resulted from another cause.

I foresee that this part of the bill would require immediate action with respect to the activities of medical technicians, crew members of ships that disposed of nuclear wastes, flight crews of aircraft, and crew members of nuclear-powered submarines or surface ships.

It is important also to note that the VA Advisory Committee has the responsibility—under the statute creating the Advisory Committee, section 6 of Public Law 98-542—to evaluate scientific studies relating to possible adverse health effects of exposure to ionizing radiation. This responsibility clearly encompasses a duty to evaluate any possible association between radiation exposure during service and diseases not included in section 312(c) of title 38, including exposure resulting from activities either within the current-law definition of "radiation-risk" activities or the other activities that would be listed pursuant to this bill. For example, if the Secretary included military "service as a medical x-ray technician" in the list of other activities involving exposure to radiation, compiled under section 3(a) of the bill, this would immediately raise concerns about the effects of radiation on the health of women—a veterans population not implicated in the radiation-risk activities identified in section 312(c) of title 38. BEIR V provides ample evidence that ionizing radiation has a strong association with ovarian cancer and female breast cancer. If this activity were listed as a result of this bill, and perhaps even if it were not, the Advisory Committee has a duty under current law to evaluate any possible association between the activity and the cancers listed in section 312(c) of title 38 as well as other diseases.

CONCLUSION

The Committee has scheduled hearings on this bill and other compensation and pension legislation for May 17. I look forward to working with my colleagues on this important effort to ensure that the system we use to compensate veterans for these serious, often-fatal diseases incurred as a result of their service to our Nation is consistent with the latest scientific knowledge about the biological effects of radiation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of our bill be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2556

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This act may be cited as the "Radiation-Exposed Veterans Compensation Amendments of 1990".

SEC. 2. EXPANSION OF LIST OF DISEASES PRESUMED TO BE SERVICE-CONNECTED FOR CERTAIN RADIATION-EXPOSED VETERANS.

Section 312(c) of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking out "to a degree" and all that follows through "subsection)";

(2) in paragraph (2), by adding at the end the following new clauses:

"(N) Cancer of the salivary gland.

"(O) Cancer of the urinary tract.";

(3) by striking out paragraph (3); and

(4) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (3).

SEC. 3. ADJUDICATION OF CLAIMS BASED ON EXPOSURE TO IONIZING RADIATION.

(a) IDENTIFICATION OF ACTIVITIES INVOLVING EXPOSURE.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary"), in consultation whith the Secretary of Defense, shall compile a list of the types of activities (other than the activities described in paragraph (3)(B) (as redesignated by section 2) of section 312(c) of title 38, United States Code) in which individuals serving on active duty, active duty for training, or inactive duty training have participated and which likely would have exposed such individuals to levels of ionizing radiation above background levels. In compiling the list, the Secretary shall, to the extent feasible—

(1) describe the times and places at which exposure to each listed activity may have occurred;

(2) specify the maximum level of radiation to which participants in each listed activity may have been exposed; and

(3) provide information sufficient to make possible the identification of the individuals who, while so serving, participated in each of the activities.

(b) EVALUATION BY THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON ENVIRONMENTAL HAZARDS.—Immediately after including an activity on the list referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary shall direct the Veterans' Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards (established by section 6 of the Veterans' Dioxin and Radiation Exposure Compensation Standards Act (38 U.S.C. 354 note) and hereafter in this section referred to as the "Advisory Committee") to evaluate, and make a finding as to, whether there is a reasonable possibility that there is an association between the maximum level of exposure experienced by participants in the activity and one or more of the diseases specified in section 312(c)(2) of title 38, United States Code. Evaluations and findings made pursuant to this subsection shall be made on the basis of available scientific evidence.

(c) REPORT OF EVALUATION.—The Advisory Committee shall promptly make the evaluation required by subsection (b) with respect to each activity included on the list referred to in subsection (a) and, not later than 120 days after receiving a direction under subsection (b), submit to the Secretary a report regarding the results of the evaluation. The Advisory Committee shall include in the report its findings and such recommendations as it considers appropriate to assist the Secretary in carrying out subsection (d).

(d) DETERMINATIONS.—(1)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (2) and subject to subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall, within 60 days after receiving a report of an evaluation under subsection (c), establish for purposes of section 310 of title 38, United States Code, a presumption that each of the diseases specified in section 312(c)(2) of such title if incurred by an individual who participated in an activity included on the list referred to in subsection (a) during the individual's service on active duty, active duty for training, or inactive duty training was incurred in such service. The Secretary shall establish the presumption without regard to whether there was any record of the disease during that service.

(B) A disease will not be presumed to have been incurred during active duty, active duty for training, or inactive duty training based upon a particular individual's participation in an activity included on a list referred to in subsection (a) if—

(i) there is affirmative evidence to contravene the presumption established under paragraph (A);

(ii) there is evidence to establish that the individual suffered an intercurrent injury or disease which is a recognized cause of the disease for which a claim for benefits is made, an the individual suffered from the intercurrent injury or disease between the date of separation from service and the onset of the disease for which a claim for benefits is made.

(2) The requirement in paragraph (1)(A) regarding the establishment of a presumption shall not apply with respect to a disease incurred by a participant in an activity included on the list compiled pursuant to subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that the available credible scientific evidence clearly establishes that there is no reasonable possibility that there is an association between that disease and participation in that activity.

(e)(1) REPORTS TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—Within five days after the list referred to in subsection (a) is initially compiled, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report containing the list. Thereafter, whenever an activity is added to the list the Secretary shall immediately report that fact to such committees.

(2) Within 120 days after receiving a report of an evaluation under subsection (c), the Secretary shall submit to the committees named in paragraph (1) a copy of that report and a report of the actions that the Secretary has taken and is planning to take with respect to the matters pertaining to the evaluation. The Secretary shall include in the report a detailed explanation of any determination that the Secretary has made or plans to make under subsection (d)(2).

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section, the terms "active duty", "active duty for training", and "inactive duty training" shall have the meanings provided in paragraphs (21), (22), and (23), respectively, of section 101 of title 38, United States Code.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am pleased today to join the distinguished chairman of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, Senator CRANSTON, and Senators MITCHELL, DECONCINI, ROCKEFELLER, JEFFORDS, SIMON and BINGAMAN in sponsoring the Radiation-Exposed Veterans Compensation Amendments of 1990. The goal of this legislation is to ensure that the Government's response to veterans who were exposed to ionizing radiation from atomic detonations during their service takes into account the latest scientific knowledge about the true effects of ionizing radiation, while giving these veterans the benefit of reasonable doubt.

My interest in this legislation began during my tenure in the House of Representatives, where I served on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee and introduced legislation to establish standards for VA disability compensation for veterans exposed to ionizing radiation from atomic detonations. My colleagues will vouch for the fact that it has been a long, tough battle to secure legislation that provides disability compensation for these two groups of veterans. We've battled against tremendous odds, including Government denials of the importance of scientific evidence linking radiation exposure to disease and Government reluctance to give our Nation's veterans the benefit of the doubt. Finally, 40 years after the injuries, Congress enacted the first compensation for certain radiation-exposed veterans in 1988.

Today, we are one step closer to claiming victory for the hundreds of veterans who are suffering diseases linked to their exposure to ionizing radiation from atomic detonations. This legislation makes three important changes to the current law. First, it would add cancer of the salivary gland and cancer of the urinary tract to the list of 13 cancers presumed to be service-connected for veterans who participated in a radiation-risk activity.

Second, it would eliminate the two current limitations on the time period following exposure within which the specified cancer must appear.

Third, it would require the Department of Veterans Affairs to give special consideration for purposes of granting compensation to veterans suffering from the list diseases who participated in activities that involved radiation exposure but are not considered "radiation-risk activities" under current law.

Most importantly, this legislation reflects the major findings presented in the newest report of the National Academy of Sciences' Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiation, known as BEIR V. Unlike previous studies on the effects of radiation the BEIR V study had access to 10 more years of information on the health status of the Japanese survivors of the atomic blasts and made use of new biostatistical techniques for analyzing the complicated array of data. As the chairman of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee pointed out, the Office of Technology and Assessment has reviewed the BEIR V report and found the information both reliable and sound.

The BEIR V report substantiates what veteran who were exposed to ionizing radiation during their service have known all along-that lifetime excess cancer risk following low-level radiation exposure is three to four times greater than previously thought.

I hope my colleagues will consider the findings of the BEIR V report and join me in supporting legislation to compensate those veterans who were exposed to radiation during their service aboard U.S. Navy ships that took part in the disposal of radioactive waste and veterans who served on nuclear submarines.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I am pleased, today, to join my colleague from California, the distinguished chairman of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, in a bill that would amend provisions enacted in the 1988 radiation-exposed veterans compensation law, Public Law 100-321.

The changes which would take place upon passage of this bill would update the law to reflect major new findings presented in the latest report of the National Academy of Sciences' Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiation, known as BEIR V.

This report has been judged as reliable and sound by various representatives, including the Office of Technology Assessment.

The report identifies several types of cancer associated with exposure to radiation and includes analyses and computer models indicating increased cancer risks at far lower exposures than most scientists previously recognized.

The changes this bill would bring about are needed to reflect fair treatment for affected veterans.

We need to pass this bill. Earlier I said the first legislation was more than a good beginning. This makes the legislation even better.

By Mr. MURKOWSKI:

S. 2557. A bill to redesignate the Chief Medical Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs as the Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research and to redesignate the Chief Benefits Director of that department as the Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Benefits; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

DESIGNATION OF CERTAIN UNDER SECRETARIES OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

● Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation which would designate as Under Secretaries of Veterans Affairs the individuals responsible for the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration [VHS&RA] and the Veterans Benefits Administration [VBA] of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

I am introducing this legislation because it has become clear that these offices must have a title which accurately reflects the importance of the duties performed by these individuals who are entrusted with responsibility for administering VA's health care and benefits systems. The legislation would not change the actual rank or pay of the offices or the individuals who serve in them. They would remain at executive compensation level III.

VA's Chief Medical Director is the head of VHS&RA and is responsible for 172 medical centers, 233 outpatient clinics, 194 readjustment counseling centers. He directs over 194,000 employees, a budget of over $12 billion, and is responsible for inpatient treatment of over 1 million veterans a year. VA will provide 21 million outpatient visits in 1990. The CMD also oversees a medical research budget of over $200 million annually.

Similarly, the head of VBA, the Chief Benefits Director, is responsible for the delivery of disability compensation benefits to almost 2.2 million veterans with diseases or disabilities which arose while they were on active duty, disability pensions to 592,000 low income veterans with disabilities or diseases which arose subsequent to their active duty, service-connected surviviors' benefits to the survivors of 320,000 veterans who died due to a disease or injury which occurred while the veteran was on active duty, and non-service-connected survivors' benefits for 563,000 low income survivors of veterans who died due to a cause which arose subsequent to service.

VBA administers veterans education programs which will provide education and training to 359,000 veterans and survivors in 1990. The head of VBA will be responsible for the vocational rehabilitation of 28,000 disabled veterans this year. VBA programs also include the home loan guaranty program which is expected to guaranty the loans necessary to purchase 177,000 homes in 1990. VBA has physical possession of 17,000 houses which it has acquired and must resell. VBA also administers what would be the fifth largest life insurance company in the country if it were in the private sector.

Chief Benefits Director and Chief Medical Director are honorable titles and enjoy decades of tradition. However, to the uninitiated these titles communicate neither the scope of responsibility nor the importance of the duties assumed by the public servants who perform those duties and meet those responsibilities.

In short, these officers are not perceived to be Presidential appointees, requiring the advice and consent of the Senate, and equal in both rank and responsibility to Under Secretaries. In Washington, perception becomes reality. Enactment of this legislation would ensure that perception and reality agree. It would allow the heads of VBA and VHS&RA to interact with other agencies, with the Executive Office of the President, and with the public as the Under Secretaries they now are in all respects, but for title. America's veterans would be the beneficiaries of the enactment of this bill and I urge my colleagues to join me in its support.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my statement.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2557

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. UNDER SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS FOR HEALTH SERVICES AND RESEARCH.

Section 3(b) of the Department of Veterans Affairs Act (Public Law 100-527; 102 Stat. 2635) is amended—

(1) in the first and second sentences of paragraph (1) and in paragraph (2), by striking out "Chief Medical Director" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research";

(2) in the third and fourth sentences of paragraph (1), by striking out "Chief Medical Director" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary"; and

(3) by striking out "CHIEF MEDICAL DIRECTOR" in the subsection heading and inserting in lieu thereof "UNDER SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS FOR HEALTH SERVICES AND RESEARCH".

SEC. 2. UNDER SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS FOR BENEFITS.

Section 3(c) of such Act is amended—

(1) in the first and second sentences of paragraph (1) and in paragraph (2), by striking out "Chief Benefits Director" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for benefits";

(2) in the third and fourth sentences of paragraph (1), by striking out "Chief Benefits Director" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary"; and

(3) by striking out "CHIEF BENEFITS DIRECTOR" in the subsection heading and inserting in lieu thereof "UNDER SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS FOR BENEFITS".

SEC. 3. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) CONTINUATION OF SERVICE.—(1) Section 3(f) of such Act is amended by striking out "may continue to" and inserting in lieu thereof "may be designated as the Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research by the President and may".

(2) Section 3(g) of such Act is amended by striking out "may continue to" and inserting in lieu thereof "may be designated as the Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Benefits by the President and may".

(b) REFERENCES.—Section 10 of such Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (4), by striking out "Chief Medical Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research"; and

(2) in paragraph (6), by striking out "Chief Benefits Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Benefits".

(c) COMPENSATION FOR CONTINUED SERVICE.—Section 11(f) of such Act is amended by striking out paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) who serves as Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research or Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Benefits under subsection (f) or (g), respectively, of section 3.".

(d) PROHIBITED EMPLOYMENT AND ADVANCEMENT CONSIDERATIONS.—Paragraph (2) of section 12(c) is amended by striking out "Chief Medical Director, the Chief Benefits Director" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research, the Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Benefits".

(e) COMPENSATION LEVEL.—Section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out

"Chief Medical Director, Department of Veterans Affairs.

"Chief Benefits Director, Department of Veterans Affairs."

and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Health Services and Research.

"Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Benefits.".●

By Mr. BRYAN (for himself and Mr. REID):

S. 2558. A bill to amend section 1307 of title 18, United States Code, to permit radio and television advertising of casino gambling; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADVERTISING OF CASINO GAMBLING

● Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I am introducing today legislation to remove a discriminatory provision in current law which prohibits the gaming industry from radio and television advertising. The time has come to correct this glaring inequity.

There are archaic provisions of Federal law which forbid radio and television advertising by the gaming industry. It's crazy to outlaw advertising of private companies when at the same time, States all ovr the country are encouraging people to wager in State-run lotteries. Private enterprise must be put on a level playing field with government sponsored wagering.

There is no good reason why the gaming industry shouldn't be permitted to buy advertising from radio and television stations, other than some old fashion prejudice. There is no other medium which has the reach and potential to encourage visitors to Nevada. This is a valuable tool other tourists destinations have that is now denied Nevada.

Gaming is the life blood of Nevada's economy. This legislation should greatly assist our effort to attract more tourist to Nevada. Recently, the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority voted a large increase in the advertising budget to meet the intense competition for tourists. With a massive expansion of hotel rooms coming on line in the next several years, we must use every tool possible to expand our industry's reach.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to work with me to correct this deficiency in current law.●

By Mr. KOHL (for himself, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. DODD, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. BINGAMAN):

S. 2559. A bill to provide for a comprehensive approach to drug abuse prevention and treatment, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

COMPREHENSIVE ASSISTANCE TO SUBSTANCE ABUSING FAMILIES ACT OF 1990

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to create a coherent system of prevention and treatment services for parents with drug and alcohol problems, especially women of child-bearing age, and their children. I am pleased to have my distinguished colleagues, Senators SPECTER, DODD, BRADLEY, DECONCINI, LIEBERMAN, SIMON, and BINGAMAN, join me in sponsoring this legislation. It will ensure comprehensive, coordinated services within communities and at the State and Federal level for children, youth, and families at risk of substance abuse.

This legislation has been endorsed by the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependency, Therapeutic Communities of America, the National Association of State Drug and Alcohol Directors, and the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy. In addition, helpful advise in crafting the bill was extended by the National Coalition on Alcoholic and Drug Dependent Women, the National Mental Health Law Project, the American Public Welfare Association, the Association of Junior Leagues International, the Child Welfare League, the Coalition on Child Abuse, the National Organization for Women, and many others.

Mr. President, no one in the Senate would question the need to address the crisis drug abuse poses for millions of American children and families. I am talking about a crisis with human faces: Pregnant women hooked on drugs and alcohol, infants born addicted, and fathers locked in a cycle of alcoholism, drug use and violence. This Public Health Emergency now threatens the well-being of hundreds of thousands of mothers and fathers and children. It will overwhelm our hospitals, child welfare agencies, and schools unless we take immediate steps to remedy it.

Last summer, I chaired a hearing before the Governmental Affairs Committee, looking at the need to coordinate prevention and treatment services for alcoholic and drug dependent women. The statistics I heard then frightened me. In Milwaukee, in my home State of Wisconsin, 500 pregnant women will need drug and alcohol treatment services this year. But there is only one residential drug treatment center for women and children in the entire State. And that center—Meta House—can serve only 10 to 12 women a year.

My home State has also seen a sharp jump in reports of child abuse and neglect associated with parental drug and alcohol problems. Overall reports soared from about 10,000 in 1983 to some 31,000 in 1988. Forty-one percent of the affected children were under the age of five. Wisconsin is not unique. In New York City in 1988, 41 percent of all reports of child abuse and neglect categorized as high risk involved drugs. And half of all child abuse fatalities that year were attributed to parental drug abuse. Cities and States are having a hard time finding child welfare workers with any background in identifying drug use. And the workers they have cannot keep up with all the cases.

It should come as no surprise that child poverty rates have soared in Wisconsin as well. Between 1979 and 1987, the number of children living in poverty increased by 52 percent. The problems of parental substance abuse, child maltreatment, and poverty are intimately connected. And we cannot solve one or the other without addressing them all.

Without more residential drug treatment centers, women will have to choose between keeping their children or getting sober. Without more prevention and treatment options, the child welfare system will remain under siege. Without more drug treatment slots, prenatal care and WIC providers will have no place to refer the addicted pregnant women they see. And without maternal and child health, drug and alcohol treatment, and child welfare agencies working together, thousands of women and children will continue to fall through the cracks.

The legislation we are introducing today would address all these issues in a comprehensive, coherent fashion. It would provide prevention and treatment services for parents, especially women of child-bearing age. It would guarantee services for affected infants, toddlers, and school-age children, such as education, health and child welfare. And it would provide coordinated programs for adolescents at risk of substance abuse.

Coordination is critical. No single agency can meet the needs of all these children and families. All too often, local providers must struggle with conflicting Federal funding requirements designed for narrow categories of clients and problems. But families at risk need access to a broad range of services, including drug and alcohol treatment, health care, social services, and housing assistance. This bill would help establish new and better ways to coordinate such essential programs within communities, States, and the Federal Government.

In closing, there are some who will look at the authorizing figures attached to this bill and say they cost too much. As a businessman, I would be the last one to take for granted the total cost of this package, $455. But the fiscal and human costs of not enacting these proposals are much, much greater.

According to a recent study by the inspector general of Health and Human Services, we spend $5 billion a year to provide acute care for 100,000 infants born exposed to cocaine. I repeat, Mr. President, $5 billion a year. That doesn't include the longer-term health, education, and social services necessary to prepare these children for school or help them graduate. When you multiply out those costs, the numbers go right off the charts. So, I urge my colleagues to join us in investing in prevention and treatment and America's future now by cosponsoring this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a summary, the text of the "Comprehensive Assistance for Substance Abusing Families Act of 1990" appear in the RECORD in its entirety. I further ask unanimous consent that statements of support from the National Council on Alcoholism, the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, the American, Society of Addiction Medicine, National Association of State Drug and Alcohol Abuse Directors, and the Therapeutic Communities of America appear in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2559

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Comprehensive Assistance to Substance Abusing Families Act of 1990."

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the sharp rise in parental drug and alcohol abuse has triggered a National health emergency;

(2) as many as 375,000 infants a year, accounting for 11 percent of all births, are exposed to illegal drugs and alcohol;

(3) children suffering from exposure to alcohol and drugs are at much greater risk of poor health, developmental delays, and even death;

(4) recent sharp jumps in the infant mortality rate in a number of cities are directly tied to parental drug and alcohol abuse;

(5) in the majority of States, parental drug and alcohol abuse is now the most prevalent characteristic in reported cases of child abuse and neglect;

(6) the fiscal costs of parental drug and alcohol abuse are as serious and far-reaching as the tragic human costs;

(7) drug and alcohol exposed infants are stretching hospital resources to the breaking point;

(8) drug and alcohol affected infants are flooding an already overburdened child welfare system;

(9) the Inspector General has determined that it costs $5,000,000,000 a year to provide acute care and foster care for 100,000 infants exposed to crack cocaine;

(10) the learning and behavioral disabilities associated with drug and alcohol exposure during infancy may lead affected children to overwhelm public school systems;

(11) targeted prevention and comprehensive treatment programs for parents would provide an essential remedy, but such programs are few and far between;

(12) significant barriers to treatment, including lack of child care, remain for alcoholic and drug dependent women; and

(13) maternal and child health is endangered by lack of access to prenatal care and drug and alcohol treatment.

(b) PURPOSES.—It is the purpose of this Act to—

(1) provide for the development and provision of comprehensive, coordinated, and continuous prevention and treatment services for parents with drug and alcohol problems and their children;

(2) address the crisis in child welfare, education and health services for young children and families posed by the related problems of parental drug and alcohol abuse, AIDS, and homelessness; and

(3) provide for the development of comprehensive programs and coordinate health, education, and social services for youth at risk.

TITLE I—PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT

SEC. 101. INTERAGENCY COMMITTEE ON PARENTAL DRUG AND ALCOHOL ABUSE.

Part A of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq) is amended by inserting after section 508 the following new section:

"SEC. 508A. INTERAGENCY COMMITTEE ON PARENTAL DRUG AND ALCOHOL ABUSE.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall establish and implement a program to gather information concerning existing impediments in Federal laws, regulations, and practices that interfere with the provision of comprehensive, coherent local treatment services to parents with drug or alcohol problems, especially pregnant and post-partum women, and with the provision of comprehensive, coherent preventive services to children, youth and families at risk, and to make recommendations for the prompt removal of such obstacles.

"(b) ACTIVITIES.—In implementing the program established under subsection (a), the Secretary shall—

"(1) conduct and support research on the best ways to promote and provide incentives for coordination, at the local service provider level, of comprehensive, coherent treatment services to parents with drug or alcohol problems, especially pregnant and postpartum women, and of comprehensive, coherent preventive services to children, youth and families at risk;

"(2) coordinate all research, prevention and treatment, health care and social services, educational programs, and other activities within the Department of Health and Human Services that relate to children, youth and families at risk due to parental drug and alcohol abuse and coordinate, through the Interagency Committee on Parental Drug and Alcohol Abuse (established under subsection (c)), such activities with similar activities of other Federal Agencies and private agencies;

"(3) establish and maintain a liaison with appropriate private entities, other Federal agencies, and State and local public agencies concerning activities relating to children, youth and families at risk due to parental drug and alcohol abuse;

"(4) collect, analyze, and disseminate information, studies, and other data relating to children, youth and families at risk due to parental drug and alcohol abuse and develop standards, criteria, and methodologies for the provision of improved comprehensive, coherent local services to children, youth and families at risk due to parental drug and alcohol abuse; and

"(5) undertake any other additional information and research activities that the Secretary determines necessary and appropriate to carry out this section.

"(c) ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To carry out the activities described in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b), the Secretary shall establish an Interagency Committee on Parental Drug and Alcohol Abuse (hereafter referred to in this section as the 'Committee').

"(2) COMPOSITION.—The Committee shall be composed of—

"(A) members appointed by the Secretary from appropriate institutes and agencies within the Department, including—

"(i) the Office for Substance Abuse Prevention;

"(ii) the Office for Treatment Improvement;

"(iii) the Office of Maternal and Child Health;

"(iv) the Indian Health Service;

"(v) the Bureau of Health Care Delivery and Assistance; and

"(vi) the Office of Human Development Services;

"(B) members appointed by the Secretary of the Interior that shall include a representative of the Bureau of Indian Affairs;

"(C) members appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture;

"(D) members appointed by the Secretary of Defense;

"(E) members appointed by the Secretary of Education;

"(F) members appointed by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development;

"(G) members appointed by the Secretary of Labor; and

"(H) five members appointed by the Secretary from among physicians, scientists, community-based nonprofit organizations, and advocates who represent private entities involved in informing the public concerning the child health and development effects of parental alcohol and drug abuse.

"(3) CHAIRPERSON.—The Secretary shall designate the chairperson of the Committee.

"(4) COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES.—

"(A) COMPENSATION.—Members of the Committee who are not regular full-time employees of the United States government shall, while attending meetings and conferences of the Committee or otherwise engaged in the business of the Committee (including traveltime), be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding the rate specified at the time of such service under GS-18 of the General Schedules established under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code.

"(B) EXPENSES.—While away from their homes or regular places of business on the business of the Committee, members of such Committee may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as is authorized under section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons employed intermittently in the Government service.

"(5) OTHER INFORMATION.—The Secretary ensure that the Committee is provided with such staff, information, and other assistance as the Committee may require to carry out its activities effectively.

"(d) REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of enactment of this section and annually thereafter, the Secretary shall prepare and submit, to the appropriate Committees of Congress, a report that shall contain—

"(1) a review of all Federal activities and programs to—

"(A) prevent and treat drug and alcohol abuse and deliver necessary, related services to parents, especially women of child-bearing age;

"(B) to provide prenatal care to pregnant women who abuse drugs or alcohol; and

"(C) to assist drug and alcohol exposed infants, from birth through enrollment and attendance in school;

"(2) recommendations for improvements in programs and activities conducted by Federal agencies, State and local governments, and private voluntary organizations—

"(A) to prevent and treat drug and alcohol abuse and deliver necessary related services to parents, especially women of child-bearing age;

"(B) to provide prenatal care to pregnant women who abuse drugs or alcohol; and

"(C) to assist drug and alcohol exposed infants, toddlers and school age children;

"(3) recommendations for improving the coordination of existing programs and activities—

"(A) to prevent and treat drug and alcohol abuse among parents, especially women of child-bearing age;

"(B) to provide prenatal care to pregnant women who abuse drugs or alcohol; and

"(C) to assist drug and alcohol exposed infants, toddlers and school-age children; and

"(4) an assessment of the professional and technical assistance available for States, local governments, and other public and private nonprofit organizations.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1991 through 1995 to carry out this section.".

SEC. 102. INTERAGENCY PREVENTION CHALLENGE PROGRAMS.

Part A of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq.) (as amended by section 101) is further amended by inserting after section 508A the following new section:

"SEC. 508B. INTERAGENCY PREVENTION CHALLENGE PROGRAMS.

"(a) PROJECTS FOR AT RISK PARENTS.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a challenge grant program for State and local entities through the establishment of interagency demonstration projects to assist parents with alcohol and drug problems, including pregnant and postpartum women, and their children.

"(2) CONSULTATION.—In allocating resources under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consult with the Interagency Committee on Parental Drug and Alcohol Abuse established under section 508A(c), and allocate such resources on the basis of the plan submitted collaboratively by the participating Federal entities.

"(3) REQUIREMENTS.—To be eligible to receive assistance under the program established under paragraph (1), the participating Federal entities shall submit a single plan to the Interagency Committee on Parental Drug and Alcohol Abuse. In developing such plan, the Secretary should include participants from the—

"(A) Department of Health and Human Services, including the Office for Substance Abuse Prevention, Office of Human Development Services, Bureau of Health Care Delivery and Assistance, Indian Health Service, the Office for Treatment Improvement, and the Office of Maternal and Child Health;

"(B) Department of Education;

"(C) Department of Agriculture;

"(D) Department of the Interior (that shall include a representative from the Bureau of Indian Affairs);

"(E) Department of Labor; and

"(F) Department of Defense.

"(4) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The Secretary shall submit an annual report to the appropriate Committees of Congress concerning the status of progress with respect to programs developed under this section. Such report shall include a section concerning collaborative efforts developed and implemented within relevant Federal entities as well as a section concerning State and local coordination. The report shall also include—

"(A) a plan designed to meet Federal, State, and local needs as such relate to prevention and treatment, education, and delivery of health and social services and any other related services necessary to address drug and alcohol problems among parents and their children;

"(B) the allocation of funds at State and local levels; and

"(C) how goals and objectives, as stated in the plan, are being accomplished.

"(5) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this section.

"(6) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.

"(b) PROJECTS FOR HIGH RISK YOUTH.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a challenge grant program for State and local entities through the establishment of interagency demonstration projects to assist youth at risk of alcohol and drug problems.

"(2) CONSULTATION.—In allocating resources under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consult with the Juvenile Justice Coordinating Committee. Such resources shall be allocated based on the plan submitted collaboratively by the participating Federal entities.

"(3) REQUIREMENTS.—To be eligible for assistance under this subsection, the participating Federal entities shall submit a single plan to the Juvenile Justice Coordinating Committee. In developing the plan, the Secretary should include participants from the—

"(A) Department of Health and Human Services, including the Office for Substance Abuse Prevention, Office of Human Development Services, Bureau of Health Care Delivery and Assistance, Indian Health Service, the Office for Treatment Improvement, and the Office of Maternal and Child Health;

"(B) Department of Justice;

"(C) Department of Education;

"(D) Department of Agriculture;

"(E) Department of the Interior which shall include a representative from the Bureau of Indian Affairs;

"(F) Department of Labor; and

"(G) Department of Defense.

"(4) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The Secretary shall submit an annual report to Congress concerning the status of progress with respect to programs developed under this subsection. Such report shall include a section concerning collaborative efforts developed and implemented within relevant Federal entities as well as a section concerning State and local coordination. The report shall also include

"(A) a plan designed to meet Federal, State, and local needs as such relate to prevention and treatment, education, and delivery of health and social services and any other related services necessary to address drug and alcohol problems among high risk youth;

"(B) the allocation of funds at State and local levels; and

"(C) the manner in which goals and objectives, as stated in the plan, are being accomplished.

"(5) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this subsection.

"(6) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

SEC. 103. PUBLIC EDUCATION REGARDING ALCOHOL AND DRUG USE DURING PREGNANCY.

Part A of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 509H. PUBLIC EDUCATION REGARDING DRUG AND ALCOHOL USE DURING PREGNANCY.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish and implement a program to inform the public of any dangers to maternal and child health resulting from drug and alcohol use during pregnancy and the post-partum period.

"(2) DUTIES OF SECRETARY.—In implementing the program established under paragraph (1) the Secretary shall—

"(A) develop educational programs and materials and public service announcements for women of child-bearing age and their male partners concerning the dangers to maternal and child health resulting from alcohol and drug use during pregnancy and the post-partum period, and the dangers to health throughout childhood posed by parental drug and alcohol abuse;

"(B) make such programs, materials, and announcements available to States, local governments, school systems, the media, community-based nonprofit organizations, health-related facilities, and such other entities as the Secretary determines appropriate to further the purposes of this section; and

"(C) conduct, support, and encourage the coordination of research on the effect of alcohol and drug use during pregnancy and the post-partum period.

"(3) CONSULTATION.—In developing programs, materials, and announcements under paragraph (2)(A), the Secretary shall consult with the Interagency Committee on Parental Drug and Alcohol Abuse established under section 508A(c), the Secretary of Education, medical and public health entities, consumer and advocacy groups, and other appropriate entities.

"(b) ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary may provide technical assistance and make grants to States—

"(1) to assist such States in the development of educational programs and materials and public service announcements for women of child-bearing age and their male partners concerning the dangers to maternal and child health resulting from the use of alcohol and drugs during pregnancy and the post-partum period, and the dangers to health throughout childhood posed by parental drug and alcohol abuse; and

"(2) to assist in the distribution of such programs, materials and announcements through such States.

"(c) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this section.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

SEC. 104. COMPREHENSIVE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT SERVICES FOR WOMEN IN PRISON.

Part A of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq.) (as amended by section 103) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 509I. COMPREHENSIVE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT SERVICES FOR WOMEN IN PRISON.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Office for Treatment Improvement and the Director of the Office of Maternal and Child Health, shall make grants to eligible entities for the establishment of pilot programs at not fewer than 20 State and local jails or prisons to provide comprehensive drug and alcohol abuse treatment services for women and in the event of pregnancy, prenatal and post-partum care.

"(b) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under subsection (a), an entity shall—

"(1) be a public or private nonprofit entity with demonstrated experience in the provision of drug and alcohol abuse treatment services for women and for pregnant women and prenatal and post-partum care;

"(2) provide or arrange for the provision of intervention services for female inmates, including—

"(A) drug and alcohol abuse and addiction treatment services, with priority given to discrete treatment units that provide detoxification if necessary, comprehensive drug and alcohol abuse education, the development of individualized treatment plans, individual and group counseling, and ongoing access to self-help groups;

"(B) in the event of pregnancy, prenatal and post-partum health care;

"(C) support services (such as counseling to address family violence and sexual assault);

"(D) life skills training (such as parenting and child development classes);

"(E) education services (such as literacy and vocational training); and

"(F) after care services;

"(3) provide or arrange for the provision of ancillary health and social services and such other assistance as will ensure that females can maintain contact with their children and that such children will receive age appropriate alcohol and drug abuse education and counseling; and

"(4) prepare and submit, an application, to the Secretary at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretary shall require, including a description of the services to be provided with the assistance provided under a grant awarded under this section.

"(c) EVALUATION.—The Secretary, acting through the Directors of the Office for Treatment Improvement and the Office of Maternal and Child Health shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this section and disseminate the results of such evaluations.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

SEC. 105. COMPREHENSIVE FAMILY PRESERVATION SERVICE GRANTS.

Part E of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 670 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by inserting after the part heading the following:

"Subpart 1—General Provisions"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subpart:

"Subpart 2—Provisions Relating to Both Alcohol and Drug Abuse

"SEC. 480. COMPREHENSIVE FAMILY PRESERVATION SERVICE GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants to States to assist such States in developing statewide, comprehensive coordinated, multidisciplinary, interagency systems to provide early intervention and family preservation services for families at risk of drug and alcohol abuse and their children.

"(b) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State shall annually prepare and submit, to the Secretary, an application at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretary shall require, including an assurance that such State has established, or will establish, a State Interagency Coordinating Council.

"(c) CONTINUING ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) FIRST TWO YEARS.—To be eligible for an initial or first subsequent grant under subsection (a), a State shall include in its application submitted under subsection (b) for such grant, assurances that assistance received under such a grant shall be used to assist the State in planning, developing, and implementing the Statewide system required under subsection (d).

"(2) THIRD AND FOURTH YEAR.—

"(A) ASSURANCES.—To be eligible for a second or third subsequent grant under subsection (a), a State shall include in its application submitted under subsection (b) for such grant, information and assurances demonstrating to the satisfaction of the Secretary that—

"(i) the State has adopted a policy that incorporates all of the components of a Statewide system in accordance with subsection (d) or obtained a waiver of such from the Secretary under subparagraph (B);

"(ii) assistance provided under such grant shall be used to plan, develop, and implement the Statewide system required under subsection (d); and

"(iii) the Statewide system of the State will be in effect not later than the beginning of the fourth year of the participation of the State in the grant program established under this section, a State need only conduct multidisciplinary assessments, develop individualized family service plans, and make available case management services.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the Secretary may permit a State to continue to receive assistance under this section during the period for which the application for the second subsequent grant was made even though the State has not adopted the policy required by subparagraph (A)(i) prior to receiving assistance under such application, if the State demonstrates in such application—

"(i) that the State has made a good faith effort to adopt such a policy;

"(ii) the reasons why the State was unable to meet the timeline and the steps remaining before such a policy will be adopted; and

"(iii) an assurance that such policy will be adopted and made effective prior to the start of the period for which the application for the third subsequent grant is submitted.

"(3) FIFTH AND SUCCEEDING YEARS.—To be eligible for a grant under (a) after the third subsequent grant, a State shall include in its application submitted under subsection (b) for such grant information and assurances demonstrating to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the State has in effect the statewide system required under subsection (d).

"(d) REQUIREMENTS FOR A STATEWIDE SYSTEM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A statewide system of coordinated, comprehensive, multidisciplinary, interagency programs providing intervention early in family formation and family preservation services for children at risk and their families shall include the minimum components described in paragraph (2).

"(2) MINIMUM COMPONENTS.—The statewide system required under this section shall include—

"(A) a definition of the term 'family at risk' (that includes failure to provide nurturance that a child needs) that will be used by the State in carrying out programs under this section;

"(B) timetables for implementation of the State plan ensuring that appropriate intervention services will be available prior to the beginning of the fifth year of the participation of a State in the grant program under this section to children and families at risk because of substance abuse;

"(C) a timely, comprehensive, multidisciplinary evaluation of the needs of the family and child at risk;

"(D) an individualized family service plan, including case management services to be provided in accordance with such service plan to be developed with the family;

"(E) a statewide child abuse and neglect reporting system that shall act as a child find system for family preservation services;

"(F) a public awareness program focusing on family preservation;

"(G) a central directory that includes intervention and family preservation services, resources, experts available in the State, research and demonstration projects being conducted in the State, and a toll-free hotline for parents;

"(H) a comprehensive system of personnel development with cross-training programs;

"(I) a single line of responsibility in a lead agency designated or established by the Governor for carrying out—

"(i) the general administration, supervision, and monitoring of programs and activities receiving assistance under this section to ensure compliance with this section;

"(ii) the identification and coordination of all available resources within the State from Federal, State, local and private sources;

"(iii) the resolution of intra- and interagency disagreements; and

"(iv) the entry into formal interagency agreements that define the financial responsibility of each agency for paying for early intervention and family preservation services (consistent with State law) and procedures for resolving disputes and that include all additional components necessary to ensure meaningful cooperation and coordination;

"(J) policies and procedures relating to the establishment and maintenance of standards to ensure that personnel necessary to carry out this section are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained, including—

"(i) the establishment and maintenance of standards that are consistent with any State approved or recognized certification, licensing, registration, or other comparable requirements that apply to the area in which such personnel are providing early intervention and family preservation services; and

"(ii) to the extent such standards are not based on the highest requirements in the State applicable to a specific profession or discipline, the steps the State is taking to require the retraining or hiring of personnel that meet appropriate professional requirements in the State; and

"(K) a system for compiling, analyzing, publishing and disseminating data on the numbers of children at risk and their families in the State in need of appropriate early intervention and family preservation services, the numbers of children and families served, the types of services provided, and outcomes for families and children and other information required by the Secretary.

"(e) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, States may use, in addition to amounts made available under subsection (h), amounts made available under section 470 for family preservation services.

"(f) STATE MATCH.—States shall provide State funds for use in the program established under this section in an amount that equals 10 percent of the amount provided to such States under this section and section 470. State expenditures for programs consistent with this section may be used to meet such matching requirement, except that assistance under this section shall not be used to replace or substitute for State efforts.

"(g) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this section.

"(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.

"(i) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(1) FAMILY AT RISK.—The term 'family at risk' means one which fails to provide essential nurturance for a dependent child or children;

"(2) FAMILY PRESERVATION SERVICES.—The term 'family preservation services' means time limited intensive services not to exceed 90 days to families in crisis where there is a threat to remove the child or children.".

SEC. 106. MODEL STATE GRANTS FOR COORDINATED, INTEGRATED SERVICES.

Part D of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290dd et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subpart:

"Subpart 3—Model State Grants for Coordinated, Integrated Services.

"SEC. 550. MODEL STATE GRANTS FOR COORDINATED, INTEGRATED SERVICES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, the Secretary of Labor, and the Attorney General, shall provide make grants to not less than 10 nor more than 15 States to enable such States to establish model coordinated education, health, and social service programs for children, especially children living in areas of concentrated poverty and social dislocation.

"(b) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive assistance under subsection (a), a State shall prepare and submit, to the Secretary, an application at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretary shall require, including a designation of a lead agency within the State to be responsible for improving the coordination of services for children. Such services shall include health or mental health, education, early education and child care, welfare, juvenile justice, alcohol and drug prevention and treatment, or other social services that can be shown to be effective in preventing long-term damage. Such agency shall have experience and expertise in providing educational, health or mental health, welfare, juvenile justice, alcohol and drug prevention and treatment, or other social services for children.

"(c) ASSURANCES.—To be eligible to receive assistance under subsection (a), a State shall provide assurances that it will—

"(1) provide personnel sufficient to staff the lead agency designated under subsection (b); and

"(2) establish a program to coordinate health, education, and welfare programs for children.

"(d) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this section.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

TITLE II—PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

SEC. 201. SSI PRESUMPTIVE DISABILITY BASED ON CERTAIN GENETIC, CONGENITAL, ALCOHOL OR DRUG RELATED IMPAIRMENTS FOR CHILDREN UNDER 4 YEARS OF AGE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1614(a)(3)(C) (42 U.S.C. 1382c(a)(3)(C)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(i)" after "(C)";

(2) by inserting ", except as provided in clause (ii)," after "mental impairment"; and

(3) by adding after and below the end the following new clause:

"(ii) In the case of any child under the age of 4 years with a genetic, congenital, alcohol or drug related impairment (including cystic fibrosis, Down's syndrome, junctional epidermolysis bullosa, Hirschprung's syndrome, Tourette syndrome, Prader Willi syndrome, spina bifida and alcohol, cocaine and other drug syndromes) the medical severity of which cannot be accurately determined by clinical or laboratory techniques because the child is too young, and with respect to whom the Secretary has determined that it is probable that, when the child is older, medical professionals will be able to administer a test that accurately demonstrates (by acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques) that the child suffers from an impairment or impairments of sufficient medical severity to qualify the child for benefits under this title, the Secretary shall presume such child to be disabled or blind, as the case may be, for purposes of this part. Such presumption may be rebutted at any time by evidence that the child's impairment is not of the requisite severity.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to determinations made with respect to benefits for months after September 1990.

SEC. 202. EXPANDING MEDICAID COVERAGE FOR FREE-STANDING ALCOHOL AND DRUG TREATMENT PROGRAMS FOR WOMEN OF CHILD-BEARING AGE.

(a) PURPOSE OF TITLE XIX MODIFIED.—Section 1901 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396) is amended—

(1) by striking "and (2)" and inserting "(2)"; and

(2) by inserting after "self-care" the following: "and (3) at State option, free-standing alcohol and drug treatment services so that treatment may be provided to alcoholic and drug dependent women of child-bearing age eligible for assistance under this title who (A) desire to rid themselves of drug and alcohol problems and (B) whose income and resources are insufficient to meet the cost of treatment,".

(b) FREE-STANDING ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE TREATMENT CENTER SERVICES.—Title XIX of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.) is amended by redesignating section 1926 as section 1927 and inserting after section 1925 the following new section:

"FREE-STANDING ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE TREATMENT SERVICES

"SEC. 1926. (a) At the option of the State, the State plan for medical assistance described in section 1902(a) may include as medical assistance, free-standing alcohol and drug treatment center services and related case management services (described in subsection (b)(3) under the plan to all alcoholic and drug dependent women of child-bearing age eligible for assistance under this title who desire to rid themselves of their alcohol and drug problems.

"(b)(1) In this title, the term 'free-standing alcohol and drug treatment center' means a not-for-profit treatment center, which is not directly affiliated with any hospital, which provides alcohol and drug treatment services, including counseling, to alcoholic and drug dependent women of child-bearing age.

"(2) In this title, the term 'free-standing alcohol and drug treatment center services" includes alcohol and drug treatment services from 21 days to 9 months in a residential setting for women and their children and alcohol and drug treatment services in an outpatient setting, including individual and group counseling and comprehensive day treatment programs for women and their children.

"(3) In subsection (a), the term 'case management services' means services which will assist individuals eligible under the plan in gaining access to needed medical, social, educational, and other services.

"(4) In subsection (b), the term 'counseling' shall also include outreach and services for male partners of alcoholic and drug dependent women.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on October 1, 1990.

TITLE III—PROVISIONS RELATING TO EDUCATION

SEC. 301. THE HEAD START ACT.

Section 640 of the Head Start Act (42 U.S.C. 9835) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) Special consideration for enrollment opportunities under program established under this Act shall be provided to children who were born exposed to alcohol or drugs.".

SEC. 302. STUDY OF PREPAREDNESS OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS TO ACCOMMODATE DRUG AND ALCOHOL EXPOSED STUDENTS.

Not later than September 30, 1991, the Secretary of Education shall prepare an submit, to the appropriate Committees of Congress and to the President, a report concerning the preparedness of the school system of the United States to meet the special needs of children born affected by alcohol or drugs. Such report shall include—

(1) a national assessment of the educational needs of children who are born affected by alcohol or drugs and of the extent to which such needs are being met from Federal, State, and local efforts;

(2) a plan, including cost estimates, to be carried out during the 5-year period beginning on September 30, 1990, for extending existing special education programs to all pre-school and elementary school children born affected by alcohol and/or drugs, including a phased plan for the training of the necessary teachers and other education personnel necessary for such purpose;

(3) a statement of the activities intended to be carried out during the succeeding period, including an estimate of the cost of such activities; and

(4)(A) an assessment of the number of teachers and other educational personnel needed to carry out such programs;

(B) a statement describing the activities carried out thereunder designed to prepare teachers and other educational personnel for such programs; and

(C) the number of other educational personnel needed to carry out programs for children born affected by alcohol or drugs.

TITLE IV—PROVISIONS RELATING TO OTHER ACTS

SEC. 401. PROTECTION AND ADVOCACY FOR THE DISABLED.

Section 102 of the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act (42 U.S.C. 6001) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (7)(A), by inserting ", or the alcohol or drug abuse of the mother of a child" after "impairments"; and

(2) in paragraph (8)(D), by inserting "including children who are affected by the alcohol or drug abuse of their mother" after "in children".

SEC. 402. CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT.

Section 205(b) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5115(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "$48,000,000 for fiscal year 1988" each place that such occurs and inserting in lieu thereof "$89,000,000 for fiscal year 1991"; and

(2) by striking out "and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1989, 1990, and 1991" each place that such occurs; under section 15(B) strike "$9 million" and insert in lieu thereof "$49 million".

SEC. 403. EXPAND INSTITUTIONAL ELIGIBILITY FOR WIC.

Section 17(f)(1)(C)(ix)(II) of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 1786(f)(1)(C)(ix)(II)) is amended by inserting "or providing such services to residential alcohol and drug treatment programs serving such women and juveniles" before the semicolon.

SEC. 404. HOUSING ASSISTANCE TO PREVENT UNNECESSARY FOSTER CARE PLACEMENT.

(a) BUDGET AUTHORITY.—Section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(a) INCREASE IN BUDGET AUTHORITY.—The budget authority available under section 5(c)(7)(A)(ii) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 for assistance under 8(d) of such Act is authorized to be increased by $35,000,000 on or after October 1, 1990, by $35,000,000 on or after October 1, 1991, and by such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—The amounts made available under this section shall be used only in connection with existing housing programs under section 8 for occupancy by families where the provision of housing is a significant factor in avoiding initial or continued placement of a child in foster care.

"(c) ALLOCATION.—The amounts made available under this section shall be allocated by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development on the basis of a national competition among applicants that best demonstrate a need for the assistance under this section. To be considered for assistance, an applicant shall submit to the Secretary a written proposal containing a report from the state welfare agency containing the number of families that, if eligible for and given housing assistance, could be taken off the foster care rolls.".

(b) UNITED STATES HOUSING ACTS.—

(1) OF 1937.—Section 3(b)(3) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437a(b)(3)) is amended by adding at the the end thereof the following new sentence: "The temporary absence of a child from the home due to placement in foster care shall not be considered in considering family composition and family size.".

(2) OF 1949.—Section 501(b)(3) of the Housing Act of 1949 (42 U.S.C. 1471(b)(3)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The temporary absence of a child from the home due to placement in foster care shall not be considered in considering family composition and family size.".

SEC. 405. GRANTS FOR DRUG AND ALCOHOL ABUSE TREATMENT FOR NATIVE AMERICAN PREGNANT AND POST-PARTUM WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Indian Health Service shall make grants to entities to provide assistance to drug and alcohol abuse treatment programs relating to Native American pregnant and post-partum women and their infants, that meet the requirements of subsection (b).

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) DISTRIBUTION.—In making grants under subsection (a), the Indian Health Service shall give priority to those drug and alcohol abuse treatment centers which provide comprehensive outpatient and residential services to women and children.

(2) SERVICES.—An entity shall not be eligible for a grant under subsection (a) unless such entity provides the Indian Health Service with an assurance that such entity will use assistance provided under such grant to provide, arrange for the provision of, or refer individuals to, services that shall include—

(A) intervention services for pregnant and post-partum women, including—

(i) drug and alcohol abuse and addiction treatment services;

(ii) support services (such as child care and transportation services);

(iii) education and skill building services (such as parenting and job seeking skill services);

(iv) integration and coordination of drug and alcohol abuse treatment services with prenatal or post-partum health care services;

(v) medical screening procedures of pregnant women for past and present drug and alcohol use and abuse; and

(vi) after care services;

(B) interventions where infants are at risk, including—

(i) direct intervention, treatment, or rehabilitation of infants, which may include other siblings, to reduce or prevent the impact of maternal drug and alcohol abuse on such children; and

(ii) supportive services for biologic or foster parents affected by maternal drug and alcohol abuse;

(C) service delivery strategies that may include—

(i) strategies for the coordination, for purposes of identification or service delivery, of tribally operated health services, family violence and homeless shelter programs, programs under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act, and section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, crisis pregnancy centers programs, public housing programs, and prison programs, with other likely points of access for high risk women;

(ii) strategies concerning the involvement of significant others (such as male partners or pregnant women) as direct intervention targets or strategies to aid in the outreach and service delivery processes for women;

(iii) strategies for co-locating multiple facilities to facilitate the delivery of services; and

(iv) innovative strategies (such as case management) to ensure the coordinated utilization of generally unrelated service systems; and

(D) other services necessary to improve pregnancy outcomes, reduce drug and alcohol abuse among women of childbearing age, and increase the stability of the family home environment.

(c) APPLICATION.—The Indian Health Service shall not make a grant under subsection (a) unless—

(1) an application for the grant is submitted to the Indian Health Service;

(2) with respect to carrying out the purpose for which the grant is to be made, the application provides assurances of compliance satisfactory to the Secretary;

(3) the application otherwise is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Indian Health Service determines to be necessary to carry out this section; and

(4) the application contains an assurance that the applicant will provide funds, other than Federal funds, in an amount that is not less than 10 percent of the amount of the grant under subsection (a).

(d) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct evaluations to determine the effectiveness of the projects assisted under this section.

(e) APPROPRIATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $20,000,000 in fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.

SEC. 406. PROJECTS FOR PREGNANT AND POST-PARTUM WOMEN.

Section 509F of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa-13) is amended—

(1) in the heading, by striking out "MODEL";

(2) by striking out subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsection:

"(a) The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Office, shall make grants to entities to provide assistance to outpatient and residential drug and alcohol abuse treatment programs relating to pregnant and post-partum females and their infants, that meet the requirements of subsection (c).";

(3) by striking out subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) In making grants under subsection (a), the Director of the Office shall ensure that grants are reasonably distributed among projects that provide outpatient and residential treatment.

"(2) An entity shall not be eligible for a grant under subsection (a) unless such entity provides the Director with an assurance that such entity will use assistance provided under such grant to provide, arrange for the provision of, or refer individuals to, services that shall include—

"(A) intervention services for pregnant and post-partum females, including—

"(i) drug and alcohol abuse and addiction treatment services;

"(ii) support services (such as child care and transportation services);

"(iii) education and skill building services (such as parenting and job seeking skill services);

"(iv) integration and coordination of drug and alcohol treatment services with prenatal or post-partum health care services;

"(v) innovative methods of outreach to identify and recruit target populations for services early in the pregnancy of individuals of such populations;

"(vi) implementation and routinization of effective screening procedures of pregnant women for past and present drug and alcohol use and abuse; and

"(vii) after care services;

"(B) interventions where infants are at risk, including—

"(i) direct intervention, treatment, or rehabilitation of infants and very young children to reduce or prevent the impact of maternal drug and alcohol abuse on such children; and

"(ii) instrumental, informational, and emotional support and resources for biologic or foster parents of infants affected by maternal drug and alcohol abuse;

"(C) service delivery strategies, including—

"(i) strategies for the coordination, for purposes of identification or service delivery, of family violence and homeless shelter programs, programs under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act, and section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, crisis pregnancy centers programs, public housing programs, and prison programs, with other likely points of access for high risk females;

"(ii) strategies concerning the involvement of significant others (such as male partners of pregnant females) as direct intervention targets or strategies to aid in the outreach and service delivery processes for females;

"(iii) strategies for co-locating multiple facilities to facilitate the delivery of services; and

"(iv) innovative strategies (such as case management) to ensure the coordinated utilization of generally unrelated service systems; and

"(D) other services necessary to improve pregnancy outcomes, reduce drug and alcohol abuse among females of childbearing age, and increase the stability of the family home environment.";

(4) in subsection (d)(2), by striking out "; and" and inserting in lieu thereof "including assurances as required in subsection (c)(2);";

(5) in subsection (d)(3), by striking out the period and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(6) in subsection (d), by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) the application contains an assurance that the applicant will provide funds, other than Federal funds, in an amount that is not less than 10 percent of the amount of the grant under subsection (a)."; and

(7) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $75 million for fiscal year 1991 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

SUMMARY OF THE COMPREHENSIVE ASSISTANCE FOR SUBSTANCE ABUSING FAMILIES ACT OF 1990

I. PROGRAMS FOR ALCOHOLIC AND DRUG DEPENDENT PARENTS

Prevention and alcohol/drug treatment funding for pregnant and post-partum women ($75 million through the Office for Substance Abuse Prevention).

Prevention and alcohol/drug treatment funding for pregnant and post-partum Native American women ($20 million through the Indian Health Service Act).

Public education regarding alcohol and drug use during pregnancy ($5 million through the Department of Health and Human Services).

Prevention and alcohol/drug treatment programs for women in prison ($20 million through the Office for Treatment Improvement).

Expanding Medicaid coverage for free-standing alcohol and drug treatment programs for women of child-bearing age.

Expanding WIC coverage to include residential alcohol and drug treatment programs serving women and children.

Establishing an Interagency Committee on Parental Drug and Alcohol Abuse to coordinate federal activities and promote coordination at the state and local level.

Creating a Challenge program to encourage interagency funding of prevention and treatment programs ($30 million).

II. PROGRAMS FOR YOUNG CHILDREN AND FAMILIES

Family preservation and support programs for those at risk of abuse and neglect ($150 million for child welfare services added to Title IVE of the Social Security Act).

Increasing funding for child abuse and neglect prevention and treatment programs ($40 million increase in state grants).

Expanding access to SSI Disability Benefits for infants and young children affected by prenatal exposure to alcohol and drugs.

Ensuring special and compensatory education programs give consideration to children affected by prenatal exposure to alcohol and drugs (Headstart and Protection and Advocacy for the Disabled).

Increasing access to low-income housing for families at imminent risk of foster care placement ($35 million increase for Section 8 housing).

Mandating the Department of Education study the preparedness of school districts to meet the special needs of children born affected by alcohol or drugs.

III. PROGRAMS FOR HIGH RISK YOUTH

Establishing incentive grants for interagency funding of programs for high risk youth ($30 million through the Juvenile Justice Coordinating Council).

Creating model state grants for coordinated, integrated services for children and youth ($50 million through HHS).

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF STATE ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE DIRECTORS,
Washington, DC, April 2, 1990.

Hon. HERBERT KOHL,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KOHL: I am writing on behalf of the members of the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors [NASADAD] to express our strong support for your efforts to address the critical alcohol and other drug abuse treatment and prevention needs of women of child bearing age and their children.

The legislation that you are planning to introduce includes many timely and necessary elements to enhance public education about the dangers of alcohol and other drug use during pregnancy, to provide additional treatment services for women and promote coordination of federal activities relating to parental alcohol and other drug abuse.

Enclosed is a copy of the results of a recent NASADAD survey of publicly funded treatment services that highlights the continuing need for increased resources to provide additional treatment services to women.

The States reported that in FY 1989 total funding for publicly supported alcohol and other drug abuse prevention, intervention and treatment services was $1.9 billion, including $468 million in Federal block grant funds. Of the total funding, over $349 million, almost 20 percent, was specifically earmarked for services to women. In addition, women are served along with men in most treatment programs.

The State indicated that approximately 548,326 women are currently receiving treatment services per year including 29,842 pregnant women. The number of additional women needing treatment is conservatively estimated at about 4 million, including 250,362 pregnant women.

The State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Agency Directors look forward to working with you to ensure the delivery of increased alcohol and other drug abuse prevention and treatment services to all who are in need, including women and their children, and to foster coordination between the federal government and the States in the planning and delivery of these services nationwide.

Sincerely,
JOHN S. GUSTAFSON, President.

THERAPEUTIC COMMUNITIES OF AMERICA,
March 29, 1990.

Senator HERBERT KOHL,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KOHL: On behalf of the Therapeutic Communities of America (TCA), the premier national organization of drug-free, self help, substance abuse treatment and rehabilitation agencies, I endorse the "Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act" you are set to introduce shortly.

As you know, substance abuse poses one of the greatest challenges to lawmakers in Washington, D.C. The plan you have put forward, in my estimation, is a realistic and comprehensive approach to eradicating drug use in America.

Please consider us an ally in this effort. We will be happy to provide additional support as needed on this critical matter.

Sincerely,
R. DOUGLAS CHIAPPETTA,
Director, National Office.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF ADDICTION MEDICINE, INC.,
Washington, DC, March 27, 1990.

Hon. HERB KOHL,
Hart Senate Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KOHL: I am writing on behalf of the American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM) to endorse your "Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1990."

ASAM is a national medical specialty society of 3600 physicians who specialize in treatment and research in addiction, and in the education and certification of physicians in this field. We applaud your comprehensive approach to the problem of drug abuse prevention and treatment, in which you provide for education, research, and treatment on the problem of parental drug and alcohol abuse, and specifically on the problem of high risk youth, pregnant women, and the family. We support your requirement that all Federal agencies collaborate, and that a Committee be established to ensure cooperation and collaboration.

ASAM's members are fully engaged in addressing all aspects of the addiction problem through the Society's more than twenty-five (25) committees, and our Board has recently adopted public policy positions relevant to the subject of your bill. I have enclosed these for your consideration, to be used as you deem fit.

May I suggest that you give consideration to including in your proposed legislation a provision for the education of physicians and medical students about the diagnosis and treatment of addiction? Among the nearly 600,000 U.S. physicians, there are few who can responsibly practice medicine today without some knowledge of addiction. Yet little is taught in medical schools, or in most other areas of medical education.

Please know that ASAM will support your bill, and that you may reach me at (202) 244-8948, should you wish to call on me for assistance.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES F. CALLAHAN, D.P.A.,
Executive Director.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I rise as a cosponsor of this bill offered by my colleague from Wisconsin [Mr. KOHL] to provide a comprehensive approach to the prevention and treatment of drug-addicted pregnant women and their families. Making sure these women, their drug-exposed infants and other children in their families receive the social and health care services they need is absolutely critical if we are to make any headway in getting these women off drugs. The emphasis of this bill is appropriately on the coordination of services because we know that without addressing the many needs of this population, any one treatment program or service is unlikely to succeed.

For several years now I have worked in Congress to help make Medicaid health care services available for more poor pregnant women and infants. I think policymakers as a whole have recognized the importance of prenatal care and its link to healthy babies. The National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality has helped educate the public about the problem of infant mortality and the fact that the United States ranks behind 19 other industrialized countries in its infant death rate. Many of us in Congress continue to work to improve the availability of prenatal care for pregnant women and primary care for children. But we know that for many poor families adequate care is only a part of the solution; this is especially true for drug-addicted pregnant women.

Our efforts to decrease the U.S. rate of infant mortality will not fully succeed unless we address the problem of drug addiction. A recent survey of hospitals showed that 11 percent of all pregnant women use illicit drugs. One expert estimated that 75 percent of these women are using either cocaine or crack—the most difficult addiction to treat. As many as 375,000 infants each year may be affected and, for those who are, the effects are heartbreaking.

Babies born to drug-addicted women are much more likely to be born prematurely or at low birth weight, which dramatically raises the risk of infant mortality. Those who survive often have serious medical and developmental problems. Many are addicted to their mother's drug and suffer from withdrawal. So many are saddled with learning and behavioral problems as a result of their traumatic early life that full socialization into our society is extraordinarily difficult.

The economic and social costs are enormous. Hospital treatment for these babies in neonatal intensive care units can be as much as $1,768 a day. And some of these babies stay hospitalized for months. Just recently the Washington Post and others in the media have exposed this city's "boarder baby" problem. Many hospitals are having to rear the babies of drug-addicted mothers because, after providing the intensive care treatment the babies need, their mothers never return to bring them home. The problem is burdening the health care system and overwhelming foster care services.

This bill also recognizes that children born to drug addicted pregnant women are often the victims of abuse and neglect. The bill attempts to address the needs of these children by bolstering child welfare services; providing increased funding for child abuse prevention and treatment programs; and assuring access to existing early childhood education programs. These child support provisions and the ones dealing with coordinated programs for high risk youths are small but necessary steps in trying to break the cycle of poverty, addiction, and neglect.

Mr. President, we must make sure that comprehensive treatment and support programs are available to drug-addicted pregnant women and their infants and children. We must get these women off drugs, for the sake of their babies, their families, and themselves.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I am pleased to join with Senator KOHL, Senator DODD, and my other colleagues in support of legislation to provide treatment for families addicted to drugs or alcohol. In particular, I am proud to be associated with a bill that will target assistance to children who were born addicted to crack or other deadly drugs, for these babies are truly innocent victims of America's drug problem.

I learned first hand about the woeful inadequacy of current drug treatment programs for families, particularly mothers and their children, from a hearing I conducted on the drug problem in Connecticut last year. Effective treatment for women with a drug or alcohol addiction problem is in terribly short supply. Too many women must face an awful dilemma: To get help giving up drugs, they must also give up their children. In Connecticut today, there is only one program for women that allows them to keep their children with them during treatment. Needless to say, the amount of space available in that program is not sufficient to meet demand in New Haven, where it's based, let alone the whole State. That is a tragedy.

There is cost associated with this legislation, but there is substantially greater cost associated with the problem of pregnant women and children addicted to harmful drugs. It can cost up to $1,500 a day to keep a baby in a neonatal unit when that baby is born addicted to a drug. With more than 300,000 such babies born each year, most of them needing weeks or months of hospital care, the cost to society adds up to over $10 billion. Isn't it more cost effective to try to get women off drugs before children are conceived or born?

We must not kid ourselves by thinking we're being fiscally prudent if we reject a bill like this one due to its cost, because the taxpayers are paying a much bigger price tag every day as a result of the health care needs of families addicted to drugs. And we must also realize that the Nation's drug problem will not be solved by tough law enforcement alone, though that is an important part of any solution. We must provide treatment for all who want to get off drugs because, if we do not, their addiction will continue and, all too often, they will give birth to new generations of addicts. That is the harsh and cruel reality which this legislation seeks to change.

I thank Senator KOHL for his leadership on this issue, and I share his concern and his desire to deal with the problem head on.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that certain materials in support of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON ALCOHOLISM AND DRUG DEPENDENCE REGARDING THE COMPREHENSIVE ASSISTANCE FOR SUBSTANCE ABUSING FAMILIES ACT OF 1190

The National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence (NCADD) applauds Senator Herb Kohl and his cosponsors for the introduction of legislation which offers a humane, comprehensive, and potentially effective public health approach to the needs of growing numbers of alcoholic and other drug dependent pregnant women and their children. If enacted, it may reduce the toll of alcoholism and other drug addictions on women and their families.

This legislation sends a clear message that the enhancement and coordination of services is the appropriate response to pregnant addicts and affected children. The flurry of prosecutions of pregnant addicts and the enactment of punitive laws in a number of states flies in the face of an assessment of alcoholism and other drug dependence as treatable illnesses. Punitive actions also obscure the real issues: the virtual absence of comprehensive alcoholism and drug treatment services to meet the needs of pregnant addicts and their children and poor coordination of public health and social service systems which provide services to this population.

The NCADD, with its some 200 state and local affiliates across the country, has spearheaded a national coalition to aggressively address the issues of limited treatment services, poor coordination among health and social services agencies as well as the civil rights concerns raised by punitive actions against pregnant addicts. The Coalition on Alcohol and Drug Dependent Women and Their Children draws its membership from alcoholism and drug organizations, maternal and child health agencies, child welfare groups and individuals and organizations which address legal issues.

ASAM POLICY STATEMENT ON CHEMICALLY DEPENDENT WOMEN AND PREGNANCY

(By James F. Callahan, D.P.A.)

BACKGROUND OF THE PROBLEM

Because of the adverse effects on fetal development of alcohol and certain other drugs (including nicotine, cocaine, marijuana, and opiates) the chemically dependent woman who is pregnant or may become pregnant is an especially important candidate for intervention and treatment. Similarly, prevention programs should target all women of childbearing age.

Recently, public concern for preventing fetal harm has resulted in punitive measures against pregnant women or women in the postpartum period. These measures have included incarcerating pregnant women in jails to keep them abstinent and the criminal prosectuion of mothers for taking drugs while pregnant and thereby passing these substances to the fetus or newborn through the placenta.

The American Society of Addiction Medicine is deeply committed to the prevention of alcohol- and other drug-related harm to the health and well-being of children. The most humane and effective way to achieve this end is through education, intervention, and treatment. The imposition of criminal penalties solely because a person suffers from an illness is inappropriate and counterproductive. Criminal prosecution of chemically dependent women will have the overall result of deterring such women from seeking both prenatal care and chemical dependency treatment, thereby increasing, rather than preventing, harm to children and to society as a whole.

POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

The American Society of Addiction Medicine supports the following policies:

1. Prevention programs to educate all members of the public about the dangers of alcohol and other drug use during pregnancy and lactation. These should include:

Age appropriate school-based education throughout the school curriculum.

Public education about alcohol and other drug use in pregnancy and lactation, including health warning labels and posters as well as radio and television messages, educational programs and written materials.

Prenatal education about alcohol and other drugs for all pregnant women and significant others, as part of adequate prenatal care.

Professional education for all health care professionals, including education of obstetricians and pediatricians in the care of chemically dependent women and their offspring.

2. Early intervention, consultation, and case finding programs specifically designed to reach chemically dependent women.

Screening for alcohol and other drug problems in all obstetric care services, as well as in all medical settings.

Adequate case finding, intervention, and referral services for women identified as suffering from chemical dependency.

3. Treatment services able to meet the needs of chemically dependent women.

Appropriate and accessible chemical dependency treatment services for pregnant women and women of childbearing age and their families, including inpatient and residential treatment. Services to care for the children and newborns of these patients should be provided. Without adequate child care arrangements, chemically dependent women are often unable to engage in the treatment they need.

Adequate facilities for the outpatient and aftercare phases of treatment for chemically dependent women.

Adequate perinatal care for chemically dependent women in treatment, sensitive to their special needs.

Adequate child protection services to provide alternative placement for infants or children of persons suffering from chemical dependency who are unable to function as parents, in the absence of others able to fulfill the parent role.

4. Research:

Basic and clinical research on the effects of alcohol and other drugs used during pregnancy.

Model programs, with evaluation component, for case finding intervention and treatment of chemically dependent pregnant women, and for case finding, intervention, and treatment of infants and children affected by maternal alcohol and/or other drug use.

5. Law enforcement:

State and local governments should avoid any measures defining alcohol or other drug use during pregnancy as "prenatal child abuse," and should avoid prosecution, jail, or other punitive measures as a substitute for providing effective health services for these women.

6. Preservation of patient confidentiality:

No law or regulation should require physicians to violate confidentiality by reporting their pregnant patients to state or local authorities for "prenatal child abuse."

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR MARRIAGE AND FAMILY THERAPY,
Washington, DC, April 4, 1990.

Hon. HERB KOHL,
Hart Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KOHL: The American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy is pleased to offer its support for the concepts contained in the Comprehensive Assistance for Substance Abusing Families Act of 1990, which you intend to introduce shortly. We appreciate your taking a comprehensive, multidisciplinary approach to substance abuse prevention and treatment services.

In particular, we appreciate your effort to improve federal agencies' ability to address substance abuse and related needs and services in the context of family preservation. Your bill will enhance ongoing and proposed family preservation efforts in a growing number of states.

It is AAMFT's strong belief that policies to address substance abuse and its related problems must be viewed from a family perspective. The dramatic increase in babies born with exposure to alcohol and other drugs, and their subsequent stay as hospital "boarder babies" or in foster care, clearly demonstrates the need to address the needs of women of child-bearing age and their partners both before and after the birth of a child.

Toward this goal, we appreciate your attention to the mental health needs of parents and their children with alcohol and drug related problems. Increasingly, marriage and family therapists are treating individuals and families for substance abuse and related problems, e.g. lack of parenting skills, and family dysfunction resulting in child abuse and neglect and foster care placements, to name but a few. Your legislation will enhance the work already being done by marriage and family therapists and other professionals to help individuals and families avoid and/or sustain recovery from the devastation caused by substance abuse. Toward this end, it is esential that marriage and family therapists be included as providers of service under this important legislation.

On behalf of the 17,000 members of AAMFT, we appreciate your effort to address the nation's substance abuse problem in a comprehensive manner. AAMFT looks forward to working with you in the development of this important legislation.

Sincerely,

MARK R. GINSBERG, PH.D.,
Executive Director.

USING FAMILY THERAPY TO TREAT ADOLESCENT DRUG ABUSE

Treating an adolescent's drug abuse without involving the rest of the family is like trying to repair auto engine problems without considering how every component under the hood works together. Effective treatment engages the whole family.

That is the essence of three NIDA research projects which studied the effectiveness of using family therapy to treat adolescent drug abuse, says Dr. Meyer Glantz of NIDA's Prevention Research Branch, which funded the studies.

"The family therapy approach is based on the premise that if someone—particularly an adolescent—is doing something undesirable, you look to the whole family 'system,' [the patient plus family members] to understand that behavior." Glantz says. "Dysfunctional behavior in an individual is often associated with a dysfunctional family system."

In a study of 127 adolescents NIDA grantee Dr. Robert Lewis of Purdue University and his research team randomly assigned the teenagers and their family members to one of three treatment programs. After 5 years of study, Lewis found family therapy—counseling involving the whole family system—more effective in treating adolescent drug abuse than family drug education classes.

"More than half the adolescents in family therapy greatly reduced their drug use during treatment." Lewis says, while only 37 percent of the adolescents involved in family drug education diminished or ended their use of drugs. In family drug education classes, all family members learn about drugs' effects on an individual's health and on the family but do not receive counseling or therapy.

In many instances, an adolescent's drug abuse problem may be partially caused by problems within a family. For example, kids may turn to drugs to get attention. If a drug abusing adolescent is treated individually and the family environment has not changed, the adolescent may return home and resume the same roles that led to drug abuse. Lewis says.

According to Glantz, family therapy doesn't just provide treatment, it also can prevent non-using siblings from becoming addicted because the family's actions that may have facilitated drug use in one child will have changed.

Lewis plans to track the adolescents involved in his study and their non-drug/using siblings for the next 2 years to see how effective family therapy is in preventing future abuse.

Several studies have shown that family therapy has been very effective in both getting and keeping individuals off drugs, says Lewis. That fact has made family therapy the preferred treatment for drug abusers who have intact families.

However, until the studies described here, research evaluating drug abuse treatment programs geared specifically for adolescents had focused only on isolated components of family therapy, such as reestablishing parental influence or teaching teenagers and sibling to resist peer pressure to use drugs. These are the first studies with adolescents to combine the most effective elements of family therapy into one treatment program.

Like Lewis, NIDA grantee Dr. Harvey Joanning, director of a 4-year family therapy study at Texas Tech University, found 7 to 12 sessions of family therapy more effective for reducing adolescent drug abuse than similar exposure to family drug education classes. He also found family therapy more effective than peer group therapy, in which several adolescents are counseled at one time. "By the end, most adolescents [in family therapy] were either stabilized or improved."

In addition, adolescents in family therapy were more likely to report improved communciations with their mothers (or with both parents, if the father was present) than those assigned to group therapy or family drug education classes.

"It's important to keep in mind that success means different things to different people," Joanning says, "For the parent it might be 'get my kid to do what I say.' For the adolescent it could mean 'get my parents off my back.' For social service workers it's usually 'keep them off drugs.' For me, success means creating a social environment in which an adolescent's behavior can be stabliized and guided. You just can't do that without the family."

Not surprisingly, parents who view drug abuse as "the kid's problem," about one-third of those assigned to family therapy, are more difficult to work with than those who accept the whole family approach, Joanning says.

"One of the biggest problems was getting everybody in at the same time," he says. "We had to spend weeks on the telephone just getting them organized enough to come in. For some, it was the fist time they had done anything together as a family in years.

Joanning is careful to underscore that family patterns do not cause adolescents to abuse drugs. "Drug abuse," he explains "emerges from a variety of social interaction patterns involving the family, the peer group, the school system, the legal system, and the community at large.

"One approach jumps from focusing on the individual alone to another level of abstraction: the family system. That doesn't mean adolescent drug abuse is the family's fault."

Dr. Howard Liddle, a NIDA grantee who conducts family therapy at the University of California, agrees. His Adolescents and Families Project has studied about 200 cases since 1985. Like Joanning, Liddle is comparing the success of family therapy, peer group counseling, and family drug education classes in reducing adolescent drug abuse.

The family therapy program Liddle is using aims to treat drug abuse by transforming relationships among as many as five family subsystems: the adolescent, parents, siblings, the extrafamilial systems involved, and other generations.

First, the family as a whole is observed, then the therapist works closely with each subsystem to improve communications and effect change.

Working with the adolescent, the family therapist must first acknowledge the teen's often long-ignored unhappiness. "This doesn't work with some teenagers," Liddle says. "Some of them are so hopeless, so despairing, you just can't reach them with this line of reasoning. It's important not to minimize or ignore their despair. It takes a tremendous amount of compassion."

The therapist's aim for parents. Liddle says, is to "rekindle the parental love and commitment they once had for their child." Parents who repeatedly fail to deal with their children's behavior often come to the conclusion that they'll never make a difference and give up trying. Liddle says.

Drawing from the broader field of adolescent development. Liddle views adolescence as a time of relationship transformation, rather than "an incurable disease or something you can outgrow. Let's not assume that every kid using drugs is the result of a screwed up marriage. Traditional treatment models tend to zoom down to just one or two dimensions. But people exist in many domains; their problems are multi-dimensional."

From preliminary analyses conducted thus far. Liddle says he's convinced family members can become "effective healing resources" for each other, even after years of hurt, struggle, and failure. "You can unleash a powerful healing force in a family," he says. "Once you've done this kind of therapy, you can't go back to the individualistic, reductionistic approach. You know too much."

Joanning, who is now conducting research at Iowa State University, says. "You can isolate a teenager and detox him in a hospital. But if you don't work with the family when he gets out, it's just a revolving door back to the wolves."

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. BURNS):

S.J. Res. 303. Joint resolution designating May 5, 1990, as "National Tax Freedom Day"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL TAX FREEDOM DAY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise today on behalf of the American taxpayer, a far too often forgotten creature here in Washington, by introducing a resolution with Senator CONRAD BURNS to commemorate Tax Freedom Day. We, and our legislative brethren in State and local governments, often act as though we have never even heard of the American taxpayer. Our Government is never shy about deducting its share from our people, but rarely seems to listen to their concerns.

That is why I want to recognize May 5, 1990, as National Tax Freedom Day, a date on which American workers finally begin to work for themselves instead of the enormous government apparatus that they have spent over 4 months of the year working for.

I commend the Tax Foundation for diligently pursuing this cause by highlighting government's increased yearly tax take. According to the Tax Foundation, the Nation's nominal income is estimated to increase by only 5.7 percent, while taxes are projected to increase by 7.2 percent. In other words, tax increases will surpass individual income growth in 1990.

Fortunately, in my own State of Iowa, Tax Freedom Day arrives a few days earlier on April 26. But, this is little compensation to my overtaxed constituents.

Moneys raised through taxation are spent by government entities with little regard to the effort that hard-working Americans expend on a daily basis to produce them. We spend and spend more in Washington, with the result being massive budget deficits on one hand and still heavily taxed workers on the other. We are simply continuing to take too much from the paychecks of our workers and spending money like there is no tomorrow. Such spending practices are reckless and irresponsible on our part. I think we can and should do better. At least, our taxpayers deserve to know that their hard-earned dollars are being spent in a responsible manner. Ideally, we should pledge to bring our fiscal house in order and to lessen the burden that we have placed on our citizens. Taxpayers are angered at us and for good reason.

That's 125 days, Mr. President. Let me repeat, 125 days is the amount of time it takes the average American to pay his or her taxes in 1990, as calculated by the Tax Foundation. Sadly, this is a record amount of time—2 days more than required last year. Looked at another way, 1 hour and 47 minutes of every working day is spent by Americans in paying Federal taxes and nearly another hour for State and local taxation. We might have a more sound Federal fiscal policy if we spent half that time listening to American taxpayers of always asking for more.

In 1984, Tax Freedom Day was April 28. In 6 short years, we have added another week's worth of taxes to the American people. Can we truly look our constituents in the eye and state with conviction that they have received that much more in government services to justify such a tax increase? I don't think so, Mr. President. Instead, we can look at a Government awash in debt, too often spending its money for frivolous congressional pay raises, pork barrel spending, or pornographic National Endowment for the Arts exhibits than for basic services that taxpayers are willing to pay for. It's easy to spend the taxpayer's money. Mr. President. And as the year proceeds, we're going to see all kinds of proposed tax increases coming out of the woodwork. It's time to say enough is enough and mean it.

My hope is that this resolution will help focus more attention on the plight of the taxpaying public. Although it's unlikely that this measure will pass in time for this year's tax Freedom Day, I urge my colleagues to join Senator BURNS and myself as we work toward directing the attention of Congress and the American people on this issue and the passage of this resolution.

I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S.J. RES. 303

Whereas it requires an average of 125 days for United States taxpayers to satisfy all Federal, State, and local tax obligations before they can begin working for themselves instead of for the government;

Whereas in 1990 the average taxpayer will forfeit over 34 percent of the taxpayer's income to the tax collector; and

Whereas the Tax Foundation, a nonprofit, nonpartisan research and public education organization founded in 1937 to monitor the tax and spending activities of Federal, State, and local governments, estimates that the average worker will spend two hours and forty-five minutes of each eight-hour day, three minutes more than in 1989, to pay the worker's 1990 combined tax burden: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 5, 1990, is designated as "National Tax Freedom Day", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 309

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 309, a bill for the relief of Vasikaran Ratnarajah.

S. 310

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 310, a bill for the relief of Imelda Villanueva Locquiao.

S. 311

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 311, a bill for the relief of Masayshi Goda, his wife Nobuko Goda, and their children, Maki Goda and Eri Goda.

S. 312

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 312, a bill for the relief of Ikechukcwu J. Ogujiofor, Joy I. Ogujiofor, and Godfrey I. Ogujiofor.

S. 313

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 313, a bill for the relief of Masami Kawata.

S. 416

At the request of Mr. DOMENICI, the name of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] was added as a cosponsor of S. 416, a bill to provide that all Federal civilian and military retirees shall receive the full cost-of-living adjustment in annuities payable under Federal retirement systems of fiscal years 1990 and 1991, and for other purposes.

S. 434

At the request of Mr. REID, the name of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BUMPERS] was added as a cosponsor of S. 434, a bill to prohibit a State from imposing an income tax on the pension income of individuals who are not residents or domiciliaries of that State.

S. 473

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 473, a bill for the relief of Isamuy Yasutomi.

S. 526

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 526, a bill for the relief of Hee Man Cheng.

S. 528

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 528, a bill for the relief of Clayton Timothy Boyle and Clayton Louis Boyle, son and father.

S. 529

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 529, a bill for the relief of Dr. Samuel J. Wong and Mrs. Agnes J. Wong, husband and wife.

S. 814

At the request of Mr. DOMENICI, the name of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON] was added as a cosponsor of S. 814, a bill to provide for the minting and circulation of one dollar coins, and for other purposes.

S. 1511

At the request of Mr. PRYOR, the name of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BIDEN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1511, a bill to amend the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 to clarify the protections given to older individuals in regard to employee benefit plans, and for other purposes.

S. 1515

At the request of Mr. MITCHELL, the names of the Senator from New York [Mr. MOYNIHAN] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. BOSCHWITZ] were added as cosponsors of S. 1515, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to permit private foundations and community foundations to establish tax-exempt cooperative service organizations.

S. 1766

At the request of Mr. DANFORTH, the names of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] were added as cosponsors of S. 1766, a bill to amend titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act to require providers of services under such titles to enter into agreements assuring that individuals receiving services from such providers will be provided an opportunity to participate in and direct health care decisions affecting such individuals.

S. 1918

At the request of Mr. JOHNSTON, the name of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1918, a bill to provide for Federal recongition of the Jena Band of Choctaws of Louisiana, and for other purposes.

S. 2041

At the request of Mr. SYMMS, the names of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BINGAMAN] were added as cosponsors of S. 2041, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide uniform national conversion factors for services of certified registered nurse anesthetists.

S. 2214

At the request of Mr. PACKWOOD, the name of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2214, a bill to provide incentives to health care providers serving rural areas, to eliminate the medicare reimbursement differential between hospitals located in rural and urban areas, and for other purposes.

S. 2216

At the request of Mr. COATS, the name of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PRESSLER] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2216, a bill to amend title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 to authorize grants to States for boot camp projects to demonstrate innovative alternatives to the imprisonment of persons for nonviolent offenses and nonviolent drug related offenses.

S. 2227

At the request of Mr. LEAHY, the names of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SARBANES] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. ADAMS] were added as cosponsors of S. 2227, a bill to amend the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act to reform the provisions of such Act governing exported pesticides, and for other purposes.

S. 2229

At the request of Mr. DODD, the names of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBB], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIXON], and the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON] were added as cosponsors of S. 2229, a bill to reauthorize the Head Start Act for fiscal years 1991 through 1994, and for other pruposes.

S. 2250

At the request of Mr. DECONCINI, the names of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN] were added as cosponsors of S. 2250, a bill to amend title 5, United States Code, with respect to setting rates of basic pay for law enforcement officers, and for other purposes.

S. 2366

At the request of Mr. BOND, the names of the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ROCKEFELLER] were added as cosponsors of S. 2366, a bill to encourage States to establish Parents as Teachers Programs.

S. 2425

At the request of Mr. KERRY, the name of the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE] was added as cosponsor of S. 2425, a bill to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to provide for a voluntary system of spending and public financing of Senate general election campaigns, to limit contributions by multicandidate political committees, and for other purposes.

S. 2429

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the name of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] was added as cosponsor of S. 2429, a bill to establish the Mimbres Culture National Monument and to establish an archeological protection system for Mimbres sites in the State of New Mexico, and for other purposes.

S. 2430

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the name of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] was added as cosponsor of S. 2430, a bill to amend the Zuni-Cibola National Historical Park Establishment Act of 1988 to enlarge the time in which the Secretary of the Interior may accept a leasehold interest for inclusion in the park.

S. 2432

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the name of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] was added as cosponsor of S. 2432, a bill to provide for payments in lieu of taxes to be made with respect to certain lands comanaged by the Bureau of Land Management and the Secretary of the Army.

S. 2438

At the request of Mr. BAUCUS, the name of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. EXON] was added as cosponsor of S. 2438, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to make certain modifications in the Medicare Program with respect to payments made under such program to hospitals located within rural areas with fifty (50) beds or fewer, to improve the delivery of health services to individuals residing in rural areas, and for other purposes.

S. 2444

At the request of Mr. MACK, the names of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ARMSTRONG], and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN] were added as cosponsors of S. 2444, a bill to require limitations and restrictions concerning trade and other transactions with Cuba.

S. 2491

At the request of Mr. PRESSLER, the names of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY], the Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK], the Senator from Montana [Mr. BURNS], and the Senator from Montana [Mr.

BAUCUS] were added as cosponsors of S. 2491, a bill to provide a minimum State share for certain housing programs.

S. 2497

At the request of Mr. LEVIN, his name was added as cosponsor of S. 2497, a bill to establish a demonstration program to allow drug-addicted mothers to reside in drug abuse treatment facilities with their children, and to offer such mothers new behavior and education skills which can help prevent substance abuse in subsequent generations.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 242

At the request of Mr. THURMOND, the name of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN] was added as cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 242, a joint resolution designating the week of April 22 through April 28, 1990, as "National Crime Victims' Rights Week."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 248

At the request of Mr. BOSCHWITZ, the names of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT], and the Senator from Washington [Mr. ADAMS] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 248, a joint resolution to designate the month of September 1990 as "International Visitor's Month."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 265

At the request of Mr. DODD, the name of the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON] was added as cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 265, a joint resolution commemorating May 18, 1990, as the 25th anniversary of Head Start.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 267

At the request of Mr. THURMOND, the names of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR], the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SYMMS], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. NUNN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BUMPERS], the Senator from Washington [Mr. ADAMS], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTEN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. MACK], the Senator from Kansas [Mrs. KASSEBAUM], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PRESSLER], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SASSER], the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE], the Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON], the Senator from New York [Mr. MOYNIHAN], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. EXON], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH], and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 267, a joint resolution to authorize and request the President to designate May 1990 as "National Physical Fitness and Sports Month."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 277

At the request of Mr. LUGAR, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KERRY] was added as cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 277, a joint resolution designating October 6, 1990, as "German-American Day."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 290

At the request of Mr. LEVIN, his name was added as cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 290, a joint resolution to designate the week of July 22, 1990, through July 28, 1990, as the "National Week of Recognition and Remembrance for Those Who Served in the Korean war.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 296

At the request of Mr. LEVIN, his name was added as cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 296, a joint resolution designating August 7, 1990, as "National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day."

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 97

At the request of Mr. PRESSLER, the name of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. BOSCHWITZ] was added as cosponsor of Senate Concurrent Resolution 97, a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to popular anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

DIRE EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS

BUMPERS (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1565

Mr. BUMPERS (for himself, Mr. HARKIN, and Mr. PRYOR) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 4404) making dire emergency supplemental appropriations for disaster assistance, food stamps, unemployment compensation administration, and other urgent needs, and transfers, and reducing funds budgeted for military spending for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

FOOD SAFETY AND INSPECTION SERVICE

For an additional amount for necessary expenses to carry on services authorized by the Federal Meat Inspection Act, as amended, and the Poultry Products Inspection Act, as amended, $6,884,000: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by the Rural Development, Agriculture, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990, Public Law 101-161, shall be used to pay the salaries of personnel who carry out an export enhancement program if the aggregate amount of funds and/or commodities under such program exceeds $556,000,000.

PELL (AND HELMS) AMENDMENT NO. 1566

Mr. BYRD (for Mr. PELL, for himself and Mr. HELMS) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

On page 25, line 17, insert before the colon ", and the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs in accordance with the procedures contained in section 634A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended".

On page 26, line 10, after the word "Appropriations" insert ", the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs".

On page 27, line 2, after the word "Appropriations" insert ", the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs".

On page 27, line 5, after the word "Appropriations" insert ", the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs".

On page 29, line 15, insert before the period ", and the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs in accordance with the procedures contained in section 634A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended".

HATCH AMENDMENT NO. 1567

Mr. COCHRAN (for Mr. HELMS) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

SEC. . LEASE OF MARINE CORPS HELICOPTERS.

(a) Upon entry into force of any lease agreement with the Government of Colombia which is consistent with the authorities of chapter 6 of the Arms Export Control Act, the President shall exercise his authority under section 61 of that Act—

(1) to lease to the Government of Colombia four AH-1J Cobra helicopters from the current stocks of the Marine Corps for use by the Colombian National Police in carrying out anti-drug interdiction operations in Colombia; and

(2) to provide training of Colombian personnel by Department of Defense personnel (before transfer of the helicopters is made) in the operation, maintenance, logistics support, and deployment of such helicopters, such training to be carried out in consultation with the Director of National Drug Control Policy.

(b) For purposes of this section, the determinations required by paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 61(a) of that Act shall be deemed to have been made as of the entry into force of the lease agreement described in subsection (a) of this section.

KASTEN (AND DECONCINI) AMENDMENT NO. 1568

Mr. KASTEN (for himself and Mr. DECONCINI) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

On page 28, line 9, after the word "Namibia" insert the following ": Provided, That funds made available for Namibia under this heading may not be obligated or expended unless the President determines and reports to the Congress that it is not the policy of the Government of Namibia to intervene militarily in Angola or to support military intervention from its territory into Angola."

D'AMATO (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. D'AMATO (for himself, Mr. DECONCINI, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. HELMS, Mr. DODD, Mr. DIXON, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. KASTEN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

At the appropriate place insert the following:

The Senate finds that:

On March 11, 1990, the Supreme Council of the Republic of Lithuania declared the resumption of the independence it enjoyed from 1918 until its forcible occupation by the Soviet Union in 1940;

In response to that action, on April 17, the Soviet Union imposed economic sanctions against Lithuania by cutting back on the delivery of oil and natural gas;

The Soviet Union's economic sanctions have caused a great hardship on the people of Lithuania;

The Deputy United States Trade Representative on April 26 announced substantial agreement on a trade pact between the United States and the Soviet Union that would grant most-favored-nation status to the Soviet Union;

Such trade agreement and any implementing legislation must be approved by the Congress; and Implementation of such a package while the Soviets continue their economic sanctions against Lithuania would constitute implicit support for Soviet activities in Lithuania;

It is the sense of the Senate to urge the President not to submit any United States-Soviet trade agreement or enabling legislation thereto to the Senate for approval until at least:

(1) the Soviet Union has lifted its economic embargo against Lithuania, and

(2) the Soviet Union has entered into negotiations with the duly elected representatives of the Lithuanian people, with the intended result the Soviet recognition of the independence of the government of the Republic of Lithuania in an orderly and expeditious manner.

WIRTH AMENDMENT NO. 1570

Mr. WIRTH (for himself, Mr. PELL, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. GORE, and Mr. KERRY) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

On page 20, between lines 19 and 20, insert the following:

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS AND PROGRAMS

For an additional amount for necessary expenses for "International Organizations and Programs", $5,000,000 for payment to the United Nations Environment Program Fund, to carry out the provisions of section 2 of the United Nations Environment Program Participation Act of 1983.

On page 30, after line 20, insert the following:

GENERAL PROVISIONS

(RECISSION)

SEC. 301. Of the funds appropriated to or for the use of the Department of State for fiscal year 1990, the following funds are hereby rescinded from the following account in the specified amount:

International Military Education and Training Program, $7,500,000.

LEAHY (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1571

Mr. LEAHY (for himself, Mr. KASTEN, and Mr. HATFIELD), proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

To the pending amendment, strike the first word "for" and all that follows through the end of the amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Of the funds made available in Public Law 101-167, for "International Organizations and Programs", an additional $5,000,000 may be made available for payment to the United States Environmental Program Fund, to carry out the provisions of Section 2 of the United Nations Environmental Program Participation Act of 1983.

BRADLEY AMENDMENT NO. 1572

Mr. HATFIELD (for Mr. BRADLEY and Mr. BYRD) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4404, supra, as follows:

On page 37 after line 12 insert the following:

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT PROGRAMS

In addition to any other amount provided in this bill for "School Improvement Programs" an additional $4,000,000 is hereby provided to carry out the Javits gifted and talented education program as authorized by title IV, part B of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, as amended: Provided, That $480,000 of the amount provided herein shall be derived by transfer from the funds appropriated in Public Law 100-436 for part E, section 465, of the Higher Education Act, as amended.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO THE SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER

KENNEDY AMENDMENT NO. 1573

Mr. MITCHELL (for Mr. KENNEDY) proposes an amendment to the bill (S. 2300) to provide financial assistance to the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, CA, for the education programs of the Museum of Tolerance, as follows:

On page 2, line 2, after the word authorized, insert the following: ", subject, to the availability of appropriations,".

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, May 1, at 10 a.m. in SD-419 to hold a hearing on U.S. participation in the Law of the Sea Convention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, NATIONAL PARKS AND FORESTS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Public Lands, National Parks and Forests of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate 2 p.m., May 1, 1990, for a hearing to receive testimony on S. 1831, to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to convey certain lands to the town of Taos, NM; S. 2014, to direct the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior to provide interpretation and visitor education regarding the rich cultural heritage of the Chama River gateway region of northern New Mexico; S. 2143, to establish the Organ Mountains National Conservation Area in the State of New Mexico and for other purposes; S. 2165, to establish the Glorieta National Battlefield in the State of New Mexico; S. 2254, to establish the Pecos National Historical Park in the State of New Mexico and for other purposes; S. 2429, to establish the Mimbres Cultural National Monument and to establish an archeological protection system for Mimbres sites in the State of New Mexico and for other purposes; S. 2430, to amend the Zuni-Cibola National Historical Park Establishment Act of 1988 to enlarge the time in which the Secretary of the Interior may accept a leasehold interest for inclusion in the park; and S. 2432, to provide for payments in lieu of taxes to be made with respect to certain lands comanaged by the Bureau of Land Management and the Secretary of the Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Indian Affairs be authorized to meet on May 1, 1990, beginning at 2:30 p.m., in 485 Russell Senate Office Building to consider for report to the Senate S. 143, the Indian Development Finance Act; S. 2354, the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974; S. 2075, the Indian Environmental Regulatory Enhancement Act of 1990, S. 381, recognition of Mowa Band of Choctaw Indians, S. 1413, recognition of Aroostook Band of Micmacs Settlement Act; S. 1747, Ponca Restoration Act and S. 1918, recognition of Jena Choctaw Indians to be followed by an oversight hearing on the Indian Economic Development Act of 1989; S. 1650, the Indian Employment Opportunity Act of 1989; and the Supreme Court's decision in cotton petroleum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Intelligence be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, May 1, 1990, at 2:15 p.m. to hold a closed hearing on intelligence matters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON STRATEGIC FORCES AND NUCLEAR DETERRENCE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Armed Services Committee Subcommittee on Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence be authorized to meet in open session on Tuesday, May 1, 1990, at 9:30 a.m. to receive testimony on Department of Energy facilities, complex modernization, and environmental and waste management activities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON ENERGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate 9:30 a.m., May 1, 1990, for a hearing to receive testimony on the Department of Energy's Uranium Enrichment Program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON CHILDREN, FAMILIES, DRUGS AND ALCOHOLISM

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Children, Families, Drugs and Alcoholism of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, May 1, 1990, at 10 a.m., for a hearing on "Reauthorization of the Community Services Block Grant."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

WATERMAN AWARD

● Mr. FORD. Mr. President, Kentucky's history is replete with remarkable men and women who contributed to the progress of our State and our Nation. One of them was honored recently. Dr. Mark E. Davis, a professor of chemical engineering, received the prestigious Alan T. Waterman Award presented by the National Science Foundation each year to a single outstanding young researcher. Dr. Davis pursued his entire engineering education at the University of Kentucky, receiving a bachelor's degree in 1977 and his doctorate in 1981. His accomplishments bear proud tribute to the high quality of engineering education and research training provided by our State university.

Dr. Davis received the award for his work in synthesizing molecular sieves with microscopic pore sizes. These sieves have a wide range of applications including the separation and recovery of industrial acids that would otherwise escape and damage the environment. Work like Dr. Davis' brings us one step closer toward improving the planet we are committed to protect. I want to congratulate Dr. Davis on his receipt of the NSF Waterman Award.●

NEED A LIFT?

● Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, continuing its long service to the young people of our country, the American Legion has published its 39th edition of "Need a Lift?" It is one of the best informational handbooks I have seen on educational opportunities for scholarships, loans, careers, and employment.

The handbook is valuable to students, parents and school counselors, and also contains sources of educational assistance for veterans and their dependents. This year's booklet contains a computerized scholarship search application. "Need a Lift?" is available for a nominal fee of $2 from the American Legion, National Emblem Sales, P.O. Box 1050, Indianapolis, IN 46206.

Since it is important for students to have as much information as is available about scholarship and financial aid opportunities, I ask that section IV of the handbook be printed in the RECORD.

Students considering careers in the military service of our country may wish to contact local recruiting offices for additional opportunities to finance their education through programs such as the Army College Fund.

The material follows:

SECTION IV—SOURCES OF SCHOLARSHIPS AND OTHER FORMS OF FINANCIAL AID AVAILABLE TO ALL STUDENTS

A. FEDERAL PROGRAMS (LISTED ALPHABETICALLY)

1. U.S. Department of Education provides the largest source of funding for financial aid programs. These programs are listed in the following paragraphs. Applications are available at postsecondary schools and high schools. The "Student Guide: Financial Aid from the U.S. Department of Education, 1990-90" may be obtained by writing to Federal Student Aid Programs, Student Guide, P.O. Box 84, Washington, DC 20044. Federal student aid questions may be directed to the toll-free Federal Student Aid Information number: 1-800-333-INFO.

a. College Work-Study Program (CWSP). This program provides on-campus and off-campus employment to undergraduate and graduate students enrolled in colleges and eligible postsecondary institutions who need financial aid to meet college expenses. The wage paid is at least the current Federal minimum wage, but it may also be related to the type of work and its difficulty. In arranging a job and assigning a work schedule, the aid administrator takes into account the student's health, class schedule and academic progress.

b. Pell Grant Program. Formerly called the Basic Grant Program, this program makes funds available to eligible students attending participating colleges, community/junior colleges, vocational schools, technical institutions, hospital schools of nursing, and other participating postsecondary institutions. To apply for the grant, an applicant must demonstrate need and be an undergradate student enrolled on at least a half-time basis. For the 1989-90 award period, individual awards will depend on program funding. The maximum award for the 1988-89 academic year was $2,200. To apply for a Pell Grant, a student must complete either the Federal form called "Application for Federal Student Aid" or one of several private or State need analysis applications which are used to determine eligibility for other sources of student aid: the Financial Aid Form (FAF), the Family Financial Statement (FFS), the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) form, the Student Aid Application for California (SAAC), or the Illinois State Scholarship Commission's form (AFSSA). Further information may be obtained from the Office of Student Financial Aid at the institution or a high school guidance counselor.

c. Perkins loan (formerly National Direct Student Loan Program-NDSL). These loans are available to students enrolled at least half time (and in some cases less than half-time) in a regular program of study at a participating school and who demonstrate need for financial assistance. Aggregate loans may not exceed $18,000 for a graduate student including undergraduate loans; $9,000 for students who have not completed their bachelor's but have completed 2 years leading to a bachelor's degree; $4,500 for any other student. Repayment of the loan begins nine months after a borrower ceases to carry at least one half the normal academic work load, and it is to be repaid within 10 years. Your "grace period" may be different than nine months if you are less than a half-time student. Interest of 5% will begin at the time the repayment period begins. You may defer repayment or have portions of your loan cancelled under certain conditions.

d. Plus loans and supplemental loans for students (SLS). PLUS loans are for parent borrowers. SLS loans are for students. Interest rates are variable (maximum 12%). Like Stafford Loans, they are made by a lender such as a bank, credit union, or savings and loan association. It is not necessary to demonstrate need. Parents, graduate students and independent undergraduates may borrow $4,000 per year. In exceptional circumstances, the financial aid administrator may authorize dependent undergraduates to apply for an SLS. All borrowers must begin repaying these loans within 60 days, unless the borrower is entitled to a deferment and the lender agrees to let the interest accumulate until the deferment ends. The negotiation of each loan is between the student and the lending institution. Individuals who desire more information or wish to initiate a loan should discuss the matter with the lender and the school financial aid administrator.

e. Stafford loan (formerly guaranteed student loan-GSL) This program provides loans to students for educational expenses, and is available from eligible lenders such as banks, credit unions, savings and loan associations, State agencies and schools. Students must be enrolled on at least a half-time basis in participating postsecondary institutions, ranging from vocational and technical schools to degree-granting institutions. All applicants must undergo a needs test. For new borrowers, the interest rate is 8 percent for the first 4 years of repayment and 10 percent after that. A 5 percent origination fee is charged, which will be deducted proportionately from each loan payment. The money is passed on to the Federal Government to help reduce the Government's cost of subsidizing these low-interest loans. Your Lender may also charge you an insurance premium of up to 3 percent of the loan principal.

Loans must be repaid. Repayment normally is over a 5-10 year period. The amount of the student's repayment depends on the size of his or her debt. The more the student borrows, the higher the payment will be. Failure to repay on a timely basis can damage a person's credit rating and may lead to legal action to recover the debt.

Deferment of payment may be granted for a variety of reasons as listed in the publication, "Student Guide: Financial Aid from the U.S. Department of Education, 1989-90" listed above. Deferments are not automatic and must be applied for through your lender.

Depending on your need, you may borrow up to $2,625 a year, if you're a first or second-year undergraduate student; $4,000 a year, if you have completed 2 years of study and have achieved third-year status; $7,500 a year, if you're a graduate student. The total Stafford Loan debt you can have outstanding as an undergraduate is $17,250. The total for graduate or professional study is $54,750, including any loans made as an undergraduate.

f. Supplemental educational opportunity grant (SEOG) program. This grant program is for students with exceptional financial need (priority given to PELL grant recipients). Students must be enrolled as an undergraduate or vocational student in a regular program of study at an educational institution participating in the program. In some cases, awards may be made to less than half-time students. Graduate students are not eligible. The amount of the award may be up to $4,000 yearly.

There are other Federal programs you can get information about from your State educational agencies. These programs are:

g. The Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarship. Encourages outstanding high school graduates to pursue teaching careers after they finish postsecondary education. Provides scholarships of up to $5,000 for each year of postsecondary education to students who graduate from high school in the top 10 percent of their class, and who meet other selection criteria their State educational agency may establish. Generally, students are required to teach two years for each year of scholarship assistance they receive. Check with your State Scholarship Agency for information.

h. The Robert C. Byrd Honors Scholarship. Students who demonstrate outstanding academic achievement and show promise of continued excellence may receive $1,500 for their first year of postsecondary education. These scholarships are selected by the agency in the State responsible for supervising public elementary and secondary schools.

2. U.S. Department of Health and Human Services administers programs of assistance for students enrolled in health professions programs.

a. Exceptional Financial Need Scholarship Program provides a scholarship to encourage students with exceptional financial need to pursue careers in medicine, osteopathic medicine, dentistry, optometry, podiatric medicine, pharmacy, or veterinary medicine. Applicants should be citizens, nationals or lawful permanent residents of the United States or District of Columbia, the Commonwealths of Puerto Rico, or the Mariana Islands, the Virgins Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated State of Micronesia. Scholarships will cover all or a part of the cost of tuition, and other reasonable educational expenses including fees, books, laboratory expenses and other costs of attending school. No service or financial obligation accompanies the scholarship. For information, write: Health Resources and Services Administration, Bureau of Health Professions, Division of Student Assistance, Parklawn Building, Room 8-38, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857. To apply for the program, contact the Director of Student Financial Aid at the school where you intend to apply for admission or where you are enrolled.

b. Program of Financial Assistance for Disadvantaged Health Professions Students is a program that provides financial assistance without a service or financial obligation to disadvantaged health professions students who are of exceptional financial need to pursue a degree in medicine, osteopathic medicine, or dentistry by providing financial support to help pay for their costs of education. Federal funds for this program are allocated to participating accredited health professions schools located in the United States and Puerto Rico. These schools are responsible for selecting the recipients of such assistance. You are eligible to apply if you are a citizen, national or lawful permanent resident of the United States or the District of Columbia, the Commonwealths of Puerto Rico or the Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa or the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Federated State of Micronesia; are accepted for enrollment or are enrolled in a participating health professions school as a full-time student; and are determined by your school's Financial Aid Director to be of "exceptional financial need" and to meet "disadvantaged" criteria.

Depending on funding available, a student may receive funds to cover the costs of tuition and other reasonable education expenses including fees, books, laboratory expenses and other costs of attending school.

To apply, contact the Director of Student Financial Aid at the school where you intend to apply for admission or where you are enrolled, or write to the address in (a) above.

c. The Health Education Assistance Loan (HEAL) Program is a federally insured loan program for eligible graduate students in schools of medicine, osteopathy, dentistry, veterinary medicine, optometry, podiatry, public health, pharmacy, chiropractic, or in programs in health administration, clinical psychology, or allied health.

Eligible borrower—must be a citizen, national or permanent resident of the United States and accepted for enrollment as a full-time student, or already in full-time attendance and in good standing at an eligible HEAL school. Pharmacy students must have satisfactorily completed three years of training toward a pharmacy degree.

Eligible schools—Accredited health professions schools are eligible to participate in the HEAL Program if the school has an agreement with the Secretary. Foreign schools are not eligible under the HEAL Program even though some are eligible for the Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

Eligible lenders—Financial or credit institutions (including banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, or insurance companies), State agencies, pension funds, eligible HEAL schools, and non-profit private entities designated by a State.

Loan limitations—Medical, osteopathic, dental, veterinary, optometric or podiatric students may borrow up to $20,000 per year, not to exceed $80,000 for all years. Pharmacy, chiropractic, health administration, clinical psychology, public health or allied health students may borrow up to $12,500 per year not to exceed $50,000 for all years.

Loans may be used solely for tuition, other reasonable education expenses, including fees, books, supplies and equipment, and laboratory expenses, reasonable living expenses, reasonable transportation costs that relate directly to borrowers' educational expenses, and the HEAL insurance premium.

Interest—The HEAL program does not provide a subsidy payment for interest. The amount of interest which may be charged to the borrower on the unpaid balance of the loan may not exceed the average bond-equivalent rate during the prior calendar quarter for 91-day Treasury bills sold at auction, plus three percent, rounded to the next higher ⅛ of one percent. Payment of principal and interest may be deferred while the borrower is a full-time student and during specific eligible periods of deferment. For more information contact the Director of Student Financial Aid at your school, or write to address in (a) above: Room 8-39.

d. The Health Professions Student Loan Program is a program of long-term, low interest loans to assist students having need for financial assistance to undertake the course of study required to become a physician, dentist, osteopathic physician, optometrist, pharmacist, podiatrist, or veterinarian. Funds are allocated to accredited schools of medicine, dentistry, osteopathic medicine, optometry, pharmacy, podiatric medicine, and veterinary medicine which are located in the United States and Puerto Rico, and which participate in the student loan program.

Each school participating in this program is responsible for selecting the recipients of loans and for determining the amount of assistance a student requires. Students applying for assistance under this program should apply through the school in which they have been accepted for enrollment or in which they are enrolled.

You are eligible to apply for a loan at a school that participates in the Health Professions Student Loan Program if you are:

1. A citizen, national, or a lawful permanent resident of the United States or the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Marianna Islands, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Federated State of Micronesia;

2. Accepted for enrollment or enrolled as a full-time student in a course leading to a degree of doctor of medicine, doctor of dental surgery or equivalent degree, doctor of osteopathic medicine, doctor of optometry or equivalent degree, bachelor of science in pharmacy or equivalent degree, doctor of pharmacy degree, doctor of podiatric medicine or equivalent degree, or doctor of veterinary medicine or equivalent degree; and

3. In need of the loan to be able to pursue the course of study.

Note: Students enrolled in schools of medicine or osteopathic medicine must demonstrate exceptional financial need.

Preprofessional students, interns, residents, and students seeking advanced training are not eligible for assistance under this program.

The maximum amount you may borrow for each school year is the cost of tuition plus $2,500 or the amount of your financial need, whichever is the lesser. The interest rate is five percent (5%) for all loans made on or after November 4, 1988.

For information, contact the Director of Student Financial Aid at your school, or write to the address in (a) above.

e. National Health Service Corps (NHSC) Scholarships are awarded to U.S. citizens enrolled or accepted for enrollment as full-time students in accredited U.S. schools of allopathic or osteopathic medicine, dentistry, and other health disciplines needed for the mission of NHSC. These scholarships include a monthly living stipend and payment of school tuition. Each year of scholarship support incurs a year of Federal service obligation. The minimum service obligation is 2 years.

The NHSC places full-time primary health care practitioners in selected federally-designated Health Manpower Shortage Areas of the United States. Virtually all of these practitioners owe service obligations of 2 to 4 years due to their participation in the NHSC Scholarship Program.

If appropriated funds are available, applications for competitive awards for the 1989-90 school year may be limited to students who have participated at their schools in the Federal "Scholarship Program for First-Year Students of Exceptional Financial Need."

The scholarship program is administered by the Bureau of Health Care Delivery and Assistance, Division of Health Services Scholarships. For further information write to: NHSC Scholarships, Parklawn Building, Room 7-29, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Maryland 20857. Telephone: (301) 443-1650, or for toll-free message tape, call 1-800-638-0824 (except Maryland).

Note: No program funds have been appropriated for the 1989 fiscal year, so the NHSC does not plan any first-time awards for the academic year 1989-90.

f. National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program. In return for a 3- or 4-year commitment to a full-time practice at a pre-agreed NHSC or Indian Health Service (IHS) Loan Repayment Service Site in the United States, the Program will pay up to $20,000 a year ($25,000 a year for IHS assignments) toward a participant's a outstanding Government and commercial health professions education loans. (Rates of payment may be reduced for the minimum 2-year practice.) Student applicants must be in their last year of health professions school to be eligible for consideration. United States citizenship is required.

Selection Priorities for 1989—Priority for selection is based on the staffing needs of the NHSC and the IHS for 1989 and 1990. Priority for selection (through September 1989) will be given to the following applicants in the following health disciplines, with further priority given to those with the earliest availability for service.

(1) Physicians (M.D. or D.O.) who have (or will have) completed by start of service the training required to sit for the specialty board examinations in family practice, obstetrics-gynecology, internal medicine, pediatrics, or osteopathic general practice of at least 2 postgraduate years. If funds are available, other medical specialties may be considered, based on the needs of the NHSC and the IHS.

(2) Nurses who have (or will have) completed by start of service accredited master's degree nursing program for Pediatric Nurse Practitioner, Obstetrical Nurse Practitioner, Family Nurse Practitioner, or Nurse-Midwifery. The baccalaureate nursing degree must be from a program accredited by the National League for Nursing. If funds are available, other nurses (baccalaureate-level or above) may be considered, based on the needs of the NHSC and the IHS. For further information about the NHSC Scholarship Program or the NHSC Loan Repayment Program, address an inquiry to: Division of Health Services Scholarships, Room 7-16, Parklawn Building, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857, or telephone during office hours: 1-301-443-1650.

g. Minority Access to Research Careers Program (MARC) Honors Undergraduate Research Training Awards. The Minority Access to Research Careers Program's Honors Undergraduate Research Training Program is designed to increase the number of well-prepared minority students who can compete successfully for entry into graduate programs leading to the Ph.D. in biomedical research. Its goal is also to help develop strong science curricula and research opportunities to prepare students for careers in biomedical research. A formal research experience for the recipient is an essential feature of the program. Summer study and research should be part of the overall training program at outstanding institutions or laboratories selected to enhance and supplement the trainee's formal course work and research training experience. The criteria for selection of trainees includes evidence that the candidate has clear potential to perform at a high level in the biomedical sciences and that the candidate demonstrates a determination to subsequently enter graduate programs leading to the Ph.D. degree. Applicants must be honor students in their third or fourth year of college. The college or university must have an enrollment drawn substantially from ethnic minority groups such as American Indians, Blacks, Hispanics, and Pacific Islanders.

Each school will make awards for stipend and tuition support for five or more students. The award may include travel expenses to one national meeting closely related to a project.

Graduates of this undergraduate program are then eligible to compete for a MARC Predoctoral Fellowship which supports 5 years of training toward either the Ph.D. or M.D./Ph.D. at any high quality graduate institution.

Applications may be filed by January 10, May 10 or September 10. Apply for information or application to: United States Department of Health and Human Services, National Institutes of Health, National Institute of General Medical Sciences, Westwood Building, Room 9A18, Bethesda, Maryland 20892.

3. Other U.S. Department of Health and Human Service Programs are:

a. Commissioned Officer Student Training and Extern Program (COSTEP). COSTEP is a recruiting device for the Commissioned Corps of the Pubic Health Service (PHS) which offers excellent opportunities for students in health-related fields to get maximum benefit during free periods (31-120 days) of the academic year. Students may apply for assignments at any time during the year; however, the majority of students are hired for the summer period. To be eligible a student must have completed a minimum of one year of study in a medical, dental, or veterinary school; or have completed a minimum of two years of a professionally accredited baccalaureate program in the following course of study: dietetics, engineering, nursing, pharmacy, therapy, sanitary science, or medical record administration; or be enrolled in the masters or doctoral program in a health related field other than those mentioned above. The student must expect to return to college as a full-time student in an accredited field of study following completion of the COSTEP assignment. Students must be free of any obligation that would conflict with extended duty in the PHS Commissioned Corps, may not be a member of another uniformed service nor owe a service obligation to another uniformed service, and must meet the qualifications for appointment in the Commissioned Corps. These include being a citizen of the United States, meeting the physical standards of the corps, and being under 44 years of age. Transportation is paid to and from the location of the assignment. For applications, contact: Division of Commissioned Personnel, ATTN: COSTEP, Parklawn Building, Room 4-35, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857. Deadline for applications: October 1 for assignments from January through April, February 1 for May through August, and May 1 for September through December. COSTEPs are commissioned as junior assistant health service officers in the Commissioned Corps of the PHS. The pay of a single COSTEP officer is $1,338.90 salary, $268.80 quarters allowance, $119.61 subsistence for a total of $1,726.31 per month. For COSTEP officers with dependents, the quarters allowance is $364.50 for a total of $1,823.01 per month. The quarters and subsistence allowances are not taxable. COSTEPs are eligible for medical and dental care while on duty and receive many of the benefits of commissioned officers. For additional information, you may call the COSTEP office at (301) 443-6324.

b. Professional Nurse Traineeship Program. Professional nurse traineeships are available through participating training institutions to help registered nurses prepare to teach in the various fields of nurse training, to serve in administrative or supervisory capacities, to serve as nurse practitioners, or to serve in other professional nursing specialities requiring advanced training. Traineeships provide a living stipend (not to exceed $6,552) and tuition and fees as set by the participating training institutions. Further information is available from: Division of Nursing, Bureau of Health Professions, Health Resources and Services Administration, Room 5C26, Parklawn Bldg., 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857. Students should request information through the Dean of Nursing at their institution. Note: This assistance is only for students studying at the master's or doctoral level.

c. Nursing Student Loan Program. The program is intended to assist students to achieve careers in nursing by providing long-term, low-interest loans to help meet costs of education.

Federal funds for this program are allocated to accredited schools of nursing education. These schools are responsible for selecting the recipients of loans for determining the amount of assistance a student requires. Students applying for assistance under this program should apply through the school in which they have been accepted for enrollment or in which they are enrolled.

You are eligible to apply for a Nursing Student Loan if you are a citizen, national, or a lawful permanent resident of the United States or the District of Columbia, the Commonwealths of Puerto Rico or the Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated State of Micronesia; are accepted for enrollment or are enrolled as a full-time or half-time student in a course leading to a diploma in nursing, an associate degree in nursing, a bachelor's degree in nursing or an equivalent degree, or a graduate degree in nursing.

You may borrow $2,500 for an academic year, $4,000 for each of the final two years, or the amount of your financial need, whichever is the lesser. The total amount of a student's loan for all years may not exceed $13,000.

In determining the amount of assistance you may require, the school considers: All financial resources available to you, including other sources of aid, such as scholarships or other repayable loans, and the costs reasonably necessary for attendance at the school.

The interest rate is five percent (5%) for all loans made on or after November 4, 1988. To apply, contact the Director of Student Financial Aid at your school.

4. The U.S. Department of Interior Administers a Program of Indian Tribal Grants and Loans. Over 45 Indian tribes have established their own grant and loan programs to promote higher education for their members. Contacts for tribal assistance should be made through the U.S. Dept. of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Washington, D.C. 20240, or through the Tribal Headquarters.

5. Indians Higher Education Grant Program is a program for students who are members of a tribal group being served by the Bureau and who are enrolled in accredited institutions of their choice in pursuit of an undergraduate or graduate degree; must demonstrate financial need to the institution they are or will be attending. For information, write to: Department of the Interior-BIA, Office of Education Programs, MS 3512, Code 522, 18th & C Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20240.

6. The U.S. Information Agency Sponsors: The Fulbright Teacher Exchange Program. Under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act, qualified American educators may work in elementary and secondary schools abroad, and, in some instances, institutions of higher education in various countries. To be eligible, an applicant must be teaching currently as an elementary or secondary school teacher, college instructor, assistant, associate or full professor. Candidates must have at least a bachelor's degree, be a U.S. citizen at the time of application, proficiency in the language of the host country and have at least three years of successful full-time teaching experience. Two years are required for participation in summer seminars held in Italy and the Netherlands. Evidence of good health and stability also is required.

Round-trip transportation to some countries for those selected to participate may be provided. A maintenance allowance may also be provided, paid in the currency of the host country, based upon that country's cost of living. For teachers participating in the Exchange Program, the successful applicant's U.S. salary is continued by the participant's own school. Seminar grants may include roundtrip transportation and tuition costs, but for some, the participants are responsible for their own maintenance expenses. Regional interviewing committees conduct preliminary screening of applicants. Annual application deadline date is October 15. Application forms can be obtained from and then submitted to the Teachers Exchange Branch, E/ASX, Room 353, U.S. Information Agency, 301 4th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20547.

B. ASSISTANCE FOR UNDERGRADUATES ONLY

AFL-CIO department of education. The AFL-CIO offers a scholarship guide with a wide variety of scholarships to postsecondary institutions including; two and four-year colleges and universities, graduate schools, culinary institutes, musicians training institutes, vocational, technical and nursing schools. Though most scholarships listed in the guide are available to union members and their families, some are available to the general public. Single copies are available without charge for union members only. Copies are $3.00 for all others. Checks should be made payable to the Secretary-Treasurer AFL-CIO and sent to the AFL-CIO Pamphlet Divisions, 815 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Aid Associations for Lutherans (AAL)

1. All-college scholarships—This competition is open to all AAL members who are graduating high school seniors. Students can enroll at any accredited college or university with the intention of completing bachelor degree requirements. Approximately 4,500 students apply annually for the 750 scholarships available in this program. The top 50 students in the competition receive $2,000 renewable awards. the next 200 students receive $500 renewable awards. The next 500 students receive $500, one-year nonrenewable awards. Scholarships funds can be used for tuition and fee, books, supplies and equipment required for courses.

Eligibility—You must have an in-force AAL certificate of membership and insurance or annuity in your name.

You must be of good character and have grades which meet entrance requirements at the institution of your choice.

You must take the Scholastic Aptitute Test (SAT) no later than December and release your scores to code 0433. Failure to release your scores correctly will disqualify you from the competition. Student or school copies are unacceptable. In some instances, ACT scores can be substituted for SAT scores.

Complete the scholarship application by November 30.

2. Vocational/Technical School Scholarship Program—This competition is open to AAL members of any age who are enrolled or who plan to enroll in an accredited vocational/technical institute or two-year college. Students can attend on a full or half-time basis and must pursue an associate degree or vocational diploma. Each year this program has approximately 400 applicants and 100 winners. These scholarship funds can be used for tuition and fees, books, supplies and equipment used for courses.

AAL will award up to 50 renewable scholarships for graduating high school seniors and up to an additional 50 renewable awards for AAL members who graudated from high school or hold a General Equivalency Diploma (GED).

Awards for full-time study are $500 per year, up to a maximum of two years of full-time study or until a degree/diploma is received, whichever occurs first. Awards for half-time study (i.e. one half the normal full-time class load at the institution, usually six credits) are $250 per year, up to a maximum of four half-time years of study or until a degree/diploma is received.

Eligibility—You must have an in-force AAL certificate of membership and insurance or annuity in your own name at the time of application.

You must be a graduating high school senior, high school graduate or have a General Equivalency Diploma (GED).

You must be enrolled or plan to enroll in an accredited vocational/technical institute or a two-year associate degree program on either a full-or half-time basis. Students already enrolled are eligible for the scholarships, but awards are not retroactive.

You must apply by November 30.

3. Lutheran Campus Scholarship Program—This competition is open to AAL members of any age who are enrolled or who plan to enroll at one of the 49 Lutheran colleges, universities or Bible institutes in an undergraduate degree program. Students can attend on a full or half-time basis. About 1,000 AAL members receive scholarships every year. Scholarship funds can be used for tuition and fees, books, supplies and equipment required for courses. Each school's financial aid office determines winners and award amounts, typically from $200 to $1,000 per year.

Eligibility—You must have an AAL in-force certificate of membership and insurance or annuity in your own name at the time of application.

You must be enrolled or plan to enroll at a Lutheran institution on a full- or half-time basis.

You must apply to a participating school.

You must reapply each year. Recipients are selected for only one year.

For more information on any AAL Scholarship, write: AAL Scholarships, 4321 N. Ballard Rd., Appleton, WI 54915-9934.

American Medical Technologists' Scholarship Program offers five scholarships of $250 each to high school graduates interested in pursuing medical technology or medical assisting studies. Awards are based primarily on need, with consideration given to goals, school grades, activities, experience and personal references. Applicants must be enrolled, or contemplate enrolling in a school accredited by the Accrediting Bureau of Health Education Schools (list available by contacting the ABHES, 29089 U.S. 20 West, Elkhart, Indiana 46514), or enrolled or contemplate enrolling in a college, university or junior college medical technology or medical assisting program. April 1 is the filing deadline for applications and supporting documents. Write: AMT, 710 Higgins Road, Park Ridge, IL 60068. Telephone: (312) 823-5169.

The American Society for Metals Foundation for Education and Research sponsors up to 31 $500 undergraduate scholarships and up to three awards of $2,000 for students in metallurgy and materials science who have completed one full year of college, and are citizens of the United States, Canada or Mexico. Selection is based on interest in metallurgy or materials science, motivation, achievement, citizenship, potential and scholarship. No financial statements are required. In addition, some individual A.S.M. chapters sponsor programs on a local or regional basis. For further information, write: ASM International, Scholarship Selection Committee, Metals Park, OH 44073. Telephone: (216) 338-5151.

The Seth R. Brooks and Corrine H. Brooks Scholarship Fund offers a grant to an undergraduate who is a daughter or son of a Beta Theta Pi who deserves recognition by reason of academic achievement and would be unable to continue studies without financial assistance. Applicants need not be from a campus which has a Beta chapter; male applicants need not be Betas. Sons or daughters of living or deceased Betas are equally eligible. The amount of the 1989-90 award will be approximately $1,000. The complete application must be received by the Founders Fund Scholarship Committee at the Administrative Office no later than June 15. For further information, contact the Beta Theta Pi Administrative Office, 208 East High Street, P.O. Box 6277, Oxford, Ohio 45056. Note: Additional assistance is available through the Beta Theta Pi Founders Fund, including the Founders Fund Scholarships and Tutor-in-Residence Scholarships. Information is available from address above.

The Business and Professional Women's Foundation Scholarships. BPW Foundation offers the following scholarships: The BPW Career Advancement Scholarship, The Clairol Scholarship, and the New York Life Foundation Scholarship for Women in the Health Professions.

In order to be eligible for the scholarships, applicants must: demonstrate critical financial need; be 25 or older (30 or older for the Clairol Scholarship); be U.S. citizens; be officially accepted into a program of study at an accredited U.S. institution; be graduating within 24 months of the time they apply for a scholarship; be receiving a degree or certificate at the conclusion of their studies; be acquiring marketable skills that will increase their economic security; and be entering the work force after they receive their degree or certificate.

BPW scholarships do not cover study at the doctoral level, except for medical and law students. New York Life Foundation scholarships do not cover any study at the doctoral level. BPW scholarships do not cover correspondence courses or short term courses. The application procedure is a two-step process. Applicants must first request a pre-application screening form. This form is available between September 1 and November 31. To receive the pre-application screening form, send your request with a self-addressed business size (#10) stamped envelope to the Scholarship Department, BPW Foundation, 2012 Massachusetts Avenue, NW., Washington, DC 20036 between September 1 and November 31. The pre-application screening form must then be completed and returned to BPW Foundation for review. If the applicant meets all eligibility requirements, an application form will then be mailed. Application forms are mailed between October 1 and December 15. All application materials must be postmarked by February 28. Applicants will be notified by July 10.

The pre-application screening form is only available between September 1 and November 31. Requests for the pre-application screening form received before September 1 or after November 31 will not be accepted.

Club Managers Association of America maintains undergraduate scholarships for students enrolled at colleges and universities offering courses in Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management. These scholarships, normally made available to students who have completed at least one year of undergraduate work at a four year school, are awarded on the basis of scholastic ability, financial need and interest in private club management. Write: Club Managers Association of America, 7615 Winterberry Place, Bethesda, MD 20817.

The Education Council of the Graphic Arts Industry, Inc., Council's National Scholarship Trust Fund has awarded scholarships during the past 25 years for studies in printing management, printing technology and graphic arts education. Approximately 75 scholarships are awarded each year. Applications must be filed by January 15. Applications may be requested by writing: 4615 Forbes Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15213 ATTN: NSTF, Telephone 412-621-6941.

Educational Communications Scholarship Foundation provides a minimum of 65 awards annually of $1,000 each. Approximately 500 semi-finalists are selected on the basis of aptitude test scores, grade point averages and leadership activities. Semi-finalists are required to write an essay which is evaluated by committee. Some consideration is given for need for financial aid, but this is not a major factor. Applications must be submitted by June 1 and may be obtained in most high school guidance offices or write to: Educational Communications Scholarship Foundation, 721 N. McKinley Road, Lake Forest, IL 60045. Telephone: (312) 295-6650. Please state name, address, grade point average and class year.

The Elks National Foundation is offering college scholarships totaling over $3 million for the academic year 1989-1990. The 1989 Schedule of Awards includes 500 Scholarship awarded in nationwide competition, and 1,298 scholarships allocated on a state-quota basis. Five hundred four-year scholarships are to be awarded to the highest-rated boys and girls in the 1989 competition.

Applications may be made by students in the graduating class of a high school, or its equivalent, who are citizens of the United States of America and reside within the jurisdiction of the B.P.O. Elks of the U.S.A. Scholarship, Leadership and financial need are the criteria by which applicants are judged. Application must be made on an official form furnished by the Elks National Foundation, which will be available at Elks Lodges after November 1. Applications properly executed must be filed not later than January 20 with the Scholarship Chairman or Exalted Ruler or Secretary of the Elks Lodge in whose jurisdiction the applicant resides.

Entomological Society of America. The ESA offers two undergraduate scholarships annually: BioQuip Products a major supplier of entomological equipment, provides a $1,000.00 scholarship, and Iselin and Associates, Inc., a consulting and research company, provides a $500.00 scholarship. Both are awarded in August. The purpose of these scholarships is to promote and encourage student interest in the science of entomology.

To be eligible, you must be enrolled as an undergraduate student majoring in biology, entomology, or related science at a recognized university or college in the United States, Canada, or Mexico. Also, you must have accumulated a minimum of 30 semester hours at the time the award is presented. You will be evaluated primarily on your demonstrated enthusiasm, interest, and achievement in biology, and on academic credentials. Special consideration may be given to students with financial need, although need is not a major criterion for selection of winners.

To apply for the scholarships, please submit the following:

1. Completed Application Form.
2. Current official transcript of college grades.
3. Three letters of recommendation, describing your qualifications for this award. At least one should be from a faculty member at your college or university.
4. Optional: a written statement from school or other knowledgeable official, and/or personal statement, attesting to your financial need. Financial need will be used as a criterion for selection only to distinguish between identically qualified applicants.

For application materials, write: Executive Director, Education and Training Committee, ESA, 9301 Annapolis Rd., Lanham, MD 20706. The deadline is May 31 of each year.

The Foundation of the National Student Nurses' Association offers a number of scholarships each year to students currently enrolled in nursing or pre-nursing programs in state-approved schools of nursing. Amounts normally range from $1000 to $2500. Scholarships are awarded to Nurses for undergraduate studies only, and are based on financial need, academic achievement and a demonstrated commitment to nursing through involvement in nursing student organizations and/or school and community health activities. Requests for applications must be received between September 15 and January 15 each year, with a completed application deadline of February 1. Awards are made in April. For further information and applications, send a self-addressed, stamped legal-size envelope with $.50 postage to: Foundation of the National Student Nurses' Association, 555 West 57th Street, Suite 1325, New York NY 10019. Telephone: (212) 581-2215.

The Harry S. Truman Memorial Scholarship Program, enacted by Public Law 93-642, is authorized to award scholarships, through nationwide competition, to persons who demonstrate outstanding potential for and who plan to pursue a career in public service. Scholarships awarded under this Act shall not exceed four academic years, neither shall they exceed the cost of tuition, fees, books, room and board, or $7,000, whichever is less, for each year of study. Recipients must be college juniors in the initial year of the award. Each state shall be assured at least one recipient each year and the scholarship may apply to any institution of higher education offering courses of study or training to prepare persons for a career in government. The institution's nominations must be forwarded to the Foundation by December 1: Truman Scholarship Foundation, 712 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Knights of Columbus "Pro Deo and Pro Patria Scholarship Trust" is for undergraduate scholarships. The Knights of Columbus has an established trust fund which will provide annually $1,000 scholarships to members, to sons and daughters of living or deceased members. The fund will also annually provide two $1,000 scholarships to Columbian Squires. Awards will be made on the basis of academic excellence regardless of need and may be renewed annually subject to satisfactory academic performance. Ten of these scholarships, and two for the Columbian Squire, are placed at The Catholic University of America. Students admitted to the freshman class may apply for these scholarships through the Director of Financial Aid, Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064. Final filing date of applications is February 1. Ten of these scholarships and two for the Columbian Squire may be used at a Catholic college of student's choice. Final filing date for these applications is March 1. Applications for these scholarships may be obtained from the Director of Scholarship Aid, Knights of Columbus, Supreme Council, Columbus Plaza, P.O. Drawer 1670, New Haven, CT 06507.

National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students, a compensatory activity created in 1964, is conducted by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) which also administers the National Merit Scholarship Program (as described in a later entry). All grants to the Achievement Program are specified for the purposes of honoring academically able black students and awarding them college undergraduate scholarships. Currently, some 700 Achievement Scholarships worth nearly $3 million are awarded in each annual competition.

To enter the Achievement Program, black high school students must take the PSAT/NMSQT (which simultaneously makes them participants in the Merit Program), mark a space on their answer sheets requesting consideration in the Achievement Program and meet NMSC eligibility requirements.

About 1,500 of the highest scoring eligible black students are designated Semifinalists in each Achievement Program. To ensure nationwide representation, Semifinalists are named in each of several U.S. geographic regions, proportionate to each region's population of Black Americans.

Semifinals must meet further requirements and advance to Finalist standing in order to continue in the Achievement Scholarship competition. All winners are chosen from the Achievement Program Finalist group. The selection of winners includes an evaluation of each Finalist's academic record and test scores, extracurricular activities and attainments, and the endorsement and recommendation of the student's school.

About 350 of the annual awards are National Achievement $2,000 Scholarships that are single-payment awards. Every Finalist is considered for one of these awards. About 200 are corporate-sponsored four-year Achievement Scholarships for which winners must meet preferential criteria specified by the grantor organization, and are worth between $500 and $8,000 for each of the four college years. About 150 are college-sponsored Achievement Scholarships that provide between $250 and $2,000 during each of the winner's four undergraduate years of attendance at the sponsor college or university.

The PSAT/NMSQT Student Bulletin gives requirements students must meet to be eligible to participate in the Achievement Program and also lists sponsor organizations that currently provide support for Achievement Scholarships. A copy can often be obtained from the student's high school. Questions should be directed to: National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students, One Rotary Center, 1560 Sherman Avenue, Evanston, IL 60201 (312) 866-5100.

National Association of Secondary School Principals sponsors the Century III Leaders Program which provides: 102 $1,500 scholarships (State winners); 102 $500 awards (State alternates; 2 each per state and D.C.); 306, $100 awards (State finalists); 9 $500 awards (National semi-finalists); and one $10,000 national award to high school seniors who are selected by their schools. For information, contact the school principal in early September (in advance of the October 22 deadline).

Also offered are 450 $1,000 National Honor Society Scholarships. See NHS chapter advisor at the school in early January for the February deadline. The newest scholarship program is the Principal's Leadership Award, funded by Herff Jones, Inc., The program awards 150 $1,000 scholarships. See your high school principal in early October (in advance of the December deadline).

National Merit Scholarship Program is a nationwide competition among academically talented high school students for college undergraduate scholarships. The Merit Progran is conducted by National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), an independent nonprofit organization established in 1955 to administer this annual competition. Over 6,000 Merit Scholarships, valued at about $23 million, have been awarded each year in recent programs. Secondary school students throughout the U.S. enter the competition by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) given by their schools in October. To participate, students must meet published eligibility requirements.

About 15,000 top-scoring students are designated semifinalists in each Merit Program. The highest scorers in each state are named Semifinalists in numbers proportionate to the state's percentage of the National total of graduating high school seniors.

Semifinalists must meet further requirements and advance to Finalist standing in order to continue in the Merit Scholarship competition. All Merit Scholars are chosen from the group of approximately 14,000 Finalists. The selection of winners includes an evaluation of each Finalist's test scores, academic and extracurricular accomplishments and the endorsement and recommendation of the student's school.

Of the annual awards, 1,800 are National Merit $2,000 Scholarships that are single-payment awards allocated to winners on a state representation basis; every Finalist is considered for one of these awards. Over 1,400 are corporate-sponsored Merit Scholarships for which winners must meet preferential criteria specified by the grantor organization providing funding for the award; most of these awards are renewable for up to four years and provide stipends between $500 and $8,000 annually; a few may provide single payments of $2,000. Over 2,900 are college-sponsored, four-year Merit Scholarships that provide between $250 and $2,000 during each of the winner's four undergraduate years of attendance at the sponsor college or university.

Details concerning eligibility and the Merit Scholarships offered are published annually in the PSAT/NMSQT Student Bulletin, sent to high schools. Questions and requests for additional information should be sent to: NMSC, One Rotary Center, 1560 Sherman Avenue, Evanston, IL 60201 (312) 866-5100.

National 4-H Council. National 4-H Scholarships are offered to encourage 4-H members to continue their education beyond high school.

Who are national 4-H scholarship winners? They are 4-H members who have been judged outstanding, first as county winners, then as state winners and ultimately as national winners.

How are winners selected? Each state determines county and state winners. National winners are selected by a 16-member national 4-H record book judging committee of Agriculture. Each state 4-H office submits duly authorized record books and scholarship application forms for national judging.

Who are national judges? Judges are drawn from each of the four Extension Regions. Each October, they review approximately 1800 record books and scholarship applications. Four judging teams are formed, with each team including one judge from each region. Thus, each state entry in any given program can be reviewed by a judge who does not represent that state or its region.

How are scholarships administered? A scholarship should be applied toward a course of study at an accredited college or university. However, scholarships may be applied toward a course of study at the other approved educational institutions, including trade or technical schools, provided (1) the recipient makes a written request to the county Extension agent, (2) the county Extension agent and the state 4-H leader recommend favorable action and (3) the request from the state 4-H leader is approved by National 4-H Council.

When are scholarship funds granted? Scholarship recipients must request funds through their county Extension agent or state 4-H leader. The state 4-H leader submits to National 4-H Council a Request for Scholarship Form, including evidence that (1) recipient currently is enrolled in college and has completed a quarter or semester with at least a "C" grade average, verified by the college transcript, and (2) the recipient plans to be enrolled in college for the following quarter or semester. If the recipient has not yet entered college, the scholarship will be held by National 4-H Council until the above requirements are met.

Who may apply for national 4-H scholarships? The majority of national 4-H scholarships are awarded to active 4-H members who are between the ages of 14 and 19.

However, some scholarships may be applied for by former 4-H members, if appropriate credentials are submitted through the state 4-H office in the state in which candidates were active 4-H members.

How are scholarship winners in these programs determined? The same national 4-H record book judging committee that determines national and sectional winners in major awards programs reviews scholarship applications. Criteria used to determine winners are similar, but consideration also is given to financial need.

Can an applicant receive more than one scholarship? A candidate will be awarded only one scholarship in a program in which a trip to National 4-H Congress is offered. If a candidate meets eligibility requirements for programs which do not offer such a trip, the candidate can be considered for scholarships available through those programs.

In 1989, a total of 278 educational scholarships will be awarded: 192 in major awards programs; 37 in scholarship programs; and 50 in regional programs. The total value of these scholarships is $313,000.

For further information, write to the county 4-H office, the State 4-H Leader at the State Land-Grant University, or the National 4-H Council, 7100 Connecticut Avenue, Chevy Chase, MD 20815.

The National Science Teachers Association sponsors two student competitions with scholarships as awards:

1. The Space Science Student Involvement Program (co-sponsored with NASA) is an inter-disciplinary program with eight different contests.

Eligibility: Students, grades 6-12, in U.S. public and private schools, including U.S. civil and military overseas schools, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the U.S. outlying territories.

Educational Aid Offered: Top winning secondary students are eligible to receive scholarships ranging from $250 to $3,000. Scholarships may be used toward attendance at any postsecondary educational institution.

Deadline: March 15 of each year. For further information, contact the NSTA's Space, Science, and Technology Programs, 5112 Berwyn Rd., 3rd Floor, College Park, MD 20740; 301/474-0487.

2. The Duracell NSTA Scholarship Competition (managed by NSTA for Duracell); Eligibility: Students, grades 9-12.

Educational aid offered: Students must create and build a working device powered by one or more Duracell batteries.

Scholarship awards include: First place—$10,000 college scholarship; second place—five $3,000 college scholarships; third place—ten $500 college scholarships; fourth place—twenty-five $100 cash prizes. Deadline: Early February each year. For further information, write to: Duracell NSTA Scholarship Competition, National Science Teachers Association, 1742 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 2009.

Science Talent Search, conducted by Science Service and sponsored by the Westinghouse Electric Corporation and the Westinghouse Foundation, annually offers scholarships for boys and girls in their last year of high school. Awards are based on high school records, national test scores, recommendations of high school teachers, a thousand word report on an independent science research project by the student and interviews by judges of the forty finalists at the Science Talent Institute in Washington, D.C. Awards include 40 scholarships: one $20,000, two $15,000, three $10,000 and four $7,500. The remaining 30 finalists each receive Westinghouse Science Scholarships of $1,000. State Science Talent Searches are conducted currently with the National Competition in 36 states and the District of Columbia. Entry deadline date is December 15. Detailed information is available from Science Service, 1719 N Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Telephone: (202) 785-2255.

Soroptimist International of the Americas Youth Citizenship Award of $1,250 per Soroptimist region and a finalist award of $2,000 are offered to high school seniors demonstrating good citizenship qualities. Citizenship qualities include integrity, worth and ability, and encourage youth to develop the highest concepts of patriotism and effective cooperation in home and community affairs. Deadline is December 15. For applications, contact your local Soroptimist club.

The Ted and Peg Serrill Journalism Scholarship is offered annually by the National Newspaper Foundation to a college Junior enrolled full-time in Journalism. The scholarship program is designed to encourage study in the print media field. The scholarships, in the sums of $1,000, $500 and $250, are payable during the Junior year. The student must have at least a B average and a recommendation by the Dean, Director or Department Head of the school in which he/she is enrolled. Deadline is June 13. Write for an application to: Selection Committee, Serrill Scholarship, National Newspaper Foundation, 1627 K Street, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20006. Telephone: (202) 466-7200.

The Westinghouse Educational Foundation sponsors the following awards annually:

1. The Westinghouse Family Scholarship—ten $12,000 and sixty-five $3,000 scholarships. Information on the Westinghouse Family Scholarship may be obtained from the Personnel Relations Office where the student's parent is or was (if deceased, retired or permanently disabled) employed.

2. The Science Talent Search—forty awards. The student should request the science teacher to write to Science Talent Service, 1719 N Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 to obtain information and application forms.

3. 4-H Electric Program—4-H Club members should contact their local 4-H leader or County Extension Agent for information and application.

4. Bertha Lamme Scholarship—these scholarships are awarded to young women entering engineering as freshmen. For information write: Society of Womens Engineers, United Engineering Center, Room 305, 345 East 47th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017. Telephone: (212) 705-7855.

5. National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students—For information, write to: One Rotary Center, 1560 Sherman Avenue, Evanston, IL 60201.

Eligibility for each of these scholarships is limited to students residing in the United States. The Family Scholarship, The Science Talent Search and The Bertha Lamme require that the applicant be in his or her last year of high school; applications must be submitted during the Fall months of the Senior year. Students aged 14 through 19 are eligible for the 4-H Electric Program.

Western Golf Association sponsors the Evans Scholars Foundation, which annually awards approximately 200 four-year scholarships to qualified caddies. Eligibility for Evans Scholarship: (1) Candidates must have completed junior year in high school and rank in upper 25% of class; (2) must have caddied for a minimum of two years at a club participating in this program; and (3) must require financial assistance to attend college. Information is available by writing to Western Golf Association, Golf, IL 60029. Telephone: (312) 724-4600.

C. ASSISTANCE FOR GRADUATES AND UNDERGRADUATES

American Congress, on Surveying and Mapping/American Society for Photogrammetry and Remote Sensing fellowships and scholarships: (1) Wild Heerbrugg Surveying Scholarships—two scholarships ($1,000 each) for students studying surveying at a school with a two- or four-year degree in surveying or a related field; (2) Wild Heerbrugg Photogrammetric Fellowship—a $4,000 award for one graduate student, to be used for study in photogrammetry at a school of the recipient's choice; (3) American Association for Geodetic Surveying Fellowship—a $2,000 award for one graduate student, to be used for study in a program that focuses on geodetic surveying or geodesy at a school of the recipient's choice; (4) Schonstedt Scholarship in Surveying—a $1,500 award for one undergraduate student, to be used for study in surveying by a student who has completed at least 2 years of a 4 year curriculum leading to a degree in surveying; (5) The William A. Fischer Memorial Scholarship—a $1,500 award for graduate study in remote sensing, to be used for studies that address new and innovative uses of remote sensing related to the natural, cultural, or agricultural resources of the Earth; (6) The American Cartographic Association Scholarship—a $1,000 award for full-time students of junior or senior standing. Applicants should be enrolled in a cartography or other mapping science curriculum in a 4-year degree granting institution; (7) The Berntsen Scholarship in Surveying—a $1,500 award for one undergraduate student, to be used for study in surveying in a 4-year degree program of the recipient's choice; (8) The Robert E. Altenhofen Memorial Scholarship—a $500 award for one undergraduate or graduate student, to be used for study in photogrammetry at a school of the recipient's choice; (9) Analytical Surveys Scholarship—a $4,000 award for one undergraduate or graduate student to encourage and assist in pursuing education in photogrammetry; (10) Joseph F. Dracup Scholarship—a $2,000 award for an undergraduate student committed to a career in geodetic surveying; (11) Ta Liang Memorial Award—a $500 award for a graduate student in remote sensing (for research-related travel). Deadline for applications is January 15, except for the Robert E. Altenhofen Memorial Scholarship, which has a deadline of January 1. Request application forms and instructions from: ACSM Scholarships, 210 Little Falls Street, Falls Church, VA 22046.

The American Dental Hygienists' Association Institute for Oral Health offers the following scholarships; (1) Certificate Scholarship Program to students who are in a certificate/associate degree or bachelor's degree dental hygiene program, have completed at least one year in dental hygiene curriculum and have a minimum grade point average of 3.00 (on a 4.00 scale); (2) Baccalaureate Dental Hygiene Scholarship Program to students who have a minimum grade point average of 3.00 (on a 4.00 scale) and can provide evidence of acceptance as a full-time bachelor's degree candidate in an accredited four-year college or university; if a Baccalaureate Degree sought is not in Dental Hygiene, evidence of a Dental Hygiene Certificate or qualification for the Dental Hygiene Certificate within the current academic year must be provided. (3) Graduate acceptance as a full-time Master's or Doctoral degree candidate in a university program, graduates of a certified associate dental hygiene program or baccalaureate program, and licensed Dental Hygienists or will receive a bachelor's degree at the end of the current academic year. While being enrolled in a dental hygiene curriculum, must maintain a minimum grade point average of 3.00 (on a 4.00 scale). The maximum scholarship is $1,500. Deadline for applications is May 1. Information and application may be obtained by writing: ADHA Institute, 444 North Michigan Avenue, Suite 3400, Chicago, IL 60611.

The American Dental Hygienists' Association Institute for Oral Health Research Grant Program makes research grant funds available for licensed dental hygienists or students pursuing a dental hygiene degree who submit a completed research and grant application according to the specified guidelines. The purpose is to provide financial assistance to certificate, associate, baccalaureate, master's, doctoral candidates and practicing dental hygienists to implement research. All proposals and applications are due by July 15; Awards customarily range from approximately $1,000 to $5,000 with an average award of $2,000. Further information and application may be obtained by writing: American Dental Hygienists' Association, Division of Professional Development, Administrative Research Grant Program, 444 Michigan Avenue, Suite 3400, Chicago, IL 60611.

The American Geological Institute makes funds available to minority students in the geological sciences to assist them in their studies. This is accomplished through the Minority Participation Program Scholarships. Awards are granted yearly in sums ranging from $500 to $2,000. Those eligible are geoscience majors who are United States citizens and members of one of the following ethnic minority groups that are underrepresented in the geosciences: American Black, Hispanic and Native American (American Indian, Eskimo, Samoan or Hawaiian.) The applicant must be a geoscience major with a good academic record, meet financial need criteria, and be currently enrolled in an accredited institution as either an undergraduate or graduate student. The term "geoscience" is used broadly to include major study in the fields of geology, geophysics, geochemistry, hydrology, oceanography, meteorology and planetary geology. Application deadline is February 1 of each year. Current recipients must reapply for consideration for an additional year. Those interested in applying for a scholarship for a particular academic year should send their request for application forms (which may be duplicated) to the following address as of September when the new applications become available: American Geological Institute, Director of Education, 4220 King Street, Alexandria, Virginia 22302.

The American Institute of Architects. The AIA scholarship program is divided into four programs, each created to meet a different need during the course of an architectural education. Scholarships are provided for undergraduate students entering architecture; students during one of the final two years of the professional degree program; architects wishing to engage in graduate work or independent study; and architects or graduate students wishing to specialize in health facilities design. The Institute considers this support an important investment in the profession's future. Special awards are available to assist minority/disadvantaged students (primarily recent high school graduates) to pursue a career in architecture. For further information write: Director, Education Programs, The American Institute of Architects, 1735 New York Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20006.

The American Society of Heating, Refrigeration, Air Conditioning Engineers, Inc. offers grants-in-aid to full-time graduate students of ASHRAE-related technologies to encourage students to continue preparation for service in the industry. An application is made on the student's behalf by a faculty adviser. Up to $6,000 may be awarded during a calendar year. Applications are available from the Manager of Research, American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Engineers, Inc., 1791 Tullie Circle, N.E., Atlanta, GA 30329.

American Society of Medical Technologists (ASMT) Scholarship Program: The scholarship program supports continuing, advanced, undergraduate, and graduate education for students, practitioners, and educators.

Skonie Undergraduate Scholarship-Award $1,000. Established by: The Skonie Corporation. Purpose: To assist students of the profession of clinical laboratory science in pursuing undergraduate studies.

Eligibility: Any student who (1) fulfills requirements for admission or is currently enrolled in a (full time) degree program in clinical laboratory science (medical technology), (2) will enter the senior year within 12 months, and (3) is a citizen or permanent resident of the United States of America.

Many state societies have state scholarship programs for undergraduate students. Please contact the President of the state society for information.

Note: ASMT also offers educational assistance programs for advanced and continuing education. For information on all programs, contract: ASMT, 2021 L Street, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, DC 20036.

Burroughs National Grants/Scholarships. These awards are offered by the Burroughs Corporation (through the Burroughs Grant Award Center) as an incentive to attract qualified graduates as Burroughs employees. The average award is $5,500; to be used for all fields of undergraduate or graduate study. Criteria include high scholastic achievement of most pressing financial need. Students are asked to consider possible employment with Burroughs; future employment with Burroughs need not be assured in order to win an award. To receive a full informational packet, mail a brief, informal note to: Burroughs Grant Award Center, Ehrman Building, NBA #674. 43363 Mission Boulevard, Fremont, CA 94539.

The Dow Jones Newspaper Fund, Inc. is an organization encouraging talented young people to consider careers in journalism. The Journalism Career and Scholarship Guide, published by the Fund, provides information on what to study in college, where to study journalism/mass communications, general information on where jobs are and how to find them. It also lists more than $3 million in financial aid from universities and colleges, newspapers, professional societies and journalism-related organizations for students majoring in journalism/mass communications. Single copies of the Guide are available at no charge to interested individuals. Bulk orders are also available at $2.50 per copy.

The Fund operates three editing internship programs: the Newspaper Editing Intern Program for College Juniors, the Minority Editing Intern Program for College Seniors, and Minority Reporting Intern Program for College Sophomores. The internships offer students the opportunity to earn scholarships after successfully completing a summer of paid employment as copy editors or reporters on daily newspapers. The Fund also sponsors: High School Journalism Workshops for Minorities that are designed to identify minority high school students; the Teacher Fellowship Program for inexperienced high school journalism teachers to attend summer publication workshops; and the Special Awards Program which ends in the naming of the High School Journalism Teacher of the Year. For information on these programs, as well as a copy of the Journalism Career and Scholarship Guide, write the Dow Jones Newspaper Fund, P.O. Box 300, Princeton, N.J. 08543-0300. Telephone: (609) 452-2820.

Educational Foundation of the National Restaurant Association (NRA):

Scholarships—Foundation-administered scholarships are made available for the purpose of providing needed funds for tuition, room and board, books, and other school expenses at more than 500 approved vocational-technical schools, junior/community colleges, and senior colleges and universities. These awards are available for undergraduate studies only.

Educational Foundation-administered scholarships are funded by a number of participating companies. Scholarships are available to full-time students majoring in the areas of foodservice/hospitality management. This includes majors in hotel, restaurant, and institutional management, culinary arts, dietectics, food science and technology, and other foodservice-related curricula including manufacturing and distribution. Scholarships range in value from $750 to one full-tuition award up to $10,000.

Fellowships—Seven H.J. Heinz Company Foundation Graduate Degree Fellowship Awards, 1 for $2,000, 1 for $1,200, and 5 for $1,000, are awarded yearly on a competitive basis to present or previous full-time teachers or administrators enrolled in either a master's or doctoral-degree program to improve skill in teaching or administering foodservice management/culinary arts programs.

The Graduate Degree Fellowship Awards are funded by the H.J. Heinz Company Foundation and administered by The Educational Foundation.

Grants—Up to 25 National Restaurant Association Teacher Work-Study Grant Awards of $2,000 each are awarded yearly on a competitive basis to full-time teachers in and administrators of foodservice management/culinary arts programs.

It is the objective of these grants to provide opportunities for full-time teachers and administrators in "hands-on" work experience in the industry. This experience will enrich and update their knowledge of the industry and increase their capability to relate that knowledge to their students.

The Teacher Work-Study Grant Awards are funded by the National Restaurant Association and administered by The Educational Foundation.

For more information/applications on all award programs, please write or call: Scholarship Coordinator, The Educational Foundation of the National Restaurant Association, 250 S. Wacker Drive, Suite 1400, Chicago, IL 60606 (312) 715-1010.

Institute of Food Technoligists administers fellowships and scholarships to students pursuing a program leading to a degree in the general field of Food Technology or Food Science. During the tenure of a scholarship, winners must be enrolled in an IFT approved U.S. or Canadian educational institution. Graduate fellowship winners may be enrolled in any U.S. or Canadian educational institution that is conducting fundamental research in food science or technology. Awards include 33 freshman and sophomore, and 50 junior and senior scholarships of $500 to $2,000; and 24 graduate Fellowships up to $10,000. A booklet on IFT Scholarship/Fellowship Programs and applications are available after September 15 from IFT Scholarship Department, 221 N. LaSalle St., Suite 300, Chicago, IL 60601 or from Department Head of approved institution. Telephone: (312) 782-8424.

The International Chiropractors Association has two scholarship programs, the Women's Auxiliary and King Koil scholarship programs, which provide funds to student ICA chapters for distribution to student ICA members. ICA also furnishes career information to interested individuals. Upon request, ICA will send a list of chiropractic colleges. Write to the International Chiropractors Association, Career/Scholarship Information, 1110 N. Glebe Road, Suite 1000, Arlington, VA 22201.

The Material Handling Education Foundation, Inc. awards scholarships to students enrolled in programs of study pre-qualified by the Foundation. Majors in Industrial, Electrical, and Mechanical Engineering and in Computer Science may qualify. The program should include an emphasis in material handling through direct and related courses, or through independent study. To be eligible, students must be: beyond their second year of a Bachelor's program, or beginning graduate study; U.S. citizens and maintaining at least a "B" average. The application deadline is early February; the forms are available from faculty members at approved institutions. For general information, you may write: The Material Handling Institute, Inc., 8720 Red Oak Blvd., Suite 201, Charlotte, NC 28217. Telephone: (704) 522-8644.

National Congress of Parents and Teachers does not have a scholarship and loan program at a national level. Some state PTA's have such programs and others are encouraging scholarship grants at council and local levels. Awards are made possible by dues received for memberships, memorial gifts and/or voluntary contributions to PTA's. Most are for teacher training education, but some are for family life education, guidance and counseling instruction, librarianship, teachers of exceptional children and inservice teachers' summer term work. Special fellowships offered. Inquiries should be sent to the inquirer's state PTA office.

National Federation of the Blind. Each year at its national convention in July the National Federation of the Blind gives to legally blind persons pursuing or planning to pursue a full-time postsecondary course of study a broad array of scholarships. The 1989 scholarships include:

1. Ezra Davis Memorial Scholarship; $10,000; endowed by Ezra Davis and given by the American Brotherhood for the Blind, a nonprofit organization which works to assist blind persons. Applicants must be studying (or planning to study) at the postsecondary level; no restriction as to gender, graduate or undergraduate level, or field of study.

2. National Federation of the Blind Merit Scholarship; nineteen to be given; three for $4,000; seven for $2,500; and nine for $1,800. Applicants must be studying (or planning to study) at the postsecondary level; no restriction as to gender, graduate or undergraduate level or field of study.

3. Howard Brown Rickard Scholarship; $2,500. Applicants must be studying (or planning to study) law, medicine, engineering, architecture or the natural sciences; no restriction as to gender or graduate or undergraduate level.

4. Hermoine Grant Calhoun Scholarship; $2,500. Dr. Isabelle Grant endowed this scholarship in memory of her daughter; limited to female students; may be studying (or planning to study) at either graduate or undergraduate level.

5. Frank Walton Horn Memorial Scholarship; $2,500; given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnum, the mother and stepfather of Catherine Horn Randall; no restrictions as to gender, graduate or undergraduate level, or field of study, but preference will be given to those studying architecture or engineering.

6. Francis Urbanek Memorial Scholarship; $2,000; given by Joe Urbanek in memory of his brother Francis, who died in January, 1986, at age eighteen; limited to blind high school graduates entering their freshman year of college.

7. Ellen Setterfield Memorial Scholarship; $2,000; given in memory of Ellen Setterfield by Roy Landstrom; restricted to students at the graduate level in the social sciences.

8. Melva T. Owen Memorial Scholarship; $1,800; given in memory of Melva T. Owen, who was widely known and loved among the blind. She and her husband Charles Owen became acquainted with increasing numbers of blind people through their work in the "Voicespondence" Club. Charles Owen says: "there shall be no limitation as to field of study, except that it shall be directed towards attaining financial independence and shall exclude religion and those seeking only to further general or cultural education."

Criteria: All scholarships are awarded on the basis of academic excellence, service to the community, and financial need.

Membership: The National Federation of the Blind is an organization dedicated to creating opportunity for all blind persons. Recipients of Federation scholarships need not be members of the National Federation of the Blind.

Deadline: Applications for National Federation of the Blind scholarships must be received by March 31 of the year in which the scholarship is to be awarded.

Applications may be obtained from local and state Federation officers or by writing: National Federation of the Blind Scholarship Committee, Grinnel State Bank Building, 2nd Floor, 814 Fourth Avenue, Grinnet, Iowa 50112.

Presbyterian Church Financial Aid Programs. The purpose of the financial aid programs of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is to help make college and graduate work possible for Presbyterian students who might be handicapped by inadequate financial resources.

These programs are not intended to provide the major portion of educational expenses. They are intended to help make undergraduate and graduate work possible for those who need additional resources to continue their education, either through grants, scholarships or loans.

With one exception, the Samuel Robinson Scholarship, all programs are based on financial need.

Undergraduate Grant Programs

I. National Presbyterian College Scholarships. For superior young people preparing to enter full-time study as incoming freshmen at one of the participating colleges related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Applicants must be high school seniors, U.S. citizens or permanent residents, confirming members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and take the SAT/ACT no later than November 30th of their senior year in high school. Additional qualifications are listed in the brochure which is available after September 1st. Range of Awards: $500 to $2,000 per academic year depending on demonstrated need and available funds.

II. Student Opportunity Scholarships. Designed to assist racial/ethnic undergraduate students (Asian, Black, Hispanic, Native American) finance their undergraduate education beyond high school. Applicant must be a member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), a U.S. citizen or permanent resident of the U.S.; must be a high school senior who will be entering college full-time as incoming freshman and must apply to the college for financial aid. Applications are available after January 1st and must be submitted by April 1st of student's senior year in high school. Range of awards: $100 to $1,400 per academic year depending upon demonstrated need/available funds.

III. Native American Education Grants. For Indians, Aleuts and Eskimos pursuing full-time postsecondary education. Must be a U.S. citizen. Must have completed at least one semester of work at an accredited institution of higher education. Must apply to the college for financial aid. Preference will be given to Presbyterian students at the undergraduate level. Range of Awards: $200 to $1,500, depending upon demonstrated need and availability of funds.

IV. Educational Assistance Grant Program. An undergraduate aid program to help cover the cost of purchasing required books and instructional materials for the children of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) professional church workers. Applicant must be a full-time undergraduate who is receiving financial aid based upon need and must be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident of the U.S. Students may receive EAP grants for a maximum of two (2) academic years, with amounts varying by term depending on courses being taken and books required. Maximum grant for a full academic year is $300.

V. Samuel Robinson Scholarships. For undergraduate students enrolled in one of the 69 colleges related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). No one may receive the scholarship more than once. Applicants must successfully recite the answers of the Westminister Shorter Catechism and write a 2,000 word original essay on an assigned topic related to the Shorter Catechism. Amount of Award: $500. For information, inquire at the college financial aid office.

Graduate Grant Programs

I. Presbyterian Study Grants. To assist graduate students who are communicant members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in their preparation for professional church occupations. Applicants must: be citizen of the U.S. or have permanent resident status; demonstrate financial need beyond that which they are able to meet through other loans, grants, scholarships, savings and employment; normally be enrolled on a full-time basis; be in good academic standing. Additional conditions of study apply.

II. Racial/Ethnic Leadership Supplemental Grants. Designed to assist racial/ethnic graduate students (Asian, Black, Hispanic, Native American) who are communicant members of the PC (U.S.A.) in preparation for professional church occupations. The student must be: studying for the first professional degree; enrolled as an inquirer with or received as a candidate by a PC (U.S.A.) presbytery for a church occupation; a citizen of the U.S. or have permanent resident status; enrolled at least half-time in a prescribed program of study approved by presbytery and in good academic standing; demonstrate unusual financial need beyond that which he/she is able to meet through other grants, loans, scholarships, savings and employment.

To apply, contact the Financial Aid Officer at the seminary or school of study for information/forms.

III. Native American Seminary Scholarship. To aid Presbyterians who are American Indians, Aleuts and Eskimos in their pursuit of theological education. The student must: be a U.S. citizen or have permanent resident status; demonstrate financial need beyond that which he/she is able to meet through other loans, grants, scholarships, savings and employment; be in good academic standing. Additional conditions of study apply.

Student Loan Fund. Students in all categories; must demonstrate evidence of needing financial help for the necessary expenses of higher education beyond that which they are able to meet through other loans, grants, scholarships, savings and employment; must give satisfactory evidence of financial reliability and must satisfy the Student Loan Fund office that the loan will be repaid in accordance with the conditions specified; must be a U.S. citizen or have permanent resident status.

For more information on all Presbyterian Church Financial Aid Programs, write to: Manager, Financial Aid for Studies, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), 100 Witherspoon Street, Louisville, KY 40202-1396.

The Rotary Foundation Scholarships are available to graduate or undergraduate students, journalists, or teachers of the handicapped. Vocational scholarships are also available for artisans, technicians and professionals who have been employed in a technical or professional field for at least 2 years. Freedom From Hunger Scholarships will be granted to students from developing country districts working toward advanced degrees in agricultural studies. Age limit requirements vary with each scholarship. All scholarships are for one academic year in a country other than the recipient's own, and provide for school fees, room and board, round trip airfare between home city and place of study and expenses for limited travel during the year. Applications are due July 1. Contact your local Rotary Club for details.

The Society of Exploration Geophysicists Foundation offers numerous scholarship opportunities to students who intend to pursue a college course directed toward a career in Geophysics. Scholarships ranging from $750 to $1,000 annually are available to students wishing to enter college, already in college and at the graduate level. Applications must be filed prior to March 1. Applications and further information may be secured from the Society's Scholarship Committee, P.O. Box 702740, Tulsa, OK 74170.

The Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers annually awards both undergraduate and graduate scholarships to encourage study in naval architecture and marine engineering or closely related fields. All applicants must be citizens of either the United States or Canada:

1. Undergraduate Awards, normally $1,000 each, are to be applied for by contacting one or more of the following schools directly: University of California (Berkeley); University of Michigan (Ann Arbor); Massachusetts Institute of Technology (Cambridge); State University of New York Maritime College (Fort Schuyler); Florida Atlantic University (Boca Raton, FL), and/or University of New Orleans. These are the only schools where undergraduate awards are available.

2. Graduate Awards are in amounts of $1,000 or higher. File with the Society no later than February 1. Applications for graduate awards and information can be obtained by writing to: Mr. Robert G. Mende, Secretary and Executive Director, The Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, 601 Pavonia Avenue, Jersey City, New Jersey 07306. Telephone: (201) 798-4800.

D. ASSISTANCE FOR GRADUATES ONLY

The American Association of University Women Educational Foundation awards approximately 94 fellowships annually, ranging up to $10,000 for pre-doctoral, and up to $20,000 for postdoctoral fellowships. These awards are for women of the United States who have completed all requirements for the doctorate except the writing of the dissertation. Postdoctoral fellowships are awarded to women who hold a doctoral degree and wish to pursue further advanced research. Awards are also made to women for the final year of study in the fields of law, medicine, architecture, and business administration (the MBA degree). These "selected professions" awards are between $5,000 and $7,500. Applications are available after August 1 of each year. Deadlines for application vary from November 15 through February 1. For further information, write to: AAUW Educational Foundation, 2401 Virginia Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20037. Telephone: (202) 728-7603.

The American Osteopathic Association. The Auxiliary to the American Osteopathic Association annually awards scholarships to freshman in the top 20% of their class who will be sophomores in the next school term at accredited colleges of osteopathic medicine. The specific number of awards is determined on consideration of funds available. The awards will be made in August. Recipients are selected without regard to geographical location of home, or choice of osteopathic educational institution.

The Scholarship awards are for $3,000. The scholarship money is paid directly to the college which the student attends and is to be used for the payment of tuition, books, and equipment. Each year the most outstanding winner is automatically awarded the Lawrence W. Mills Scholarship, for $5,000.

Requirements for these scholarships are:

High scholastic standing, determined by class rank (applicant must be in the top 20 percent of freshman class).

Financial need.

Applicant must not be the recipient of any full tuition scholarship.

Good moral character.

Motivation and aptitude toward the osteopathic medical profession.

A personal interview.

To apply, complete the application and return it by the deadline: Must be postmarked by April 15. A passport photograph, suitable for news release, must accompany the application and will not be returned.

For information write: Scholarship Chairman, Auxiliary to the American Osteopathic Association, 142 East Ontario Street, Chicago, IL 60611.

The Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Foundation offers Fellowships each year to approximately 10 young scientists and engineers for graduate study in energy conversion, transportation, jet propulsion, space flight and flight structures. The Fellowships provide stipends ranging up to $8,200 in 1989-90 depending on the level of advancement of the student, plus tuition. They are open to qualified science and engineering students who are residents of the United States or Canada. Students graduating in aerodynamics, fluid mechanics, engineering sciences, physics, physical chemistry, applied physics, applied mathematics, or, aeronautical, mechanical, chemical or civil engineering are sought. The Fellowhips are open to women as well as men. The Fellowships will be used for study at The Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Laboratories at Princeton University (all in Dept of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering), the Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Jet Propulsion Center at California Institute of Technology and the Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Institute of Flight Structures at Columbia University. Applications and addtitional information should be obtained directly from Princeton, California Institute of Technology or Columbia University.

Dental Laboratory Technology Scholarships are available upon completion of application to the American Fund for Dental Health. These are one-year scholarships ranging from $500 to $600. Upon reapplication, a scholarship may be renewed for a second year by the Selection Committee, if the student satisfactorily completes the first year and funding is available. Deadline date is June 1. For full information, write to: American Fund for Dental Health, Attn: Director of Programs, 211 East Chicago Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611.

Dental Scholarships for Minority Students are available through the American Fund for Dental Health. Students selected under this program may receive up to $2,000 for their first year of dental school. Upon re-application and report of satisfactory progress, a grant for $2,000 may be renewed for the second year of dental studies. A maximum of $4,000 may be paid over a two-year period. To be eligible, students must be U.S. citizens from the following minority groups under-represented in the dental profession—American Indians, Blacks, Mexican-Americans and Puerto Ricans. They must be entering their first year of dental school. Application deadline is May 1. Applications are available from the Student Affairs or Financial Aid Office of the dental school they plan to attend. Write: American Fund for Dental Health, Attn: Director of Programs, 211 E. Chicago Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611.

Foreign Area Programs of the Social Science Research Council and the American Council of Learned Societies offer fellowships for doctoral dissertation research in social science and humanistic fields related to many foreign areas. Since these programs reflect the distinctive needs and character of the area, a general account of terms and conditions cannot be offered here. Inquiries should be directed to Social Science Research Council, Fellowhips and Grants, 605 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10158.

The Foundation of the American College of Healthcare Executives offers a limited number of Foster G. McGaw student loans to assist worthy students to continue their professional education and training for careers in hospital administration. Loans are available to students in graduate programs in hospital or health services administration, accredited by the Accrediting Commission on Education for Health Services Administration. Applicants must be student associates of ACHE, and demonstrate financial need. Applications must be endorsed by the University Program Course Director prior to submission to ACHE's Student Loan Committee. For further information, contact the American College of Healthcare Executives, 840 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, IL 60611.

Also offered is the Albert W. Dent Scholarship, designed to provide financial aid for and increase enrollment of minority and physically disabled students in healthcare management graduate programs. For information, write to address above.

The Institute of International Education offers American college graduates approximately 700 scholarships for study in foreign countries, about 500 of which are provided under the Fulbright Program. Over two hundred of the scholarships are financed by various foreign governments, foreign universities and private donors. In most cases, the scholarships provide travel expenses and partial or complete tuition and maintenance for a full academic year. Students now enrolled in colleges or universities should first consult with their campus Fulbright Program Advisers. Deadline is October 31. Further information and application forms are available from the Institute of International Education, U.S. Student Programs Division, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017, (Telephone: (212) 984-5330), or from any of the Institute's regional offices in Chicago, Denver, Atlanta, Houston and San Francisco.

Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity Scholarship Awards. Graduate scholarships are available to members of Kappa Kappa Gamma and to any woman student who is a citizen of the United States or Canada who has completed undergraduate study or will be doing graduate work full-time on a campus with a chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma. Application forms may be obtained by writing to Fraternity Headquarters, P.O. box 2079, Columbus, Ohio 43216 (Please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope). Application deadline: February 15.

The Knights of Columbus Graduate Fellowships are established at the Catholic University of America, Washington, DC., for work in the fields offered in the Graduate School. The fellowships cover room, board and tuition, and may be renewed annually up to three years.

For these awards, preference is given to members of the Knights of Columbus, to the wife, son, daughter or sister of a member. The member must be in good standing in the Order; if deceased, he must have been in good standing at the time of his death.

These fellowships are administered by the Graduate School of the Catholic University for applicants who have been accepted for graduate work there. Application forms may be obtained from the Director of Financial Aid, Catholic University of America, Washington, DC 20064.

The Knights of Columbus-Bishop Charles P. Greco Graduate Fellowships were established in 1973 for members, their wives, sons and daughters, and for the widow and children of a deceased member. These fellowships are for full-time graduate study leading to a Master's degree in a program designed for the preparation of classroom teachers of mentally retarded children. The fellowship is granted to a candidate at the beginning of the program of study and offers financial assistance for the educational costs at the graduate school up to a maximum of $500 a semester. The grant is renewable each succeeding semester of the program to a maximum of four semesters, upon evidence of satisfactory performance. The deadline is May 1. Application forms may be obtained from the Committee on Fellowships, Knights of Columbus, P.O. Drawer 1670, New Haven, CT 06507.

National Medical Fellowships, Inc., awards schoarships to members of four under-represented minority groups, (Native Americans, American Blacks, Mexican Americans and Mainland Puerto Ricans) who have been accepted by or are attending accredited schools of allopathic and osteopathic medicine in the U.S. Applicants must be U.S. citizens.

NMF Scholarship awards are based on financial need and are awarded to first and second-year medical students. Special merit awards are granted outstanding juniors and seniors.

Applications should be requested from The Scholarship Program, National Medical Fellowships, 254 West 31st Street, 7th Floor, New York, NY 10001. All NMF applications are available in March. The deadline for new applicants is August 30 and for renewal applicants is May 1.

The National Wildlife Federation annually awards a limited number of graduate fellowships of up to $10,000 for study at an accredited college or university in the field of natural resources conservation. Research which is carried out as part of a research program may be considered within this fellowship program. The deadline is November 30. Write to: The Executive Vice President, National Wildlife Federation, Confidential #8, 140 Sixteenth St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036-2226.

Nurses' Educational Funds is an organization which grants scholarships to registered nurses pursuing further full-time study through masters or doctoral degree programs. Men and women who are members of any national professional nursing association and who qualify for these awards study in graduate nursing programs accredited by the National League for Nursing in colleges and universities of their choice. Funds are contributed by nurses, business and industrial firms, organizations and individuals. The Board of Directors determines the amount and number of awards each year on the basis of availability of funds and the nature of applications. Deadline for applications is March 1 preceding the academic year for which award is made. Write for additional information to Nurses' Educational Funds, 555 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019. Telephone: (212) 582-8820 (ext. 513).

Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation conducts the following programs in higher education:

(1) Mellon Fellowships for Graduate Studies in the Humanities for beginning graduate students who plan careers in college teaching; for more information on Mellon write: P.O. Box 288, Princeton, NJ 08542. (2) Charlotte W. Newcombe Dissertation Fellowships for Ph.D. candidates writing on topics of religious and ethical values in all fields. Application Request Deadline—December of each year. (3) Women's Studies Research Grants for Ph.D. candidates writing their dissertations on a topic concerning women. Application Request Deadline—November of each year. (4) Administrative Fellowships which place holders of M.B.A. and other professional degrees in management positions at developing colleges. (5) Visiting Fellows program which sends professionals to college campuses for a week at a time. Application Request Deadline—November of each year. No fellowships for undergraduate study are available. Applicants interested in the above programs should write for further information to: Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, Box 642, Princeton, New Jersey 08542. Also offered: Spencer Dissertation Year Fellowships, for Research Related to Education, for Ph.D. candidates in the social sciences or education; and Rural Policy Fellowships, to expand the number of researchers and policy-makers concerned with rural policy questions in the U.S. For information on both programs, write to P.O. Box 410, Princeton, New Jersey 08542.

E. STUDENT EMPLOYMENT AND COOPERATIVE EDUCATION

Cooperative education is a unique plan of education which integrates classroom study with planned and supervised work experiences. This educational pattern allows students to acquire practical skills as well as to be exposed to the reality of the world beyond the boundaries of the campus, enhancing the self-awareness and direction of the individuals.

One of the great strengths of cooperative education is its flexibility. The basic concept of integrating work experience in an educational curriculum can be applied in many different ways. The administrative details can be designed to blend with the philosophy of the particular educational institution and the needs of the students to be served.

It is called "cooperative education" because it is dependent upon the cooperation between educational institutions and employers to form a total educational program. The interrelated experience and study components are carefully planned and supervised to produce optimum educational results. Through a balanced educational method which combines classroom theory with career-related paid work experience, cooperative education offers numerous advantages to the student, to employers, and to the institutions.

At a time when potential college students cannot afford the increasing costs of higher education, co-op provides a solution. Students are assigned to real jobs for real pay. This is a very significant benefit, since co-op students earn, on an average, $7,000 per year from their co-op assignments. Therefore, cooperative education is a form of higher education that allows students to work in the adult world, gaining realistic experience and a professional résumé by the time they graduate, as well as earning financial benefits to offset their tuition expenses.

To receive a free copy of the Co-op Education Undergraduate Program Directory, write to: The National Commission for Cooperative Education, 360 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.●

JOHN M. ROBERTSON, KENTUCKY SMALL BUSINESS PERSON OF THE YEAR

● Mr. FORD. Mr. President, next week, from May 6 through May 12, we celebrate Small Business Week throughout this country. I rise today to salute the Kentucky Small Business Person of the Year, Mr. John M. Robertson, of Louisville, KY. He will be honored and recognized by the Small Business Administration in Washington next week along with successful entrepreneurs from across the country.

John Robertson is president of Louisville Stoneware Co., a manufacturer and supplier of high quality dinnerware across this country and overseas. In 1970, Mr. Robertson purchased Louisville Stoneware, then a fledgling enterprise with 13 employees. Since that time, the operations of Louisville Stoneware have grown and improved, to the point where its efficient operations now employ more than 100 people full time, as well as several others on a part-time basis during peak seasons. And Louisville Stoneware is also a source of employment and training for many mentally and physically handicapped individuals, giving them the opportunity to provide for themselves and make a positive contribution to our economy and to society.

Mr. President, I believe the growth of Louisville Stoneware represents the kind of expansion that has been at the core of our Nation's economic growth in recent years—dedicated, sustained efforts under the leadership of hard working, enterprising individuals like John Robertson. His leadership and example have made him a role model for small business persons across Kentucky and throughout the country. And it assures me that small businesses will continue to play a leading role in the economic progress in my State. I rise to pay tribute to John Robertson and all of the other "Small Business Persons of the Year" for their achievements, and wish them much success for the future.●

UNDERSTANDING THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

● Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, the last several years have brought us the flourishing of democracy throughout the world. In particular, the efforts by our southern neighbors in the Caribbean and Latin America to achieve democracy are quite impressive.

The fostering of democracy has succeeded when accompanied by the development of a viable free enterprise system. It is in the best interest of the United States to encourage such progress, since these nations are formidable trade partners and play an important role in our national security.

One example of a fast-changing neighboring country is the Dominican Republic, a Caribbean nation whose history has been closely linked to the United States since the last century. My State of Rhode Island is blessed with the presence of many new Americans originally from the Dominican Republic. Their hard work and contribution to the improvement of the quality of life in our State is extraordinary, and is testimony to what can be accomplished in a competitive environment.

I would like to submit for the RECORD a short article titled "Understanding the Dominican Republic." It was recently published in Caribbean Studies, the official organ of the Caribbean Studies Organization. This article is authored by a former university professor, Roland Armando Alum, who is a member of the Advisory Committee to the Senate Republican Conference Task Force on Hispanic Affairs. Written during a recent visit to the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, it points out the dilemmas faced by many developing countries whose people wish to continue to follow the path to representative democracy together with a market economy.

The article follows:

[From the Caribbean Studies Newsletter, Winter 1989]

COMMENTARY: UNDERSTANDING THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

(By Rolando A. Alum)[1]

In August 1986, Joaquín Balaguer (b. 1909) was sworn in for the fifth time in his life as president of the Dominican Republic (D.R.). The current Dominican polity took shape at the conclusion of the short but fratricidal Civil War of 1965. Since then, and except for occasional reversals, the D.R. has achieved a remarkable stability at par with development—it uneven—in the social and economic spheres.

While every four years there appear small political parties of all imaginable ideologies, the polity has moved toward a system of two major parties alternating in power: the PRSC, Christian Social Reformist Party; and the PRD, Dominican Revolutionary Party. Having consolidated constitutional democracy, the present Balaguer Administratration is sponsoring an anti-corruption campaign, which is accompanied by much drama that has included en masse resignations of government official and indictments against participants in past administrations.

Critics have considered the earlier three-term Balaguer administration (1966–78) a mixed bag. In contrast to his two successors—Guzmán and Jorge, who lived up to their respective pledges and to seek reelection—Balaguer had his own sponsored Constitution of 1966 soon amended to allow self-succession. Moreover, rampant corruption (which Balaguer claimed halted at his "office doors" but which implicated associates of his), plus police and military heavy-handedness caused popular support to decline by 1978.

In retrospect, his prior consecutive terms may well be labelled, in all fairness, the "Pax Balagueriana." While during his first few years the country was beset by many of the problems found in Central America today—guerrillas, death squads, riots, militarism, a chaotic economy—his last term was more democratic and progressive than many other regimes in the continent at the time. Balaguer managed to bring the country to the liberal-democractic path, after the 31 year-long Trujillo totalitarianism. Ironically, it was the openness which Balaguer fostered that made it possible for the opposition to vote him out in 1978.

Both of the PRD administrations (1978–82–86) turned out to be disappointing in some respects. Repeated hurricanes, increases in energy costs, declines in sugar prices and foreign investments, high inflation, and the international debt added to their difficulties. Moreover, while pursuing policies of austerity, both were plagued by unexpected corruption, nepotism and surprising street riots, all of which seriously affected the populist PRD's Social-Democatic image. Thus was the scenario that made Balaguer's comeback possible in 1986, when he defeated the PRD candidate, Senator Jacobo Majluta.

In his last inauguration speech (1986), Balaguer promised that, "in accordance with the people's clamor," he would launch a campaign to clean up the country's public administration. Such measures have reached even former President Jorge and close PRD associates accused of improper acquisition of wealth.

Indeed, Jorge was living in Atlanta in a sort of pseudo-exile for over a year but was tried and convicted in absentia. In late November, he returned to the D.R. and is currently in prison awaiting appeal procedures. Critics, notwithstanding, claim that Balaguer's program may be a smokescreen to discredit PRD presidential candidates, such as the young and charismatic Hatuey de Camps (who is currently the Secretary General of the PRD and a popular legislator).

In spite of his ostensible conservative position, Balaguer expanded—instead of reducing—the already ubiquitous public sector during his previous 12-year administration, a policy that he has continued despite rhetoric to the contrary. The Dominican Executive has extensive powers over the economy to start with as a result of the enterprises which the state inherited from tyrant Trujillo's personal business empire. In fact, ultimately, about half of his jobs in the nation are controlled by the president. Statism of this sort is a temptation for dictatorship of all colors and labels.

Another problem is the question of succession. Balaguer has never allowed any younger heir-apparent to emerge in his camp. The PRSC is the result of the 1986 wedding of his old caudillista Reformist Party with the internationally connected Christian-Social Revolutionary Party. But the latter seems to be receiving the bum-rap out of the merger.

Observers of the Dominican situation note that, paradoxically, Balaguer may be—purposely or unwillingly—promoting the destabilization of the democratic system he himself fostered. If the people lose faith in the political system, and if the economy does not move toward a recovery path before the 1990 elections, the otherwise acclaimed Dominican model may suffer another setback. Long and short term legitimate reforms, and less circus, may be the healthiest answers for that freedom-loving Caribbean country.

APPENDIX

Chronology:

1930–1961: Trujillo's dictatorship.
1961–1966: Brief elected and de facto governments.
1965–1966: Civil War (US and OAS intervention).
1966–70–74–78: Balaguer's three consecutive terms.
1978–82: S.A. Guzman's and S. Jorge's presidencies.
1986–Present: Balaguer.●

[1] Rolando A. Alum is a former CSA Councilor, a specialist on the Dominican Republic, and Administrator of the New Jersey Bureau of Hispanic Enterprise.

MISSOURI UTILITY COMPANY RECEIVES AWARD

● Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today in recognition of the Springfield City Utilities, which recently received the E.F. Scattergood System Achievement Award for 1990. The E.F. Scattergood Award is a national award presented annually to the public power system which provides outstanding service to the community it serves and demonstrates the highest goal of the public power industry.

The honor city utilities has received represents very hard work and dedication on the part of its employees and I know that they will continue the high standards of performance that brought them this great honor as they continue to serve their customers in southwestern Missouri. To Springfield City Utilities, I extend a hearty congratulations.●

REMARKS OF DR. WILLIAM R. WOOD'S ADDRESS ON SILVICULTURE

● Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, Dr. William R. Wood addressed the National Silviculture Workshop in Petersburg, AK. He explained how silviculture could apply ideally to the circumstances in the 22 million acre Boreal Forest of interior Alaska. I agree that sustained-yield silviculture techniques should be used in this region to fully amplify the productivity of this forest.

I would like to share Dr. Wood's address to the workshop with my colleagues. His ideas will serve as an additional voice on how silviculture techniques allow us to help forests that otherwise decay. From 1976 to 1980 I called for creation of an interior alaska national forest. I am confident that responsible management of interior forests is right for the region, State, and Nation.

Dr. Wood's perspective on this issue is particularly valuable. He served as president of the University of Alaska, Fairbanks from 1960 to 1973 and is now a devoted volunteer and community leader. He is an outstanding example of one who gives graciously to the community.

Dr. Wood understands Alaska. He has seen interior forests begin to decay and die. He and the entire State are now witnessing further devastation of the forests as they are infested by bark beetles along the middle Yukon and further south on the Kenai Peninsula. Many thousands of acres have already been destroyed. Large parts of the region's forests will be devastated by this plague and then totally lost by fire if we do not develop a plan to responsibly use this resource.

Dr. Wood's vision to combat threats like this is to use silviculture techniques to study forests, cultivate them, and enhance their productivity over the long term. In his speech, he sets out a research plan for interior forests.

I agree with Dr. Wood; a plan to use and enhance this valuable resource is necessary. Not only does it make sense ecologically to use the resource responsibly, but it would create hundreds of jobs and a stable industrial base in interior Alaska. Our best choice for this resource is not to neglect it and let it rot and burn. We must enhance it and make it productive to benefit all.

Dr. William R. Wood would leave a "Legacy of Dreams"—and he expresses that wish in an original poem. I ask to have the transcript of Wm. R. Wood's address to the National Silviculture workshop printed in the RECORD.

The address follows:

NATIONAL SILVICULTURE WORKSHOP JULY 12, 1989, PETERSBURG, AK, PRESENTATION BY DR. WM. R. WOOD, PRESIDENT (EMERITUS), UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA

Challenge, Opportunity, and Obligation

Where has summer gone?
And spring so far before?
Loveliest of trees, the Silver Birch
Shakes its crown of gold;
Wine-red, the low bush berries tease;
"Tomorrow," they say,
"Is time enough for snow
. . . and memories." Not From Stone.

For sometime now, season after season, I have been trying to understand the word "silviculture". Three dictionaries agree that "silviculture" is "cultivation of forest trees". Such a definition leaves a lot to one's imagination. I had a sudden recollection of plowing corn as an Illinois farm boy.

Yesterday morning listening to that series of regional presentation—perceptive, highly informative, excellent—I picked up extensions of the definition, including "Harvesting" and "regeneration". These, too, are rather open-ended.

The professional silviculturist these days appears to be engaged in a lot of things: research in a gamut of scientific exploration and adventures of the mind in everything from climate and soils to fertilizers, insects, acid rain, and the hole in the ozone, plus genetics and tree improvement; innovation in applying state-of-the-art technology to harvesting trees and planting trees; crisis conciliation in dealing with special interest extremists—a "now" breed of forest pest protected by law from extermination (I say this realizing today is a "kinder, gentler era".) The professional silviculturist, like the old village schoolmaster causes one to wonder "How one small head can compass all he knows."

Rightly, instructively, the speakers yesterday morning stressed the importance of terminology—the urgent necessity for foresters to have command of a current vocabulary-in-common, as well as familiarity with historical antecedents.

Fine! Elementary. But what of public awareness, comprehension, understanding, acceptance of what forestry professionals and technicians are doing? Any why? There can be no forest management without purpose. Just what are those clearly stated purposes for each micro as well as macro site situation? Why cultivate forest trees? Tell everybody.

"Silviculture", what's that? Some of the public has a vague notion that houses are made of wood sometimes and that somehow paper is made from wood pulp, but they fail to see any real connection of these commodities with growing trees to sustain the supply of essential materials. A forest is where you go for a picnic. Trees? Trees just are—and don't cut one down. That's bad.

The enemy of silviculture is ignorance—and public indifference. No one is telling the story of forestry, of forest management, and its central role in human existence. No one is likely to tell it for you. It's your assignment as professional, dedicated, knowledgeable foresters. It is your Hippocratic oath.

Neither Congress nor State Legislatures are likely to appropriate large sums for publicity or promotion of even a worthy cause such as yours. You will need to be more innovative. Try to make full use of all the free public service time from the press and media that exists in every community. Give up at least half of the staff time talking with one another and go to the chambers of commerce, the service clubs such as Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Soroptimists, League of Women Voters, the Scouts, teachers' meetings, city council meetings when citizens comments are on the agenda, and talk to your neighbors. Have something constructive, informative to present and you will be welcomed and applauded—and in time understood for the great contribution you are making.

Most adults have heard of the multiple-use concept and the sustained yield principle, not that they fully grasp either, but try to. Make such practice, concepts, and guidelines real to them in their own community. Some will nod, even applaud with enthusiasm, yet not in full agreement. They will have a reservation, a "NIMBY"—Yes, but "not in my backyard."

Communication with the public must be a high priority item in your everyday workload. Somehow there must be developed a sharper awareness of a fundamental fact of life: Historically all wealth used by man stems from two primary resource utilization activities: Agriculture and Mining. Agriculture, in simple terms is the source of food and fiber; it includes fish, animals, birds, trees, plants, berries, nuts—anything that grows and can be renewed. Mining is the source of tools, equipment, building materials, and much of our energy supply, anything that is not renewable. To each of these, human beings add much value in an infinite variety of ways, but the creation of all new wealth, increasing the base of human wealth, derives directly from Agriculture and Mining. Let the population grow, while the basic supply of wealth is static and inevitably, inexorably the standard of existence deteriorates.

It doesn't make sense to build road blocks for some extraneous purpose or ego-trip in the path of either agriculture or mining. Ill-advised attempts to obstruct, to slow down, to stop, to weaken either basic human activity is merely costly at first, but ultimately destructive of the security and status of mankind. No growth is dying on the vine.

Today's extremists in special interest groups, the political activists, pretend not to know that their advocacy of ultra-extreme positions on issue after issue of their own concoction always drive up the cost of living for each of us, for at the same time it drives down economic production.

Why in action after action are scare tactics used—and embraced by the media egoists and irresponsibles? Why are We, the People so damn gullible? Scare tactics always drive up the cost of producing goods and services for consumers! That's us, We, the People who pay the add-on, Why take extreme punitive action against producers and manufacturers? This is popular with our plethora of attorneys, sad to say. Entrepreneurs, even the giant multi-nationals have no treasure store to be raided; they have only what they get from consumers of their products. That's us, We, the People. Why beat ourselves over the head just to dig more out of our own pockets to pay for what we use—plus the added costs of litigation? It doesn't make sense. Nor does Big Government have any treasure trove to distribute, except for what it gets from us, the consumers of government services and largess.

Taxes are ever unpopular, yet justifiable and essential to maintaining a civilized existence with a modicum, at least, of order, fairness, justice, balance, and human dignity. For such, together we pay, but why demand government to do what we can best do for ourselves? Why clamor for dependency, when we are a free, proud and independent people?

I say these things to you because you as professional foresters are among those on the front line of defense of a very precious way of life. Historically, the world's most extra-ordinary. In both subtle and not so subtle ways your good work in the interest of improving the human condition is under attack, clearly on the endangered species list.

Yes, sit down and reason together with whatever the opposition, but keep your powder dry. Be on the cautious side, alert and wary in analyzing suggested compromises to sound, science-based positions. Study every proposal or demand in depth. What is its probable long-term impact? Then ask a series of three simple questions, politely, of course:

A. Why do you think or suggest that? (The "Why" question about "What".)

(After the response, if necessary ask . . .)

B. So what?

Then ask the third question,

C. Could you please specify? Name three?

Since among our tormentors, and there are some if only a small percent, there is little truth and less scientific knowledge, the three-questions maneuver is calculated at least to give you a little breathing and thinking time. They could empty the field—and you don't need a lawyer to ask the three questions. If you have one who doesn't know enough to ask them, fire him or her.

For your good cause, advocate and promote. Be assured, Forestry is a good cause . . . research, management, and all else in your professional obligation. It is a fundamental enterprise for the betterment of the human condition.

Just now, far too much time and energy is being absorbed in having to react to sociopolitical pressures from the outside. Don't lose patience, or self-confidence or commitment to basic purpose. Take comfort in the refrain at the end of each stanza of "Deor's Lament", the oldest fragment of Anglo-Saxon verse we have today: "This, too, shall pass away."

Change is continuous and some time must be spent in coping with the present as well as understanding the past. The main thrust, however, must be toward the future. The true professional forester is thinking, projecting plans and concepts at least eighty years ahead. He is both strategist and tactician. Eighty years, that's two generations plus; three would be better, a full century. There is risk in this, but by the nature of their mission professional foresters are calculated risk-takers and not merely nit-pickers on today's bottom line.

If one should dream no more,
Would there any difference be For Those who do not dream—
Or even those who do?

If one might climb
That lone and awesome,
Rugged, rock-strewn hill
And reach the very top
To Search once more
The far horizon,
What difference would it make?

One never knows
Unless one tries.

Come on! Let's try."—Christmas 1987

What I really wanted to talk about tonight is long range, futuristic if you like—the Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska. In that splendid overview of regional forestry yesterday morning no one bothered to mention more than casually the vast timber lands of the North. Even the outstanding presentation by our Canadian colleague barely mentioned it, although perhaps three-fourths of the Circumpolar Boreal Forest of North America is Canada's. With that big beautiful Douglas Fir in the front yard, why bother with those scrawny black spruce and aspen weeds in a far corner of the backyard? In a sense such limited perception could be a form of hy-grading.

Almost all of the remainder of the Boreal Forest of North America stands along the great river systems of Interior Alaska, the Yukon, the Tanana, the Kuskokwim, and their scores of tributaries. There is a tiny bit elsewhere in the northern Great Lakes area and northern Maine and more in Alaska adjacent to the Interior—in the upper Susitna and Copper River Valleys. Yet ninety percent of the total Boreal Forest of the United States lies between the rugged, majestic Brooks Range to the North and the spectacular Alaska Range, featuring Mt. McKinley, and a dozen or so of somewhat lesser peaks, to the South. The great ranges guard and protect the valleys of the Interior, the great green oasis of Pleistocene times that was surrounded by walls of ice but never glaciated.

The Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska is yet to be recognized for what it is, a great National treasure as well as a prized possession of great value to the State of Alaska and its residents. In its extraordinary diversity of opportunity it offers exceptional economic as well as recreational potential. The Boreal Forest is much, much more than timber harvest. It is a way of life unmatched elsewhere in our land. It shares some of its attractive potential with other Northern regions of the Circumpolar world; especially the Yukon, Northern Alberta, Northern British Columbia and a portion of the Northwest Territories, yet it can lay claim to distinctive advantages of its own, such as strategic location on today's geo-political center stage.

It has been conjectured by some scientists of considerable credibility that extensive and intensive studies of the Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska could likely produce more basic data of future significance for the Nation's well-being than comparable efforts of all of our other National Forest regions combined. I do not boast. Amazingly enough, in fact an astounding reality—there is no National Forest anywhere in the vast Interior of Alaska. There is everything else: National Parks and monuments galore, wildlife refugees, sanctuaries, wild and scenic rivers, wilderness areas, and an assortment of non-descript land withdrawals too numerous to mention.

Interior Alaska has been victimized and exploited by special outside interests. There remains, however, at least twenty-two million acres of timber lands, a good bit of which has been identified as having very good immediate commercial potential. These millions of acres cry out for state-of-the-art Forestry management. There is no such thing in being. The Boreal Forest is so very different that modern practices successful elsewhere can seldom be transferred to it. A whole system of management must be devised, tailor-made for the Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska in all its micro-climatic complexity.

In Russian the term "Taiga" is used for the enormous USSR Northern Forest. Call it "Boreal" or call it "Taiga" yet remember—and this may startle you—remember that the tundra is, indeed, fragile, but the Taiga is tough. It is a survivor with a phenomenal resistance factor and an exceptional capacity to endure and rebound from extraordinary climatic extremes. If the Taiga were not tough, growing things such as trees, would not be there in the first place. Look at the geological story, the palenontological story, the biological story, the climatological story, the ecological history. Fascinating!

The Taiga, our beloved Boreal Forest, must never, never be abused, but it must also be used intelligently or it will degenerate over time, perhaps slowly self-destruct. The key acronymn for the Boreal Forest of the Interior is USE: Utilization, Stabilization, Enhancement. This adds a new dimension to the multiple-use concept and sustained yield principle. This is total utilization of the timberland for the ultimate improvement of the human condition. This is recreation, re-creation, harvesting of wild berries and mushrooms, beekeeping, the gathering of flowers, herbs, roots, bark, fungi—whatever, for herbal-based pharmaceuticals; this is game-ranching, wild life in natural setting, watershed management, range management, as well as surplus timber harvest.

And the primary thrust is to leave everything a little better than we found it. "A man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a Heaven for? (Browning)

The Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska may be the only place where the U.S. Forestry Service dare undertake a scenario that will require at least eighty years to stage fully.

A tiny beginning very much worthwhile has been made by the Institute of Northern Forestry operating from the Fairbanks Campus of the University of Alaska. America's premier center for research and advanced studies of the North. Yet the enterprise languishes in a prolonged infancy, meagerly and casually supported, seemingly as an afterthought—much as in the case of the USDA's oldtime curious arrangement known as the sub-unit on Arctic and Tropical Agriculture. I am old enough to remember those good old days of ignortion—benign neglect, if you prefer.

Were I Emperor of the Universe—at my age I dare not aspire to anything less—my first priority would be a gentle but firm directive to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture and his deputy head of the U.S. Forest Service: Establish the Taiga National Forest, or the Boreal National Forest, in the Interior of Alaska. Then create a long-term research and demonstration program of the best possible timberlands management practice on the total utilization and enhancement principles—tailor-made for the conditions found in the region and for its residents.

Incidentally, if you actively involve the residents of all ages in the planning and thinking, you will likely find a lot of volunteer adult and youth corps type services available for labor intensive activities such as forest training, site preparatiion, seed gathering, propagation and planting. This would provide, also, a splendid opportunity for education and training of youth that would create an understanding to offset future public misunderstanding hazards. It might help also in recruiting a few good men and women for professional and technical careers in the U.S. Forestry Service.

Establish a demonstration plot of at least 600 to 1,000 acres each year for eighty years. This is your field laboratory. Establish a tree improvement program from genetics to greenhouse to plant nursery to the micro-site for planting, testing and all of the associated research activities unfolding.

There is now a Tanana Valley State Forest of nearly two million acres. It has developed an operational plan but because of political entanglements and overlapping jurisdiction among a half dozen administrative agencies each with a separate and competing agenda, nothing at all is happening. Stalemate on the chess board. There is an urge to sweep off the pawns along with most of the top row of folk in the Seats of the Mighty and try to replace the lot with something called vision, leadership, statesmanship—This would certainly be an improvement over the Fraternal Order of Wealth Distributors now on the chess board of governance in Alaska.

Could a National Boreal Forest be created of present Federal withdrawals to match the size of the Tanana Valley State Forest?—So that the Eighty Year Research, Demonstration, Utilization, Enhancement project could get underway on a sound basis in full cooperation with the residents of the area, the State, and the Athabascan Native Corporation, Doyon, Ltd., that privately owns over eleven million acres of the Interior, much of it timberland? Athabascan leadership has stated a lively interest in the wild harvest of timberland resources other than lumber. "We are particularly interested in the possibilities of herbal based pharmaceuticals and natural-habitat game ranching." They also agree with University scientists that the present productivity of the Boreal Forest can be doubled in a much shorter time frame than previously anticipated.

Here is your challenge, your opportunity—your obligation and potential. Co-op! Look North. Think North. Come North and enjoy with me "One More Day of Autumn".

Should there be one more day of autumn,
Let me spend it in the hills,
The windblown hills of Loess,
The golden birch and aspen hills of home.

Let me scuff the sun-drenched leaves
Along the slopes
And climb the crest of Ullrhaven
Where the eagle nests.
Let me stoop once more.

To pluck the wind-red berries
From the sere and brittle
Reindeer moss;
Let me listen to the startled squirrel
Scold the willow grouse
There in graceful glide
Along the rock and brush-strewn slope.

Silence now. A cold crisp breeze.
Pure, clear, clean
As the endless ice-blue sky.
Out of the mauve-rimmed
Edge of twilight, a moving, shifting V,
The last wild geese of summer
South bound from tundra feeding grounds beyond the Yukon.

The twilight fades;
The leader's poignant call is fainter now.
Between, the ghosts of youth
Drift across the darkening sky.
Unfettered the spirit soars, the mind expands;
The universe is one and I am of it.
This is the perfect moment.
Shall God provide another like it?—Not From Stone
This is the Forest Boreal
This is home.
Come share its joy, its fulfillment with me.

—Wm. R. Wood.

JULY 12, 1989.

CHALLENGE OF THE BOREAL FOREST OF INTERIOR ALASKA

(A presentation made to the U.S. Regional Foresters and Directors meeting in Juneau, Alaska, 24-28 July 1988, at noontime on Thursday, 28 July 1988, at Centennial Hall.)

How Small the Place

How small the place
Where I grew up
That once was more than big,
A vast and endless
Spread of space.

Had I stayed put
In this lone place
Would I have shrunk
As much?

Perhaps I have,
For then I seemed to me
As big as big could be,
And growing,
Ever growing.

But now the far horizon
Looms so near at hand
It compacts me,
And I am small,
As small as small can be—
Or somewhat smaller.

—William Ransom Wood.

In trying to find my way among all of the intertwined Federal and State agencies that complicate forestry activities in Alaska, I find it helpful to be small, very small. The experience is similar to finding one's way in a huge bowl of spaghetti. Start up the trunk of a study but slippery stalk and you run into road blocks of jurisdiction. . . . National Parks, Bureau of Land Management, Wild and Scenic Rivers, Fish and Game, Wildlife Preserves, and maybe the National War Monuments Commission. You are looking for the Department of Agriculture but you keep running into the Interior Department and the newest kid in the spaghetti bowl, the Environmental Protection Agency. The latter seems to have persuaded the House side of Congress to rewrite the mission of the U.S. Forestry Service on the Tongass, Alaska's great rain forest. That would irritate me. But I am still buried in the bowl.

To see ourselves as others see us can be refreshing. It is also a bit disconcerting to be asked by an eminent stranger, "Oh, yes, you're from Alaska. Now is that a part of Canada? Or is it a separate nation? Or what? Land of perpetual ice and snow and horrible cold, I know, but you say there really are trees in Alaska? Hard to believe! Not in that far-off land up yonder!"

Of Australia we say "Down Under." Alaska as always "Up Yonder" usually "Away off Up Yonder."

Your concern in this Conference, (and Alaska is genuinely pleased and proud to have so distinguished a group meeting here) is likely to be the magnificent trees of the Tongass and the Chugach, Alaska's temperate rain forest. Not quite the tropical rain forest of New Guinea or the Philippines, or Indo-China where I have lived for two years and more, nor yet the tropical rain forests of Colombia, Panama, and Costa Rica where I have visited briefly. A rain forest at 54 to 60 degrees North latitude has always seemed an anomaly to me, at least an unexpected natural phenomenon.

What I want to talk with you about is the Boreal Forest, the tiaga of Interior Alaska. That's not on your chart of direct responsibility, as it clearly should be, except for research—the advancement of knowledge.

Here may I make two suggestions. First, the U.S. Forestry Service is not complete without a Boreal Forest holding. You once tried for five units totalling about sixteen million acres, but that was not included in the Native Land Claims Settlement. Why not try again? The time may be just right. Be agressive here. Get an assignment of a million acres, or two or three or four, from Bureau of Land Management or other Federal holdings in the vast Interior of Alaska.

The thrust could be useful at the bargaining table when ANWR is being discussed, for instance. About 23 million acres of Interior Alaska have been designated as timberlands. That is about the same size as the Tongass and Chugach . . . and likely to be even more significant in the Twenty-first Century and beyond.

The second suggestion is a modest proposal to establish a Cooperative Boreal Forestration Demonstration in the taiga of the Tanana Valley. Let's say 5,000 to 6,000 acres, 8 to 10 sections or about 2,000 to 2,500 hectares, to be planted for each of the next eighty years. That I understand from University scientists is the attainable life cycle for the white spruce. Just now it is about 120 years.

The entire 400,000 to 500,000 acres could be within the Tanana Valley State Forest lands totalling some 1.8 million acres. However, for a true partnership of government, university, and private sector to succeed, some two-fifths to one-half the planting should be on private holdings, especially on lands held by interested native corporations such as Doyon, Ltd. and the village corporations of the Interior.

An expansion of the tree improvement program and the tree orchard program would need to be accomplished as soon as possible. "Enhancement of the habitat" may be a key to use.

For the actual planting I would suggest resident teenage youth during the months of June, July, and August. Accompanying the work assignments would be an education/technical training program on forestry management and utilization. Quite worthwhile on its own merits. This could be the selling point attractive to both the Legislature and the Congress. There are votes in it.

A cadre of professional and technical personnel experienced in Boreal Forest Research and Management will need to be sustained generation after generation. For the long-term proposal to succeed, this is the most important element of all.

With a little one-on-one preliminary discussion with Federal, State, University, and Private Sector persons interested in the potential of the Boreal Forest, I believe a working outline for this long-term developmental task could be assembled rather promptly:

The Boreal Forest, the entire circumpolar Boreal Forest can no longer be left on the back burner, for the circumpolar North today is vitally important to the safety and well-being of the Free World.

The Arctic Basin, not the Mediterranean, not the Atlantic, not the Pacific—it is the Arctic Basin that is the center of geo-political concern among the seats of the mighty.

Once those ultra-sophisticated nuclear-powered and nuclear-armed submarines began prowling beneath the ice-cap of the Arctic Ocean with all of North Asia, North Europe, and North America within easy range, the need to know all that can be learned about the North became an urgent necessity.

As a player on the international chess board with at least pawn status, the challenge of the Alaska tiaga may be the greatest challenge presently before the U.S. Forestry Service. It is likely to be found the most difficult, complex, and complicated as well. Send your best to Interior Alaska. There is all the Boreal Forest that the United States has. What do we really know about it? How can it be brought into maximum usefulness? Why bother?

Well, there is the matter of creeping geological and geophysical change. There is the matter of "acid rain", the "black hole in the polar ozone", the "greenhouse effect." (Is the dropping of the watertable and the great drought of 1988 in the Mid-West, long the major bread basket of the world, a shot across the bow just to get our attention?)

And always, day and night, the silent, stealthy submarines nuclear-armed, nuclear-powered, playing tag with each other under the Polar seas.

We had better learn fast all we can discover about the North and whatever is there—land, sea, space, and people—and how best to use it for mankind. Just protecting something or everything as it is—simply is not enough—not enough for the continued existence of mankind on the planet Earth.

There is a bit of philosophy referred to in the literature as "The Theory of Idle Resources." In simplest terms this says "Use it or lose it . . . but never abuse it." This was first said, I recall, of our workforce, especially youth, but it has meaning for all natural resources that are renewable. Underutilization accelerates deterioration.

Forests can self-destruct as well as self-renew—self-renew even better with the help of knowledgeable, committed people. When forests destroy themselves, the food base for wildlife is also lost. It takes a great fire, flood or other natural force to start the rejuvenation cycle again. Good forest management techniques in utilization of forest lands is a regenerator better than wildfire.

Many do not understand, or appear not to understand, the basic principle involved here—the necessity of utilization. Many seem naive enough or ignorant enough or indifferent enough to the well-being of others to believe that the Boreal Forest can be preserved just as it is forever. Even the slightest acquaintance with geological history or biological history or climatilogical history should clear up this nonsense.

The U.S. Forest Service understands. Its programs are based realistically in the concept of multiple use. Perhaps it should venture a step beyond toward full use. This embraces the idea of enhancement. Enhance the habitat so that it can produce more of better quality of what it produces naturally. Incidentally, this is the basis of modern game ranching.

One of the multiple uses of the Boreal Forest is the particular potential for the sport-minded as well as for subsistence users. In the "Ballad of Reading Gaol" Oscar Wilde lamented, "and each man kills the thing he loves . . .", I am reminded that the drive of the zealots, the extreme preservation-minded among us is the drive to destroy what they profess to love. Forgive them, Almighty God, they know not what they do!

And they must be countered in every way possible—for their appeal through print and media, especially the media, is incessant, and to the many not disinclined to think beyond the surfaces glitter, the appeal is very, very persuasive. Their growth in numbers in a time of poll-taking that substitutes for deliberation and thoughtful debate in government circles is political dynamite.

To try to defuse some of this with scientific fact, reason, and common sense is just about the number one assignment for all of us, including the U.S. Forestry Service. Whatever you are spending on public information for the people is far too little. Whatever you are doing isn't aggressive enough. It is not just a matter of budget. Give up about two-thirds of the time currently lavished on staff meetings and use that time to let the people know that utilization is a much better word for their security and survival than preservation. Go to their meetings: church, lodge, community service, civic—whatever.

Stand up and remind them that there is no future in distribution of existing wealth. There simply isn't enough to go around to keep everyone in the style he/she would like to become accustomed. Remind them that only through the creation of new wealth has it ever been possible to improve the standard of living of the many:

Remind them that since man emerged in geological time all new wealth has come from just two basic sources: mining (whatever does not renew itself) and agriculture, including forestry, fishing—whatever can be harvested that does renew itself. Man through knowledge and applied technology adds value and enlarges usefulness but new wealth is based on agriculture and mining.

In Alaska as elsewhere it is very difficult to get people to understand this. Their checks come directly from government or indirectly from some industrial enterprise for which they provide a service. Few are in the producing game, or the harvesting game, or even in processing of what has been harvested from growing things or extracted from the earth, sea, or, space. They elect public officials who may understand a bit of the basics but find few votes in acting upon such knowledge.

In Alaska the Project is everything. There has to be an immediate pay-off, a bottom line today—jobs, money to spend right now. The long-range is largely ignored. It lacks appeal. There are no votes in it. So, we have projects. No program, no long-term plan. No policy. Only lawmakers can set State policy under the State Constitution, yet less than five percent of time in session is spent considering policy—the guidelines to constructive action for the common good. The fun and games is distributing the wealth that is. Project by project. No policy, no program, just project.

As one young "lawmaker" told me, "When we appropriate the millions for my project, we will have set State policy on this sort of thing." Impossible!

Decision in our State is made on where and how, often even on who and when rather than upon the logical sequence of what and why.

As long as fur was the major attraction, everything else was forgotten. Then it was gold, then salmon, and now, oil. We boom and bust. Timber has been a tool all along but full utilization of timberlands for the long-term has been largely overlooked—especially the Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska. Historically for thousands of years it has provided subsistence for a very hardy people, the Athabascans. It still does. It has a growing recreational use as well. Both hardwoods and softwoods have been considered marginal for commercial use. We import each year from Canada and elsewhere eighty percent of the lumber and timber products we use.

But a strong Tree Improvement Program could double the potential production by the Mid-Twenty-First Century. Federal, State, University, and Private Sector forestry people have the knowledge and special skills to do this working together as partners—if other agencies so free with answers to questions they do not understand would let the good guys get on the with job rather than maneuvering politically to rewrite their mission.

Consider the Boreal Forest as a whole, not just a collection of trees. The wild harvest other than logging is now underway by Native Corporations—spruce cones, wild berries, mushrooms, fungi, herbs, plants, roots, bark—whatever has value as food, exotic decoration, herbal medicine. The Boreal harvest for a pharmaceutical industry is getting renewed attention. Think of the New England farm with its precious wood lot that made a year around operation possible.

Game ranching, where the thrust is to enhance the habitat so that it will produce more and better quality of what it supports naturally, seems to fit in nicely with modern forestry management techniques and emphasis. Subsistence users have a common interest here with the recreational hunters and fishers—and the tourist photographers.

There is much, much more. Recreation is compatible with the concept of full utilization of Interior Alaska timberlands. Yet it seems that too many of our sports-minded hunters, fishers, boat enthusiasts, skiers, and snowmobilers accept this only for neighbors-over-yonder, never where the area around their own cabin or along the trail or stream they use is involved.

A lot of sitting down and reasoning together will have to take place before full utilization of the Boreal Forest of Interior Alaska can come into being. There can be sensible trade-offs and compromises. It has to happen or there will be no reason for our grandchildren to live in Alaska, or perhaps anywhere else, should the rabid extremist preservation program of self-destruction prevail. The Good Earth won't have much place for people—insects and worms, possibly, but not humans.

There is so much to do in the North. Oh, to be twenty-one instead of eighty-one as I am! For I would leave a legacy, a legacy of dreams.

A LEGACY OF DREAMS

I would leave a legacy of dreams
To bridge the generation gap,
Igniting fires within the mind
Of youth and old alike
Until no Alpha nor Omega shows,
Only the eternal flaming spirit
To light the path of change.

I would leave a legacy of dreams
That here where tundra and tiaga merge
May breed the best,
A stalwart, sturdy race of many roots
Free and fresh and keen
As the great North Wind,
Creating crystal magic
From the natural things at hand.

I would leave a legacy of dreams,
Sculpture a realm of courtesy and respect,
Of joy in doing,
Of pride in workmanship,
Where each might show
And understand compassion.

I would leave a legacy of dreams
That each might know his own,

Yet share and share in peace and amity,
Shunning ever the base, the Godless urge
To do another in.

I would leave a legacy of dreams
For all to seek beyond
The bottom line of NOW
To where the greener grasses grow
So sprightly for tomorrow.

I would leave a legacy of dreams . . .

—William Ransom Wood.●

ILLINOIS IS HOME TO TOP DEBATERS

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, the U.S. Senate is regarded as the world's greatest deliberative body. It should be no surprise that many of our colleagues gathered valuable experience for their work here in debate competition at the high school or college levels.

Aristotle called debate the science of strategic thinking. Others have called it an art form. The art and the science of debate have had great influence in steering the course of Western culture since before the birth of Christ. From the days of the Theban statesman Epaminondas in 400 B.C., to Flauvius Honorius, the honorable Roman Emperor of the West in the early 5th century, to the days of the 16th century English philosopher Thomas Hobbes, compelling debate has influenced public policy.

Debate has led to some of the benchmarks of our own history: The Emancipation Proclamation, the Lincoln-Douglas debates, congressional discussions on our entry into the League of Nations, the McCarthy hearings, our involvement in Vietnam, Watergate—the list goes on and on.

And in American higher education, there may not be a more valuable tool in sharpening the minds of young people than debate competition.

In Illinois, we are proud that the Nation's coaches and competitors consider the land of Lincoln as the Nation's mecca for outstanding debate competition. More Illinois high schools have competitive debate programs than in any other State in the Union. At the college level, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale was the first college east of the Mississippi River ever to win the Cross Examination Debate Association national championship. SIU–C, has earned its reputation as a perennial national power on the debate circuit. Other traditional powers in national debate competition include Northwestern University, Wheaton College, Loyola University, and many other fine institutions. Many champion debaters have gone on to outstanding careers in public service, and I am pleased to have a former debate champion, Christopher Ryan, on my staff.

A recent article by the Associated Press showcases one of our State's forensic giants, Illinois State University in Normal.

Mr. President, I ask that the text of this article as it appeared in the Bloomington Pantagraph be printed in full in the RECORD.

The article follows:

LOVE OF LEARNING AND COMMUNICATING INSPIRES TOUGH DEBATERS AT ISU ILLINOIS STYLE

(By Susan Marquardt)

BLOOMINGTON, IL.—Everyone in the crowd of more than 10,000 was standing. Over the sea of red, a roar filled Redbird Arena and backed the Illinois State University basketball team to a conference championship, qualifying it for the NCAA national tournament.

Meanwhile, across campus, about 15 students celebrated a very quiet triumph for ISU's Forensics Union. It had qualifyed for the American Forensics Association's National Debate Tournament and National Individual Tournament.

In contrast to the basketball team, the debaters had captured their victory in front of a meager audience that fell far short of filling the lecture rooms where competition was held.

"We can't fill the arena with people to watch a debate. Even with the final round, we couldn't sell commercial time, and it would be hard to find sponsors," said Robert Chandler, ISU's forensics director.

"But if you gave me a towel, I would chew it at some of these tournaments," Chandler said, contending the competition and rewards the forensics team experiences rival those of any athletic club and at a fraction of the cost.

With an operating budget of about $20,000, mostly from student fees, the ISU forensics union has gunned down some big names since it inception in 1857.

"ISU is consistently ranked as a top 25 program in overall comparison with the 820 colleges and universities in the United States which maintain active competitive forensics programs," Chandler said.

Last fall, the ISU debate team was ranked sixth in the nation.

In early April, at the National Debate Tournament, its top team just missed qualifying for the final elimination round. About a week later, at the National Individual Tournament, three competitors qualified for the finals, and the group as a whole placed seventh out of 123 universities, Chandler said.

Those showings came about a month after ISU's forensics union had captured its fourth consecutive championship at an annual national tournament sponsored by Delta Sigma Rho-Tau Kappa, the Phi Beta Kappa of the college debating world.

While numerous trophies hang on the walls in Stevenson Hall, it is the learning and not the winning that drives the team, said Chandler, who emphasizes that debate teaches students about critical thinking, argumentation, organization, reasoning, use of evidence and data and policy analysis.

"I would hope that we never measure the contributions of an activity like forensics only in terms of how many trophies an individual accumulates on his shelves," Chandler said. "We think this implies misguided priorities. Winning really isn't everything."

For that reason, the team welcomes any undergraduate student in good academic standing who wants to join, regardless of academic major or previous experience. Members include high school standouts recruited and offered partial scholarships to join, as well as students with no speech experience but an interest in trying the activity.

All students are required to attend weekly meetings and work one-on-one with coaches to polish their delivery. Team members compete among themselves for the privilege of traveling to competitions.

Elighie Wilson, who coaches the individual events team, said. "The secret here is that we attract some of the best coaching staff members, faculty and graduate assistants. We attract students who enjoy the activity. It's a family."

Not everyone is pushed to be an outstanding competitor.

"One of the things that you try to do is develop every student to the best of his or her ability. Every student is different and requires something different of me as a coach," Wilson said, explaining that he first learns what a student's goal is and then tries to help the student reach that goal.

"I just want each student to do his or her best," he said. "I always tell students to share the gift. Our motto is to have fun and share the gift of communication."●

OPERATION TOP CAT

●Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I have periodically inserted statements into the RECORD regarding America's narcotics crises. Today, I'd like to inform my colleagues of Operation Top Cat.

It is no secret that Kentucky's borders have been invaded by crack and cocaine dealers. While newspapers regularly report of the arrest of local street dealers, it is not very often that drug kingpins—top cats—are apprehended. Mr. President, Operation Top Cat not only has a happy ending, but also an important message for all my colleagues.

Earlier this month in Louisville, 31 people were indicted by a Federal grand jury for narcotics trafficking. It is estimated that every 2 or 4 weeks this drug ring brought into the Louisville area as much as 20 kilograms of cocaine, which, Mr. President, has a street value in excess of $2.4 million. No price tag can be placed on the human costs associated with cocaine use and abuse: pain, suffering, and death.

Mr. President, the cocaine trail of this drug ring led to its leader, Carlos Garcia of Miami, FL. I am pleased to inform my colleagues that on April 20, Carlos Garcia was arrested by Florida law enforcement officers. To date, all but 3 of the 31 indicted have been apprehended. Operation Top Cat was a success, and all involved in its execution should be commended for a job well done.

My colleagues should take note, Mr. President, of the deadly cocaine's source. When I say that the borders of Kentucky were invaded, I mean just that—the shipments originated and were apparently directed from Florida. It is common knowledge that the America's southern coastline is a favorite point of entry for Central and South American drug smugglers. By way of private aircraft and boats, thousands of kilograms of cocaine enter our country.

I would like to leave my colleagues with this one thought, Mr. President. It does not matter if your State is not on America's coastline—like moths attracted to a campfire, the cocaine will find its way across your borders. I fully intend to continue to examine ways to stop the flow of drugs into Kentucky; to stop the flow of drugs into America. Our country's health should be the concern of all the United States.●

FORMER MEMBER OF CONGRESS D.R. MATTHEWS ENDORSES CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITATION

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, Congress currently enjoys very low public approval. Nothing today is more a target for ridicule and bashing than Congress. Simply, people are unhappy with Congress and are growing increasingly frustrated with a seeming inability to change a bad situation.

From a constituent's standpoint, we are too busy awarding ourselves pay raises, bailing out of scandals and luxuriously traveling abroad to deal with staggering yet persistent national problems like a $3 trillion deficit that carries annual costs alone of $300 billion. Even the pork that Members send home by the carload is beginning to spoil as the public realizes that wasteful spending ends up costing them in the long run, either through greater taxation, or increased Federal deficits.

Consequently it is no surprise that 70 percent of the American people want a term limitation. To those of us who maintain that we have dignity and deserve respect, this overwhelming public mandate is a challenge: we must turn talk into action. I am pleased to say that 13 Senators have met that challenge by cosponsoring Senate Joint Resolution 235, a proposed constitutional amendment to limit terms. Along with Senator DECONCINI and I, Senators PRESSLER, DURENBERGER, GARN, EXON, WALLOP, KASSEBAUM, SYMMS, KOHL, DASCHLE, BURNS, and THURMOND, have heeded public demand.

Mr. President, few Members want to leave Congress. It's a great job. However, if we are to maintain that we are the voice of our constituencies, then we must act immediately on the issue of term limitation.

I ask that a letter I have recently received from D.R. (Billy) Matthews, endorsing term limitation, be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks. Mr. Matthews of Florida served in the House from 1953 to 1966.

The letter follows:

Gainesville, FL, March 5, 1990.

Senator GORDON J. HUMPHREY,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HUMPHREY: Thank you for your letter of February 20, asking me to endorse S.J. Resolution 235, proposing a constitutional amendment to the constitution limiting Congressional terms.

I am delighted to endorse this resolution, and you may cite my name as a former member of Congress supporting this resolution.

Sincerely,

D.R. (BILLY) MATTHEWS,
Member, U.S. House of Representatives, FL, 1953-66.●

KATHY FRENCH'S RETIREMENT FROM PRESCHOOL EDUCATION

● Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I feel honored, in my position as Senator, to meet leaders of nations, ambassadors, and many other distinguished people. However, just as important to me, are the people I meet who are not so famous but without whom our lives and communities would not be the same. I would like to share with you the life and contributions of one such unsung heroine. Her name is Kathy French and she is from my home State of Iowa.

I recently received a letter from Kathy's daughter, Maribeth Pollard. In her letter, Maribeth shared with me the impressive history of Kathy's commitment and contribution to the education of preschool children of Iowa. I was most impressed, however, by Kathy's reflection of the proverb of giving to others what has been given to you. Kathy, who obtained her G.E.D. only after both her daughters were in college, has given to two generations of Iowa's preschool children the preparations necessary for a lifetime of education.

I would like to share with you and the rest of my colleagues an excerpt from the letter written by Kathy's daughter. I ask the excerpt be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

The excerpt follows:

Kathy French opened Kathy's Nursery School in Maxwell, Iowa in the fall of 1971. She and her husband, Larry (an auto mechanic and lay minister) remodeled an old abandoned house in Maxwell, turning it into a facility that has consistently received exceptional ratings on state inspections. For several years, during the economic crisis in Iowa, Kathy operated the school at a loss in order to continue to provide preschool education for children in the small farming community where no public programs were available. Despite severe economic hardship, Kathy has never received one cent of financial aid from any governmental agency.

Among the 800+ children who have benefited from excellent preschool education were several with severe physical and mental handicaps. Kathy has received state recognition for her work with autistic, deaf and otherwise disadvantaged children. She has served on the state Advisory Board of Day Care and Early Childhood Education and as a consultant for both private and public preschools and day care centers. Quietly arranging for scholarships from small companies and individuals, and, at least, allowing children to attend for free, Kathy has provided high quality education for more than fifty children whose families could not afford to send them to preschool.

Kathy completed high school by obtaining her G.E.D. after both of her daughters were in college. She then worked toward her college degree in early childhood education by attending night classes while still operating the preschool during the day, five days a week. Severe injuries suffered when she was hit by a car prevented her from completing her degree, but she has maintained state certification and has surpassed all of the educational requirements for certification by the state of Iowa. Despite severe arthritis, which would have totally disabled a less courageous person, Kathy has continued to work full time, including summer sessions. Retiring now at age 61, she is a prime example of a woman who has "pulled herself up by her own bootstraps" in order to provide quality service to others.

Having developed a cohesive working relationship with the local and regional public school personnel, Kathy has devoted innumerable hours to consulting with school authorities, kindergarten teachers and families on behalf of children with difficulties and to ensure that her students are adequately prepared for enrollment in the Collins-Maxwell public school system and other schools in the area.

Kathy has trained numerous teaching assistants, always helping them to obtain the continuing education required to maintain state certification. These assistants have typically been lower-income women with limited education. In addition, Kathy has provided tutorial programs, in conjunction with the local high school, to enable high school students to gain experience in early childhood education and to recruit students for careers in education.

With innovative classroom techniques and outstanding field experiences, Kathy has provided the best of preschool education at minimal cost to working-class rural families. Beloved by all of her students, who maintain contact with her throughout their school career, Kathy has now begun to teach her "second generation," children of earlier students who still fondly recall the joy of learning they gained from their preschool days in Kathy's Nursery School.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Now, after almost 20 years of operating her own preschool, Kathy's Nursery School, Kathy is retiring. This Sunday, May 6, 1990, the community of Maxwell, IA, will hold a reception to honor Kathy for her years of dedicated service. I would also like to take the opportunity, on this special occasion, to recognize Kathy's contribution to the State of Iowa and to offer my sincere gratitude for her many years of diligent service. I only hope, Mr. President, that Kathy's life will stand as an example to all of us of the commitment to education necessary for a successful America.●

VICE PRESIDENT QUAYLE ADDRESSES THE WASHINGTON INSTITUTE ON NEAR EAST POLICY ON CHANGING SUPERPOWER RELATIONS AND THE MIDDLE EAST

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, yesterday the Vice President addressed the closing session of the annual Soref Symposium of the Washington Institute on Near East Policy, held in Washington, DC. The symposium focused on the effect of changing superpower relations on the Middle East and featured remarks by American, Arab, Israeli, and Soviet experts, including, notably, an opening address by former U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick.

The Vice President, who was introduced by Max Fisher of the institute's executive board, spelled out actions that the United States must take as we move from a bipolar to a multipolar context in the Middle East: we must continue to pursue the peace process, curb the spread of weapons of mass destruction (including the proliferation of chemical weapons), and find ways to defend ourselves and our allies against missile attacks. He called on Israel to give serious consideration to continuing its effort to develop defensive systems such as the Arrow project, which is part of the SDI program.

Mr. President, I commend the institute, its president, Barbi Weinberg and its executive director, Martin Indyk, for organizing a stimulating conference, and I ask that the program of the symposium, and the Vice President's address, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The material follows:

[The Washington Institute for Near East Policy]

The Soref Symposium

THE MIDDLE EAST IN AN ERA OF CHANGING SUPERPOWER RELATIONS

(April 29-30, 1990, Sheraton-Carlton Hotel, Washington, DC)

PROGRAM

Sunday, April 29, 1990

Fifth Anniversary Board of Trustees Dinner, Crystal Room

Opening Remarks by Barbi Weinberg, President, The Washington Institute.

Address by Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, "The Middle East in an Era of Changing Superpower Relations."

Monday, April 30, 1990

Session 1: The Superpowers & Regional Conflicts in the Post-Cold War Era

Chair, Mike Stein, Vice President, The Washington Institute.

Richard Haass, Special Assistant to the President & Senior Director for Near East and South Asian Affairs, NSC.

Luncheon Session

Chair, David Steiner, Vice President, The Washington Institute.

Luncheon Address, Congressman Les Aspin, D-Wisconsin, Chairman, House Armed Services Committee.

Concluding Session

Chair, Max Fisher, Executive Committee, The Washington Institute.

Keynote Address, Vice President Dan Quayle, Vice President of the United States.

Session II: The Superpowers and the Middle East

Chair, Fred Lafer, Executive Committee, The Washington Institute.

Vitaly Naumkin, Deputy Director, Institute of Oriental Studies, USSR Academy of Sciences, "Soviet New Thinking and the Middle East."

Michael Mandelbaum, Director of East-West Studies, The Council on Foreign Relations, "Reconceptualizing the U.S. Approach to the Middle East."

Session III: The Impact on Regional Actors of Changes in the Superpower Environment

Chair, Bernard S. White, Executive Committee, The Washington Institute.

Reuven Merhav, Director-General, Israeli Foreign Ministry, "The End of the Cold War: The Impact on Israel."

Ambassador Salah Bassiouny, Director, National Center for Middle East Studies, Egypt, "The End of the Cold War: The Impact on Egypt and the Arab World."

Zalmay Khalilzad, Senior Reseacher, The Rand Corporation, "The End of the Cold War: The Impact on the Gulf."

REMARKS OF VICE PRESIDENT QUAYLE

I am delighted to have this opportunity to address your symposium.

One of the reasons why the Washington Institute for Near East Policy is so widely respected is because it brings together some of the finest minds and strategic thinkers in our nation and in the world. These Visiting Fellows use their time at the Washington Institute to make important contributions to our understanding of the Middle East. Others—perhaps less fortunate—wind up in the State Department, helping to formulate U.S. policy.

In any case, the Washington Institute deserves our gratitude for providing such a congenial atmosphere in which important issues can be examined and discussed.

The topic you have chosen to focus on today—the effects of changing superpower relations on the Middle East—is especially timely and provocative. Timely because superpower relations clearly are changing; and provocative because the consequences of those changes are far from self-evident.

On the one hand, the lessening of tensions between the superpowers—and especially the declining Soviet role in the Third World—can contribute to peace and stability. But on the other hand, the greater independence of Third World countries from superpower rivalries and superpower control can increase tensions and dangers.

This independence—combined with the growing technological sophistication of many Third World nations—poses new threats to our friends and ourselves. In particular, the proliferation of non-conventional weapons—including chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons—could well make several regions of the world increasingly unstable and dangerous.

According to our published estimates, we believe that by the year 2000, at least fifteen developing countries will be producing their own ballistic missiles. Many of these countries are in the Middle East. Although some of the missiles under development are crude and inaccurate, many have capabilities well beyond battle-field range and can strike in a matter of minutes.

Until recently, the probability that ballistic missiles might carry nuclear weapons was the principal focus of U.S. concern. But the recent war between Iran and Iraq suggests that a country with both ballistic missiles and chemical warfare capability might combine the two with devastating effect on civilians.

By breaching the ban against the use of chemical weapons—a ban that has been in existence since the Geneva Protocol of 1925—Iraq, and subsequently Iran, have helped bring the issue of chemical weapons proliferation to the forefront of the U.S. Middle East agenda.

As everyone here knows, concerns about the proliferation of chemical weapons became especially acute earlier this month.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq, boasting that he had acquired advanced chemical weapons, threatened Israel directly. "We will make the fire eat up half of Israel," he warned, "if it tries to do anything against Iraq." Iraq has also moved launchers for its SCUD-B missiles to western Iraq, closer to Israel's borders.

I believe future historians will see Saddam's "reckless words and actions"—as the Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs, John Kelly, recently characterized them—as the mark of a new strategic era in the Middle East.

In the past, the Arab-Israeli conflict took place within a bipolar strategic context—a context in which the Soviet Union provided the Arab states with many of the weapons with which they attacked Israel, while the United States provided Israel with most of the advanced weapons it needed to defend itself. While this bipolar context sometimes exacerbated regional tensions—as in 1967—it also provided a certain degree of stability, predictability and rationality to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Today, by contrast, we seem to be moving from a bipolar to multipolar context—a context in which both Israel and some Arab states, such as Iraq, Syria, and Libya, are capable of producing weapons of mass destruction on their own. Therefore, even if Soviet "new thinking" results in new, more responsible behavior, I am afraid the Middle East could well become a much more dangerous place over the next few years.

The acquisition by certain Middle Eastern countries of unconventional weapons, combined with advanced delivery capability, could well change the strategic environment in the region for the worse.

What should we do to cope with these new dangers?

I believe several steps are called for.

First, we must continue to pursue the Arab-Israeli peace process. The United States has repeatedly stated that the objective of the peace process is a comprehensive settlement achieved through negotiations, and based on U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

In our view, these negotiations must involve territory for peace, security and recognition for Israel and all states of the region, and Palestinian political rights.

At the same time, President Saddam's threats remind us that, however, important the Palestinian dimension may be to a resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the conflict between Israel and the Arab states is at least equally important, and must also be addressed.

Moreover, we cannot simply assume that progress on the Palestinian issue automatically leads to progress on the Arab-Israeli issue.

That is why the Bush Administration believes it is so important that key Arab states reach out to Israel and provide the kind of supportive environment so necessary to a viable Israeli-Palestinian dialogue. I might add that the repeal by the United Nations of the Infamous Zionism-is-Racism resolution would also be very helpful in fostering that kind of supportive environment.

Second, I believe that we must redouble our efforts to curb the widening trend to missile and unconventional weapon proliferation in the Middle East.

Our own leadership in the Eight-Nation Missile Technology Control Regime is crucial. Eastablished in April, 1987, the MTCR was designed to limit transfers of technology and equipment that could make a contribution to nuclear-capable missiles.

The Soviet Union has stated that it will observe the MTCR guidelines. China has not accepted the guidelines, but has undertaken to act responsibly in the missile area and not to export medium-range missiles to the Middle East. I urge both the Soviet Union and China, in the strongest possible terms, to exercise restraint in this area.

We will also work to ensure that our allies have responsible export control practices, with tough laws that are enforced rigorously.

Third, we will intensify our own efforts to halt the proliferation of chemical weapons to the Middle East and elsewhere.

One part of this effort entails working out a bilateral agreement on chemical weapons with the Soviet Union. Such an agreement would, among other things, require the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce their chemical weapons stocks to equal low levels.

A second part of this effort has focused on interdiction: working within the 20 nation Australia Group, the U.S. has sought to stop the flow the so-called chemical "precursors" that could contribute to chemical weapons programs of nations that appear intent on acquiring these weapons.

Finally, we believe that the best long-term solution to the problem of use or threat of chemical weapons, and the dangerous proliferation of these weapons, is the achivement at the earliest possible date of a comprehensive, effectively verifiable and truly global ban on all chemical weapons.

But now that some nations are on the way to acquiring a substantial chemical weapons arsenal, and an effective delivery system, we have to look beyond interdiction.

This brings me to my fourth—and final—point: We need to focus not just on interdiction; we need to focus on deterrence and defense against the use of chemical or nuclear weapons by Third World Countries.

Deterring nations that possess chemical weapons means convincing them that the international opprobrium against possessing and brandishing these weapons outweighs any potential benefits.

Unfortunately, the world's record in condemning Iraq's threat to use chemical weapons is not very encouraging.

The United States reacted to President Saddam Hussein's recent threats in the most forthright and unambiguous way: We denounced the threats as "inflammatory, irresponsible and outrageous."

But where was the rest of the world?

Where was the international community, working through its international organizations?

It's time for the international community—led by both superpowers—to take an unequivocal stand against the acquisition and use of chemical weaponry.

Let me be perfectly clear about this: Until the world community is much more outspoken in condemning chemical warfare activities, the prospects for deterring Iraq, and other nations, are dim.

We also need to work more aggressively to defend ourselves and our allies against missile attacks. As I have already said, our efforts to impede the flow of ballistic missile technologies to countries that currently lack such capability is crucial and must continue.

But beyond these "supply side" controls, which are imperfect at best, active strategic defenses are clearly needed to diminish the incentives for acquiring offensive missiles, and thereby deter acquisition on the demand side as well.

We learned this lesson ourselves when our commitment to the development of strategic defenses added a whole new set of negotiating incentives for the Soviet Union during previously stalled talks in Geneva on offensive weapons reductions.

Indeed, we are now hearing new voices in the Soviet media calling for a truly cooperative transition to greater reliance on defense for deterrence. This is precisely what we have been proposing at the Defense and Space Talks in Geneva for years.

If the Soviet leadership hears and heeds these voices of reason, we will see still more movement toward reductions in the offensive arsenals on which we and the Soviets have traditionally relied for deterrence.

Most surprisingly of all, perhaps, we are beginning to hear some new sentiments from long time critics of strategic defense in our own country as well—in response to the threat of missile attacks by Third World nations on the U.S. and its allies. And I predict that you will hear more appreciation of the case for defense against missiles, both at home and abroad, as the ballistic missile threat grows, and as our means to deal with it defensively mature.

This is why is is so important for Congress to fund our strategic defense program at the level the President has requested. And that is also why it is so important for friends like Israel to renew their commitment to defense.

These are not new issues we are discussing. The ballistic missile problem in the Middle East has been a developing trend for a decade.

Indeed, I sponsored legislation four years ago designed to share the workload and the benefits of advanced strategic defenses with our allies—whose exposure to the menacing spread of missiles is far more immediate than our own. I was impressed then, as I am now, with how quickly Israel seized this opportunity.

Israel's Arrow program is a direct product of these policies. Its first phase of technology demonstration, now entering the actual experimentation stage, has proceeded at modest cost and well ahead of schedule.

But as the first phase nears completion, Israeli leaders are faced with a key decision. Should they commit themselves, with our continuing assistance, to the determined pursuit of strategic defense technology? Or should they leave the Arrow program on a more relaxed pace and focus their investment primarily on retaliatory deterrence and passive means of protecting their citizens?

This is an important decision facing the Israeli leadership. You all know my strong bias. I believe strategic defense should be a big part of the deterrence equation for both of us, and I urge the Israelis to integrate such thinking into their plans and doctrines for the near future.

The President and I will do all in our power to help allies like Israel develop the capability to defend themselves against nonconventional as well as conventional weapons.

Pursuing the peace process, strengthening existing non-proliferation regimes, negotiating an effective chemical weapons ban, stemming the dangers of proliferation, and deterring and defending against non-conventional weapons: these are some of the measures that must be taken now.

Of course, even if all these steps are taken, it may prove impossible to put the genie of non-conventional warfare back into the bottle. On the other hand, the great lesson of the revolutionary year of 1989 is that dramatic changes in international affairs are possible.

I believe our decision to develop SDI helped lay the groundwork for these positive changes in East-West relations. I hope a similar pattern can emerge in the Middle East.

One thing is clear: The time to act is now. Thank you.●

THE ANNUAL TERRORISM REPORT

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of my colleagues to the State Department's annual report, "Patterns of Global Terrorism," which was submitted to the Congress yesterday. This report is prepared by the Office of the Coordinator for Counter-Terrorism pursuant to Public Law 100-204.

The publication reports the good news that there was a steep decline of 38 percent—from 856 in calendar year 1988 to 528 in 1989—in the number of terrorist acts committed worldwide, and also that the number of people killed or wounded by terrorists fell significantly. Deaths from terrorism fell from 638 to 390; the number of people wounded fell from 1,125 to 397.

Credit for the decline in terrorism may be distributed widely, but certainly the leadership of the current and past American administrations must be given quite a bit of that credit. Presidents Reagan and Bush have worked unstintingly to combat terrorism both through direct action—such as our strike against the Libyans—and through diplomatic efforts.

The publication warns, however, that "terrorists retain the potential for resuming a greater level of violence, particularly against the United States." We may expect, for example, violence in the Philippines, in Panama, in the Middle East, and in Europe.

Mr. President, the publication I have referred to is prepared so as to allow a Senator considering policy toward a particular foreign country to look up that country and easily locate information on its policy toward terrorism and the effects of terrorism on the country in question. With that information we may also engage in an informed dialog with foreign visitors on this vital subject. In other words, we should refer to this report just as we often refer to the State Department's Human Rights or Economic Policy reports as we consider policy toward given foreign states.

I recommend that Senators who have not yet received a copy of this document obtain one from the State Department and keep it available for convenient reference in considering policies with respect to individual countries as well as for its cogent overall analysis of this still-important subject. I commend the Department of State and Ambassador Morris D. Busby, Coordinator for Counter-Terrorism, for the excellent job they have done in the preparation of the report.

I ask that selected portions of the report be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The material follows:

PATTERNS OF GLOBAL TERRORISM: 1989

INTRODUCTION

The year 1989 saw a steep decline in the number of terrorist acts committed worldwide—one of the sharpest yearly drops we have recorded since the advent of modern terrorism in 1968. The number of people killed or wounded by terrorists also fell significantly. This is good news. But terrorism remains a serious problem on the international agenda.

Despite the decreased level of activity, the citizens or property of 74 countries were attacked by terrorists last year. The attacks took place in 60 countries in every region of the globe. Terrorists have the capability to inflict massive casualties, as they did last September when they blew up a French airliner killing all 171 innocent persons aboard. The use of terrorism by new criminal and insurgent groups, such as the "extraditables" in Colombia, is cause for concern.

We cannot become complacent. Terrorism is an ongoing threat in today's world, and we must continue to oppose it vigorously.

U.S. COUNTERTERRORISM POLICY

The US Government has developed a comprehensive strategy to respond to the problem of international terrorism. The first element of our counterterrorism policy is that we do not make concessions of any kind to terrorists. We do not pay ransom, release convicted terrorists from prison, or change our policies to accommodate terrorist demands. Such actions would only lead to more terrorism. And we vigorously encourage other countries to be firm with terrorists, for a solid international front is essential to overall success.

The second element of our strategy is to make state sponsors of terrorism pay a price for their actions. This policy was most graphically demonstrated by the April 1986 bombing raids on terrorist support facilities in Libya. But there are also political, diplomatic and economic actions, public diplomacy, and sanctions—all peaceful measures that can be crafted to discourage states from persisting in their support of terrorism.

Third, the US Government has developed a program of action based on practical measures to bring terrorists to justice, to disrupt their operations, and to destroy their networks. These involve working with our friends and allies to identify, track, apprehend, prosecute, and punish terrorists by using the rule of law. They also include measures designed to protect our citizens abroad by strengthening security and research to develop equipment to prevent terrorist incidents. The final element of our counterterrorism policy is the Department of State's Anti-Terrorism Training Assistance Program (ATA) which gives training in antiterrorism techniques to law enforcement officials around the world. Given our country's strong commitment to human rights, ATA promotes a thorough understanding of the importance of human rights in all aspects of law enforcement. More than 9,000 police and security personnel from 60 countries have participated in this program since its inception.

This strategy has made possible a number of successes. Individually they are modest, but collectively they do suggest that we are gaining ground. The margins between success and failure are thin; they depend greatly on the diligence and persistence of the individuals here and in friendly governments charged with responsibility for intelligence collection, law enforcement, and diplomatic efforts directed against terrorism.

LEGISLATIVE REQUIREMENTS

This report is submitted in compliance with Section 140 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988/89 [P.L. 100-204], which requires the Department of State to provide Congress a full and complete annual report on terrorism for those countries and groups meeting the criteria of Section (a)(1) and (2) of the Act.

As required by legislation, the report includes detailed assessments of foreign countries where significant terrorist acts occurred, and countries about which Congress was notified during the preceding five years pursuant to Section 6[j] of the Export Administration Act of 1979 (the so-called terrorism list countries that have repeatedly provided support for international terrorism). In addition, the report includes all relevant information about the previous year's activities of individuals, terrorist groups, or umbrella groups under which such terrorist groups fall, known to be responsible for the kidnaping or death of any American citizen during the preceding five years, and groups known to be financed by "terrorism list" countries.

DEFINITIONS

No one definition of terrorism has gained universal acceptance. For the purposes of this report, however, we have chosen the definition commonly used by the US Government for the past 21 years, which also is widely accepted and one which we have used in previous reports.

Accordingly, we consider "terrorism" to be premeditated, politically motivated violence perpetrated against noncombatant targets by subnational groups or clandestine state agents, usually intended to influence an audience. "International terrorism" is terrorism involving the citizens or territory of more than one country.

NOTE

Adverse mention in this report of individual members of any political, social, ethnic, religious, or national group is not meant to imply that all members of that group are terrorists. Indeed, terrorists represent a small minority of dedicated, often fanatical, individuals in most such groups. It is that small group—and their actions—that is the subject of this report.

Ambassador MORRIS D. BUSHBY,
Office of the Coordinator for Counter-Terrorism.

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

The level of international terrorism worldwide in 1989 declined sharply from that of 1988, dropping by almost 38 percent from 856 incidents in 1988 to 528.[1] The Middle East continued to experience the largest number of incidents of international terrorism, incurring 193 attacks—37 percent of the total worldwide. The proportion of international terrorism connected with the Middle East increases to 45 percent, however, when Middle East spillover attacks into other regions are added. These compare to statistics of 36 percent and 41 percent, respectively, in 1988. With 131 attacks, or 25 percent of the total, Latin America ranked second. Western Europe was third with 96 incidents. With the reduction of Afghan-sponsored attacks in Pakistan, Asia dropped to fourth with 55 incidents. Africa was fifth with 48 attacks. Four international terrorist attacks took place in North America. One incident was recorded in Eastern Europe during the year, although Soviet and East European interests were attacked in other parts of the world.

Several factors were responsible for the major decrease in international terrorism:

The Afghan Government curtailed its terrorist campaign in Pakistan after Soviet troops were withdrawn.

Yasser Arafat's renunciation of terrorism resulted in a sharp decline in operations by groups affiliated with the PLO.

Dissension within the Abu Nidal organization (ANO)—previously one of the most active and deadly terrorist groups—and its focus on Lebanese militia matters decreased the group's operations.

A number of states involved in terrorism, including Libya and Syria, remained wary of getting caught sponsoring terrorists and reduced their support. Iran was a notable exception to the trend.

Partly in response to internal problems and enhanced counterterrorist measures, many terrorist groups focused on building their infrastructure throughout the world to support attacks in the future.

Counterterrorist capabilities continued to improve in most parts of the world, and cooperation among governments increased.

There was only one "spectacular" international terrorist operation in 1989—the bombing of UTA Flight 772 over Niger on 19 September. That attack accounted for 171 deaths, the greatest number associated with a single attack during the year. Investigators have not determined who was responsible. Terrorist "spectaculars" may well be becoming more rare as there seems to be a growing perception among terrorists that they have not achieved their goals with operations such as airline hijackings and that such attacks are increasingly difficult to conduct. Moreover, some of the groups most capable of carrying out such operations have focused their energies elsewhere.

[1] In past years, serious violence by Palestinians against other Palestinians in the Occupied Territories was included as international terrorism in the database of worldwide incidents because Palestinians are considered stateless persons. This resulted in such incidents being treated differently from intra-ethnic violence in other parts of the world. As a result of further review of the nature of intra-Palestinian violence, such violence is no longer included in the US Government's statistical database on international terrorism. This new refinement in the 1989 statistical database ensures its continuing accuracy and reliability. Intra-Palestinian violence, however, remains a serious concern. See inset on the Palestinian uprising. [omitted]

The depiction of the alleged execution of US Marine Corps Col. William R. Higgins on 31 July captured headlines and brought worldwide condemnation of the Iranian-backed terrorists responsible. Elsewhere, narcotraffickers in Colombia are believed responsible for several horrific attacks using terrorist methods to achieve their criminal goals. This likely includes the late November bombing of a domestic Avianca flight out of Bogota in which all 111 on board perished.

The 528 international terrorist incidents recorded in 1989 resulted in 390 victims killed and 397 wounded. Fourteen terrorist were killed and 23 wounded. Reflecting the decline in the number of incidents, this represents a drop from 1988 when 638 victims were killed and 1,125 wounded. In 1988, 22 terrorists were killed and six wounded. The downing of UTA Flight 772 emphasized the continuing growth of casualties in Africa, from a total of 125 killed and 130 wounded in 1988 to 269 killed and 39 wounded in 1989. Asia experienced the most significant decline in casualties with the reduction in the Afghan campaign in Pakistan, dropping from 156 killed and 599 wounded in 1988 to 57 killed and 153 wounded in 1989. International terrorism in the Middle East accounted for 29 persons killed and 111 injured. Twenty-one persons were killed and 73 wounded in Latin America. In Western Europe, there were 14 victims killed and 21 wounded in international terrorists attacks.

The number of terrorist attacks and casualties suffered by the United States declined in 1989 from 1988, but US interests continued to be the most frequently targeted by international terrorists. In 1988, 193 attacks were directed against the United States, compared with 165 in 1989, a decline of 15 percent. Casualties among US citizens also declined, from 192 killed and 40 wounded in 1988 to 16 killed and 19 injured in 1989. The drop reflects, for the most part, the absence of a major incident that caused a large number of casualties, such as the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 in 1988. The largest share of the attacks, or 64 percent, took place in Latin America, with bombings of oil pipelines partly owned by US companies accounting for most of the incidents. Almost 14 percent of the anti-US incidents took place in Asia, 13 percent in Western Europe, 5 percent in the Middle East, and 1 percent in Africa.

International terrorists attacked the citizens and property of 74 countries in a total of 60 countries. The United States was the most frequently targeted, followed by Israel. With the continuing increase in security for official interests, terrorists again carried out most of the attacks—75 percent of the total worldwide—against businesses, tourists, and other nonofficial targets. Attacks against international organizations and government targets decreased to 19 percent of the total. Attacks on noncombatant military targets increased marginally, to 41 from 38 in 1988; there were 88 in 1987.

The number of attacks by type followed a well-established pattern. Terrorists relied most frequently on bombings (44 percent of the total); arson was second (28 percent). Terrorists used firearms and other types of handheld weapons in 14 percent of the attacks. The incidence of kidnappings declined slightly but occurred in about 5 percent of the attacks. Approximately 44 percent of the kidnappings occurred in Latin America, with 19 percent in the Middle East.

The number of terrorist incidents that could be attributed to state sponsors declined in 1989. Evidence indicated 58 incidents involved state sponsors in 1989, a drop of 67 percent from 1988 when 176 such attacks were noted. The decrease was partly due to the ability of a number of states that have aided terrorist groups to effectively mask their involvement. The greatest portion of the drop resulted from Kabul's apparent curtailment of its bombing campaign in Pakistan following the removal of Soviet military forces. Iran's involvement in terrorism was not detected as frequently in 1989, but we suspect an upturn in its support during the second half of the year reflects a return to a greater pace of operations. Libya and Syria were not directly tied to any attacks in 1989, but they continue to provide various forms of support for several terrorist groups.

The spillover of Middle Eastern terrorism outside that region accounted for 43 attacks in 1989, down from 45 in 1988. The attacks in 1989 resulted in 181 persons killed and 15 wounded. Thirty-one incidents took place in Western Europe. Ten incidents took place in the United Kingdom and mostly were attacks on bookstores and businesses connected with Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses. Of the remainder, six were in Turkey; four in Pakistan and Belgium, and three in the United States; two each in Austria, France, and the Netherlands; and one each in Afghanistan, Canada, Cyprus, Greece, Italy, Niger, Senegal, Sweden, Thailand, and West Germany.

Despite the decline in international attacks in 1989, terrorists retain the potential for resuming a greater level of violence, particularly against the United States. Terrorists in the Philippines appear more likely to broaden their targeting of US citizens to increase pressure on the United States to withdraw, and rebel soliders may retaliate for US support to the Aquino government during the failed coup attempt in December. In Latin America, US interests in Panama may be targeted by diehard supporters of General Noriega, and other radicals in the region and in other parts of the world may use Washington's military action in Panama as a pretext for stepped-up targeting. Other developments worldwide could spark increased terrorist operations; rivalries among Middle Eastern governments—particularly between Iran and Saudi, Arabia, which has already generated a campaign of violence by Iran—and emerging alliances among Middle Eastern sponsors and groups, such as between Iran and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC) and other radical Palestinian groups, are of special concern. Ethnic groups in the Caucasus, Moldavia, and other areas of the Soviet Union may resort to terrorism to achieve their goals, as could some of the numerous factions throughout Eastern Europe. Emigre communities in Western Europe and the United States could be drawn into supporting the violence. West European terrorist groups remain a major threat. Basque and Northern Ireland terrorists are unlikely to reduce the pace of their attacks, and other groups like the Red Army Faction (RAF) in West Germany and the Revolutionary Organization 17 November in Greece, have increased their technical capabilities. In Turkey, domestic problems seem to be fostering an increase of violence by long-dormant groups.●

MEASURE INDEFINITELY POSTPONED—S. 1633

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 248, S. 1633, a bill relating to income verification data of veterans be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MEASURES REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar Nos. 349 and 350 be referred to the Veterans Affairs Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REFERRAL OF H.R. 2514

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Banking Committee be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 2514, a bill requiring the Director of the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board to issue certain regulations, and that the bill be referred to the Governmental Affairs Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO THE SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar Order No. 522, S. 2300, to authorize appropriations for education programs of the Simon Wiesenthal Center.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2300) to provide financial assistance to the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, California, for the education programs of the Museum of Tolerance.

AMENDMENT NO. 1573

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator KENNEDY, I send a technical amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Mr. MITCHELL], for Mr. KENNEDY, proposes an amendment numbered 1573.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2 line 2 after the word authorized insert the following: ", subject to the availability of appropriations,".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is their objection to the amendment? The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment (No. 1573) was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amended was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The bill (S. 2300) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 2300

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. GENERAL AUTHORITY.

The Secretary of Education is authorized, subject to the availability of appropriations, to pay to the Museum of Tolerance of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, located in Los Angeles, California, the Federal share of the cost of designing and operating education programs concerning the holocaust.

SEC. 2. APPLICATION REQUIRED.

No financial assistance may be provided under this Act unless an application is submitted to the Secretary of Education at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary of Education my reasonably require. Each such application shall describe the type and kind of educational materials to be developed and the steps that will be taken to ensure that age appropriate products are available to school districts and institutions of higher education across the country.

SEC. 3. FEDERAL SHARE.

The Federal share of the cost of designing and conducting education programs under this Act shall be 50 percent. The portion of costs not paid by financial assistance provided pursuant to this Act must be paid from sources other than Federal, State, or local government.

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000, to carry out the provisions of this Act. Funds appropriated pursuant to this Act shall remain available until expended.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill, as amended, was passed.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION DAY

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 294, designating "Department of Education Day," and that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 294) to designate May 4, 1990, as "Department of Education Day."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on passage of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The joint resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S.J. RES. 294

Whereas education is a vital national concern and a State and local responsibility fundamental to the progress and security of our Nation;

Whereas a continuing need exists to ensure that all Americans have equal access to educational opportunities that enable all Americans to achieve their fullest potential;

Whereas, on May 4, 1980, the United States Department of Education was created as a Cabinet-level agency to ensure that education issues receive proper attention at the Federal level and to coordinate the education activities of the Federal Government effectively;

Whereas the Department of Education administers important Federal programs to assist elementary, secondary, and postsecondary education; collects data and oversees research and assessment on America's schools and disseminates such information to educators and to the general public; identifies and focuses attention on the main issues and problems in education; enforces Federal statutes that prohibit discrimination in programs and activities receiving Federal funds; and ensures equal access and educational opportunity for all individuals; and

Whereas officials and employees of the Department of Education through dedication, diligence, loyalty, and integrity reflect the highest quality of public service and deserve recognition as the Department of Education celebrates its tenth anniversary: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 4, 1990, is designated as "Department of Education Day", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

THE CALENDAR

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar Order Nos. 509 and 510, en bloc; that the committee amendments be agreed to en bloc, that the bills, as amended, be deemed read a third time and passed; that the motion to reconsider passage of these bills be laid on the table; and that the title amendment, where appropriate, be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMPUTER SOFTWARE RENTAL AMENDMENTS ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 198) to amend title 17, United States Code, the Copyright Act, to protect certain computer programs, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That this Act may be cited as the "Computer Software Rental Amendments Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. Section 109(b) of title 17, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(b)(1)(A) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), unless authorized by the owners of copyright in the sound recording or the owner of copyright in a computer program (including any tape, disk, or other medium embodying such program), and in the case of a sound recording in the musical works embodied therein, neither the owner of a particular phonorecord nor any person in possession of a particular copy of a computer program (including any tape, disk, or other medium embodying such program), may, for the purposes of direct or indirect commercial advantage, dispose of, or authorize the disposal of, the possession of that phonorecord or computer program (including any tape, disk, or other medium embodying such program) by rental, lease, or lending, or by any other act or practice in the nature of rental, lease or lending. Nothing in the preceding sentence shall apply to the rental, lease, or lending of a phonorecord for nonprofit purposes by a nonprofit library or nonprofit educational institution.

The transfer of possession of a lawfully made copy of a computer program by a nonprofit educational institution to another nonprofit educational institution or to faculty, staff and students does not constitute rental, lease or lending for direct or indirect commercial purposes under this Act.

"(B) The term 'computer program', for purposes of this subsection, does not include any computer program embodied in electronic circuitry which is contained in, or used in conjunction with, a limited purpose computer designed primarily for playing home video games.";

(2) redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3), as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively;

(3) inserting between paragraph (1) and paragraph (3), as redesignated herein, the following:

"(2)(A) Nothing in this subsection shall apply to the lending of a computer program by a nonprofit library, providing that each copy of a copyrighted computer program which is lent by such library shall have affixed to the packaging containing the program the following notice:

WARNING: THIS COMPUTER PROGRAM IS PROTECTED UNDER THE COPYRIGHT LAW. MAKING A COPY OF THIS PROGRAM WITHOUT PERMISSION OF THE COPYRIGHT OWNER IS PROHIBITED. ANYONE COPYING THIS PROGRAM WITHOUT PERMISSION OF THE COPYRIGHT OWNER MAY BE SUBJECT TO PAYMENT OF UP TO $100,000 DAMAGES AND, IN SOME CASES, IMPRISONMENT FOR UP TO ONE YEAR.

"(B) Three years after the effective date of this paragraph, and at such times subsequently as he or she may deem appropriate, the Register of Copyrights, after consultation with representatives of copyright owners and librarians, shall submit to the Congress a report stating whether the provisions of this paragraph have achieved the intended purpose of maintaining the integrity of the copyright system while providing nonprofit libraries the capability to fulfill their function. Such report shall advise the Congress as to any information or recommendations the Register of Copyrights shall deem necessary to effectuate the purposes of this Act."; and

(4) amending paragraph (4) to read as follows:

"(4) Any person who distributes a phonorecord or a copy of a computer program (including any tape, disk, or other medium embodying such program) in violation of clause (1) is an infringer of copyright under section 501 of this title and is subject to the remedies set forth in sections 502, 503, 504, 505, and 509. Such violation shall not be a criminal offense under section 506 or cause such person to be subject to the criminal penalties set forth in section 2319 of title 18.".

COMPUTER SOFTWARE RENTAL AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1989

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Computer Software Rental Amendments Act.

Last year I introduced S. 198, the Computer Software Rental Amendments Act to address the growing problem of computer software rental. A typical mass market computer software package costs several hundred dollars at retail and requires millions of dollars to develop. If these products can be rented and copied at a mere fraction of the retail cost, the potential for lost sales will almost certainly lead to the collapse of the U.S. software industry.

The overwhelming rationale for renting a computer program is to make an unauthorized copy. Computer software cannot be enjoyed for an evening's entertainment and then returned. To have meaning to a user, the software packages require mastery of complex user manuals, often running hundreds of pages in length. Even after a user has mastered the use of a program, it has little value until he or she adds his or her own data base to the program. The functions of learning how to use a program and utilizing it in connection with one's own data base cannot be accomplished in the few hours or days available under a rental arrangement without copying the program and displacing a legitimate sale of the program.

This legislation would simply prohibit the rental of copyrighted computer software unless the copyright owner has previously granted permission to do so.

Of course, there may be situations in which the owner of copyrighted software may wish to authorize a vendor to make the software available to a potential purchaser in order that the product might be examined prior to making a purchasing decision. Nothing in this legislation prohibits such arrangements. In fact, nothing in the legislation prevents any copyright owner from waiving any or all of the exclusive rights granted under this legislation. Thus, as is currently the case with the exclusive rights granted in section 106 of the Copyright Act, nothing prevents a creator from dedicating his or her work to public domain at any time.

During subcommittee and full committee action on this measure we incorporated changes to address concerns raised by libraries and the educational community. These changes make it clear that the bill would not prohibit the lending of authorized copies of software by nonprofit libraries and nonprofit educational institutions. In addition, members of the committee weighed concerns raised about the rental of video game cartridges and decided not to prohibit their rental given the lack of evidence that these cartridges are being copied.

This legislation, as amended by the committee, is a reasonable response to a problem which threatens to get worse, and I would encourage my colleagues to support its passage.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

USE OF INVENTIONS IN OUTER SPACE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 459) to amend title 35, United States Code, and the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958, with respect to the use of inventions in outer space, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. INVENTIONS IN OUTER SPACE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 10 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 105. Inventions in outer space

"(a) Any invention made, used or sold in outer space on a space object or component thereof under the jurisdiction or control of the United States shall be considered to be made, used or sold within the United States for the purposes of this title, except with respect to any space object or component thereof that is specifically identified and otherwise provided for by an international agreement to which the United States is a party, or with respect to any space object or component thereof that is carried on the registry of a foreign state in accordance with the Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space.

"(b) Any invention made, used or sold in outer space on a space object or component thereof that is carried on the registry of a foreign state in accordance with the Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space, shall be considered to be made, used or sold within the United States for the purposes of this title if specifically so agreed in an international agreement between the United States and the state of registry.".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of sections of chapter 10 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"105. Inventions in outer space.".

SEC. 2. SPECIAL RULES.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Subject to subsections (b), (c), and (d) of this section, the amendments made by the first section of this Act shall apply to all United States patents granted before, on, or after the date of enactment of this Act, and to all applications for United States patents pending on or filed on or after such date of enactment.

(b) FINAL DECISIONS.—The amendments made by the first section of this Act shall not affect any final decision made by a court or the Patent and Trademark Office before the date of enactment of this Act with respect to a patent or an application for a patent, if no appeal from such decision is pending and the time for filing an appeal has expired.

(c) PENDING CASES.—The amendments made by the first section of this Act shall not affect the right of any party in any case pending in a court on the date of enactment of this Act to have the party's rights determined on the basis of the substantive law in effect before such date of enactment.

(d) NON-APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by the first section of this Act shall not apply to any process, machine, article or manufacture, or composition of matter, an embodiment of which was launched prior to the date of enactment of this Act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend title 35, United States Code, with respect to the use of inventions in outer space."

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the announcements of the Chair, Senator HUMPHREY be recognized to address the Senate for not to exceed 10 minutes, and that upon the conclusion or yielding back of his time, the Senate stand in recess until 11 a.m. tomorrow, Wednesday, May 2, 1990.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

39-059 O-91-41 (Pt. 6)

APPOINTMENTS BY THE VICE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The chair, on behalf of the Vice President, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 6968(a), appoints the following Senators to the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Naval Academy: the Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI], from the Committee on Appropriations; the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD], from the Committee on Appropriations; the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN], from the Committee on Armed Services; and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SARBANES], at large.

The Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 4355(a), appoints the following Senators to the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Military Academy: the Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID], from the Committee on Appropriations; the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO], from the Committee on Appropriations; the Senator from Alabama [Mr. SHELBY], from the Committee on Armed Services; and the Senator from Montana [Mr. BURNS], at large.

The Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 9355(a), appoints the following Senators to the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Air Force Academy: the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN], from the Committee on Appropriations; the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY], from the Committee on Appropriations; the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH], from the Committee on Armed Services; and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], at large.

APPOINTMENT BY THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the President pro tempore, pursuant to Public Law 99-498, appoints Lynn M. Burns, of Rhode Island, to the Advisory Commission on Student Financial Assistance, to fill the unexpired term of Dr. Dallas Martin, resigned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from New Hampshire.

LITHUANIA

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, in the last week or 10 days, a growing number of Senators, including Members of the Republican Party, have become openly critical of the administration's failure to respond in any material way to the Soviet bullying of the Republic of Lithuania.

The other day, when reporters raised this criticism from Senators and asked him for his response, the President said, according to the press, something like, "I do not have to respond." Then he referred to his high standing in the Gallup poll.

Mr. President, that is a disappointing response on the part of the President because polls do not define principle. Furthermore, I suggest the polls are beginning to change on this score. Just as more and more Senators of both parties are becoming increasingly critical of the inaction and what they regard to be the unprincipled conduct by this administration with respect to the crisis in Lithuania, I think public opinion is beginning to change.

Indeed, the Senate took yet another even more persuasive step to express its criticism today when it adopted, by a vote of 73 to 24, the resolution sponsored by Senators D'AMATO, BYRD, DECONCINI, MIKULSKI, HELMS, and others, which resolution was intended to discourage the President from submitting to the Senate any United States-Soviet trade agreement or enabling legislation thereto until such time as the Soviet Union has lifted its economic embargo against Lithuania and the Soviet Union has entered into negotiations with the duly elected representatives of the Lithuanian people, with the intended result the Soviet recognition of the independence of the Government of the Republic of Lithuania in an orderly and expeditious manner.

Well, in plain English, Mr. President, by a vote of 73 to 24, the Senate has repudiated the President's policy and has encouraged him not to send this trade agreement—about which the administration boasted just the other day—to the Senate until such time as those two explicit conditions have been met: the economic embargo has been lifted and the Soviet Union has entered into negotiations intended to result in the Soviet recognition of the independence of Lithuania.

I hope the White House is getting the message. I hope this smugness now will be replaced by sumpathy, sympathy for the people of Lithuania. I believe public opinion is beginning to change because while the American people do want to see an improvement in relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, and while the American people know that it is to our benefit when the Soviets reform their system such as we can improve relations, at the same time the American people do not want that change for themselves at just any cost at all, in my opinion. They do not want that advantage if it means violations of important principles; they do not want that advantage for us if it means leaving behind another nation, however small, which is valiantly trying to reassert its independence, as is the case with Lithuania.

The polls do not define principle, and there is something unprincipled about the conduct of United States policy in recent weeks since the Soviets placed their noose around the neck of Lithuania, something decidely unprincipled. Pragmatic, sure. Self-centered, yes, indeed. That is not always bad in the conduct of one's relations with other nations. That is not always bad. But in this case, we have gone too far, to dismiss the Lithuanians' legitimate claims, to ignore their very real plight and the difficulties and the suffering which they are enduring at an increasing level with the passage of every day as this economic strangulation chokes the economic activity in that country to the point of death.

Mr. President, the Soviet Army and the KGB security forces have sealed the periphery of Lithuania, the land borders and the sea ports. Not only that, Mr. President, those same forces, internal to Lithuania, are impeding the flow of rail track, thereby making it virtually impossible for Lithuania to sustain itself economically without even addressing the problem of the oil embargo and the natural gas cutback.

Today we read that there is a medical crisis growing there because, notwithstanding Soviet promises to the contrary, a shortage of medicines is developing.

I think public opinion is going to change, Mr. President, as these accounts of increased suffering, which will surface with increased frequency, reach the ears of the American people over the next couple of weeks; I predict there is going to be a massive change of public opinion. I believe the signs are already beginning to emerge.

I want, in conclusion, to read an editorial published yesterday in the Nashua, NH, Telegraph. I should state, parenthetically, that the Nashua Telegraph is not some kind of rightwing rag. It is not known for being an antiestablishment newspaper.

So I read this editorial, and I hope the White House will begin to take to heart these signs of discomfort and even enbarrassment and shame which Americans increasingly are expressing. It is entitled "Do Not Trust Bush Again."

It looks like Lithuania has gotten the message. No country will come to the Baltic country's defense in its present confrontation with the Soviet Union. Not even the United States, which we all know likes to sound off that there's nothing better on Earth than democracy and freedom.

President Bush last week began by sounding tough on the Soviet Union's plan to make Lithuania knuckle under by shutting off supplies of oil, natural gas and other vital materials to the small republic.

But when the time came to enact trade sanctions against the Soviets in support of Lithuania, Bush did a repeat of his Beijing waltz. He finally declared it was not in the best interest of further U.S.-Soviet Union peace moves to help Lithuania, despite all his earlier sympathetic talk about Lithuania's desire for independence.

He suggested the route for Lithuania was negotiation, when the Lithuanians know that the Soviet Union has stacked the deck against a quick resolve to this desire for independence. This process will be a long and uncertain one because of the way Mikhail Gorbachev has succeeded in structuring the procedure for a republic's separation in the newly revised Soviet constitution.

So Bush, long on praise of the democratic values, has done it again.

Faced with this rejection, Lithuania has taken the first steps to extricate itself from its present dilemma.

It hasn't come right out and rescinded its vote for independence but it is making overtures to the Soviet Union that some small concessions can be made to foster talks about independence.

What else can Lithuania do? The superpowers have now reached their own accord that the country's independence is secondary to their own national interests.

So much for words of support. So much for a small country's yearning for relief from a half-century of coerced union with the Soviets.

And so much for the United States and its championing of the Lithuanian cause.

Sorry, Lithuania. Don't ever trust those Bush lips again.

While I am criticizing the administration, I also want to add a word of praise. In conclusion, it is my understanding the President has agreed to meet with the Prime Minister of Lithuania when she is in Washington later this week. I likewise want to commend Senator MITCHELL and Senator DOLE, the leadership of the Senate, for arranging a formal opportunity for the Prime Minister to meet with Members of this body likewise later this week. I want to urge the leaders further to invite Mrs. Prunskiene to the floor. She is a member of Parliament. And like members of other legislative bodies, she is entitled to privileges of this floor for an appearance.

I hope the leadership will invite her to the floor as a member of the Parliament of the Republic of Lithuania, a republic which enjoyed a truly democratic election just a few months ago for the first time in a half century. I am sure if the leadership will do that, Members will be more than pleased, indeed honored, to respond with a lusty round of applause and speeches of encouragement. As well they should.

Mr. President, we are on the wrong track in Lithuania. There are some things more precious than advantage to a country. Principle is such a thing more precious. Due regard for the legitimate yearnings for freedom, the lawful yearnings for freedom and independence of the people of Lithuania is another. We are on the wrong course. I urge the President to set things right. I urge the President not, as the Senate urged the President, not to submit any trade agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to the Senate for consideration until such time as this economic blockade has been lifted and all of the Soviet bullying has been brought to an end.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

RECESS UNTIL 11 A.M.; MORNING BUSINESS; RECESS FROM 12 NOON TO 1 P.M.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in recess until 11 a.m. on Wednesday, May 2; that following the time for two leaders there be a period for morning business, not to extend beyond 12 noon, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each. I further ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. tomorrow to accommodate the party caucus.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. it is my hope that we will be in a position to begin consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill.

RECESS UNTIL 11 A.M.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now stand in recess until 11 a.m. tomorrow morning.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 8 p.m., recessed until Wednesday, May 2, 1990, at 11 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, May 1, 1990

The House met at 12 noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

As we go about our lives doing the necessary work that is before us, we often wonder if there is more than the ordinary tasks that can give meaning and purpose to our lives. Yet always, O gracious God, You have given us opportunities to do justice and mercy, to give aid to the oppressed, to feed the hungry, to shelter the homeless, to lift the burden of the weak, to comfort those that sorrow or are alone, to assist all people with any need. As we go about our daily tasks, may we not lose sight of these opportunities for service, opportunities that truly bring great purpose and fulfillment to each of us. In Your name, we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HAYES] please come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance?

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

THE MISSING BUSH BUDGET

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, should we call the Sergeant at Arms, summon the FBI? Surely this has to be one of the strangest disappearances in this institution, the case of the missing Bush budget?

I did not know anything was wrong until today. I was to meet it here today, the very budget the President submitted some months ago.

But, Mr. Speaker, I learn now that it will not be keeping its promised appointment. Apparently no member of the President's party will offer it, complete with its Medicare cuts, its cuts in infrastructure, its elimination of vital programs.

Yes, I am holding a copy here now, Mr. Speaker, but what a mystery. There are no fingerprints on this budget, no sign that it ever existed. Yet did the President not stand behind me in January and urge adoption of this budget? But there have been no clues, no telltale sign of Presidential lobbying or of Republican Members hotly arguing for it. Did anyone who supported it ever exist, Mr. Speaker?

I am holding, I think, a neutron budget. It eliminates all its supporters while staying intact itself. And the children, Mr. Speaker, are chanting outside:

Where O where has the Bush budget gone?
Where O where can it be?

IMPORTANCE OF AN OPEN RULE

(Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, when the House considers campaign reform legislation this spring, it must be considered under an open rule.

An open rule is the only way to guarantee the American people a full debate on each of the tough issues involved in campaign reform.

Allowing the Republicans to wrap their proposals together and offer them in a substitute package—which would be voted down by the Democratic majority in the House—is an unacceptable alternative.

That is not a debate, Mr. Speaker, and the American people know it.

Republicans believe that our campaign reform proposals—including banning soft money in Federal elections, disclosing and limiting franking, limiting contributions from outside a candidate's local area, and restoring the income tax credit for in-State individual contributions—would make congressional races more fair.

Mr. Speaker, the American people deserve to know how each of us stands on these individual issues—and they deserve to know who the real reformers are.

NEW REVELATIONS BY CONVICTED HUD AIDE

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the soap opera at HUD continues. DuBois Gilliam, a former aide now in jail for taking bribes in exchange for housing contracts, said that HUD awarded grants on the basis of political connection. No kidding.

Gilliam also said that this was the best political machine in American history. He said it gave away millions and millions of dollars to Republican friends. In fact, Gilliam said that Reagan cronies would call, get special preference, and get multimillion-dollar deals because they were connected with the right people.

But when Chairman GONZALEZ, who challenged HUD to try to straighten it out, had a needy project in his area, Sam Pierce said, "If GONZALEZ wants it, absolutely not."

Yet, Mr. Speaker, the biggest UDAG award in American history was given to a city in New Hampshire where the Senator was the guy who killed the UDAG Program, and that UDAG award was for a city where the unemployment rate was less than 2 percent, clearly making it illegal.

I say it is time these Tammany Hall bums go to jail. Thank God for one thing—a Republican by the name of Jack Kemp, a good man, is straightening out a Republican mess. It is high time that we get an answer about why the needy of this country have to be put on the back burner because of heavily connected friends in the White House. Think about it.

A SOFT-MONEY LOOPHOLE IN FEDERAL ELECTION LAWS

(Mr. SMITH of Vermont asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Vermont. Mr. Speaker, should it be illegal for a corporation or labor union to give $1 million to help a candidate for Federal office?

Yes.

But is it illegal? No.

Today, a so-called soft-money loophole in our Nation's election laws allows corporate and union special interests to pour nearly unlimited amounts of money into voter registration and turn-out slush funds.

Another loophole, the so-called building fund, allows unlimited corporate, union, and millionaire special interest gifts to national political parties.

Mr. Speaker, these loopholes must be closed.

Parties should raise money for Federal elections only from individuals in amounts limited by law.

Union workers' dues and corporate profits should not be spent to buy Federal elections.

Individuals, not unions and corporations, should finance congressional elections.

Mr. Speaker, please let this House vote on banning soft money.

THE BUSH BUDGET OR THE "STEALTH" BUDGET

(Mrs. BOXER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, word is spreading today that the Republicans have decided not to offer their budget for a vote or even for a discussion. The Bush budget has become the "stealth" budget.

That is too bad, but it is understandable because the Bush budget is out of sync with our times. It has more money for the military than last year and more pain for our seniors, with huge, deep Medicare cuts.

The Democratic budget, with the same deficit reductions, spends 400 percent more on education, 2,000 percent more on medical research, on cancer, heart disease, and Alzheimer's, 1,000 percent more to stop the dreaded AIDS epidemic, and more on the environment and infrastructure.

Mr. Speaker, the Democratic budget is an investment in our country, for a change.

IN SUPPORT OF AN OPEN RULE ON CAMPAIGN FINANCE LEGISLATION

(Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, when the House considers campaign finance reform legislation later in the session, it should be considered under an open rule. All amendments should be made in order, the good, the bad, and the ugly. Only by having all ideas publicly debated and voted on can the House properly work its will on this very important issue.

One of the main goals of reforming campaign laws is to make the process more open, more accessible to all the people, and more sensitive to the concerns and beliefs of the average American. Those same goals should reflect the manner in which the House considers campaign reform legislation.

Procedure, which simply determines who can do what and when, has a tremendous effect on policy. Campaign finance laws, which are essentially guidelines about who can do what and when, are a good illustration of that principle. With that in mind, for reasons of public policy, it's important that the procedure under which we take up this important legislation be free, open, and more sensitive to the concerns of the public. I urge the Rules Committee to report an open rule when campaign finance reform legislation is brought to the House floor.

□ 1210

WHAT A SHOCK!

(Mr. DURBIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, what a shock! The Republican Party comes before the Committee on Rules and asks for an opportunity to offer their President's budget to the House of Representatives and to the American people, to engage this Chamber in debate, but yet today we are told that they got cold feet. The Republican Conference has decided to a person, that not a single one of them will stand up and try to defend President Bush's budget.

"Say it ain't so, BOB," and, when my colleagues look at that budget, they can understand why. That budget calls for increases in military spending when peace is breaking out across the world. Not a single Republican will offer that budget.

"Say it ain't so, NEWT," and, when that budget calls for cuts in medical research and cuts in Medicare, one would think the Republicans would want to be there to defend it, but they will not.

"Say it ain't so, MICKEY." Come on now. Someone on that side of the aisle should ask for unanimous consent to offer President Bush's budget.

Let's see who will stand up for President George Bush's vision of a kinder and gentler America. Surely at least one member of his Party will stand up for the President.

ABORTION STOPS A BEATING HEART

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, hundreds of thousands of Americans rallied here in Washington in defense of human life. It was, in a word, "awesome."

The rally, the largest ever, was a tangible witness of our deep and unshakable conviction in the dignity and sanctity of every human life and was designed to confront the antichild bias of the abortionists.

Mr. Speaker, every abortion stops a beating heart, a child's beating heart.

Mr. Speaker, while it is true that the abortionists cloak their killing in the language of humanitarianism, the fact of the matter is abortion is child abuse, and it exploits women. Children who suffer this abuse are cut and dismembered, and millions have been killed by injection of poison.

Saturday's rally represented mainstream America. Even public opinion polls show that Americans reject abortion on demand, and a nationwide survey by Richard Wirthlin's group in January found that only 11 percent of Americans want abortion to be legal in all circumstances. Wirthlin found that 52 percent of Americans, a majority, chose a position which is prolife; 44 percent, proabortion. Other polls parallel those findings, Mr. Speaker, including the New York Times December 1989 poll which found that 53 percent would legally prohibit most abortions. Moreover, a Boston Globe poll found likewise, that some 72 percent of Americans say abortion should be either prohibited altogether or legal in a very, very limited number of circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, most Members know in their heart that abortion ends a child's life. Legislators should also know that the tide of public opinion is on the side of life as well.

THE DEMOCRATIC BUDGET—A REFLECTION OF OUR CHANGED WORLD

(Mr. FAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, there could not be a more clear difference in the priorities between Democrats and Republicans than in the budgets this House will consider today. Unlike the President's budget, the Democratic budget does not merely pay lipservice to the important programs so vital to the Nation and so strongly supported by the American people.

Rather than provide rhetoric about education programs, this budget funds them. In fact, this budget provides over five times the amount of funding for education as President Bush requested.

The Democratic budget rejects the substantial cuts in Medicare called for by President Bush and vehemently opposed by seniors across the country.

The Democratic budget also is a fair budget for all our retirees. Unlike the Bush budget, which would undercut some of our retirees by calling for a freeze in the cost-of-living-adjustment for military and civilian retirees, the Democratic budget assumes a full 4.1-percent cost-of-living adjustment for Social Security and Federal and civilian retirees.

This budget is an investment in the future. We live in a far different world now—one which this Democratic budget reflects.

TIME IS NOW

(Mr. LAGOMARSINO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, for well over a year now, the public has been waiting for Congress to produce a campaign reform bill. With great hoopla and fanfare, we promise our constituents that we would eliminate the abuses which have become so evident over the past few years.

Yet today we stand here, with another election campaign already well underway, and no sign that the promise is going to be fullfilled. Last year, Republicans in the House proposed a comprehensive package of reforms in campaigns finance law. We submitted these to the Democratic leadership for consideration, knowing that only the Democrats, with their overwhelming majority in this House, could bring this issue to the floor for a vote.

Today, more than 6 months later, we are still waiting for a response. Where, we ask, is the Democratic proposal? What is their plan? Will they ever negotiate? The Democrats have the votes in this House to do anything they want; they also have the responsibility to propose a plan for action. If they have no plan, then they have a responsibility to consider the Republican plan.

Our proposal is innovative and responsive. It would cut PAC contributions by 80 percent—or eliminate PAC's entirely. It would require that a majority of campaign contributions come from local sources. It would ban "soft" money in all races. And it would end the "laundering" of campaign contributions by eliminating leadership PAC's and banning transfers between PAC's. It is a good package, a fair package, and it deserves to brought to a vote.

Mr. Speaker, the public is waiting. When will the Democrats make public their plan for ending the scandals? Or will we see yet another Keating five debacle, this time in the House? The time for action, Mr. Speaker, is now.

BUSH BUDGET—NO SUBSTANCE

(Mr. VISCLOSKY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, when President Bush proposed his budget this last January, I was very critical. I felt it involved rhetoric, not substance. Now the other side refuses to engage in even the rhetoric; I think because there is no substance involved.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is the Bush budget calls for a 9 percent real cut in highway funding. The Bush budget calls for 23 percent reduction in budget authority for mass transportation. There are slight reductions for next year's educational budget.

If we are talking about the future, if we are talking about an investment in the future, we are not talking about the Bush budget. That must be why the other side refuses to propose it to this Chamber.

THE LEFT WING'S NOT SO HIDDEN AGENDA FOR EL SALVADOR

(Mr. SHUSTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, the mostly liberal Democratic task force looking into the killings of the Jesuit priests in El Salvador has submitted its report castigating the government of El Salvador for not vigorously investigating the possible involvement of high military officials in the murders.

Chairman MOAKLEY has been very fair in pursuing this matter, and there certainly is reason to criticize the Salvadoran judge, Zamora, for sitting on his hands. But it is also important to recognize that there are those in America who will use this partisan report as part of a carefully choreographed, not so hidden agenda to try to destroy the democratically elected government of El Salvador by withdrawing American support.

How ironic that the left in America, which had no trouble supporting a Communist dictatorship in Nicaragua cannot bring themselves to support a conservative democracy in El Salvador. Especially when President Cristiani has made great progress in reining in the military, while the FMLN Communist guerrillas have increased their terrorism, killing hundreds of innocent civilians in recent months.

So, let us put pressure on the Government of El Salvador to solve the brutal slayings of the Jesuits. But let us not fall into the left wing's trap of using this tragedy as an excuse to destroy this fledging democracy, and thereby hand over the country to the FMLN Communist guerrillas.

ELIMINATE THE BOTTLENECK IN RECYCLING

(Mr. VOLKMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to eliminate a bottleneck which is preventing the recycling of the millions of tons of glass, plastic, paper, and metal cans which are filling up our local landfills.

The two bills I have introduced provide for matching grants for communities and others interested in purchasing equipment to sort and prepare solid waste for recycling, and an investment tax credit for businesses interested in purchasing recycling equipment to make their businesses compatible to accept and use recycleable materials.

I am introducing this legislation in order to accelerate investment in recycling equipment. We all know that too much waste is being generated and too little recycling is taking place. Recycling is not keeping pace. It is this low demand for these secondary materials which is creating the bottleneck and makes this legislation necessary.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation. Your communities will benefit from its passage as there will be less dependence on landfills and incineration for the disposal of household generated wastes. The private sector will benefit because they will be able to purchase recycling equipment they sorely need in order to modernize and make profitable the recycling process.

□ 1220

CAMPAIGN REFORM FAIRNESS

(Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, when legislation to reform campaign finance laws is debated in the coming weeks, Members of this body should be given the opportunity to consider this very important legislation freely and openly without the artificial restrictions of a closed or partially closed rule. As the previous speaker made clear, the Republican proposal contains many important initiatives not included in the publicly discussed simplified solution to campaign finance reform, but every bit as important to a real effective comprehensive reform.

Everyone, Republican and Democrat alike, should have the opportunity to offer amendments to improve the legislation and the House should have the chance to accept or reject those ideas.

Fairness demands an open rule so that the House can work its will in the manner the Founding Fathers intended and campaign reform can be something we can be proud of throughout America.

PRESIDENT DOES NOT REALLY WANT HIS BUDGET CONSIDERED

(Mr. SLATTERY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, President Truman once said, "The buck stops here," and President Nixon in his recent book said that in the final analysis the man at the top must be held responsible.

Today, our President and our Nation's Chief Executive Officer apparently does not even want his budget to be voted on. He apparently does not want to be held accountable for some of the proposals that he is making in his budget.

I have to say that I am absolutely amazed. Could it be that the President does not want the American public to focus on the proposed $5.2 billion cut in Medicare, which would make it virtually impossible for us to deal with some of the unique health care problems we have in rural America, and also in our Nation's inner cities?

Could it also be the President does not want us to focus on his proposed cuts in housing and the cut in the highway funding for this country in spite of the fact that we have an enormous surplus in our Nation's highway trust fund. Apparently he wants to use the surplus to further hide the Nation's deficit?

What about those COLA cuts for some retirees, while other retirees would get their COLA's?

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the President proposed a $1.8 billion cut in agriculture. Could it be that our President doesn't want American farmers to fully understand his proposal. Could it be that he really does not want the American people to focus on his budget so that they truly understand the differences in priorities between the House Budget Committee's proposal and the President's proposal?

Mr. Speaker, I believe that every chief executive officer in this Nation should be held responsible for their budgets, whether it is at the company level, the State level, or the Nation's level. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I hope we vote on the President's budget today and expose it for what it really is.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The Chair will make an announcement. Pursuant to the announcement made a few moments ago by the distinguished Speaker of the House, there will be three more Members from the Republican side to deliver 1 minute speeches. There will be two more Members from the Democratic side before scheduled business.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to know if in the future we could let Members know a little in advance when we are going to curtail the number of 1-minute speeches, because many of us have important things we feel should be said and we wait until the end here to give our 1-minute speeches because we are concerned about other speakers, and then at the last minute it is cut off. I think that is improper.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would address the gentleman from Indiana by saying the Chair will do its best to advise the majority and minority leadership about the routine on taking 1-minute speeches; so the gentleman's statement will be duly noted.

UN MEMBERSHIP FOR LITHUANIA

(Mr. BROOMFIELD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, today's demonstrations at Moscow's May Day rally show that Mr. Gorbachev has got to find a face-saving way to put the crisis in Lithuania behind him.

Here is one way the United States can help him take the first step toward a compromise solution.

The United States should propose U.N. membership for the Republic of Lithuania.

This is not as revolutionary as it seems. Two Soviet republics already belong to the United Nations—Byelorussia and the Ukraine.

U.N. recognition would give Lithuania something it wants—its own independent voice in the international community.

It would give the Soviet Union something it wants—a way to stretch out the break in their relationship.

The Soviet Union will eventually break up. The question is whether it will explode or simply dissolve.

U.N. recognition of Lithuania is one step that can offer Mr. Gorbachev some breathing room and some hope for a smooth and peaceful transition for his empire.

PRESIDENT SHOULD RECOGNIZE LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE

(Mr. SARPALIUS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SARPALIUS. Mr. Speaker, they soon will begin rationing food in the small country of Lithuania, but this is nothing new for the Lithuanians because, you see, at the end of World War II when the Soviets took over Lithuania they gathered everybody who had a strong belief in God, anybody who had any educational training or any skills, and they executed them. They killed over a third of their population. They put people on trains and shipped them up to the north in the cold and put them out of those trains and let them starve to death and freeze to death.

You can understand their determination for independence and freedom; so, Mr. Speaker, I challenge each one of you to try to do what you can to encourage the President to recognize Lithuania. For the past 50 years every President in this country has never recognized the presence of the Soviet Union in Lithuania until now.

So I challenge you to encourage our President to turn toward freedom and democracy for the Lithuanians and give them the recognition that they deserve.

VOTE YES ON SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER

(Mr. BARTON of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for one minute.)

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow the House will debate H.R. 4380, a bill authorizing construction of the superconducting super collider, or SSC. The SSC is a basic high energy physics project. It consists of a 54-mile underground tunnel which is lined with superconducting magnets that accelerate proton beams in opposite directions at the speed of light around a 54-mile tunnel. At certain points these beams are colliding. The scientists hope to study these collisions to understand the basic secrets of matter and energy.

The bill has three main points. It permanently authorizes the project and it should be allowed because it is a multi-year construction project. It has a $5 billion cap on Federal expenditures and it has strong incentives for foreign participation.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge my colleagues tomorrow to vote yes on authorization of H.R. 4380, a bill for the future of this country.

FDIC CHAIRMAN SEIDMAN SHOULD REMAIN IN OFFICE

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I am deeply disappointed by reports that President Bush is urging FDIC Chairman Seidman to resign. There are problems with the S&L bailout, but you do not solve these problems by shooting the messenger. Director Seidman has been the messenger.

We need qualified individuals who are forthcoming about the cost of the bailout and less political yes men who are interested in political damage control.

We all recognize the fact that confidence in the administration's handling of this issue is clearly low. While President Bush properly recognizes that problem, his reaction and solution is inappropriate. Director Seidman is not the problem. Mr. Seidman as Director of the SDIC is by law an appointee with an independence and autonomy, as appropriate, sometimes Mr. Seidman has been a discordant or disjunctive note.

Now the President seeks to replace him with someone who will join the chorus of "Don't worry, be happy," a siren song, which will lead this S&L bailout yet closer to the rocks, Mr. Speaker.

□ 1240

PRESSURE ON TERRORIST STATES SHOULD BE MAINTAINED

(Mr. BURTON of Indiana asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I was disappointed today when I read that President Bush thanked Syria and Iran for their help in getting two American hostages released. Both Syria and Iran are listed as terrorist states in the latest report on terrorist.

In addition, even though they are still a terrorist state, we are about to reestablish diplomatic relations with South Yemen.

Instead of thanking Syria and Iran and recognizing South Yemen, we should keep economic and other pressure on them until they change their policies and release all of the hostages. Thanking them is like thanking a mass murderer for not killing one more.

I understand we are also about to extend most-favored-nation status again to Communist China and the repression there is worse than ever—and its business as usual with the Soviet Union—never mind Lithuania.

Pragmatism will kill liberty and democracy, but I suppose you can always find some rational reason for accommodating tyrants.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, a number of us were caught off guard by the ruling of the Chair that certain designated speakers would be able to speak, and then a preliminary number, a preliminarily agreed number, of speakers would be allowed to speak at 1 minute. Then others would not.

Specifically, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HANCOCK], the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON], the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE], and myself would like to be designated tomorrow on the 1-minute docket, so that we could get our 1-minute speeches in.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair at this point will not designate for tomorrow, but the Chair will certainly make note of the gentleman's request, on his behalf and on behalf of his colleagues.

The gentleman could make that same request to his leadership, so that the Speaker can be presented that list for tomorrow.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I thank the Speaker. I would just point out that I was here on time today, and I plan to be here on time tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appreciates the statement from the gentleman from Louisiana.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI) laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
OFFICE OF THE CLERK,
Washington, DC, April 30, 1990.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
The Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 5 of Rule III of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, I have the honor to transmit a sealed envelope received from the White House at 5:05 p.m. on Monday, April 30, 1990 and said to contain a message from the President wherein he transmits a report to the Congress on developments in Panama since the last Presidential report of 10/19/89. Attached are the fact sheet and a copy of the Panamanian Transactions Regulations; Final Rule, as it appeared in the Federal Register of 2/1/90.

With great respect, I am
Sincerely yours,
DONNALD K. ANDERSON,
Clerk, U.S. House of Representatives.

REPORT ON NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO PANAMA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 101-183)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed:

(For message, see proceedings of the Senate of Monday, April 30, 1990, at Page 8795.)

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Rollcall votes on the first three motions, if postponed, will be taken after debate has concluded on those bills: H.R. 4557, H.R. 743, and S. 1485.

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS HEALTH PROFESSIONAL COMPENSATION AND LABOR-RELATIONS ACT OF 1990

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4557) to amend title 38, United States Code, to improve the capability of the Department of Veterans Affairs to recruit and retain physicians and dentists through increases in special pay authorities, to revise and improve recruitment and retention of nurses in the Department by providing greater flexibility in the pay system for nurses, to authorize collective bargaining over conditions of employment for health-care employees of the Department of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4557

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor-Relations Act of 1990".

TITLE I—PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS SPECIAL PAY

SEC. 101. REVISION AND REORGANIZATION OF SPECIAL PAY STATUTE.

(a) REDESIGNATION OF SUBCHAPTERS.—Chapter 73 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subchapters II, III, V, and VI as subchapters V, VI, VII, and VIII, respectively;

(2) by redesignating sections 4121 through 4124 as sections 4151 through 4154, respectively;

(3) by redesignating sections 4131 through 4134 as sections 4161 through 4164, respectively;

(4) by redesignating sections 4151 and 4152 as sections 4171 and 4172, respectively; and

(5) by redesignating sections 4161 through 4168 as sections 4181 through 4188, respectively.

(b) NEW SPECIAL PAY STATUTE.—Such chapter is further amended by inserting after subchapter I the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER III—SPECIAL PAY FOR PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS

"§ 4131. Special pay: authority

"(a) In order to recruit and retain highly qualified physicians and dentists in the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration, the Secretary shall provide special pay under this subchapter. Such special pay shall be provided under regulations that the Secretary shall prescribe to carry out this subchapter.

"(b) Special pay may be paid to a physician or dentist under this subchapter only upon the execution of, and for the duration of, a written agreement entered into by the physician or dentist in accordance with section 4132 of this title.

"(c) A physician or dentist serving a period of obligated service pursuant to chapter 76 of this title is not eligible for special pay under this subchapter during the first three years of such obligated service, except that, at the discretion of the Secretary and upon the recommendation of the Chief Medical Director, such a physician or dentist may be paid special pay for full-time status during those three years.

"(d)(1) The Secretary may determine categories of positions applicable to both physicians and dentists in the Department as to which there is no significant recruitment and retention problem. Notwithstanding any other provision of this subchapter, physicians and dentists serving in those positions shall not be eligible for special pay under this subchapter.

"(2) Not later than one year after making any such determination with respect to a category of positions, and each year thereafter that such determination remains in effect, the Secretary shall make a redetermination.

"(3) Any determination under this subsection shall be in accordance with regulations prescribed to carry out this subchapter.

"(e) Special pay may not be paid under this section to a physician or dentist who—

"(1) is employed on less than a half-time or intermittent basis;

"(2) occupies an internship or residency training position; or

"(3) is a reemployed annuitant.

"§ 4132. Special pay: written agreements

"(a) An agreement entered into by a physician or dentist under this subchapter shall cover a period of one year of service in the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration unless the physician or dentist agrees to an agreement for a longer period of service, not to exceed four years. Any such longer period of service shall be for two full years of service, three full years of service, or four full years of service and shall be specified in the agreement. A physician or dentist who has previously entered into such an agreement is eligible to enter into a subsequent agreement unless the physician or dentist has failed to refund to the United States any amount which the physician or dentist is obligated to refund under any such previous agreement.

"(b)(1) An agreement under this subchapter shall provide that if the physician or dentist entering into the agreement voluntarily, or because of misconduct, fails to complete any of the years of service covered by the agreement (measured from the anniversary date of the agreement), the physician or dentist shall refund the total amount of special pay received under the agreement for that year.

"(2) The Secretary may waive (in whole or in part) the requirement for a refund under paragraph (1) in any case if the Secretary determines (in accordance with regulations prescribed under section 4131(b) of this title) that the failure to complete such period of service is necessitated by circumstances beyond the control of the physician or dentist.

"(3) Any such agreement shall specify the terms under which the Department and the physician or dentist may elect to terminate the agreement.

"(c)(1) If a proposed agreement under this subchapter will provide a total amount of special pay (stated on an annual basis) to be provided to a physician or dentist who has previously entered into an agreement under this subchapter (or under section 4118 of this title as in effect before the effective date of the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor-Relations Act of 1990) that will exceed the previous amount of special pay provided for the physician or dentist by more than 50 percent, or that will be less than the previous amount of special pay provided for the physician or dentist by more than 25 percent, the proposed agreement shall be promptly submitted to the Secretary. The proposed agreement shall not take effect if it is disapproved by the Secretary within 45 days after the date on which the physician or dentist entered into the proposed agreement.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the previous amount of special pay provided for a physician or dentist is the total amount of special pay (stated on an annual basis) provided, or to be provided, to the physician or dentist for the most recent year covered by an agreement entered into by the physician or dentist under this subchapter or under section 4118 of this title. In the case of an agreement entered into under section 4118 of this title, incentive pay shall be treated as special pay for purposes of this paragraph.

"(3) The Secretary shall adjust amounts of special pay as necessary for purposes of this subsection to reflect appropriately any change in the status of a physician or dentist (A) from full-time status to part-time status, (B) from part-time status to full-time status, or (C) from one proportion of time spent as a Department employee under part-time status employment to a different proportion.

"§ 4133. Special pay: full-time physicians

"(a) The Secretary shall provide special pay under this subchapter to eligible physicians employed on a full-time basis based upon the factors, and at the annual rates, specified in subsection (b).

"(b) The special pay factors, and the annual rates, applicable to full-time physicians are as follows:

"(1) For full-time status, $9,000.

"(2) For tenure of service within the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration—

"Tenure	Amount
	Minimum	Maximum
For 2 years but less than 4 years.	$3,000	$6,000
For 4 years but less than 8 years.	6,000	12,000
For 8 years but less than 15 years.	12,000	18,000
For 15 years or more.	15,000	25,000

"(3) For service in a medical specialty with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties (on a nation-wide basis or on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility) in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians, an amount not more than $40,000.

"(4)(A) For service in any of the following executive positions, an amount not to exceed the amount applicable to that position as follows:

"Position	Maximum amount
Service Chief (or in a comparable position as determined by the Secretary)	$15,000
Chief of Staff or in an Executive Grade	25,000
Director Grade	25,000.

"(B) For service in any of the following executive positions, the amount applicable to that position as follows:

"Position	Amount
Service Director	$25,000
Assistant Chief Medical Director	30,000
Deputy Assistant Chief Medical Director	30,000
Associate Deputy Chief Medical Director	35,000
Deputy Chief Medical Director	40,000
Chief Medical Director	45,000.

"(5) For specialty or first board certification, $2,000, or for subspecialty or secondary board certification, $2,500.

"(6) For service in a specific geographic location with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians in a specific category of physicians, an amount of not more than $17,000.

"(c) The Secretary shall exercise the authority provided in this subchapter to provide the maximum amount of special pay under this subchapter to the Chief Medical Director and Deputy Chief Medical Director.

"§ 4134. Special pay: part-time physicians

"(a)(1) The Secretary shall provide special pay under this subchapter to eligible physicians employed on a part-time basis based upon the factors, and at the annual rates, specified in subsection (b).

"(2) In the case of each such factor (other than a factor specified in paragraph (4) of subsection (b)), the Secretary shall pay a proportion of the amount that would be applicable to that physician if that physician was employed on a full-time basis, determined by multiplying such amount by the proportion which the physician's part-time employment in the Department bears to full-time employment. However, in the case of part-time employment in a proportion greater than ⅝, the proportion to be used for calculating such special pay shall be ⅝.

"(b) The special pay factors, and the annual rates (subject to subsection (a)(2)), applicable to part-time physicians are as follows:

"(1) For tenure of service within the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration, the years of service, and the minimum and maximum amounts, applicable to full-time physicians under section 4133(b)(2) of this title.

"(2) For service in a medical specialty with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties (on a nation-wide basis or on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility) in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians, an amount not more than the maximum amount applicable to full-time physicians under section 4133(b)(3) of this title.

"(3) For service (A) as a Service Chief (or in a comparable position as determined by the Secretary), or (B) as a Chief of Staff or in an Executive Grade, an amount not more than the maximum amount applicable to that position for full-time physicians under section 4133(b)(4)(A) of this title.

"(4) For specialty or first board certification, $1,500, or for subspecialty or secondary board certification, $1,875.

"(5) For service in a specific geographic location with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians in a specific category of physicians, an amount not more than the maximum amount applicable to full-time physicians under section 4133(b)(6) of this title.

"§ 4135. Special pay: full-time dentists

"(a) The Secretary shall provide special pay under this subchapter to eligible dentists employed on a full-time basis based upon the factors, and at the annual rates, specified in subsection (b).

"(b) The special pay factors, and the annual rates, applicable to full-time dentists are as follows:

"(1) For full-time status, $3,500.

"(2) For tenure of service within the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration—

"(A) of two years but less than seven years, $800; and

"(B) of seven years or more, $1,600.

"(3) For service in a dental specialty with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties (on a nation-wide basis or on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility) in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists, an amount not more than $20,000.

"(4) For service in any of the following executive positions, an amount not to exceed the amount applicable to that position as follows:

"Position	Maximum amount
Service Chief (or in a comparable position as determined by the Secretary)	$5,000
Chief of Staff, Executive Grade, or Director Grade	9,000
Service Director	9,000
Deputy Assistant Chief Medical Director	10,000
Assistant Chief Medical Director	10,000.

"(5) For specialty or first board certification, $2,000, or for subspecialty or secondary board certification, $2,500.

"(6) For service in a specific geographic location with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists in a specific category of dentists, an amount not more than $5,000.

"§ 4136. Special pay: part-time dentists

"(a)(1) The Secretary shall provide special pay under this subchapter to eligible dentists employed on a part-time basis based upon the factors, and at the annual rates, specified in subsection (b).

"(2) In the case of each such factor (other than a factor specified in paragraph (4) of subsection (b)), the Secretary shall pay a proportion of the amount that would be applicable to that dentist if that dentist was employed on a full-time basis, determined by multiplying such amount by the proportion which the dentist's part-time employment in the Department bears to full-time employment. However, in the case of part-time employment in a proportion greater than 5/8, the proportion to be used for calculating such special pay shall be 5/8.

"(b) The special pay factors, and the annual rates (subject to subsection (a)(2)), applicable to part-time dentists are as follows:

"(1) For tenure of service within the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration, the years of service, and the minimum and maximum amounts, applicable to full-time dentists under section 4135(b)(2) of this title.

"(2) For service in a dental specialty with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties (on a nation-wide basis or on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility) in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists, an amount not more than the maximum amount applicable to full-time dentists under section 4135(b)(3) of this title.

"(3) For service (A) as a Service Chief (or in a comparable position as determined by the Secretary), or (B) as a Chief of Staff or in an Executive Grade, an amount not more than the maximum amount applicable to that position for full-time dentists under section 4135(b)(4) of this title.

"(4) For specialty or first board certification, $1,500, or for subspecialty or secondary board certification, $1,875.

"(5) For service in a specific geographic location with respect to which there are extraordinary difficulties in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists in a specific category of dentists, an amount not more than the maximum amount applicable to full-time dentists under section 4135(b)(6) of this title.

"§ 4137. Special pay: general provisions

"(a) A physician who is provided special pay for service in an executive position under paragraph (4)(B) of section 4133(b) of this title may not also be provided scarce specialty special pay under paragraph (3) of that section. A dentist who is provided special pay for service in an executive position under paragraph (4) of section 4135(b) of this title for service as a Service Director, Deputy Assistant Chief Medical Director, or Assistant Chief Medical Director may not also be provided scarce specialty special pay under paragraph (3) of that section.

"(b) The following determinations under this subchapter shall be made under regulations prescribed under section 4131 of this title:

"(1) A determination that there are extraordinary difficulties (on a nation-wide basis or on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility) in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians in a medical specialty or in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists in a dental specialty.

"(2) A determination of the amount of special pay to be paid to a physician or dentist for a factor of special pay for which the applicable rate is specified as a range of amounts.

"(3) A determination of whether there are extraordinary difficulties in a specific geographic location in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians in a specific category of physicians or in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists in a specific category of dentists.

"(c) A determination for the purposes of this subchapter that there are extraordinary difficulties in the recruitment or retention of qualified physicians in a medical specialty, or in the recruitment or retention of qualified dentists in a dental specialty, on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility may only be made upon the request of the director of that facility.

"(d) A physician or dentist may not be provided scarce specialty pay under section 4133(b), 4134(b), 4135(b), or 4136(b) of this title (whichever is applicable) on the basis of the needs of a specific medical facility unless the Secretary also determines that geographic location pay under that section is insufficient to meet the needs of that facility for qualified physicians or dentists, as the case may be.

"(e) Any amount of special pay payable under this subchapter shall be paid in equal installments in accordance with regularly established pay periods.

"(f) Except as otherwise expressly provided by law, special pay may not be provided to a physician or dentist in the Veterans' Health Services and Research Administration for any factor not specified in section 4133, 4134, 4135, or 4136, as applicable, of this title.

"§ 4138. Special pay: coordination with other benefits laws

"(a) Special pay paid under this subchapter shall be in addition to any other pay and allowances to which a physician or dentist is entitled.

"(b) Compensation paid under this subchapter to a full-time employee shall be included in basic pay for purposes of chapter 83 or 84 of title 5 (relating to retirement benefits for Federal employees), as the case may be. However, such compensation paid to a full-time employee may be included in average pay (as defined in section 8331(4) or 8401(3) of such title (as applicable)) only—

"(1) for the purposes of computing disability or survivor benefits under section 8337, 8341(d), 8341(e), 8442(b), 8443, or 8451 of such title; or

"(2) if the employee has completed not less than 15 years of full-time service in the Administration.

"(c) Compensation paid as special pay under this subchapter or under an agreement entered into under section 4118 of this title (as in effect on the day before the effective date of the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor-Relations Act of 1990) shall be considered as annual pay for the purposes of chapter 87 of title 5, relating to life insurance for Federal employees.

"(d) Compensation paid after September 30, 1980, as special pay under an agreement entered into under section 4118 of this title (as in effect on the day before the effective date of the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor-Relations Act of 1990) to a full-time employee shall be included in basic pay for purposes of chapter 83 or 84 of title 5, as the case may be. However, such compensation paid to a full-time employee after such date may be included in average pay (as defined in section 8331(4) or 8401(3) of such title (as applicable)) only—

"(1) for the purposes of computing disability or survivor benefits under section 8337, 8341(d), 8341(e), 8442(b), 8443, or 8451 of such title; or

"(2) if the employee has completed not less than 15 years of full-time service in the Administration (except that, regardless of the length of such employee's service, special pay may not be included in average pay in computing an annuity that commenced before October 1, 1985, and only one-half of any such special pay paid after September 30, 1980, may be included in average pay in computing an annuity that commenced on or after October 1, 1985, but before October 1, 1990).

"(e) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (d), compensation paid as special pay under this subchapter or under section 4118 of this title (as in effect on the day before the effective date of the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor-Relations Act of 1990) may not be considered as basic pay for the purposes of subchapter VI and section 5595 of chapter 55 or chapter 81, 83, or 84 of title 5, or other benefits related to basic pay.

"§ 4139. Periodic review of pay of physicians and dentists; quadrennial report

"(a) In order to make possible the recruitment and retention of a well-qualified work force of physicians and dentists capable of providing quality care for eligible veterans, it is the policy of Congress to assure that the levels of total pay for physicians and dentists of the Veterans Health Services Administration are fixed at levels reasonably comparable—

"(1) with the levels of total pay of physicians and dentists employed by or serving in other departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and

"(2) with the income of non-Federal physicians and dentists.

"(b)(1) To assist the Congress and the President in carrying out the policy stated in subsection (a), the Secretary shall—

"(A) define the bases for pay distinctions, if any, among various categories of physicians and dentists, including distinctions between physicians and dentists employed by the Department and physicians and dentists employed by other departments and agencies of the Federal Government and between all Federal sector and non-Federal sector physicians and dentists; and

"(B) obtain measures of income from the employment or practice of physicians and dentists in the non-Department sector, including both the Federal and non-Federal sectors, for use as guidelines for setting and periodically adjusting the amounts of special pay for Department physicians and dentists.

"(2) The Secretary shall submit to the President a report, on such date as the President may designate but not later than December 31, 1992, and once every four years thereafter, recommending appropriate amounts of special pay to carry out the policy set forth in subsection (a) with respect to the pay of Department physicians and dentists. The Secretary shall include in such report, when considered appropriate and necessary by the Secretary, recommendations for modifications of the special pay levels set forth in this subchapter whenever—

"(A) the Department is unable to recruit or retain a sufficient work force of well-qualified physicians and dentists because the incomes of non-Department physicians and dentists performing comparable types of duties are significantly in excess of the levels of total pay (including basic pay and special pay) of Department physicians and dentists, or

"(B) other extraordinary circumstances are such that special pay levels are needed to recruit or retain a sufficient number of well-qualified physicians and dentists.

"(c) The President shall include in the Budget next transmitted to the Congress under section 1105 of title 31 after the submission of each report of the Secretary under subsection (b)(2) recommendations with respect to the exact rates of special pay for physicians and dentists under this subchapter.

"§ 4140. Annual report

"The Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives an annual report on the use of the authorities provided in this subchapter. The report shall be submitted each year as part of the budget justification documents submitted by the Secretary in support of the budget of the President submitted pursuant to section 1105 of title 31 that year. Each such report shall include the following:

"(1) A review of the use of the authorities provided in this subchapter (including the Secretary's and Chief Medical Director's actions, findings, recommendations, and other activities under this subchapter) during the preceding fiscal year and the fiscal year during which the report is submitted.

"(2) The Secretary's plans for the use of the authorities provided in this subchapter for the next fiscal year.

"(3) A description of the amounts of special pay paid during the preceding fiscal year, shown by category of pay.

"(4) A list of those geographic areas, and those scarce specialties, for which special pay was paid during the preceding fiscal year, those for which special pay is being paid during the current fiscal year, and those for which special pay is expected to be paid during the next fiscal year, together with a summary of any differences among those three lists.

"(5) The number of physicians and dentists who left employment with the Department during the preceding year and the number who changed from full-time status to part-time status, and the reasons therefor.

"(6) The number of unfilled physician and dentist positions in the Administration and the reasons that each such position is unfilled.".

SEC. 102. CONFORMING AND TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

(a) REPEAL OF SECTION 4118.—Section 4118 of title 38, United States Code, is repealed.

(b) CROSS-REFERENCE AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 4107 of such title is amended—

(A) in subsection (c), by striking out "section 4118 of this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "subchapter III of this chapter"; and

(B) in subsection (d), by striking out "sections 4118 and 4120 of this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4120 of this title and subchapter III of this chapter".

(2) Section 4120(f) of such title is amended by striking out "section 4118 of this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "subchapter III of this chapter".

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO REDESIGNATED SUBCHAPTERS.—Subchapters V, VI, VII, and VIII of chapter 73 of such title (as redesignated by section 101) are amended as follows:

(1) Such subchapters are amended—

(A) by striking out "Administrator" and "Administrator's" each place they appear and inserting in lieu thereof "Secretary" and "Secretary's", respectively;

(B) by striking out "Veterans' Administration" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "Department"; and

(C) by striking out "Department of Medicine and Surgery" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "Veterans Health Services and Research Administration".

(2) Sections 4161 and 4163(b) (as redesignated by section 101) are amended by striking out "section 4134" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4164".

(3) Section 4164 (as redesignated by section 101) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by striking out "section 4131", "section 4132", and "section 4133" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4161", "section 4162", and "section 4163", respectively; and

(B) in subsection (c)—

(i) by striking out "sections 4131, 4132, and 4133" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 4161, 4162, and 4163"; and

(ii) by striking out "section 4132(b)(2)(C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4162(b)(2)(C)".

(4) Section 4171 (as redesignated by section 101) is amended by striking out "section 4152" in subsections (b)(3) and (d) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4172".

(5) Section 4172 (as redesignated by section 101) is amended by striking out "section 4151" in subsection (a)(1) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4171".

(6)(A) Such subchapters are further amended by striking out "of this section" and "of this subsection" each place they appear (other than in subsections (d), (e), and (g) of section 4162 and in section 4163(b), both sections as redesignated by section 101).

(B) Section 4162(f)(2)(B) (as redesignated by section 101) is amended by striking out "of this paragraph".

(7)(A) Sections 629(d) and 653(b) are amended by striking out "4132" and inserting in lieu thereof "4162".

(B) Section 3305(a) is amended by striking out "section 4152(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4172(b)".

(C) Section 4209(a)(1) is amended by striking out "section 4161" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4181".

SEC. 103. REIMBURSEMENT OF CONTINUING PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION EXPENSES FOR FULL-TIME BOARD-CERTIFIED PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Section 4113 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by inserting "(a)" at the beginning of the text; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) The Secretary shall reimburse any full-time board-certified physician or dentist appointed under section 4104(1) of this title for expenses incurred, up to $1,000 per year, for continuing professional education.".

(2) The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

"§ 4113. Travel expenses of certain employees; continuing professional education of physicians".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to expenses incurred after September 30, 1990.

SEC. 104. EFFECTIVE DATE AND TRANSITION.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by sections 101 and 102 shall take effect on the later of—

(1) October 1, 1990; or

(2) the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Except as provided in subsection (c), any agreement entered into under section 4118 of title 38, United States Code, before the effective date specified in subsection (a) shall remain in effect in accordance with its terms and shall be treated for all purposes in accordance with such section as in effect on the day before such effective date.

(c) TRANSITION FOR CERTAIN MULTIYEAR AGREEMENTS.—A physician or dentist who before the effective date specified in subsection (a) entered into an agreement under section 4118 of title 38, United States Code, that covers a period in excess of one year and that will expire more than one year after such effective date may, with the approval of the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, terminate such agreement after such effective date in order to enter into a new agreement under subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 38, United States Code, as added by section 101. Any such termination may take effect only on the anniversary date of the agreement terminated.

(d) PROHIBITION OF RETROACTIVE AGREEMENTS.—An agreement entered into under subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 38, United States Code, as added by section 101, may not provide special pay with respect to a period before the date on which the agreement is entered into.

TITLE II—NURSES PAY GRADES AND PAY ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 201. RESTRUCTURING OF NURSE GRADE LEVELS AND PAY.

(a) NEW GRADES ESTABLISHED.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall restructure the current nurse grades of the Department of Veterans Affairs so as to provide four grade levels for nurses employed by that Department under section 4104(1) of title 38, United States Code. Those grade levels shall be established with the following relationships to the current nurse grades and to pay grades under the General Schedule under title 5, United States Code.

New grades	Current nurse grades	GS grades
1. Entry grade	Junior and associate grades	GS 6–10
2. Intermediate grade	Full and intermediate grades	GS 9–12
3. Senior grade	Senior and chief grades	GS 12–14
4. Director grade	Assistant director and director grades	GS 14–16

(b) CURRENT NURSE GRADES DEFINED.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term "current nurse grades" means the grades in effect on the effective date of this Act for nurses employed by the Department of Veterans Affairs under section 4104(1) of title 38, United States Code.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 4107(b) of title 38, United States Code, is amended by striking out the items under the heading "NURSE SCHEDULE" and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Entry grade.
"Intermediate grade.
"Senior grade.
"Director grade.".

SEC. 202. PAY STRUCTURE AND ADMINISTRATION FOR NEW NURSE GRADES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 73 of title 38, United States Code, as amended by section 101, is further amended by inserting after subchapter III (as added by section 101(b)) the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER IV—PAY FOR NURSES AND OTHER HEALTH-CARE PROVIDERS

"§ 4141. Nurses: grades, rates of pay, and administration of pay

"(a) The Secretary shall maintain the four grade levels for nurses employed by the Department under section 4104(1) of this title as specified in the Nurse Schedule in section 4107(b) of this title. Those grade levels shall have the following relationships to pay grades under the General Schedule under title 5:

"Nurse Grades	GS Grades
Entry grade	GS 6–10
Intermediate grade	GS 9–12
Senior grade	GS 12–14
Director grade	GS 14–16

"(b) The rates of basic pay for those nurse grades shall, for each grade, be established pursuant to this section. The minimum and maximum rates of basic pay for each nurse grade shall be the lowest minimum, and the highest maximum, respectively, rate of pay for the General Schedule grades corresponding to that nurse grade.

"(c)(1) The range of basic pay for each nurse grade shall be divided into 20 equal increments, known as 'steps'. Rates of pay within a grade shall be established only as full steps. Any increase within a grade in the rate of basic pay payable to a nurse shall be by one or more of such step increments. The director of each medical center may (subject to this section) determine the standards and criteria for such increases.

"(2) Regulations prescribed under this section shall provide—

"(A) that the rate of basic pay of each nurse of the Department employed under section 4104(1) of this title shall be increased at least one step increment in that nurse's grade not less often than every two years that the nurse holds that grade (unless the Secretary determines that the performance of the nurse during the preceding two years has not been satisfactory); and

"(B) that whenever a nurse is given a new duty assignment which is a promotion, the rate of basic pay of that nurse shall be increased at least one step increment in that nurse's grade.

"(3) A nurse of the Department serving in a head nurse position shall while so serving receive basic pay at a rate two steps above the rate that would otherwise be applicable to the nurse.

"(d) A nurse who is promoted to the next higher nurse grade shall be appointed in that grade at a rate of basic pay that is greater than the rate of basic pay applicable to the nurse in the lower grade.

"(e) Under regulations which the Secretary prescribes for the administration of this section, the director of a medical center of the Department may provide step promotions within a grade, or may pay a cash bonus, to a nurse employed at the medical center who has qualifications, experience, or achievement which the director determines exceed the standards for the nurse's grade. In making such a determination, the director shall consider the following:

"(1) Service with relevant professional committees or groups.

"(2) Service in a responsible office in a professional nursing society.

"(3) Educational attainment (including certification).

"(4) Publication of articles in professional journals.

"(5) Exemplary job performance.

"(6) Other appropriate evidence of professional stature.

"(f)(1) The Secretary shall provide (in regulations prescribed for the administration of this section) that the director of a medical center of the Department, in appointing a person under section 4104(1) of this title as a nurse for employment at that medical center, may appoint that nurse at a rate of basic pay in excess of the minimum rate of basic pay applicable to the grade in which the appointment is made (but not in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay for that grade) without a requirement for prior approval at any higher level of authority within the Department if the director determines that it is necessary to do so in order to obtain the services of nurses employed under section 4104(1) of this title in that nurse grade at that medical center.

"(2) Such a determination may be made by the director of a medical center only in order—

"(A) to provide pay in an amount competitive with the amount of the same type of pay paid to nurses at non-Federal facilities in the same labor market;

"(B) to achieve adequate staffing at the medical center concerned; or

"(C) to recruit nurses with specialized skills, especially nurses with skills which are especially difficult or demanding.

"(3) Whenever the director of a medical center exercises authority under this subsection without prior approval at a higher level of authority within the Department, the director shall—

"(A) document in writing the reasons for employing the nurse concerned at a rate of pay in excess of the minimum rate of basic pay applicable to the grade in which the nurse is appointed (and shall retain that document on file); and

"(B) in the first budget submission of the director prepared after the nurse is employed, include documentation for the need for such increased rates of basic pay.

"(g) A nurse employed under section 4104(1) of this title who (without a break in employment) transfers from one medical center of the Department to another may not be reduced in grade. The rate of basic pay of such a nurse may be established at the new medical center in a manner consistent with the practices at that medical center for a nurse of that grade.".

(b) REPEAL OF LIMITATION ON HOURLY RATE OF OVERTIME PAY.—Section 4107(e)(5) of such title is amended by striking out ", not to exceed" in the first sentence and all that follows through "Nurse Schedule".

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 73 of such title is amended—

(1) by striking out the item relating to section 4113 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4113. Travel expenses of certain employees; continuing professional education of physicians.";

(2) by striking out the item relating to section 4118;

(3) by inserting after the item relating to section 4120 the following:

"SUBCHAPTER III—SPECIAL PAY FOR PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS

"4131. Special pay: authority.
"4132. Special pay: written agreements.
"4133. Special pay: full-time physicians.
"4134. Special pay: part-time physicians.
"4135. Special pay: full-time dentists.
"4136. Special pay: part-time dentists.
"4137. Special pay: general provisions.
"4138. Special pay: coordination with other benefits laws.
"4139. Periodic review of pay of physicians and dentists; quadrennial report.
"4140. Annual report.

"SUBCHAPTER IV—PAY FOR NURSES AND OTHER HEALTH-CARE PROVIDERS

"4141. Nurses: grades, rates of pay, and administration of pay."; and

(4) by revising the items in such table to conform to the redesignations made by paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 101(a).

SEC. 203. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This title and the amendments made by this title shall take effect on the later of—
(1) October 1, 1990; or
(2) the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE III—LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

SEC. 301. COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AND GRIEVANCE PROCEDURES FOR TITLE 38 EMPLOYEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4108 of title 38, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 4108. Personnel administration; collective bargaining

"(a)(1) Notwithstanding any law, Executive order, or regulation, the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation the hours and conditions of employment and leaves of absence of employees appointed under any provision of this chapter in positions in the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration listed in section 4104(1) of this title.

"(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this title, the authority of the Secretary to prescribe regulations under paragraph (1) is subject to the right of Federal employees to engage in collective bargaining with respect to conditions of employment through representatives chosen by them in accordance with chapter 71 of title 5 (relating to labor-management relations). Such collective bargaining (and any grievance procedures provided under a collective bargaining agreement) in the case of employees described in paragraph (1) may not cover, or have any applicability to, any matter or question concerning, or arising out of, professional conduct or competence.

"(b)(1) For purposes of this section, the term 'professional conduct or competence' means any of the following:
"(A) Direct patient care.
"(B) Clinical competence.
"(C) Professional judgment.
"(D) Peer review.

"(2) An issue of whether a matter or question concerns, or arises out of, professional conduct or competence shall be decided by the Secretary and is not itself subject to collective bargaining and may not be reviewed by any other agency or by any court.

"(3) Any petition for judicial review or petition for enforcement under section 7123 of title 5 in any case involving employees described in paragraph (1), or arising out of the applicability of chapter 71 of title 5 to employees in those positions, shall be taken only in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

"(c)(1) The Secretary may prescribe regulations establishing conditions under which officers and employees of the Administration who are nationally recognized principal investigators in medical research may be permitted to accept payment, in cash or in kind, from non-Federal agencies, organizations, and individuals for travel and such reasonable subsistence expenses as are approved by the Secretary pursuant to such regulations—

"(A) in connection with their attendance at meetings or in performing advisory services concerned with the functions or activities of the Department; or

"(B) in connection with acceptance of significant awards or with activity related thereto concerned with functions or activities of the Department.

"(2) Any such payment may be retained by such officers and employees to cover the cost of such expenses or shall be deposited to the credit of the appropriation from which the cost of such expenses is paid, as may be provided in such regulations.

"(d)(1) The hours of employment in carrying out responsibilities under this title of any employee who is appointed in the Administration under any provision of this chapter on a full-time basis in a position listed in section 4104(1) of this title (other than an intern or resident appointed pursuant to section 4114 of this title) and who accepts responsibilities for carrying out professional services for remuneration other than those assigned under this title shall consist of not less than 80 hours in a biweekly pay period (as that term is used in section 5504 of title 5). Such a person may not do any of the following:

"(A) Assume responsibility for the medical care of any patient other than a patient admitted for treatment at a Department facility, except in those cases where the person, upon request and with the approval of the Chief Medical Director, assumes such responsibilities to assist communities or medical practice groups to meet medical needs which would not otherwise be available for a period not to exceed 180 calendar days, which may be extended by the Under Secretary for additional periods not to exceed 180 calendar days each.

"(B) Teach or provide consultative services at any affiliated institution if such teaching or consultation will, because of its nature or duration, conflict with such person's responsibilities under this title.

"(C) Accept payment under any insurance or assistance program established under title XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act or under chapter 55 of title 10 for professional services rendered by such person while carrying out such person's responsibilities under this title.

"(D) Accept from any source, with respect to any travel performed by such person in the course of carrying out such person's responsibilities under this title, any payment or per diem for such travel, other than as provided for in section 4111 of title 5.

"(E) Request or permit any individual or organization to pay, on such person's behalf for insurance insuring such person against malpractice claims arising in the course of carrying out such person's responsibilities under this title or for such person's dues or similar fees for membership in medical or dental societies or related professional associations, except where such payments constitute a part of such person's remuneration for the performance of professional responsibilities permitted under this section, other than those carried out under this title.

"(F) Perform, in the course of carrying out such person's responsibilities under this title, professional services for the purpose of generating money for any fund or account which is maintained by an affiliated institution for the benefit of such institution, or for such person's personal benefit, or both.

"(2) In the case of any fund or account described in paragraph (1)(F) that was established before September 1, 1973—

"(A) the affiliated institution shall submit semiannually an accounting to the Secretary and to the Comptroller General of the United States with respect to such fund or account and shall maintain such fund or account subject to full public disclosure and audit by the Secretary and the Comptroller General for a period of three years or for such longer period as the Secretary shall prescribe, and

"(B) no person in a position specified in paragraph (1)(B) may receive any cash from amounts deposited in such fund or account derived from services performed before that date.

"(3) As used in this subsection:

"(A) The term 'affiliated institution' means a medical school or other institution of higher learning with which the Secretary has a contract or agreement as referred to in section 4112(b) of this title for the training or education of health personnel.

"(B) The term 'remuneration' means the receipt of any amount of monetary benefit from any non-Department source in payment for carrying out any professional responsibilities.

"(e) A person serving as a Chief of Staff of a Department health-care facility shall be appointed on a full-time basis.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 4316(b)(4) of such title is amended by striking out "section 4108(c)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4108(d)(3)(A)".

SEC. 302. ADVERSE PERSONNEL ACTIONS.

(a) REFORM OF DISCIPLINARY PROCEDURES FOR SECTION 4104(1) EMPLOYEES.—Chapter 73 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by striking out section 4110 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"§ 4110. Adverse actions: section 4104(1) employees

"(a) Whenever the Chief Medical Director (or an official designated by the Chief Medical Director) brings charges based on conduct or performance against a section 4104(1) employee and as a result of those charges an adverse personnel action is taken against the employee, the employee shall have the right to appeal the action.

"(b)(1) If the case involves or includes a question of professional conduct or competence in which a major adverse action was taken, such an appeal shall be made to a Disciplinary Appeals Board under section 4110A of this title.

"(2) In any other case, such an appeal shall be made—

"(A) through Department grievance procedures under section 4110B of this title, in any case that involves or includes a question of professional conduct or competence in which a major adverse action was not taken or in any case of an employee who is not covered by a collective bargaining agreement under chapter 71 of title 5; or

"(B) through grievance procedures provided through collective bargaining under chapter 71 of title 5 or through Department grievance procedures under section 4110B of this title, as the employee elects, in the case of an employee covered by a collective bargaining agreement under chapter 71 of title 5 that does not involve or include a question of professional conduct or competence.

"(c) For purposes of this section and sections 4110A, 4110B, and 4110C of this title—

"(1) Section 4104(1) employees are employees of the Department employed on a full-time basis under a permanent appointment in a position listed in section 4104(1) of this title (other than interns and residents appointed pursuant to section 4114 of this title).

"(2) A major adverse action is an adverse action which includes any of the following:

"(A) Suspension.

"(B) Transfer.

"(C) Reduction in grade.

"(D) Reduction in basic pay.

"(E) Discharge.

"(3) A question of professional conduct or competence is a question involving any of the following:

"(A) Direct patient care.

"(B) Clinical competence.

"(C) Professional judgment.

"(D) Peer review.

"(d) An issue of whether a matter or question concerns, or arises out of, professional conduct or competence is not itself subject to any grievance procedure provided by law, regulation, or collective bargaining and may not be reviewed by any other agency or by any court.

"(e) Whenever the Secretary proposes to prescribe regulations under this section or section 4110A, 4110B, or 4110C of this title, the Secretary shall publish the proposed regulations in the Federal Register for notice-and-comment not less than 30 days before the day on which they take effect.

"§ 4110A. Major adverse actions involving professional conduct or competence

"(a)(1) Disciplinary Appeals Boards appointed under section 4110C of this title shall have exclusive jurisdiction to review any case—

"(A) which arises out of (or which includes) a question of professional conduct or competence of a section 4104(1) employee; and

"(B) in which a major adverse action was taken.

"(2) The board shall include in its record of decision in any mixed case a statement of the board's exclusive jurisdiction under this subsection and the basis for such exclusive jurisdiction.

"(3) For purposes of paragraph (2), a mixed case is a case that includes both a major adverse action arising out of a question of professional conduct or competence and an adverse action which is not a major adverse action or which does not arise out of a question of professional conduct or competence.

"(b)(1) In any case in which charges are brought against a section 4104(1) employee which arises out of, or includes, a question of professional conduct or competence which could result in a major adverse action, the employee is entitled to the following:

"(A) Advance written notice from the Chief Medical Director or other charging official specifically stating the basis for each charge, the adverse actions that could be taken if the charges are sustained, and a statement of any specific law, regulation, policy, procedure, practice, or other specific instruction that has been violated with respect to each charge.

"(B) An opportunity to present an answer orally and in writing to the Chief Medical Director or other deciding official, who shall be an official higher in rank than the charging official, and to submit affidavits and other documentary evidence in support of the answer.

"(2) In any case described in paragraph (1), the employee is entitled to be represented by an attorney or other representative of the employee's choice at all stages of the case.

"(3)(A) If a proposed adverse action covered by this section is not withdrawn, the deciding official shall render a decision in writing within 21 days of receipt by the deciding official of the employee's answer. The decision shall include a statement of the specific reasons for the decision with respect to each charge. If a major adverse action is imposed, the decision shall state whether any of the charges sustained arose out of a question of professional conduct or competence. If any of the charges are sustained, the notice of the decision to the employee shall include notice of the employee's rights of appeal.

"(B) Notwithstanding the 21-day period specified in subparagraph (A), a proposed adverse action may be held in abeyance if the employee requests, and the deciding official agrees, that the employee shall seek counseling or treatment for a condition covered under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Any such abeyance of a proposed action may not extend for more than one year.

"(4)(A) The Secretary may require that any answer and submission under paragraph (1)(B) be submitted so as to be received within 30 days of the date of the written notice of the charges, except that the Secretary shall allow the granting of extensions for good cause shown.

"(B) The Secretary shall require that any appeal to a Disciplinary Appeals Board from a decision to impose a major adverse action shall be received within 30 days after the date of service of the written decision on the employee.

"(c)(1) When a Disciplinary Appeals Board convenes to consider an appeal in a case under this section, the board, before proceeding to consider the merits of the appeal, shall determine whether the case is properly before it.

"(2) Upon hearing such an appeal, the board shall, with respect to each charge appealed to the board, sustain the charge, dismiss the charge, or sustain the charge in part and dismiss the charge in part. If the deciding official is sustained (in whole or in part) with respect to any such charge, the board shall—

"(A) approve the action as imposed;

"(B) approve the action with modification, reduction, or exception; or

"(C) reverse the action.

"(3) A board shall afford an employee appealing an adverse action under this section an opportunity for an oral hearing. If such a hearing is held, the board shall provide the employee with a transcript of the hearing.

"(4) The board shall render a decision in any case within 45 days of completion of the hearing, if there is a hearing, and in any event no later than 120 days after the appeal commenced.

"(d)(1) After resolving any question as to whether a matter involves professional conduct or competence, the Secretary shall cause to be executed the decision of the Disciplinary Appeals Board in a timely manner and in any event in not more than 90 days after the decision of the Board is received by the Secretary. Pursuant to the board's decision, the Secretary may order reinstatement, award back pay, and provide such other remedies as the board found appropriate relating directly to the proposed action, including expungement of records relating to the action.

"(2) If the Secretary finds a decision of the board to be clearly contrary to the evidence or unlawful, the Secretary may—

"(A) reverse the decision of the board, or

"(B) reverse the decision of the board and remand the matter to the Board for further consideration.

"(3) If the Secretary finds the decision of the board (while not clearly contrary to the evidence or unlawful) to be not justified by the nature of the charges, the Secretary may mitigate the adverse action imposed.

"(4) The Secretary's execution of a board's decision shall be the final administrative action in the case.

"(e) The Secretary may designate an employee of the Department to represent management in any case before a Disciplinary Appeals Board.

"(f)(1) A section 4104(1) employee adversely affected by a final order or decision of a Disciplinary Appeals Board (as reviewed by the Secretary) may obtain judicial review of the order or decision.

"(2) In any case in which judicial review is sought under this subsection, the court shall review the record and hold unlawful and set aside any agency action, finding, or conclusion found to be—

"(A) arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law;

"(B) obtained without procedures required by law, rule, or regulation having been followed; or

"(C) unsupported by substantial evidence.

"§ 4110B. Other adverse actions

"(a) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation procedures for the consideration of grievances of section 4104(1) employees arising from adverse personnel actions in which each action taken either—

"(1) is not a major adverse action; or

"(2) does not arise out of a question of professional conduct or competence.

Disciplinary Appeals Boards shall not have jurisdiction to review such matters, other than as part of a mixed case (as defined in section 4110A(a)(3) of this title).

"(b) In the case of an employee who is a member of a collective bargaining unit under chapter 71 of title 5, the employee may seek review of an adverse action described in subsection (a) either under the grievance procedures provided through regulations prescribed under subsection (a) or through grievance procedures determined through collective bargaining, but not under both. The employee shall elect which grievance procedure to follow. Any such election may not be revoked.

"(c) Grievance procedures prescribed under subsection (a) shall include the following:

"(1) A right to formal review by an impartial examiner within the Department of Veterans Affairs, who, in the case of an adverse action arising from a question of professional conduct or competence, shall be selected from the panel designated under section 4110C of this title.

"(2) A right to a prompt report of the findings and recommendations by the impartial examiner.

"(3) A right to a prompt review of the examiner's findings and recommendations by an official of a higher level than the official who proposed the action.

"(d) In any review of an adverse action under the grievance procedures prescribed under subsection (a), the employee is entitled to be represented by an attorney or other representative of the employee's choice at all stages of the case.

"§ 4110C. Disciplinary Appeals Boards

"(a) The Secretary shall from time to time appoint boards to hear appeals of major adverse actions described in section 4110A of this title. Such boards shall be known as Disciplinary Appeals Boards. Each board shall consist of three employees of the Department, each of whom shall be of the same grade as, or be senior in grade to, the employee who is appealing an adverse action. Members of a board shall be appointed from individuals on the panel established under subsection (d).

"(b)(1) In appointing a board for any case, the Secretary shall designate one of the members to be chairman and one of the members to be secretary of the board, each of whom shall have authority to administer oaths.

"(2) Appointment of boards, and the proceedings of such boards, shall be carried out under regulations prescribed by the Secretary. A verbatim record shall be maintained of board hearings.

"(c)(1) Notwithstanding sections 3301 and 4132 of this title, the chairman of a board, upon request of an employee whose case is under consideration by the board (or a representative of that employee) may, in connection with the considerations of the board, review records or information covered by those sections and may authorize the disclosure of such records or information to that employee (or representative) to the extent the board considers appropriate for purposes of the proceedings of the board in that case.

"(2) In any such case the board chairman may direct that measures be taken to protect the personal privacy of individuals whose records are involved. Any person who uses or discloses a record or information covered by this subsection for any purpose other than in connection with the proceedings of the board shall be fined not more than $5,000 in the case of a first offense and not more than $20,000 in the case of a subsequent offense.

"(d)(1) The Secretary shall provide for the periodic designation of employees of the Department who are qualified to serve on Disciplinary Appeals Boards. Those employees shall constitute the panel from which board members in a case are appointed. The Secretary shall provide (without charge) a list of the names of employees on the panel to any person requesting such list.

"(2) The Secretary shall announce periodically, and not less often than annually, that the roster of employees on the panel is available as described in paragraph (1). Such announcement shall be made at Department medical facilities and through publication in the Federal Register. Notice of a name being on the list must be provided at least 30 days before the individual selected may serve on a Board or as a grievance examiner. Employees, employee organizations, and other interested parties may submit comments to the Secretary concerning the suitability for service on the panel of any employee whose name is on the list.

"(3) The Secretary shall provide training in the functions and duties of Disciplinary Appeals Boards and grievance procedures under section 4110B of this title for employees selected to be on the panel.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended—

(1) by striking out the item relating to section 4108 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4108. Personnel administration; collective bargaining."; and

(2) by striking out the item relating to section 4110 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4110. Adverse actions: section 4104(1) employees.
"4110A. Major adverse actions involving professional conduct or competence.
"4110B. Other adverse actions.
"4110C. Disciplinary Appeals Boards.".

SEC. 303. DEADLINE FOR REGULATIONS.

The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall prescribe regulations under sections 4110, 4110A, 4110B, and 4110C of title 38, United States Code (as amended and added by section 302), not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. Such regulations shall be published in the Federal Register for notice-and-comment not less than 30 days before the day on which they take effect.

SEC. 304. PRESERVATION OF EXISTING COLLECTIVE-BARGAINING ARRANGEMENTS AND PENDING ACTIONS.

(a) EXISTING COLLECTIVE-BARGAINING ARRANGEMENTS.—Any determination under chapter 71 of title 5, United States Code, of a collective bargaining unit within the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration of the Department of Veterans Affairs, and any recognition under that chapter of an employee labor organization as the exclusive bargaining representative for employees in a collective bargaining unit of the Department of Veterans Affairs, that is in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act shall not be affected by the amendments made by this Act and shall continue in effect in accordance with the terms of such determination or regulation.

(b) PENDING CASES.—With respect to cases pending on the date of the enactment of this Act, or those cases which are brought before the establishment of either the administrative grievance procedure pursuant to section 4110B or a negotiated grievance procedure established under a collective bargaining agreement, such cases shall proceed in the same manner as they would have if this Act had not been enacted.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 401. TREATMENT OF VETERANS' MEDICAL CARE ACCOUNT UNDER SEQUESTRATION.

Section 113(b) of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3) The following appropriation account: Veterans Health Services and Research Administration, Medical Care (36-0160-0-1-703).".

SEC. 402. AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT SPECIFIED ADMINISTRATIVE REORGANIZATION.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs may carry out the administrative reorganization described in subsection (b) without regard to section 210(b)(2) of title 38, United States Code.

(b) REORGANIZATION DESCRIBED.—Subsection (a) applies to the administrative reorganization of regional and district offices of the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration described in the communication to Congress dated January 22, 1990.

SEC. 403. SALARY OF JUDGES OF UNITED STATES COURT OF VETERANS APPEALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (e) of section 4053 of title 38, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(e) The judges of the court shall each receive a salary at the same rate as is received by judges of the United States Court of Military Appeals.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the first day of the first pay period beginning after the later of—

(1) September 30, 1990, or

(2) the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 404. PREMIUM PAY FOR LICENSED PRACTICAL OR VOCATIONAL NURSES AND NURSE ASSISTANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4107(e) of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(11) For purposes of this subsection, an employee of the Veterans Health Services and Research Administration who is a licensed practical or vocational nurse or a nurse assistant shall be treated in the same manner as a registered nurse.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the later of—

(1) October 1, 1990; or

(2) the date of the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. STUMP] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and include extraneous material, on H.R. 4557, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in recent months, Members have received thousands of letters from veterans throughout the country complaining about being turned away from VA hospitals and outpatients clinics.

Our committee has received many inquiries from Members of the House urging that more funds be allocated by the Budget and Appropriations Committees for veterans' health care.

As reported, H.R. 4557, would improve the recruitment and retention of doctors, dentists, and nurses by granting local hospital directors and the Secretary of Veterans' Affairs authority to pay higher salaries where needed. The bill would also improve labor-management relations in the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Mr. Speaker, it is no secret that most veterans' hospitals are having a hard time taking care of veterans who need care, especially those seeking outpatient and long-term care. The VA simply does not have the resources nor the staff to do the job that Congress expects in providing quality care to veterans.

Although the demands for care are greater than ever before, some 20,000 VA hospital beds are closed. Most are closed due to a shortage of doctors, nurses, and other professional health care staff, or, insufficient resources.

A major problem is the inability of the VA to recruit and retain highly qualified physicians and nurses, because VA salaries are not competitive with today's market. Something must be done about it, and this bill is really the step in the right direction.

In some medical specialties, and in specific geographic locations, VA pay lags 33 percent behind comparable private-sector salaries. This means that more and more physicians and nurses are leaving the Department every day, and fewer are joining the VA to make careers working for the Veterans' Administration.

More and more work is being contracted out at a tremendous expense to the taxpayers. What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that if we do not have the doctors to do the job, we must contract it out to the private sector. It costs the taxpayers a lot of money. Many physicians are leaving full-time service with the VA. Many senior physicians eligible for retirement will elect to leave the Department at the end of the current fiscal year.

□ 1240

These physicians have years of experience and we really cannot afford to lose any of them. They include 50 percent of the current chiefs of staff and 27 percent of the service chiefs. These are critical positions of leadership in medical centers throughout the country.

It should also be noted, Mr. Speaker, that special pay has not been increased since 1980.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4557, as amended, contains several provisions concerning the compensation of medical personnel within the Department of Veterans Affairs [DVA]. The bill would also make improvements to the current labor relations and employee grievance procedures for Departmental medical employees. This bill was reported by our committee unanimously. A detailed explanation is in the committee report so I will only discuss the high points. The various provisions are summarized in a "blue sheet" summary at the table. Specifically, the bill would increase the amount of special pay available to physicians and dentists as well as restructuring the current nurse pay scale. Third, the bill would make necessary changes in the way employee discipline is handled by the DVA. Finally, the bill would exempt DVA medical care from cuts under sequestration under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

Mr. Speaker, this bill addresses one of the most compelling problems in the DVA medical care system: attracting and keeping the dedicated, well-trained staff that are the foundation of the DVA's Veterans Health Services and Research Administration. This bill would provide a large part of the solution to the Department's current shortage of medical professionals which is critical to the DVA's efforts to maintain high-quality care to our Nation's veterans.

The problems with recruitment and retention of DVA medical care staff are well known. Our committee's 1988 survey of Department medical centers documented that DVA medical centers are staffed at much lower levels than their community counterparts and that they suffer from unfilled vacancies across all medical professions. H.R. 4557, as amended, would help address these problems with regard to physicians, dentists, and nurses.

The bill would authorize changes in the amounts of special pay for DVA physicians and dentists. As in current law, H.R. 4557 would provide special pay for five characteristics of employment: First, longevity—tenure of service; second, scarce specialty; third, geographic location; fourth, executive medicine; and fifth, board certification.

The reported bill would strengthen the ability of the Department to target specific specialties in certain geographical locations. By increasing the amounts available for these types of special pay and by allowing the local directors the flexibility to pay only what they need to recruit and retain needed physicians and dentists, the result would be less costly and more effective than an across-the-board increase.

In fact, the most significant departure of the bill from current law is the flexibility for local directors to meet unique circumstances both for a particular physician or dentist and for certain categories of such professionals. At the committee's hearing on the recruitment and retention of physicians and dentists, Deputy Secretary Principi testified that the DVA supported the idea of providing the local director with flexibility to make the necessary determinations in hiring needed medical professionals. At that hearing, the committee received additional testimony which documented the many differences among DVA facilties which supports the need for and requires the maximum amount of flexibility at the local managerial level. The committee strongly believes that directors should have the flexibility to use the special pay authority as an incentive or disincentive for DVA employment.

The committee has stated in the report and I want to reiterate our intention that this flexibility not be circumvented or lessened by regulations that are established by the Department. Under current law, the Secretary "may pay no more than" certain amounts for the different special pay factors. These ranges are consistent with, though lower than the ranges in the bill. Departmental regulations in the past, however, have significantly reduced the flexibility of the ranges provided in current law by establishing a fixed amount within the range that must be paid for each special pay category. This uniform regulatory amount takes away the discretion of the local directors. We do not intend for the Department to pay a uniform rate of special pay to all physicians and dentists, but rather to allow the local directors to pay differing amounts to address their different needs.

We believe that there must be greater flexibility in physicians' and dentists' special pay. Now Mr. Speaker, we realize that there are some who are concerned that this increased flexibility will cause salaries to be increased beyond what is needed or would be lower than needed. However, the bill contains safeguards. For example, the bill would provide a check against physicians and dentists acting collusively to pressure a local director to increase all salaries by the maximum amount allowable by requiring Secretarial approval of any increase over 50 percent of the previous year's total amount of special pay. This would provide the Department with the necessary authority to deny unreasonable and unwarranted requests for increased amounts of special pay. Similarly, if the total amount of special pay was reduced by more than 25 percent of the previous year's amount then the Secretary would have to approve it. This prevents the DVA from reducing salaries due to budgetary constraints.

I want to take this opportunity to explain how the committee's emphasis on flexibility relates to the various provisions of the bill.

Current law limits the amount of longevity pay for full-time physicians to a maximum amount of up to $3,000 after 8 years of service and does not provide a minimum amount that must be paid. The amounts available are insufficient and do not provide enough of a retention incentive for DVA physicians considering outside employment opportunities. At the committee's hearing in October 1989, witnesses testified that the Department loses many of its physicians with 4-6 years of experience because their salaries are not competitive with those of their peers in academic medicine and the private sector. H.R. 4557 addresses this problem by increasing both the minimum and maximum amounts of special pay available. By increasing the amount of special pay available, especially in the earlier years, and allowing the facility director the flexibility to meet unique situations, it is the committee's intent to curb the flow of less senior physicians from the DVA and to reward physicians whose experience and seniority contribute significantly toward the high quality of care provided in the DVA medical care system.

Similarly, the bill increases the local director's flexibility to pay scarce specialty pay. Under current law, the CMD must determine which specialties are scarce within the Department. These physicians are then eligible for scarcity pay within a mandated pay range. However, DVA regulations have restricted the flexibility by setting a specific amount that may be paid to each of the scarce specialties. The committee believes that the Department should pay what it takes to recruit physicians in these specialties and no more. We expect that there would be differences in the amounts of special pay offered to physicians within a given specialty simply because in some geographic areas it will cost more to hire a physician in that specialty and conversely, in some areas it will cost less. Paying everyone the same amount is an unwise and ineffective use of limited resources.

The bill would also address the problem of local scarcity. Not all vacancies at a medical center are reflective of a national scarcity; some are unique to specific locations. In these instances, the bill would allow the local directors the option to identify those specialties that are extraordinarily hard to recruit and retain at their facility, but not at the national level. The committee intends that the local director would request authority from the Secretary to pay scarce special pay in these specialties. This authority would be allowed in those instances where geographic special pay was not sufficient to meet the local need to recruit and retain physicians in a locally scarce specialty. Let me state again the importance of retaining the flexibility provided in the bill.

Mr. Speaker, the Department is also facing problems in the recruitment and retention of registered nurses [RN's]. H.R. 4557 contains the same nurse pay provisions that passed the House last year. However, no agreement has been reached yet with the Senate concerning nurses' pay. Since this is such a severe problem, the committee decided again to report out the legislation in the hopes that an agreement will be reached.

For several years, the Committee on Veterans' Affairs has been aware of this growing problem, which was highlighted in a survey conducted by the committee staff. The survey found that some medical centers have shut down wards while others have been unable to open because they simply do not have the necessary nursing staff to operate them. Mr. Speaker, without the proper amounts of nursing personnel, the DVA is hard pressed to meet the growing demand for medical care by our Nation's veterans. In fact, most of those veterans who are not mandated care by law are now being denied care.

This shortage of nurses is endemic in the Nation, but as the largest single medical system in this country, the Department is the most adversely affected. It is impossible for the Department to compete with the private sector for these scarce medical personnel without addressing their greatest point of concern—the inadequacy of salaries authorized under the DVA's current nurse pay system.

H.R. 4557 would revise the current nurse pay system by reducing the number of pay grades from eight to four and would divide each new pay grade into 20 equal steps. The local hospital director could pay at different levels within the ranges in order to best address the needs of the facility. The intent of the committee is to provide local hospital directors with the flexibility to meet local demands and costs of recruiting and retaining nurses. We expect the directors to carefully assess local market conditions before establishing the new pay rates and in no instance would the DVA be the wage leader. The committee intends these changes to provide greater flexibility across the board in the nurse pay system, which is consistent with the committee's intent for physicians and dentists and which will help to alleviate the current recruitment and retention problems.

The committee could have included language explicitly setting out specialties among nurses that for DVA purposes were very difficult to recruit and retain. We decided that such a statutory list would be too rigid and would address only a small portion of the nursing shortage problem. Instead, the committee believes that nurse pay should be addressed in much the same way as physicians and dentists. If a local director is experiencing shortages with certain nursing personnel at the facility then the director could pay more for those nurses. Nothing in the bill precludes a nurse in one specialty area from receiving higher pay than other nurses of similar seniority at the same facility.

This bill would authorize Saturday/Sunday premium pay for licensed practical and vocational nurses [LPN/LVN's] and nurse assistants in order to help recruit and retain these health care professionals. This provision passed the House in the original H.R. 901 but was dropped out in conference with the Senate. Again, due to the severe shortage of nursing personnel within the DVA, the committee has decided again to report this provision. Currently, such pay is discretionary for LPN/LVN's, but under this provision they, as well as nurse assistants, would be treated in the same manner as RN's for purposes of this provision only. It is imperative that the DVA increase its ability to compete for these necessary medical personnel because an increase in such personnel would help relieve some of the burdens placed on the Department's already overworked RN's. This in turn would help in the recruitment and retention of RN's.

Mr. Speaker, this bill also contains several provisions that would authorize collective bargaining and improve disciplinary procedures, including a negotiated grievance process. For many years, the DVA and the unions have litigated over the scope of collective bargaining for health care professionals appointed under title 38. This culminated in the case of Colorado Nurses Association versus Federal Labor Relations Authority in which the courts decided title 38 employees did not have any collective-bargaining rights, a position the Department has never taken. However, the DVA's position has always been that certain areas were exempt from collective bargaining because the VA's Administrator—now Secretary—was granted by law exclusive authority over them. These areas were principally related to patient care and disciplinary actions, and professional peer review. The committee continues to believe that the DVA must have unfettered authority and complete accountability for the care of its patients.

However, the committee and the Department believe that some conditions of employment should be subject to collective bargaining and the provisions found in title 3 of the bill reflect the efforts of the Department and the unions to come to agreement on what areas are grievable and which areas are not. Both sides are pleased with the provisions in title 3 and the committee appreciates the efforts of these and other interested groups and their support of the bill.

Other provisions of the bill would grant a waiver to the requirement that the Department wait until the first day of fiscal year 1991 in order to undertake administrative reorganization of VHSRA regional and district offices. The Congress received a report on the proposed reorganization with the administration's proposed budget for fiscal year 1991. Currently, the DVA spends in excess of $20 million annually for the administration of its medical programs in the field. The committee believes that the savings projected by the Secretary can be well spent in direct medical care delivery and therefore support the granting of the waiver. The bill would also set the salaries of judges of the Court of Veterans Appeals at the same rate as is received by judges of the U.S. Court of Military Appeals.

Finally, the bill would exempt the DVA's medical care account from any reduction under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. Mr. Speaker, the DVA's medical care account received a supplemental of $345 million in fiscal year 1989 and the House has passed a supplemental of $50 million for fiscal year 1990, with the Senate having proposed $94 million for fiscal year 1990. However, earlier this year, due to sequestration, the DVA's health care budget was reduced by $158 million.

Now for fiscal year 1991, the House Committee on the Budget has reduced the discretionary spending for DVA medical care by $10 million under the President's budget request. At the same time, the Budget Committee has found the money to increase the President's budget by $2.5 billion for education, except for veterans; $3 billion increase for subsidized housing, while requiring user fees for veterans' housing; $1.5 billion for antidrug abuse; and $1.5 billion over inflation for space and science.

Mr. Speaker, I have received and I know that most Members have received many letters from veterans who are being denied care because the DVA simply does not have the funds to treat them. I believe that the veterans of this country deserve better. In the case of the exemption from Gramm-Rudmam-Hollings we are not asking for more money for the Department; rather we are asking that the DVA be allowed to keep what it has, which based on the recent supplementals is known to be not enough.

Mr. Speaker, let me briefly explain our intent with respect to section 401 of the bill which exempts veterans' medical care from sequestration. The exemption is written as an addition to the list of programs in section 113 of title 38, United States Code, which are not subject to sequestration and which are not even considered in the sequester report prepared by OMB. Under existing law, sequestration applies to the medical care account in two ways. There is an overall cap of 2 percent on the amount which can be taken from medical care through sequestration. However, section 256(b) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 as amended, 2 U.S.C. 906(b), provides that adminstrative expenses incurred by agencies in programs subject to reduction under section 252 of the act, 2 U.S.C. 902, shall be subject to reduction "without regard to any exemption, exception, limitation, or special rule which is otherwise applicable with respect to such program." The effect of this rule can be seen in the Sequestration Report to the President and Congress for fiscal year 1990 prepared by the Office of Management and Budget and dated October 16, 1989. On page a-18 of that report, there are two amounts shown as the sequester amount for Veterans Medical Care. One amount is $45 million and the other amount is $209 million in budget authority, reflecting the 5.3-percent sequester of administrative expenses and the 2-percent sequester of all other funds in this account. If section 401 of this legislation is enacted, it would override the treatment of Federal administrative expenses provided for in section 256(b). Thus, all of the funds appropriated for medical care in a given fiscal year would remain available to provide the medical care to veterans which Congress intended, and no reduction for administrative expenses, which are an integral part of the provision of that care, could be taken.

Mr. Speaker, the committee has heard a lot of testimony from the various nursing organizations both within and outside the Department concerning how overworked and underpaid they are. Yet, they continue to work for the Department. They do so because they are dedicated and loyal employees. They do so because the DVA, despite its problems is still a high-quality health care delivery system. I know that doctors, dentists, nurses, and thousands of other health professionals are also loyal and dedicated. However, we cannot continue to rely on this dedication and loyalty alone. We must make the DVA a real option for medical personnel; and a more competitive salary structure would go a long way toward accomplishing this goal.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is very important to the health of the DVA, in terms of recruiting and retaining the needed medical professionals in order to continue to provide quality medical care. If we learned anything from the savings and loan disaster, it is that ignoring a problem will not make it go away.

Let me close by saying that the CBO estimates the cost of this bill to be approximately $66 million for the next fiscal year. Funds to implement the bill are contained in the budget of the President and in the budget resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4557 as the chairman has pointed out, this bill will have a very positive effect on the ability of the Department of Veterans Affairs to recruit and retain essential health care employees.

The Committee on Veterans' Affairs has spent a great deal of time on these important issues and it is my belief that the bill we have before us represents the best, most cost-effective way to go.

I commend the chairman, Mr. MONTGOMERY and my colleague Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT for their dedication to resolving these issues through the Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care.

Mr. Speaker, I recommend favorable passage of H.R. 4557, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ROWLAND], who serves on both our committee and subcommittee, and who has been very helpful. The gentleman from Georgia is a practicing physician and knows about medical care. I certainly appreciate his taking the time today to present these comments.

Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, as a supporter of the Veterans' Administration health system, I believe Congress should do everything that's fiscally responsible to provide the kind of quality care our veterans and their families deserve.

I'm sure that's something all of us want.

Some have critized the VA health system in recent years. There are bound to be problems when you try to maintain a quality standard of care for a growing number of people on budgets which are being cut. But the system continues to provide care for tens of thousands of our citizens, many of them from low-income circumstances.

Critics and supporters alike can agree the Federal Government should live up to its obligation to provide a quality level of care as long as the system continues to exist. Letting the standard of medical treatment decline is not an option any of us should accept.

This legislation offers a fiscally responsible plan for enabling our VA health centers to provide veterans the kind of decent care the country has promised them.

It's a plan to enhance recruitment and retention of physicians, dentists and nurses in the VA health system. It offers the kind of incentives we need—special pay in areas where recruitment is difficult, and for scarce specialists. It gives VA medical center directors the flexibility to target increases so they can be used to the best advantage of their facilities.

These incentives are essential. Physicians and dentists have not received a raise in nearly 10 years. Another bill is currently moving through Congress to provide some long-overdue help for VA nurses. But the nursing shortage is acute, and this bill is crucial for nurses as well.

Mr. Speaker, this is legislation I believe we should all support.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL], the ranking member of the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, this is a fine bill and I have no quarrel with its substance. Yesterday, however, I did send a letter to the Members of the House indicating that I had a complaint about a procedural matter. Since that time I have discussed it with the chairman and ranking member. We are working on the problem and trying to seek another solution. Therefore, I urge Members to vote for the bill, as I intend to do.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT], the ranking member on the subcommittee.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, as ranking member of the Hospitals and Health Care Subcommittee of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, I am pleased to have joined with Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. STUMP and Mr. ROWLAND as an original sponsor of H.R. 4557——

A bill to provide for vital improvements to the pay structure of DVA physicians, dentists and nurses, as well as provide for improved grievance procedures for title 38 employees.

This legislative work represents the combined efforts of both minority and majority members of the Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care and once again, I believe we have been successful in putting forth a bill which is truly bipartisan.

This measure will serve as the framework for an improved system of pay to enhance the recruitment and retention efforts of the Department of Veterans Affairs and the many dedicated and essential employees of its health care system.

I want to thank Chairman MONTGOMERY for moving this bill forward in such an expeditious manner.

For too long the employees of the Department and the veterans it serves have felt the monumental burden of staffing shortages. While the committee has always been committed to addressing this issue and has designed and approved a myriad of approaches to ease the Department's difficulties, we have been unable to reach suitable compromise with our counterparts in the Senate.

Under the leadership of our chairman, Mr. MONTGOMERY, and the ranking member, Mr. STUMP, the Veterans' Affairs Committee has taken action on the nurse pay bill, none of which is new. To nurse pay, we have included provisions to address the physician and dentists pay structure and to add collective bargaining and grievance procedures for title 38 employees.

The result is a bill which is comprehensive and innovative and will go a long way toward alleviating some serious and perplexing problems in the VA health care delivery system. Funding to carry these pay measures has already been included in the Veterans' Affairs Committee's report to the Budget Committee and the President has requested funding as well.

I want to thank Mr. MONTGOMERY for his hard work on behalf of the VA's health care employees, and for bringing this bill to the House floor.

Title 4 of this bill contains some miscellaneous provisions including exemption of VA medical programs from sequestration. This provision is the result of many years of underfunding and the habitual need to provide supplemental funds to VA medical care accounts.

I believe this provision is vitally necessary to preservation of the VA health care program. Sequestration of already inadequate funds is a bad way to go about business * * * especially the health care of veterans when so many are relying on a fully operational high quality health care delivery system to meet their health care needs.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge the support of my colleagues on H.R. 4557.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. STUMP], the ranking member of the committee, as well as the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT], the ranking minority member on the Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care, for their support and for their work on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. STAGGERS], a member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4557, the VA health professionals legislation. This legislation is the culmination of a long effort on both sides of the aisle to help to meet the health care needs of our veterans. This legislation will increase the salary for doctors, dentists, and nurses based on length of service, level of responsibility, service in a speciality or a geographic area where recruitment and retention makes hiring difficult.

This legislation helps doctors, dentists, nurses, LPN's, vocational nurses and nursing assistants. It also establishes a requirement, long practiced within the VA system, to deal with employee grievances and collective bargaining over employment conditions. This bill will establish an important precedent by exempting the VA's Health Services and Research Administration [VHSRA] from budget sequestration.

This is very important since veterans treated in our hospitals are suffering from service-connected disabilities and often have no other source for health care other than the VA. This was not the case when sequestration was allowed to impact the VA health care budget in 1985. In 1985 there was no means test for veterans—there is today. Our veterans deserve a system of quality care, not a line about come back some other time and we'll see if your health care needs can be met next year.

Allowing sequestration to occur has led the VA to establish all kinds of ways of rationing health care for veterans. The Congress and its Members have stood in the well of this House for years and urge better care for veterans, here is an opportunity to vote for it.

Mr. Speaker, as I said at the beginning of my remarks, this is a good bill, it is a bill that thousands of brave men and women may thank us for if we have the guts to fight for them here today.

□ 1250

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], a member of the Rules Committee.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4557, a bill to improve recruitment and retention of Department of Veterans Affairs doctors, dentists, and nurses, primarily through pay increases.

As the former ranking minority member of the full Veterans' Affairs Committee, I follow closely with keen interest the committee's legislation.

My colleagues, SONNY MONTGOMERY, the committee's chairman; BOB STUMP, the full committee's ranking minority member; JOHN PAUL HAMMERSCHMIDT, the Hospitals and Health Care Subcommittee's ranking minority member, and Dr. Roy Rowland, a very valuable member of the committee, introduced this excellent bipartisan legislation and I commend them.

Few of us in this Chamber are unaware of the critical shortage of nurses across the country and of the effect the shortage has had on their compensation.

Also, few of us in this Chamber are unaware of the gross pay inequities in the Federal Government for many professional and scientific personnel, compared to the private sector.

I know of them because the veterans' hospitals at Albany and Castle Point, NY, which serves my district, are having very serious difficulties recruiting and retaining both doctors and nurses. In my judgment, this legislation would be a significant advance in dealing with these problems.

The quality of veterans' health care is directly related to the DVA's ability to attract and keep highly qualified health care professionals, and if we do not take prompt action to make their pay more competitive, we are in effect endorsing second rate health care for veterans. But your vote for H.R. 4557 will be a vote for veterans and for affirming America's obligations to its veterans.

Mr. Speaker, it is unusual to have any opposition to bipartisan veterans' legislation, but I have heard some concerns about a provision of the bill which would exempt from sequestration the veterans' direct medical care account. This account is already limited by Gramm-Rudman to a maximum 2 percent sequester, but the protection has proved inadequate.

Year after year, veterans' health care is being significantly underfunded. So we pass emergency supplementals for veterans' health care. And then when sequestration comes along, we see part of what was added back taken out again. Is it any wonder that the Congress is not held in high esteem by much of the American public? This process does not make good sense and it is time for it to stop.

If we really believe veterans should be one of the highest budget priorities, then let's give them the same protection given dozens of other funding accounts.

I hope every member of the House will support H.R. 4557 and join me in voting "aye."

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. ROWLAND].

Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express strong support for H.R. 4557, the Department of Veterans' Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor Relations Act. It is my pleasure to serve as a member of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee and I am pleased with the chairman's prompt action on this important bill.

In particular, I am pleased that the legislation contains the previously passed provisions contained in H.R. 1199, the Veterans Nurse Pay Act. Across the country, the Department of Veterans Affairs hospital beds have been unavailable as a result of the critical shortage of nurses that threaten the quality of care delivered to our Nation's veterans. This important legislation will greatly assist these hospitals in recruiting and retaining registered nurses by significantly restructuring the nurse pay system. The time is now to act on this matter to ensure that our veterans' hospitals can reopen closed wards.

I would like to again urge my colleagues to support this important legislation in order to ensure that our Nation's veterans receive the quality care which they deserve.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES].

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, adequate health care is of critical importance to all Americans and particularly our veterans who are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain needed medical care.

There are many reasons for this gap which currently inhibits our ability to provide acceptable health care services to our veterans. While this legislation will not remedy all of the problems confronting the veterans' health care system, it does alleviate a problem which has jeopardized the quality of care provided by the VA for over a decade: The recruitment and retainment of professional medical staff.

Our veterans served and sacrificed with dignity, courage, and honor. Certainly the least we can offer in return for their unselfish efforts is quality health care to meet their medical needs. This legislation will do just that.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in strong support of H.R. 4557, the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professional Compensation and Labor Relations Act of 1990, to recruit and retain physicans, dentists and nurses and I commend the distinguished chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. STUMP], for their unceasing efforts to improve veterans' health care.

Recently, the Department of Veterans Affairs has been plagued with problems relating to veterans' health care. The national shortage of nurses has especially effected the DVA, since the salary for DVA nurses has been chronically below the competitive salaries in the private sector.

Mr. Speaker, veterans' health care must not be neglected. There are flaws in the health care programs that need to be corrected. H.R. 4557 attempts to resolve many of the difficulties the DVA has with recruiting and retaining physicians, nurses and dentists.

The bill allows the VA to provide special pay for VA physicians and dentists who have completed obligatory service under the health professionals education assistance program and to those full time employees with tenure.

Special nursing provisions are also included in the bill. A new payment and promotion schedule for VA nurses would be a tremendous aid in attracting professional nurses to work in currently understaffed VA facilities.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of this measure and I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4557.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, once again I would like to thank the gentleman that in my opinion is the best friend of the veterans in this House, and that is our chairman, SONNY MONTGOMERY, for his hard work on this bill, as well as the gentleman from Arkansas, Mr. JOHN PAUL HAMMERSCHMIDT, the ranking member on the Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care, and also to the staff on both sides. All of this would not have been possible had it not been for them.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, again I want to thank the gentleman from Arizona, Mr. BOB STUMP, for his kind remarks, and also the gentleman from Arkansas, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, and the others who have participated in the debate today. I also want to thank the very able gentleman for New York for his contribution. The gentleman from New York has always been a great advocate for veterans. He is strong in his support of veterans health care. As mentioned by the gentleman from Arizona, we thank the staffs on both sides of the aisle who have done a tremendous job in putting this legislation together.

□ 1300

This is a must bill, Mr. Speaker. It is a good bill. I certainly hope all Members will support it.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support passage of the VA Health Professionals Compensation Act of 1990 (H.R. 4557).

We, as a nation, have a profound obligation to remember those who have served in the cause of freedom and liberty. But our support for the men and women who have selflessly served their country must go beyond providing sticks and mortar. We, and they, must have sufficient support services.

Allow me to present what, regrettably, is a shameful illustration.

Throughout the 1980's, I fought with the Veterans' Administration for the funds to build a desperately needed nursing home for aging and ill veterans. There was no denying the need for this type of facility in northern New Jersey.

Through the cooperative efforts of the Federal and State governments, a beautiful $10 million nursing home was built in Paramus, Bergen County, NJ. Yet today, over 6 months after the final phase of this facility was opened, over 160 of its 350 beds remain unoccupied. At the same time, there exists a lengthy waiting list of needy veterans waiting to get in. Yet, the beds remain empty. The reason: the State of New Jersey has failed to provide the funding necessary to hire medical staff and purchase equipment for the new wing.

I have asked Gov. James Florio and the leaders of the State legislature to fulfill the State's commitment to make the Paramus Veterans Nursing Home fully operational. However, in an attempt to explore every possible potential source of funding, I have also asked the U.S. Secretary of Veterans Affairs to provide new moneys to hire nursing staff at Paramus.

The legislation we have before us could be very helpful in our efforts. H.R. 4557 is not a total solution for what ails the Paramus Veterans Nursing Home. However, it represents progress.

One of the factors causing the underutilization is the continuing shortage of nurses in New Jersey. This measure will replace the current pay structure for VA nurses allowing medical centers in areas with recruitment and retention problems—such as northern New Jersey—to raise salaries above the limits in current law. It also eliminates the cap on nurse overtime permitting them to receive 150 percent of their basic pay rate and extends weekend premium pay to licensed practical or vacational nurses and nursing assistants.

Mr. Speaker, the Federal Government made a firm commitment to our veterans when it funded construction of this badly needed nursing home. It was a promise made to men and women who served their country selflessly. But to date, it has been a promise unfulfilled. I think you would agree that a nursing home with empty beds is worse than no nursing home at all. It represents a promise made, but not kept.

We owe our veterans more—much more.

Mr. BRENNAN. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H.R. 4557, the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Professionals Compensation and Labor Relations Act of 1990.

This important legislation provides much-needed increases in the salary levels of VA physicians, dentists, and, of particular satisfaction to me, of VA nurses. I say nurses because last year I was an original cosponsor of H.R. 1199, a bill introduced by my colleague JOE KENNEDY that passed this House but was not included in a final conference between the Veterans' committees of both Houses. This legislation would make nurses salaries more competitive with the private sector, give local hospital directors greater flexibility in assigning competitive wages, grant nurses more incentives to stay at VA hospitals, and provide them with opportunities for career advancement.

I am pleased that this legislation has been included in H.R. 4557. Across this country, VA medical centers have suffered continuous losses of talented nursing personnel who are forced to leave because they simply can no longer rely on their salaries to make a decent living and retain their professional competitiveness. This legislation will help provide our nurses with the respect and compensation they deserve, and by doing so, help ensure that our Nation's veterans receive the quality care they so richly deserve.

I urge support for H.R. 4557.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, as the Nation's largest health care provider, the VA is undeniably an essential component of our country's total health care delivery system. The VA is responsible for the inpatient care of over 70,000 veterans each day—including 10 percent of the AIDS population plus veterans otherwise eligible for Medicaid.

Mr. Speaker, throughout the past few years, we have become increasingly aware that the VA health care system is suffering from inadequate funding. This has had a devastating effect on the system's ability to deliver the caliber of health care I am sure we all think veterans deserve. As hard as it is to believe, veterans actually have been turned away from VA facilities, unable to receive care because of insufficient resources. Many veterans who do receive care first must endure unacceptable inconveniences.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care, I have been working hard with my colleagues to remedy this situation. The subcommittee has concentrated its efforts this year to secure adequate funding for veterans' health care and on measures like H.R. 4557 to ensure that personnel is available to staff VA hospitals and clinics. The implementation of these improvements, however, is contingent upon full funding as requested for fiscal year 1991.

The VA health care budget cannot withstand further cutbacks and certainly should not be subject to sequestration cuts under Gramm-Rudman. Considering the current fiscal climate, Gramm-Rudman is necessary public policy. As we all agreed during initial consideration of the measure, however, there are certain programs which simply cannot afford sequestration. Programs exempt from sequestration are numerous and include Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Medicaid grants, Women, Infants and Children [WIC], and the Supplemental Security Income Program. Mr. Speaker, certainly veterans health care deserves the same protection these programs so appropriately receive.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting veterans health care and the policies necessary to make the program workable. Full funding, without the threat of sequestration, is mandatory in order to provide the services veterans deserve.

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the VA Health Professionals Act (H.R. 4557), a bill to increase the salary levels of VA physicians, dentists, and nurses.

The Department of Veterans Affairs runs the largest health care system in the Free World. Across the land are 172 VA hospitals, 200 outpatient clinics, and 137 counseling outreach centers. In that setting, thousands of devoted medical employees, administrative staff, and support personnel are challenged to carry out that arduous task within severe budget restraints which result in a burdensome shortage of staff and supplies.

In testimony submitted to the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs earlier this year, I expressed my concern about the understaffing at our VA Medical Center in Muskogee, OK, and the urgent need to provide adequate resources for the personnel who do such a fine job there under such difficult circumstances.

H.R. 4557 would provide special pay for VA physicians, dentists, and nurses in geographic areas where there are recruitment and retention difficulties; eliminate the cap on nurse overtime pay by permitting them to receive 150 percent of their basic pay rate; and extend weekend premium pay to licensed practical or vocational nurses and nursing assistants.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates enactment of the bill would result in Federal expenditures of $57 million in fiscal year 1992, $103 million in fiscal year 1993, $106 million in fiscal year 1994, and $108 million in fiscal year 1995.

I support those provisions of this legislation and encourage my colleagues to vote for the VA Health Professionals Act.

Mr. Speaker, I must mention that I have reservations about a provision of H.R. 4557 which exempts the entire $12 billion veterans medical care account from Gramm-Rudman sequestration. Veterans programs deserve a special priority in Federal spending legislation. However, that priority should not be expressed by excluding one program from sequestration at the expense of other programs subject to the Gramm-Rudman cuts. Even without this provision, veterans health care programs would be subject to a special rule limiting sequestration cuts in health care programs to 2 percent. Veterans health care is protected under the same 2 percent rule which protects other health programs such as Medicare and Indian health service. Picking off programs one at a time for exemption from Gramm-Rudman is a poor way to make policy. This exemption clearly shows that sequestration is an unsatisfactory substitute for the tough choices necessary for effective deficit reduction through responsible budget legislation.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4557. I would like to thank Chairman Montgomery for his fine efforts and commitment to the men and women who provide needed care to our Nation's veterans—namely the dentists, doctors and nurses that serve at our VA facilities. As I'm sure we all agree, H.R. 4557 is needed to recruit and retain quality VA medical staffs.

I would like to just briefly touch upon the nursing pay provisions of the bill since I have fully supported my colleague, Congressman KENNEDY, in his endeavor to enact nurse pay incentives legislation. I commend Mr. Kennedy for the work that he has undertaken on nurse pay reform and would like to thank him for the opportunity that he provided to me in the past to be the original cosponsor of H.R. 1199, the Veterans' Nurse Pay Act of 1989. I'm extremely pleased that H.R. 4557 incorporates the language of H.R. 1199. I'm hopeful that with this gesture, the House and Senate can reach an agreement on nurse pay reform and approve this bill during this Congress. Approval of this legislation will send a strong and clear message to VA nurses and other health care professionals—that we value their commitment to veterans' care.

The nurse pay provisions of H.R. 4557 will greatly assist the Veteran's Administration in meeting the need for high quality care. It is not difficult to see how sufficient incentives could put an end to the overworked-underpaid stigma attached to nursing. In addition, for those areas that suffer from a nursing shortage, this legislation is desparately needed to address the turnover rate and the rising number of unfilled positions. All in all, nurse pay reform is just good policy.

Again, let me thank Chairman MONTGOMERY for his efforts to address not only nurse pay reform but also physician and dentist pay reform. I look forward to passage of this legislation and urge my colleagues to join the House Veterans' Affairs Committee in supporting this important legislation.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4557, as amended.

The question was taken, and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MAKING IN ORDER ON TODAY ADDITIONAL DEBATE TIME IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE ON HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 310

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during the further consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 310 pursuant to House Resolution 382, an additional 30 minutes of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Budget, may be in order in the Committee of the Whole after disposition of the amendments made in order under the rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I yield to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Budget to explain the need for the additional time.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, the purpose here is to provide some debate on the final resolution itself that was submitted by the committee. We had thought we would have that opportunity with the President's budget being offered.

We would have had 2 hours' additional debate to then focus on the President's budget and the committee's budget.

It is my understanding that is no longer the case, and for that reason we felt it was important to at least allow for 30 minutes of debate equally divided to focus on the committee resolution.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I simply want to confirm what the gentleman has said.

I had fully intended to offer the Bush budget as an alternative, and it had been made in order by the Rules Committee. I have recently concluded that I will not offer it. That means that we will not have sufficient time to debate the Panetta budget because the Black Caucus deserves its time fully on its budget.

So the Democratic leadership as well as the Republican leadership would like a little extra time. We have no objection.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no obection.

NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING ACT OF 1990

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 743) to establish a framework for the conduct of negotiated rulemaking by Federal agencies, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 743

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Government regulation has increased substantially since the enactment of the Administrative Procedure Act.

(2) Agencies currently use rulemaking procedures that may discourage the affected parties from meeting and communicating with each other, and may cause parties with different interests to assume conflicting and antagonistic positions and to engage in expensive and time-consuming litigation over agency rules.

(3) Adversarial rulemaking deprives the affected parties and the public of the benefits of face-to-face negotiations and cooperation in developing and reaching agreement on a rule. It also deprives them of the benefits of shared information, knowledge, expertise, and technical abilities possessed by the affected parties.

(4) Negotiated rulemaking, in which the parties who will be significantly affected by a rule participate in the development of the rule, can provide significant advantages over adversarial rulemaking.

(5) Negotiated rulemaking can increase the acceptability and improve the substance of rules, making it less likely that the affected parties will resist enforcement or challenge such rules in court. It may also shorten the amount of time needed to issue final rules.

(6) Agencies have the authority to establish negotiated rulemaking committees under the laws establishing such agencies and their activities and under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.). Several agencies have successfully used negotiated rulemaking. The process has not been widely used by other agencies, however, in part because such agencies are unfamiliar with the process or uncertain as to the authority for such rulemaking.

SEC. 3. NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING PROCEDURE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER IV—NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING PROCEDURE

"§ 581. Purpose

"The purpose of this subchapter is to establish a framework for the conduct of negotiated rulemaking, consistent with section 553 of this title, to encourage agencies to use the process when it enhances the informal rulemaking process. Nothing in this subchapter should be construed as an attempt to limit innovation and experimentation with the negotiated rulemaking process or with other innovative rulemaking procedures otherwise authorized by law.

"§ 582. Definitions

"For the purposes of this subchapter, the term—

"(1) 'agency' has the same meaning as in section 551(1) of this title;

"(2) 'consensus' means unanimous concurrence among the interests represented on a negotiated rulemaking committee established under this subchapter, unless such committee—

"(A) agrees to define such term to mean a general but not unanimous concurrence; or

"(B) agrees upon another specified definition;

"(3) 'convener' means a person who impartially assists an agency in determining whether establishment of a negotiated rulemaking committee is feasible and appropriate in a particular rulemaking;

"(4) 'facilitator' means a person who impartially aids in the discussions and negotiations among the members of a negotiated rulemaking committee to develop a proposed rule;

"(5) 'interest' means, with respect to an issue or matter, multiple parties which have a similar point of view or which are likely to be affected in a similar manner;

"(6) 'negotiated rulemaking' means rulemaking through the use of a negotiated rulemaking committee;

"(7) 'negotiated rulemaking committee' or 'committee' means an advisory committee established by an agency in accordance with this subchapter and the Federal Advisory Committee Act to consider and discuss issues for the purpose of reaching a consensus in the development of a proposed rule;

"(8) 'party' has the same meaning as in section 551(3) of this title;

"(9) 'person' has the same meaning as in section 551(2) of this title;

"(10) 'rule' has the same meaning as in section 551(4) of this title; and

"(11) 'rulemaking' means 'rule making' as that term is defined in section 551(5) of this title.

"§ 583. Determination of need for negotiated rulemaking committee

"(a) DETERMINATION OF NEED BY THE AGENCY.—An agency may establish a negotiated rulemaking committee to negotiate and develop a proposed rule, if the head of the agency determines that the use of the negotiated rulemaking procedure is in the public interest. In making such a determination, the head of the agency shall consider whether—

"(1) there is a need for a rule;

"(2) there are a limited number of identifiable interests that will be significantly affected by the rule;

"(3) there is a reasonable likelihood that a committee can be convened with a balanced representation of persons who—

"(A) can adequately represent the interests identified under paragraph (2); and

"(B) are willing to negotiate in good faith to reach a consensus on the proposed rule;

"(4) there is a reasonable likelihood that a committee will reach a consensus on the proposed rule within a fixed period of time;

"(5) the negotiated rulemaking procedure will not unreasonably delay the notice of proposed rulemaking and the issuance of the final rule;

"(6) the agency has adequate resources and is willing to commit such resources, including technical assistance, to the committee; and

"(7) the agency, to the maximum extent possible consistent with the legal obligations of the agency, will use the consensus of the committee with respect to the proposed rule as the basis for the rule proposed by the agency for notice and comment.

"(b) USE OF CONVENERS.—

"(1) PURPOSES OF CONVENERS.—An agency may use the services of a convener to assist the agency in—

"(A) identifying persons who will be significantly affected by a proposed rule; and

"(B) conducting discussions with such persons to identify the issues of concern to such persons, and to ascertain whether the establishment of a negotiated rulemaking committee is feasible and appropriate in the particular rulemaking.

"(2) DUTIES OF CONVENERS.—The convener shall report findings and may make recommendations to the agency. Upon request of the agency, the convener shall ascertain the names of persons who are willing and qualified to represent interests that will be significantly affected by the proposed rule. The report and any recommendations of the convener shall be made available to the public upon request.

"§ 584. Publication of notice; applications for membership on committees

"(a) PUBLICATION OF NOTICE.—If, after considering the report of a convener or conducting its own assessment, an agency decides to establish a negotiated rulemaking committee, the agency shall publish in the Federal Register and, as appropriate, in trade or other specialized publications, a notice which shall include—

"(1) an announcement that the agency intends to establish a negotiated rulemaking committee to negotiate and develop a proposed rule;

"(2) a description of the subject and scope of the rule to be developed, and the issues to be considered;

"(3) a list of the interests which are likely to be significantly affected by the rule;

"(4) a list of the persons proposed to represent such interests and the person or persons proposed to represent the agency;

"(5) a proposed agenda and schedule for completing the work of the committee, including a target date for publication by the agency of a proposed rule for notice and comment;

"(6) a description of administrative support for the committee to be provided by the agency, including technical assistance;

"(7) a solicitation for comments on the proposal to establish the committee, and the proposed membership of the negotiated rulemaking committee; and

"(8) an explanation of how a person may apply or nominate another person for membership on the committee, as provided under subsection (b).

"(b) APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP OR COMMITTEE.—Persons who will be significantly affected by a proposed rule and who believe that their interests will not be adequately represented by any person specified in a notice under subsection (a)(4) may apply for, or nominate another person for, membership on the negotiated rulemaking committee to represent such interests with respect to the proposed rule. Each application or nomination shall include—

"(1) the name of the applicant or nominee and a description of the interests such person shall represent;

"(2) evidence that the applicant or nominee is authorized to represent parties related to the interests the person proposes to represent;

"(3) a written commitment that the applicant or nominee shall actively participate in good faith in the development of the rule under consideration; and

"(4) the reasons that the persons specified in the notice under subsection (a)(4) do not adequately represent the interests of the person submitting the application or nomination.

"(c) PERIOD FOR SUBMISSION OF COMMENTS AND APPLICATIONS.—The agency shall provide for a period of at least 30 calendar days for the submission of comments and applications under this section.

"§ 585. Establishment of committee

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

"(1) DETERMINATION TO ESTABLISH COMMITTEE.—If after considering comments and applications submitted under section 584, the agency determines that a negotiated rulemaking committee can adequately represent the interests that will be significantly affected by a proposed rule and that it is feasible and appropriate in the particular rulemaking, the agency may establish a negotiated rulemaking committee. In establishing and administering such a committee, the agency shall comply with the Federal Advisory Committee Act with respect to such committee, except as otherwise provided in this subchapter.

"(2) DETERMINATION NOT TO ESTABLISH COMMITTEE.—If after considering such comments and applications, the agency decides not to establish a negotiated rulemaking committee, the agency shall promptly publish notice of such decision and the reasons therefor in the Federal Register.

"(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The agency shall limit membership on a negotiated rulemaking committee to 25 members, unless the agency head determines that a greater number of members is necessary for the functioning of the committee or to achieve balanced membership. Each committee shall include at least one person representing the agency.

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The agency shall provide appropriate administrative support to the negotiated rulemaking committee, including technical assistance.

"(d) PARTICIPATION IN PROCEEDINGS.—A recipient of funds under the Legal Services Corporation Act may participate in a negotiated rulemaking proceeding only on behalf of an eligible client under that Act.

"§ 586. Conduct of committee activity

"(a) DUTIES OF COMMITTEE.—Each negotiated rulemaking committee established under this subchapter shall consider the matter proposed by the agency for consideration and shall attempt to reach a consensus concerning a proposed rule with respect to such matter and any other matter the committee determines is relevant to the proposed rule.

"(b) REPRESENTATIVES OF AGENCY ON COMMITTEE.—The person or persons representing the agency on a negotiated rulemaking committee shall participate in the deliberations and activities of the committee with the same rights and responsibilities as other members of the committee, and shall be authorized to fully represent the agency in the discussions and negotiations of the committee.

"(c) SELECTING FACILITATOR.—Notwithstanding section 10(e) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, an agency may nominate either a person from the Federal Government or a person from outside the Federal Government to serve as a facilitator for the negotiations of the committee, subject to the approval of the committee by consensus. If the committee does not approve the nominee of the agency for facilitator, the agency shall submit a substitute nomination. If a committee does not approve any nominee of the agency for facilitator, the committee shall select by consensus a person to serve as facilitator. A person designated to represent the agency in substantive issues may not serve as facilitator or otherwise chair the committee.

"(d) DUTIES OF FACILITATOR.—A facilitator approved or selected by a negotiated rulemaking committee shall—

"(1) chair the meetings of the committee in an impartial manner;

"(2) impartially assist the members of the committee in conducting discussions and negotiations; and

"(3) manage the keeping of minutes and records as required under section 10(b) and (c) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, except that any personal notes and materials of the facilitator or of the members of a committee shall not be subject to section 552 of this title.

"(e) COMMITTEE PROCEDURES.—A negotiated rulemaking committee established under this subchapter may adopt procedures for the operation of the committee. No provision of section 553 of this title shall apply to the procedures of a negotiated rulemaking committee.

"(f) REPORT OF COMMITTEE.—If a committee reaches a consensus on a proposed rule, at the conclusion of negotiations the committee shall transmit to the agency that established the committee a report containing the proposed rule. If the committee does not reach a consensus on a proposed rule, the committee may transmit to the agency a report specifying any areas in which the committee reached a consensus. The committee may include in a report any other information, recommendations, or materials that the committee considers appropriate. Any committee member may include as an addendum to the report additional information, recommendations, or materials.

"(g) RECORDS OF COMMITTEE.—In addition to the report required by subsection (f), a committee shall submit to the agency the records required under section 10 (b) and (c) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act.

"§ 587. Termination of committee

"A negotiated rulemaking committee shall terminate upon promulgation of the final rule under consideration, unless the committee's charter contains an earlier termination date or the agency, after consulting the committee, or the committee itself specifies an earlier termination date.

"§ 588. Services, facilities, and payment of committee member expenses

"(a) SERVICES OF CONVENERS AND FACILITATORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An agency may employ or enter into contracts for the services of an individual or organization to serve as a convener or facilitator for a negotiated rulemaking committee under this subchapter, or may use the services of a Government employee to act as a convener or a facilitator for such a committee.

"(2) DETERMINATION OF CONFLICTING INTERESTS.—An agency shall determine whether a person under consideration to serve as convener or facilitator of a committee under paragraph (1) has any financial or other interest that would preclude such person from serving in an impartial and independent manner.

"(b) SERVICES AND FACILITIES OF OTHER ENTITIES.—For purposes of this subchapter, an agency may use the services and facilities of other Federal agencies and public and private agencies and instrumentalities with the consent of such agencies and instrumentalities, and with or without reimbursement to such agencies and instrumentalities, and may accept voluntary and uncompensated services without regard to the provisions of section 1342 of title 31. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service may provide services and facilities, with or without reimbursement, to assist agencies under this subchapter, including furnishing conveners, facilitators, and training in negotiated rulemaking.

"(c) EXPENSES OF COMMITTEE MEMBERS.—Members of a negotiated rulemaking committee shall be responsible for their own expenses of participation in such committee, except that an agency may, in accordance with section 7(d) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, pay for a member's reasonable travel and per diem expenses, expenses to obtain technical assistance, and a reasonable rate of compensation, if—

"(1) such member certifies a lack of adequate financial resources to participate in the committee; and

"(2) the agency determines that such member's participation in the committee is necessary to assure an adequate representation of the member's interest.

"(d) STATUS OF MEMBER AS FEDERAL EMPLOYEE.—A member's receipt of funds under this section or section 589 shall not conclusively determine for purposes of sections 202 through 209 of title 18 whether that member is an employee of the United States Government.

"§ 589. Role of the Administrative Conference of the United States and other entities

"(a) CONSULTATION BY AGENCIES.—An agency may consult with the Administrative Conference of the United States or other public or private individuals or organizations for information and assistance in forming a negotiated rulemaking committee and conducting negotiations on a proposed rule.

"(b) ROSTER OF POTENTIAL CONVENERS AND FACILITATORS.—The Administrative Conference of the United States, in consultation with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, shall maintain a roster of individuals who have acted as or are interested in serving as conveners or facilitators in negotiated rulemaking proceedings. The roster shall include individuals from government agencies and private groups, and shall be made available upon request. Agencies may also use rosters maintained by other public or private individuals or organizations.

"(c) PROCEDURES TO OBTAIN CONVENERS AND FACILITATORS.—

"(1) PROCEDURES.—The Administrative Conference of the United States shall develop procedures which permit agencies to obtain the services of conveners and facilitators on an expedited basis.

"(2) PAYMENT FOR SERVICES.—Payment for the services of conveners or facilitators shall be made by the agency using the services, unless the Chairman of the Administrative Conference agrees to pay for such services under subsection (f).

"(d) COMPILATION OF DATA ON NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING; REPORT TO CONGRESS.—

"(1) COMPILATION OF DATA.—The Administrative Conference of the United States shall compile and maintain data related to negotiated rulemaking and shall act as a clearinghouse to assist agencies and parties participating in negotiated rulemaking proceedings.

"(2) SUBMISSION OF INFORMATION BY AGENCIES.—Each agency engaged in negotiated rulemaking shall provide to the Administrative Conference of the United States a copy of any reports submitted to the agency by negotiated rulemaking committees under section 586 and such additional information as necessary to enable the Administrative Conference of the United States to comply with this subsection.

"(3) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Administrative Conference of the United States shall review and analyze the reports and information received under this subsection and shall transmit a biennial report to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives that—

"(A) provides recommendations for effective use by agencies of negotiated rulemaking; and

"(B) describes the nature and amounts of expenditures made by the Administrative Conference of the United States to accomplish the purposes of this subchapter.

"(e) TRAINING IN NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING.—The Administrative Conference of the United States is authorized to provide training in negotiated rulemaking techniques and procedures for personnel of the Federal Government either on a reimbursable or nonreimbursable basis. Such training may be extended to private individuals on a reimbursable basis.

"(f) PAYMENT OF EXPENSES OF AGENCIES.—The Chairman of the Administrative Conference of the United States is authorized to pay, upon request of an agency, all or part of the expenses of establishing a negotiated rulemaking committee and conducting a negotiated rulemaking. Such expenses may include, but are not limited to—

"(1) the costs of conveners and facilitators;

"(2) the expenses of committee members determined by the agency to be eligible for assistance under section 588(c); and

"(3) training costs.

Determinations with respect to payments under this section shall be at the discretion of such Chairman in furthering the use by Federal agencies of negotiated rulemaking.

"(g) USE OF FUNDS OF THE CONFERENCE.—The Administrative Conference of the United States may apply funds received under section 575(c)(12) of this title to carry out the purposes of this subchapter.

"§ 590. Judicial review

"Any agency action relating to establishing, assisting, or terminating a negotiated rulemaking committee under this subchapter shall not be subject to judicial review. Nothing in this section shall bar judicial review of a rule if such judicial review is otherwise provided by law. A rule which is the product of negotiated rulemaking and is subject to judicial review shall not be accorded any greater deference by a court than a rule which is the product of other rulemaking procedures.".

(b) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER IV—NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING PROCEDURE

"Sec. 581. Purpose.
"Sec. 582. Definitions.
"Sec. 583. Determination of need for negotiated rulemaking committee.
"Sec. 584. Publication of notice; applications for membership on committees.
"Sec. 585. Establishment of committee.
"Sec. 586. Conduct of committee activity.
"Sec. 587. Termination of committee.
"Sec. 588. Services, facilities, and payment of committee member expenses.
"Sec. 589. Role of the Administrative Conference of the United States and other entities.
"Sec. 590. Judicial review.".

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

In order to carry out this Act and the amendments made by this Act, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Administrative Conference of the United States, in addition to amounts authorized by section 576 of title 5, United States Code, not in excess of $500,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991, 1992, and 1993.

SEC. 5. SUNSET AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS.

Subchapter IV of title 5, United States Code, as added by section 3 of this Act, and that portion of the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, relating to subchapter IV, are repealed, effective 6 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, except that the provisions of such subchapter shall continue to apply after the date of the repeal with respect to then pending negotiated rulemaking proceedings initiated before the date of repeal which, in the judgment of the agencies which are convening or have convened such proceedings, require such continuation, until such negotiated rulemaking proceedings terminate pursuant to such subchapter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this bill came to us at the initiative of our colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. PEASE], who has worked very hard on it.

Mr. Speaker, I begin by yielding 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. PEASE] so that he may explain the bill.

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1990, and I want to begin by thanking the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] for his expeditious handling of this bill in his Subcommittee on Administrative Law and Governmental Relations of the Committee on the Judiciary and also thank the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES], for his assistance.

This bill has been in the making for several years, Mr. Speaker. I introduced the bill first about 8 years ago, and it has been introduced at every session of Congress since.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted that it has come to the floor at last. I would note that the bill has already passed the Senate. With our action here today, assuming that we pass it, we should be able to get the bill on the desk of the President rather soon.

The bill is aimed at providing an alternative to the present adversarial rulemaking process by establishing an optional procedure through which interested parties could negotiate a compromise rule.

Under this procedure, an agency would publish a notice in the Federal Register signaling its interest in establishing a negotiated rulemaking committee.

Interested persons would have at least 30 days to comment and to apply for membership on the committee.

If the agency then determines the rulemaking through negotiation is feasible and appropriate, it will establish a committee comprised of representatives of each interested party.

The committee would then be responsible for negotiating a rule that is acceptable to all parties within a fixed period and the services of a facilitator could be employed.

After this process is finished, it would be up to the regulatory agency officials to decide whether or not to adopt the rule as negotiated.

Essentially, Mr. Speaker, to put this matter in its simplest terms, too often in the past, and currently, rules are promulgated by agencies and then those groups that are affected by the rule go into court and challenge it.

We wind up with a long, protracted litigation over the rules.

Under this procedure, which I emphasize would be an optional procedure, we could have an alternative whereby the interested parties could sit down and try to work out their differences to the degree possible in advance.

So that at the end of the process, if they were in general agreement, the agency would then issue the rule, promulgate the rule and we would, hopefully, avoid the litigation which now costs a lot of money and also results in long, protracted proceedings before the rule can finally go into effect.

I think this is a fine additional tool to put at the hands of our Federal agencies, one that should cut down on costly litigation and, hopefully, one which will provide for better rules than we have had in the past.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 743, the Negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1990. As has been stated, Mr. Speaker, the concept behind H.R. 743, Negotiated Rulemaking is not a new one, it has in fact been considered in committees in the Congress several times over the last two Congresses. The bill attempts to bring the private sector and public sector together to work out their differences before the rule is published by our Federal agencies and I think legislation which supports the public and private sector working together under these circumstances is worthwhile.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is important to note that H.R. 743 does not require an agency in the Government to do anything, it simply encourages the use by our Federal agencies of negotiating rulemaking and sets forth guidelines for those agencies to follow if they so choose to do so. We are all aware of the spiraling cost of litigation to the Federal Government; negotiated rulemaking is one attempt to avoid litigation, at least with regard to the establishment of rules by our Federal agencies by bringing the parties to be effected together before the rule is published. As stated earlier, the bill sets forth specific guidelines under which an agency should proceed if it chooses to create and utilize a negotiated rulemaking committee. Those guidelines protect the agency as well as participating parties in the process of negotiating a rule.

I think it is important to point out that section 590 of the bill, entitled Judicial Review, specifically provides that no agency action relating to establishing, assisting, or terminating a Negotiated Rulemaking Committee shall be subject to judicial review. That provision reiterates that this legislation simply encourages our Federal agencies to use negotiated rulemaking when they feel it is appropriate and that the guidelines set forth in the bill are simply to facilitate the use of the Rulemaking Committee and that nothing herein vests extra legal rights in the parties participating in such a process. Would the gentleman from Massachusetts, the subcommittee chairman, concur with me on this point?

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAMES. I yield to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

□ 1310

Mr. FRANK. Yes, I concur with the gentleman. The intention here was not to confer any rights or additional rights; it was to codify a process, and there is no intention under this bill nor do I think there is any language which confers new rights of judicial review which did not previously exist.

Mr. JAMES. Yes, that is my clear understanding of what the bill means. In fact, I have so stated in my presentation. That is my belief and my understanding, and I think it is very clear in the bill.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, he, I, and the gentleman from Ohio are the only people in the House who have read the bill, so if we agree, I think that pretty much locks it up.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I hope that is not the case. I know that is not the case. I know my side of the aisle has read it with great interest and concern.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the subcommittee chairman for moving this legislation through committee to the floor. I support the bill and urge my colleagues to support it as well.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 743, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

QUAD CITIES INTERSTATE METROPOLITAN AUTHORITY COMPACT

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1485) to grant the consent of Congress to the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact entered into between the States of Illinois and Iowa.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 1485

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. CONGRESSIONAL CONSENT.

The Congress hereby consents to the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact entered into between the States of Illinois and Iowa, which compact is substantially as follows:

ARTICLE 1—SHORT TITLE

This compact may be cited as the "Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact".

ARTICLE 2—AUTHORIZATION

The states of Illinois and Iowa authorize the creation of the quad cities interstate authority to include the territories of Scott county in the state of Iowa and Rock Island county in the state of Illinois.

ARTICLE 3—PURPOSES

The purposes of the authority are to provide facilities and to foster cooperative efforts, all for the development and public benefit of its territory. This compact shall be liberally interpreted to carry out these purposes.

ARTICLE 4—CREATION

The authority is created when the secretary of State of Iowa certifies to the secretary of state of Illinois that a majority of the electors of Scott county voting on the proposition voted to approve creation of the authority and the secetary of state of Illinois certifies to the secretary of state of Iowa that a majority of the electors of Rock Island county voting on the proposition voted to approve creation of the authority. A referendum approving creation of the authority must be held before January 1, 1993.

ARTICLE 5—BOARD MEMBERS

The authority shall be governed by a board of not more than sixteen members, one-half of whom are residents of Rock Island county, Illinois, and one-half of whom are residents of Scott county, Iowa. Iowa members shall be chosen in the manner and for the terms fixed by the laws of Iowa. Illinois members shall be chosen in the manner and for the terms fixed by the law of Illinois.

ARTICLE 6—BOARD OFFICERS

The board shall elect annually from its members a chairperson, a vice chairperson, a secretary, and other officers it determines necessary.

ARTICLE 7—BOARD OPERATION

The board shall adopt bylaws governing its meetings, fiscal year, election of officers, and other matters of procedure and operation.

ARTICLE 8—BOARD EXPENSES AND COMPENSATION

(a) Members shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses incurred while carrying out official duties.

(b) Members shall be compensated as authorized by substantially identical laws of the states of Illinois and Iowa.

ARTICLE 9—EMPLOYEES

(a) The board shall hire an executive director, a treasurer, and other employees it determines necessary and shall fix their qualifications, duties, compensation, and terms of employment.

(b) The executive director, treasurer, and other employees shall have no pension benefits or rights of collective bargaining other than those authorized by substantially identical laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois.

ARTICLE 10—GENERAL POWERS

The authority has the following general powers:

(1) To sue and be sued.

(2) To own, operate, manage, or lease facilities within the territory of the authority. "Facility" means an airport, port, wharf, dock, harbor, bridge, tunnel, terminal, industrial park, waste disposal system, mass transit system, parking area, road, recreational area, conservation area, or other project beneficial to the territory of the authority as authorized by substantially identical laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois, together with related or incidental fixtures, equipment, improvements, and real or personal property.

(3) To fix and collect reasonable fees and charges for the use of its facilities.

(4) To own or lease interests in real or personal property.

(5) To accept and receive money, services, property, and other things of value.

(6) To disburse funds for its lawful activities.

(7) To enter into agreements with political subdivisions of the states of Illinois or Iowa or with the United States.

(8) To pledge or mortgage its property.

(9) To perform other functions necessary or incidental to its purposes and powers.

(10) To exercise other powers conferred by substantially identical laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois.

ARTICLE 11—EMINENT DOMAIN

(a) The authority has the power to acquire real property by eminent domain.

(b) Property in the state of Iowa shall be acquired under the laws of the state of Iowa. Property in the state of Illinois shall be acquired under the laws of the state of Illinois.

ARTICLE 12—INDEBTEDNESS

(a) The authority may incur indebtedness subject to debt limits imposed by substantially identical laws of the states of Illinois and Iowa.

(b) Indebtedness of the authority shall not be secured by the full faith and credit or the tax revenues of the state of Iowa or Illinois, or a political subdivision of the state of Iowa or Illinois other than the authority or as otherwise authorized by substantially identical laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois.

(c) Bonds shall be issued only under terms authorized by substantially identical laws of the states of Illinois and Iowa.

ARTICLE 13—TAXES

(a) The authority shall have no independent power to tax.

(b) A political subdivision of the state of Iowa or Illinois shall not impose taxes to find the authority or any of the authority's projects except as specifically authorized by substantially identical laws of the states of Illinois and Iowa.

ARTICLE 14—REPORTS

The authority shall report annually to the governors and legislatures of the states of Iowa and Illinois concerning its facilities, activities, and finances and may make recommendations for state legislation.

ARTICLE 15—PENALTIES

The states of Illinois and Iowa may provide by substantially identical laws for the enforcement of the ordinances of the authority and for penalties for the violation of those ordinances.

ARTICLE 16—SUBSTANTIALLY IDENTICAL LAWS

Substantially identical laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois which are in effect before the authority is created shall apply unless the laws are contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of this compact. A question of whether the laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois are substantially identical may be determined and enforced by a federal district court.

ARTICLE 17—DISSOLUTION

The authority may be dissolved by independent action of a political subdivision of the state of Iowa or the state of Iowa as authorized by law of the state of Iowa or by independent action of a political subdivision of the state of Illinois or the state of Illinois as authorized by law of the state of Illinois.

ARTICLE 18—SUBJECT TO LAWS AND CONSTITUTIONS

This compact, the enabling laws of the states of Iowa and Illinois, and the authority are subject to the laws and Constitution of the United States and the Constitutions of the states of Illinois and Iowa.

ARTICLE 19—CONSENT OF CONGRESS

The attorneys general of the states of Iowa and Illinois shall jointly seek the consent of the Congress of the United States to enter into or implement this compact if either of them believes the consent of the Congress of the United States is necessary.

ARTICLE 20—BINDING EFFECT

This compact and substantially identical enabling laws are binding on the states of Illinois and Iowa to the full extent allowed without the consent of Congress. If the consent of Congress is necessary, this compact and substantially identical enabling laws are binding on the states of Iowa and Illinois to the full extent when consent is obtained.

ARTICLE 21—SIGNING

This compact shall be signed in duplicate by the speakers of the houses of representatives of the states of Illinois and Iowa. One signed copy shall be filed with the secretary of state of Iowa and the other with the secretary of state of Illinois.

SEC. 2. RESERVATION OF RIGHTS.

The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, one of the constitutional duties of the Congress is to approve compacts between or among the several States. The Subcommittee on Administrative Law is the subcommittee to which those compacts come first.

The States of Iowa and Illinois have arrived at a compact. We have been informed by the Representatives, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH], who is with us, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS], who is with us—and they represent the districts affected—that this is a compact which fully reflects the interests of both States. It is supported by people of both States. We had a hearing, we publicized it, and nobody objected. I presume that will continue to be the case.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 1485, the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact. Pursuant to the Constitution, the Congress has the duty to ratify agreements between the States. One important prerequisite to our ratification of an interstate compact such as this, is that the State legislatures of the relevant States pass identical legislation to create the interstate compact. This prerequisite has been fulfilled with regard to the compact between Iowa and Illinois and our job here today is simply to confirm that agreement between those States.

I support S. 1485 and urge my colleagues to do likewise.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

Mr. LEACH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would first like to express my appreciation for the courtesy and professional guidance of the distinguished subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES], as well as the coauthor, my distinguished colleague from the Illinois side of the Quad Cities, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS].

Because the proposed compact is interstate in nature, Congress must act to grant approval for it. This is what the legislation before us would do. It should be stressed, however, that passage of this measure does not in itself establish the compact, but simply allows, following further State legislative action, for a referendum enabling the electors in the counties affected to decide for themselves if establishing it would bring the benefits its supporters attribute to it. It should also be stressed that Congress could not take the step, it is being asked to take today until the Legislatures of both Iowa and Illinois passed identical laws allowing for the enactment of the compact should a majority in the affected counties approve. Both States did so last year.

The action Congress is taking in approving this measure is, in effect, the second of a four-step process. The first was taken by the State legislatures in authorizing the compact. This second step will grant approval of it. Next, the State legislatures must pass identical enabling legislation which sets out its precise scope. Finally, referendums must be held to allow the people in the counties affected to express their will regarding it.

From a congressional perspective, I believe it would be fair to characterize the proposal as noncontroversial. From a local perspective, this is largely but not totally the case. Some residents in the affected area want the compact to be narrower in focus and the authority created to have more limited powers than others. These are issues for the Iowa and Illinois Legislatures to work out in the future and for the communities to approve or disapprove based on State legislative action.

In summary, what is unique about this legislation is, what is unique about the Quad Cities: it is bicounty and bi-State, and, in addition, has been supported—and critiqued—in a bipartisan fashion at all levels of government consideration. Passage, in my judgment, of S. 1485 would represent an innovative step toward streamlining the delivery of government services in this unique Mississippi River community and help promote economic growth for the citizens of the region.

As a Quad Citian, I would like to stress that, while the compact is designed to produce efficiencies in the delivery of a limited number of public services, it symbolizes more than dollars and cents concerns. If passed, the compact would not only signal bistate cooperation but the establishment of a broader community identification. Too often, the remarkable river that divides our community has served as a wedge of irrational governmental separation. Passage of this compact signals a new era, one in which the world's greatest river will help serve to bind rather than separate our citizens and government.

Again, let me express my appreciation to the leaders of the committee of jurisdiction, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK], the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES], and my good friend, the coauthor of the statute, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just add to what the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] said that one of the things I found to be the most unique about the Quad Cities—and he mentioned that they were unique—was that there appeared to be five Quad Cities. But we did not amend the compact for that reason.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS].

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity today to speak in support of S. 1485, a bill to grant the consent of Congress for the establishment of a Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact. S. 1485 is the Senate companion to H.R. 3118, a bill introduced in the House by Representative LEACH and myself and approved by the House Judiciary Committee.

I want to applaud the efforts of Senator SIMON in moving this legislation through the Senate. His leadership in the Senate on behalf of the compact was outstanding.

As you may know, the Quad Cities consist of Rock Island, Moline, and East Moline, IL, and Davenport, IA, separated by the Mississippi River. A compact would allow the Quad Cities to develop a central authority to coordinate the municipal services of this bistate metropolitan area. It would address the needs of the Quad Cities with issues such as solid waste, bridges, mass transit, port development, and airports. The compact will further strengthen our joint economic development efforts that can move the Quad Cities forward and spread opportunity to all the citizens of our area.

Since this would be an interstate compact between Rock Island County in Illinois and Scott County in Iowa, it must, under our Constitution, have the approval of the Congress. After receiving congressional approval, the States of Illinois and Iowa can move forward with the State process. Then, the citizens of Rock Island and Scott Counties can decide for themselves in a referendum whether or not they want a compact.

Again, I appreciate having the opportunity to be here today to speak on behalf of this bill. And, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation that is so important to the Quad Cities.

□ 1320

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1485.

The question was taken.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair will now put the question on the first of two motions to suspend the rules on which further proceedings were postponed earlier today in the order in which those motions were entertained.

The votes will be taken in the following order: H.R. 743, de novo; and S. 1485, by the yeas and nays.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the time within which a vote by electronic device may be taken after the first vote in this series.

NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING ACT OF 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 743, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 743, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 411, nays 0, answered "present" 1, not voting 21, as follows:

[Roll No. 86]

YEAS—411

Akaka	Conyers	Gillmor
Alexander	Cooper	Gilman
Anderson	Costello	Gingrich
Andrews	Coughlin	Glickman
Annunzio	Courter	Gonzalez
Anthony	Cox	Goodling
Applegate	Coyne	Gordon
Armey	Craig	Goss
Aspin	Crane	Gradison
Atkins	Crockett	Grandy
AuCoin	Dannemeyer	Gray
Baker	Darden	Green
Ballenger	Davis	Guarini
Barnard	de la Garza	Gunderson
Bartlett	DeFazio	Hall (OH)
Barton	DeLay	Hall (TX)
Bateman	Dellums	Hamilton
Bellenson	Derrick	Hammerschmidt
Bennett	DeWine	Hancock
Bentley	Dickinson	Hansen
Bereuter	Dicks	Harris
Berman	Dingell	Hastert
Bevill	Dixon	Hatcher
Bilbray	Donnelly	Hayes (IL)
Bilirakis	Dorgan (ND)	Hayes (LA)
Bliley	Douglas	Hefley
Boehlert	Downey	Hefner
Bonior	Dreier	Henry
Borski	Duncan	Herger
Bosco	Durbin	Hertel
Boucher	Dwyer	Hiler
Boxer	Dymally	Hoagland
Brennan	Dyson	Hochbrueckner
Brooks	Early	Holloway
Broomfield	Eckart	Hopkins
Browder	Edwards (CA)	Horton
Brown (CA)	Edwards (OK)	Houghton
Brown (CO)	Emerson	Hoyer
Bruce	English	Hubbard
Bryant	Erdreich	Huckaby
Buechner	Espy	Hughes
Bunning	Evans	Hunter
Burton	Fascell	Hutto
Bustamante	Fawell	Hyde
Byron	Fazio	Inhofe
Callahan	Feighan	Jacobs
Campbell (CA)	Fields	James
Campbell (CO)	Flake	Jenkins
Cardin	Flippo	Johnson (CT)
Carper	Foglietta	Johnson (SD)
Carr	Ford (MI)	Johnston
Chandler	Ford (TN)	Jones (GA)
Chapman	Frank	Jones (NC)
Clarke	Frenzel	Jontz
Clay	Frost	Kanjorski
Clement	Gallegly	Kaptur
Clinger	Gallo	Kasich
Coble	Gaydos	Kastenmeier
Coleman (MO)	Gejdenson	Kennedy
Coleman (TX)	Gekas	Kennelly
Combest	Gephardt	Kildee
Condit	Geren	Kleczka
Conte	Gibbons	Kolbe
Kolter	Oberstar	Skeen
Kostmayer	Obey	Skelton
Kyl	Olin	Slattery
LaFalce	Ortiz	Slaughter (NY)
Lagomarsino	Owens (NY)	Slaughter (VA)
Lancaster	Owens (UT)	Smith (IA)
Lantos	Oxley	Smith (NE)
Laughlin	Packard	Smith (TX)
Leach (IA)	Pallone	Smith (VT)
Leath (TX)	Panetta	Smith, Denny (OR)
Lehman (CA)	Parker	Smith, Robert (OR)
Lehman (FL)	Parris	Snowe
Lent	Pashayan	Solarz
Levin (MI)	Patterson	Solomon
Levine (CA)	Paxon	Spence
Lewis (CA)	Payne (NJ)	Spratt
Lewis (GA)	Payne (VA)	Staggers
Lightfoot	Pease	Stallings
Lipinski	Pelosi	Stangeland
Livingston	Penny	Stark
Lloyd	Perkins	Stearns
Long	Petri	Stenholm
Lowery (CA)	Pickett	Stokes
Lowey (NY)	Pickle	Studds
Luken, Thomas	Porter	Stump
Lukens, Donald	Poshard	Sundquist
Machtley	Price	Swift
Madigan	Pursell	Synar
Manton	Quillen	Tallon
Markey	Rangel	Tanner
Marlenee	Ravenel	Tauke
Martin (IL)	Ray	Tauzin
Martin (NY)	Regula	Taylor
Matsui	Rhodes	Thomas (CA)
Mavroules	Richardson	Thomas (GA)
Mazzoli	Ridge	Thomas (WY)
McCandless	Rinaldo	Torres
McCloskey	Roberts	Torricelli
McCollum	Robinson	Towns
McCrery	Roe	Traficant
McCurdy	Rogers	Traxler
McDade	Rohrabacher	Udall
McDermott	Rose	Unsoeld
McEwen	Rostenkowski	Upton
McGrath	Roth	Valentine
McHugh	Roukema	Vander Jagt
McMillan (NC)	Rowland (CT)	Vento
McMillen (MD)	Rowland (GA)	Visclosky
McNulty	Roybal	Volkmer
Meyers	Russo	Vucanovich
Mfume	Sabo	Walgren
Miller (CA)	Saiki	Walker
Miller (OH)	Sangmeister	Walsh
Miller (WA)	Sarpalius	Washington
Mineta	Savage	Watkins
Moakley	Sawyer	Waxman
Molinari	Saxton	Weber
Mollohan	Schaefer	Weiss
Montgomery	Scheuer	Weldon
Moody	Schiff	Wheat
Moorhead	Schneider	Whittaker
Morella	Schroeder	Williams
Morrison (CT)	Schuette	Wilson
Morrison (WA)	Schulze	Wise
Mrazek	Schumer	Wolf
Murphy	Sensenbrenner	Wolpe
Murtha	Serrano	Wyden
Myers	Sharp	Wylie
Nagle	Shaw	Yates
Natcher	Shays	Yatron
Neal (MA)	Shumway	Young (AK)
Neal (NC)	Shuster	Young (FL)
Nielson	Sikorski
Nowak	Sisisky
Oakar	Skaggs

NAYS—0

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Ireland

NOT VOTING—21

Ackerman	Grant	Ros-Lehtinen
Archer	Hawkins	Smith (FL)
Bates	Lewis (FL)	Smith (NJ)
Boggs	Martinez	Smith, Robert (NH)
Collins	Michel	Whitten
Dornan (CA)	Nelson
Engel	Rahall
Fish	Ritter

□ 1344

Messrs. RICHARDSON, WASHINGTON, and THOMAS A. LUKEN changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of the Senate bill (S. 303) to establish a framework for the conduct of negotiated rulemaking by Federal agencies, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 303

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1989".

FINDINGS

SEC. 2. The Congress finds that—

(1) Government regulation has increased substantially since the enactment of the Administrative Procedure Act.

(2) Agencies currently use rulemaking procedures that may discourage the affected parties from meeting and communicating with each other, and may cause parties with different interests to assume conflicting and antagonistic positions and to engage in expensive and time-consuming litigation over agency rules.

(3) Adversarial rulemaking deprives the affected parties and the public of the benefits of face-to-face negotiations and cooperation in developing and reaching agreement on a rule. It also deprives them of the benefits of shared information, knowledge, expertise, and technical abilities possessed by the affected parties.

(4) Negotiated rulemaking, in which the parties who will be significantly affected by a rule participate in the development of the rule, can provide significant advantages over adversarial rulemaking.

(5) Negotiated rulemaking can increase the acceptability and improve the substance of rules, making it less likely that the affected parties will resist enforcement or challenge such rules in court. It may also shorten the amount of time needed to issue final rules.

(6) Agencies have the authority to establish negotiated rulemaking committees under the laws establishing such agencies and their activities and under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.). Several agencies have successfully used negotiated rulemaking. The process has not been widely used by other agencies, however, in part because such agencies are unfamiliar with the process or uncertain as to the authority for such rulemaking.

NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING PROCEDURE

SEC. 3. (a) Chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER IV—NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING PROCEDURE

"§ 581. Purpose

"The purpose of this subchapter is to establish a framework for the conduct of negotiated rulemaking, consistent with section 553 of this title, to encourage agencies to use the process when it enhances the informal rulemaking process. Nothing in this subchapter should be construed as an attempt to limit innovation and experimentation with the negotiated rulemaking process or with other innovative rulemaking procedures otherwise authorized by law.

"§ 582. Definitions

"For the purposes of this subchapter the term—

"(1) 'agency' has the same meaning as in section 551(1) of this title;

"(2) 'consensus' means unanimous concurrence among the interests represented on a negotiated rulemaking committee established under this subchapter, unless such committee—

"(A) agrees to define such term to mean a general but not unanimous concurrence; or

"(B) agrees upon another specified definition;

"(3) 'convenor' means a person who impartially assists an agency in determining whether establishment of a negotiated rulemaking committee is feasible and appropriate in a particular rulemaking;

"(4) 'facilitator' means a person who impartially aids in the discussions and negotiations among the members of a negotiated rulemaking committee to develop a proposed rule;

"(5) 'interest' means, with respect to an issue or matter, multiple parties which have a similar point of view or which are likely to be affected in a similar manner;

"(6) 'party' has the same meaning as in section 551(3) of this title;

"(7) 'person' has the same meaning as in section 551(2) of this title;

"(8) 'negotiated rulemaking committee' or 'committee' means an advisory committee established by an agency in accordance with this subchapter and the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) to consider and discuss issues for the purpose of reaching a consensus in the development of a proposed rule;

"(9) 'rule' has the same meaning as in section 551(4) of this title; and

"(10) 'rulemaking' has the same meaning as in section 551(5) of this title.

"§ 583. Determination of need for negotiated rulemaking committee

"(a) An agency may establish a negotiated rulemaking committee to negotiate and develop a proposed rule, if the head of the agency determines that the use of the negotiated rulemaking procedure is in the public interest. In making such a determination, the head of the agency shall consider whether—

"(1) there is a need for a rule;

"(2) there are a limited number of identifiable interests that will be significantly affected by the rule;

"(3) there is a reasonable likelihood that a committee can be convened with a balanced representation of persons who—

"(A) can adequately represent the interests identified under paragraph (2); and

"(B) are willing to negotiate in good faith to reach a consensus on the proposed rule;

"(4) there is a reasonable likelihood that a committee will reach a consensus on the proposed rule within a fixed period of time;

"(5) the negotiated rulemaking procedure will not unreasonably delay the notice of proposed rulemaking and the issuance of the final rule;

"(6) the agency has adequate resources and is willing to commit such resources, including technical assistance, to the committee; and

"(7) the agency, to the maximum extent possible consistent with the legal obligations of the agency, will use the consensus of the committee with respect to the proposed rule as the basis for the rule proposed by the agency for notice and comment.

"(b)(1) An agency may use the services of a convenor to assist the agency in—

"(A) identifying persons who will be significantly affected by a proposed rule; and

"(B) conducting discussions with such persons to identify the issues of concern to such persons, and to ascertain whether the establishment of a negotiated rulemaking committee is feasible and appropriate in the particular rulemaking.

"(2) The convenor shall report findings and may make recommendations to an agency. Upon request of the agency, the convenor shall ascertain the names of persons who are willing and qualified to represent interests that will be significantly affected by the proposed rule. The report of the convenor and any recommendations shall be made available to the public upon request.

"§ 584. Publication of notice

"(a) If, after considering the report of a convenor or conducting an assessment, an agency decides to establish a negotiated rulemaking committee, the agency shall publish in the Federal Register a notice which shall include—

"(1) an announcement that the agency intends to establish a negotiated rulemaking committee to negotiate and develop a proposed rule;

"(2) a description of the subject and scope of the rule to be developed, and the issues to be considered;

"(3) a list of the interests which are likely to be significantly affected by the rule;

"(4) a list of the persons proposed to represent such interests and the person or persons proposed to represent the agency;

"(5) a proposed agenda and schedule for completing the work of the committee, including a target date for publication by the agency of a proposed rule for notice and comment;

"(6) a description of administrative support for the committee to be provided by the agency, including technical assistance;

"(7) a solicitation for comments on the proposal to establish the committee, and the proposed membership of the negotiated rulemaking committee; and

"(8) an explanation of how a person may apply or nominate another person for membership on the committee, as provided under subsection (b).

"(b) Persons who will be significantly affected by a proposed rule and who believe that their interests will not be adequately represented by any person specified in a notice under subsection (a)(4) may apply for, or nominate another person for, membership on the negotiated rulemaking committee to represent such interests with respect to the proposed rule. Each application or nomination shall include—

"(1) the name of the applicant or nominee and a description of the interests such person shall represent;

"(2) evidence that the applicant or nominee is authorized to represent parties related to the interests the person proposes to represent;

"(3) a written commitment that the applicant or nominee shall actively participate in good faith in the development of the rule under consideration; and

"(4) the reasons that the persons specified in the notice under subsection (a)(4) do not adequately represent the interests of the person submitting the application or nomination.

"§ 585. Establishment of committee

"(a) The agency shall provide for a period of at least 30 calendar days for the submission of comments and applications under section 584.

"(b)(1) If after considering comments and applications submitted under section 584, the agency determines that a negotiated rulemaking committee can adequately represent the interests that will be significantly affected by a proposed rule and that it is feasible and appropriate in the particular rulemaking, the agency may establish a negotiated rulemaking committee. In establishing and administering such a committee, the agency shall comply with the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) with respect to such committee, except as otherwise provided in this subchapter.

"(2) If after considering such comments and applications, the agency decides not to establish a committee, the agency shall promptly publish notice of such decision and the reasons therefor in the Federal Register.

"(c) The agency shall limit membership on a negotiated rulemaking committee to 25 members, unless the agency head determines that a greater number of members is necessary for the functioning of the committee or to achieve balanced membership. Each committee shall include at least one individual representing the agency.

"(d) The agency shall provide appropriate administrative support to the negotiated rulemaking committee, including technical assistance.

"§ 586. Conduct of committee activity

"(a) Each negotiated rulemaking committee established under this subchapter shall consider the matter proposed by the agency for consideration and shall attempt to reach a consensus concerning a proposed rule with respect to such matter and any other matter the committee determines is relevant to the proposed rule.

"(b) The person or persons representing the agency on a negotiated rulemaking committee shall participate in the deliberations and activities of such committee with the same rights and responsibilities as other members of such committee, and shall be authorized to fully represent the agency in the discussions and negotiations of the committee.

"(c)(1) Notwithstanding section 10(e) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.), an agency may nominate either a person from the Federal Government or a person from outside the Federal Government to serve as a facilitator for the negotiations of the committee, subject to the approval by consensus of the committee. If the committee does not approve the nominee of the agency for facilitator, the agency shall submit a substitute nomination. If a committee does not approve any nominee of the agency for facilitator, the committee shall select by consensus a person to serve as facilitator. A person designated to represent the agency in substantive issues may not serve as facilitator or otherwise chair the committee.

"(d) A facilitator approved or selected by a negotiated rulemaking committee shall—

"(1) chair the meetings of the committee in an impartial manner;

"(2) impartially assist the members of the committee in conducting discussions and negotiations; and

"(3) manage the keeping of minutes and records as required under section 10 (b) and (c) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.), except that any personal notes and materials of the facilitator or of the members of a committee shall not be subject to section 552 of this title.

"(e) A negotiated rulemaking committee established under this subchapter may adopt procedures for the operation of the committee. No provision of section 553 of this title shall be applicable to the procedures of a committee.

"(f) If a committee reaches a consensus on a proposed rule, at the conclusion of negotiations the committee shall transmit to the agency that established the committee a report containing the proposed rule. If the committee does not reach a consensus on a proposed rule, such committee shall transmit to the agency a report specifying any areas in which the committee reached a consensus. The committee may include in a report any other information, recommendations, or materials that the committee considers appropriate. Any committee member may include as an addendum to the report additional information, recommendations, or materials.

"(g) In addition to the report specified by subsection (f), a committee shall submit to the agency the records required under section 10 (b) and (c) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

"§ 587. Termination of committee

"A negotiated rulemaking committee shall terminate upon promulgation of the final rule under consideration, unless the committee's charter contains an earlier termination date or the agency, after consulting the committee, or the committee itself specifies an earlier termination date.

"§ 588. Services, facilities, and payment of committee member expenses

"(a)(1) An agency may employ or enter into contracts for the services of an individual or organization to serve as a convenor or facilitator for a committee under this subchapter, or may use the services of a government employee to act as a convenor or a facilitator for a committee.

"(2) An agency shall determine whether a person under consideration to serve as convenor or facilitator of a committee under paragraph (1) has any financial or other interest that would preclude such person from serving in an impartial and independent manner.

"(b) For purposes of this subchapter, an agency may use the services and facilities of other Federal agencies and public and private agencies and instrumentalities with the consent of such agencies and instrumentalities, and with or without reimbursement to such agencies and instrumentalities, and may accept voluntary and uncompensated services without regard to the provisions of section 1342 of title 31. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service may provide services and facilities, with or without reimbursement, to assist agencies under this subchapter, including furnishing convenors, facilitators, and training in negotiated rulemaking.

"(c) Members of a negotiated rulemaking committee shall be responsible for their own expenses of participation in such committee, except that an agency may, in accordance with section 7(d) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.), pay for a member's reasonable travel and per diem expenses, expenses to obtain technical assistance, and a reasonable rate of compensation, if—

"(1) such member certifies a lack of adequate financial resources to participate in the committee; and

"(2) the agency determines that such member's participation in the committee is necessary to assure an adequate representation of the member's interest.

"(d) A member's receipt of funds under this section or section 589 shall not conclusively determine the purposes of sections 202 through 209 of title 18 whether that member is an employee of the United States Government.

"§ 589. Role of the Administrative Conference of the United States

"(a) An agency may consult with the Administrative Conference of the United States or other public or private individuals or organizations for information and assistance in forming a negotiated rulemaking committee and conducting negotiations on a proposed rule.

"(b) The Administrative Conference of the United States, in consultation with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, shall maintain a roster of individuals who have acted as or are interested in serving as convenors or facilitators in negotiated rulemaking proceedings. The roster shall include individuals from government agencies and private groups, and shall be made available upon request. Agencies may also use rosters maintained by other public or private individuals or organizations.

"(c)(1) The Administrative Conference of the United States shall develop procedures which permit agencies to obtain the services of such convenors and facilitators on an expedited basis.

"(2) Payment for convenor or facilitator services shall be made by the agency using the services, unless the Chairman of the Administrative Conference agrees to pay for such services under subsection (f).

"(d)(1) The Administrative Conference of the United States shall compile and maintain data related to negotiated rulemaking and shall act as a clearinghouse to assist agencies and parties participating in negotiated rulemaking procedures.

"(2) Each agency engaged in negotiated rulemaking shall provide to the Administrative Conference of the United States a copy of any reports submitted to the agency by negotiated rulemaking committees under section 586 and such additional information as necessary to enable the Administrative Conference of the United States to comply with this subsection.

"(3) The Administrative Conference of the United States shall review and analyze the reports and information received under this subsection and shall transmit a biennial report to the Governmental Affairs Committee of the Senate and the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives that—

"(A) provides recommendations for effective agency use of negotiated rulemaking; and

"(B) describes the nature and amounts of expenditures made by the Administrative Conference of the United States to accomplish the purposes of this subchapter.

"(e) The Administrative Conference of the United States is authorized to provide training in negotiated rulemaking techniques and procedures for Federal personnel either on a reimbursable or nonreimbursable basis. Such training may be extended to private individuals on a reimbursable basis.

"(f) The Chairman of the Administrative Conference of the United States is authorized to pay, upon request of an agency, all or part of the expenses of establishing a committee and conducting a negotiated rulemaking. Such expenses may include, but are not limited to—

"(1) the costs of convenors and facilitators;

"(2) the expenses of committee members determined by the agency to be eligible for assistance under section 588(c); and

"(3) training costs.

Determinations with respect to payments under this section shall be at the discretion of such Chairman in furthering the use of negotiated rulemaking by Federal agencies.

"(g) The Administrative Conference of the United States may apply funds received under section 575(c)(12) of this title to carry out the purposes of this subchapter.

"§ 590. Judicial review

"Any agency action relating to establishing, assisting, or terminating a negotiated rulemaking committee under this subchapter shall not be subject to judicial review. Nothing in this section shall bar judicial review of a rule which is otherwise provided by law. A rule which is the product of negotiated rulemaking and is subjected to judicial review shall not be accorded any greater deference by a court than a rule which is the product of other rulemaking procedures.".

(b) The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SUBCHAPTER IV—NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING PROCEDURE

"Sec. 581. Purpose.
"Sec. 582. Definitions.
"Sec. 583. Determination of need for negotiated rulemaking committee.
"Sec. 584. Publication of notice.
"Sec. 585. Establishment of committee.
"Sec. 586. Conduct of committee activity.
"Sec. 587. Termination of committee.
"Sec. 588. Services, facilities, and payment of committee member expenses.
"Sec. 589. Role of the Administrative Conference of the United States.
"Sec. 590. Judicial review.".

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 4. To carry out this Act, and notwithstanding section 576 of this title, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Administrative Conference of the United States not in excess of $500,000 for each of the fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992.

SUNSET AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

SEC. 5. (a) Subchapter IV of title 5, United States Code, is repealed, effective 6 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) That portion of the table of sections relating to subchapter IV for chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is repealed, effective 6 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Notwithstanding the repeal under this section, the provisions and amendments of this Act shall continue in effect after 6 years after the date of the enactment of this Act with respect to then pending negotiated rulemaking proceedings which, in the judgment of the agencies which are convening or have convened such proceedings, require such continuation, until such negotiated rulemakings terminate pursuant to this Act.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. FRANK

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. FRANK moves to strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill S. 303 and insert in lieu thereof the text of H.R. 743 as passed by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 743) was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 743, the bill just passed, and on S. 1485, the bill upon which the House is about to vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device may be taken on the additional motion to suspend the rules on which the Chair has postponed further proceedings.

QUAD CITIES INTERSTATE METROPOLITAN AUTHORITY COMPACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the Senate bill, S. 1485.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1485, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The Chair will remind the Members that this is a 5-minute vote.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 413, nays 0, not voting 20, as follows:

[Roll No. 87]

YEAS—413

Akaka	Durbin	Kennelly
Alexander	Dwyer	Kildee
Anderson	Dymally	Kleczka
Andrews	Dyson	Kolbe
Annunzio	Eckart	Kolter
Anthony	Edwards (CA)	Kostmayer
Applegate	Edwards (OK)	LaFalce
Armey	Emerson	Lagomarsino
Aspin	English	Lancaster
Atkins	Erdreich	Lantos
AuCoin	Espy	Laughlin
Baker	Evans	Leach (IA)
Ballenger	Fascell	Leath (TX)
Barnard	Fawell	Lehman (CA)
Bartlett	Fazio	Lehman (FL)
Barton	Feighan	Lent
Bateman	Fields	Levin (MI)
Bates	Flake	Levine (CA)
Bellenson	Flippo	Lewis (CA)
Bennett	Foglietta	Lewis (GA)
Bentley	Ford (MI)	Lightfoot
Bereuter	Ford (TN)	Lipinski
Berman	Frank	Livingston
Bevill	Frenzel	Lloyd
Bilbray	Frost	Long
Bilirakis	Gallegly	Lowery (CA)
Bliley	Gallo	Lowey (NY)
Boehlert	Gaydos	Luken, Thomas
Bonior	Gejdenson	Lukens, Donald
Borski	Gekas	Machtley
Bosco	Gephardt	Madigan
Boucher	Geren	Manton
Boxer	Gibbons	Markey
Brennan	Gillmor	Marlenee
Brooks	Gilman	Martin (IL)
Broomfield	Gingrich	Martin (NY)
Browder	Glickman	Martinez
Brown (CA)	Gonzalez	Matsui
Brown (CO)	Goodling	Mavroules
Bruce	Gordon	Mazzoli
Bryant	Goss	McCandless
Buechner	Gradison	McCloskey
Bunning	Grandy	McCollum
Burton	Grant	McCrery
Bustamante	Gray	McCurdy
Byron	Green	McDade
Callahan	Guarini	McDermott
Campbell (CA)	Gunderson	McEwen
Campbell (CO)	Hall (OH)	McGrath
Cardin	Hall (TX)	McHugh
Carper	Hamilton	McMillan (NC)
Carr	Hammerschmidt	McMillen (MD)
Chandler	Hancock	McNulty
Chapman	Hansen	Meyers
Clarke	Harris	Mfume
Clay	Hastert	Miller (CA)
Clement	Hatcher	Miller (OH)
Clinger	Hayes (IL)	Miller (WA)
Coble	Hayes (LA)	Mineta
Coleman (MO)	Hefley	Moakley
Coleman (TX)	Hefner	Molinari
Combest	Henry	Mollohan
Condit	Herger	Montgomery
Conte	Hertel	Moody
Conyers	Hiler	Moorhead
Cooper	Hoagland	Morella
Costello	Hochbrueckner	Morrison (CT)
Coughlin	Holloway	Morrison (WA)
Courter	Hopkins	Mrazek
Cox	Horton	Murphy
Coyne	Houghton	Murtha
Craig	Hoyer	Myers
Crane	Hubbard	Nagle
Crockett	Huckaby	Natcher
Dannemeyer	Hughes	Neal (MA)
Darden	Hunter	Neal (NC)
Davis	Hutto	Nielson
de la Garza	Hyde	Nowak
DeFazio	Inhofe	Oakar
DeLay	Ireland	Oberstar
Dellums	Jacobs	Obey
Derrick	James	Olin
DeWine	Jenkins	Ortiz
Dickinson	Johnson (CT)	Owens (NY)
Dicks	Johnson (SD)	Owens (UT)
Dingell	Johnston	Oxley
Dixon	Jones (GA)	Packard
Donnelly	Jones (NC)	Pallone
Dorgan (ND)	Jontz	Panetta
Douglas	Kanjorski	Parker
Downey	Kaptur	Parris
Dreier	Kastenmeier	Pashayan
Duncan	Kennedy	Patterson
Paxon	Schroeder	Tallon
Payne (NJ)	Schuette	Tanner
Payne (VA)	Schulze	Tauke
Pease	Schumer	Tauzin
Pelosi	Sensenbrenner	Taylor
Penny	Serrano	Thomas (CA)
Perkins	Sharp	Thomas (GA)
Petri	Shaw	Thomas (WY)
Pickett	Shays	Torres
Pickle	Shumway	Torricelli
Poshard	Shuster	Towns
Price	Sikorski	Traficant
Pursell	Sisisky	Traxler
Quillen	Skaggs	Udall
Rangel	Skeen	Unsoeld
Ravenel	Skelton	Upton
Ray	Slattery	Valentine
Regula	Slaughter (NY)	Vander Jagt
Rhodes	Slaughter (VA)	Vento
Richardson	Smith (IA)	Visclosky
Ridge	Smith (NE)	Volkmer
Rinaldo	Smith (TX)	Vucanovich
Roberts	Smith (VT)	Walgren
Robinson	Smith, Denny (OR)	Walker
Roe	Smith, Robert (NH)	Walsh
Rogers	Smith, Robert (OR)	Washington
Rohrabacher	Snowe	Watkins
Rose	Solarz	Waxman
Rostenkowski	Solomon	Weber
Roth	Spence	Weiss
Roukema	Spratt	Weldon
Rowland (CT)	Staggers	Wheat
Rowland (GA)	Stallings	Whittaker
Roybal	Stangeland	Whitten
Russo	Stark	Williams
Sabo	Stearns	Wilson
Saiki	Stenholm	Wise
Sangmeister	Stokes	Wolf
Sarpalius	Studds	Wolpe
Savage	Stump	Wyden
Sawyer	Sundquist	Wylie
Saxton	Swift	Yates
Schaefer	Synar	Yatron
Scheuer		Young (AK)
Schiff		Young (FL)
Schneider

NAYS—0

NOT VOTING—20

Ackerman	Fish	Porter
Archer	Hawkins	Rahall
Boggs	Kasich	Ritter
Collins	Kyl	Ros-Lehtinen
Dornan (CA)	Lewis (FL)	Smith (FL)
Early	Michel	Smith (NJ)
Engel	Nelson

□ 1353

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT OF COMMITTEE ON BANKING, FINANCE AND URBAN AFFAIRS TO SIT DURING 5-MINUTE RULE MAY 2 AND 3, 1990

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development be permitted to sit tomorrow, May 2, and Thursday, May 3, 1990, for the consideration of H.R. 1180, the Housing and Community Development Act of 1990, while the House is sitting for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The ranking minority member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], has been consulted and has agreed to this request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI]. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it was a little hard to hear over the noise. Did I understand correctly that the gentleman from Texas said that this has been cleared by the ranking minority member of the committee?

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, that is correct.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] is here, so I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

WITHDRAWAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4278

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the name of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] be withdrawn as a cosponsor of H.R. 4278, upon his request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I wish the record to show that I was unable to vote on H.R. 743 and S. 1485 because I was giving a brief on the democratic reforms taking place in Nicaragua and throughout the world. H.R. 743, which passed by a vote of 411 yeas to 0 nays, is the Negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1989, which would streamline the rulemaking process used to make Federal rules. Had I been present I would have voted "yea" on H.R. 743. S. 1485, which passed by a vote of 413 yeas to 0 nays, was the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact entered into by Iowa and Illinois. I would have voted "yea" on this bill, as well.

SUNDRY MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Kalbaugh, one of his secretaries.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET, FISCAL YEAR 1991

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 382 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 310).

□ 1358

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the Sate of the Union for the further consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 310) setting forth the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal years 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995, with Mr. GRAY in the Chair.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Thursday, April 26, 1990, the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] had been disposed of.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. DELLUMS

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr Chairman, I offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. DELLUMS: Strike all after the resolving clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This concurrent resolution may be cited as the "FY '91 Quality of Life Budget".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

(a) GOALS.—Congress finds that a nation's values and concern for social and economic justice are measured by the fiscal priorities established in its national budget. This budget demonstrates that the current economic and social crises which beset this Nation are a result of policies and are not a requirement of the Federal budget process. This budget offers a new vision for America, addressing basic human needs and potential. Its centerpiece is an unyielding commitment to our most precious national resource: our children. The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget supports proven social programs and creates new domestic initiatives; provides for a national defense which rejects obsolescent Cold War policies and faces evolving international realities through constructive proposals for weapons and force reductions; and makes substantial progress in budget deficit reduction.

(b) ECONOMIC ASSUMPTIONS.—The Congress states its strong disagreement to the economic forecasts presented by the Office of Management and Budget, but, consistent with current law and for ease of comparative analysis, this budget is calculated using those projections. The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget adopts the Congressional Budget Office projections for the Federal Government's new direct loan obligations, new primary loan guarantee commitments, and Federal credit activity and social security revenue.

(c) UNEMPLOYMENT DIFFERENTIAL.—The Congress rejects estimates of fiscal year 1991 unemployment levels and adopts instead a Humphrey-Hawkins target in compliance with the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1978. The Congressional Budget Office reports that lost revenues and increased outlays from unemployment yield an unemployment deficit of $40,000,000,000 for every one percent of unemployment. It is calculated that an additional $1,000,000,000 will be realized from the creation of jobs through this budget's unemployment initiatives.

(d) REVENUE.—This budget makes substantial new proposals for generating additional revenue for fiscal year 1991 and for outyear projections. It's first initiative implements requirements that the highest-income taxpayers (taxable income over $208,510 for a family of four) pay the same marginal tax rate as lower income taxpayers (taxable income between $78,350 and $208,510). This policy removes the "bubble" created in the Tax Reform Act of 1986 where high income taxpayers pay a lower marginal rate (28 percent) than lower income taxpayers (33 percent). The second revenue initiative imposes a 10 percent corporate income tax surcharge on the highest-income 10 percent of corporate taxpayers.

(e) DEFICIT.—The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget meets the express requirements of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985. The projected fiscal year 1991 Federal deficit is $63,752,000,000, fiscal year 1992 deficit is $24,928,000,000, and with the adoption of this concurrent resolution, the budget in fiscal year 1993 would have a surplus of $5,035,000,000.

SEC. 3. SUMMARY BY FUNCTION.

(a) NATIONAL DEFENSE (050).—(1) This budget provides for significant cuts in the military spending program. Accordingly, it cuts $52,500,000,000 from BA, but adds $5,000,000,000 for toxic cleanup and economic conversion. It cuts $26,900,000,000 from outlays.

(2) It reduces personnel by 10 percent, resulting in $7,800,000,000 in BA savings and $7,500,000,000 in outlay savings in fiscal year 1991.

(3) It reduces the O&M account by 10 percent, resulting in $9,000,000,000 in BA savings and $6,300,000,000 in outlay savings in fiscal year 1991.

(4) It reduces procurement by 25 percent, resulting in $19,400,000,000 in BA savings and $2,800,000,000 in outlay savings in fiscal year 1991.

(5) It reduces RDT&E by 25 percent, resulting in $9,500,000,000 in BA savings and $4,800,000,000 in outlay savings in fiscal year 1991.

(6) It reduces DOE weapons development by 65 percent, resulting in BA savings of $7,000,000,000 and $5,800,000,000 in outlay savings in fiscal year 1991.

(7) It eliminates the B-2, eliminates the 18th Trident submarine, cuts funding for MX and Trident II, reduces attack submarine and guided missile destroyer acquisition, and reduces F-16 and F-18 purchases.

(b) INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS (150).—(1) The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget provides that United States foreign policy must be shifted away from a primary reliance upon arms sales to one which supports broad development goals throughout the Third World. This investment will help to stabilize world order, leading away from armed conflict.

(2) This budget proposes $1,800,000,000 expansion of International Development and Humanitarian aid—including new initiatives for African and Caribbean development, and expansion of the Public Law 480 food assistance program.

(3) This budget proposes a broad increase in this function, especially for development in Africa and the Caribbean through the Mickey Leland Development Act. The Mickey Leland African and Caribbean Development Act of 1991 includes the following—

(A) the African Famine Recovery and Development Act;

(B) the Caribbean Regional Development Act;

(C) $1,000,000,000 in development assistance for the Development Fund for Africa;

(D) $85,000,000 of the above earmarked for the Southern Africa Development Coordinating Committee (SADCC);

(E) language establishing an AID Mission in Namibia;

(F) $15,000,000 of the above development assistance earmarked for Namibia;

(G) $13,000,000 for the African Development Foundation programs;

(H) $60,000,000 in ESF funds for the Caribbean;

(I) $93,600,000 in development assistance for the Caribbean;

(J) $33,000,000 of the above development assistance earmarked for the Eastern Caribbean and Belize;

(K) $40,000,000 in development assistance for Haiti; and

(L) $39,000,000 in ESF funds for Haiti.

(c) GENERAL SCIENCE, SPACE AND TECHNOLOGY (250).—(1) This budget cuts $4,600,000,000 in BA, resulting in $2,800,000,000 in outlay cuts from NASA military related research and development, which recaptures unnecessary military expenses from the National Defense function.

(2) It recognizes the central role that science and technology play in the development of our society. It is firmly committed to increasing the scientific and technical development of all sectors of the society, in particular minority members who have been largely excluded from the highly technical ranks of our society.

(3) Toward this end, it reprograms half of the NASA cut into the DOE and NSF general science research programs.

(4) In addition, it would incorporate the provisions of H.R. 996, the Congressional Scholarships for Science, Mathematics and Engineering Act.

(d) ENERGY (270).—(1) The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget is principally concerned with the recapture of investment funds in alternative and renewable energy systems, low-income energy support and other programs cut in previous fiscal years.

(2) It allocates $600,000,000 in BA with $478,000,000 in outlays in alternative energy R&D.

(3) It adds $395,000,000 in BA and $224,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991 to energy conservation efforts.

(e) NATURAL RESOURCES AND ENVIRONMENT (300).—(1) The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget is committed to the preservation and enhancement of our environment, including the urban environment.

(2) It adds $1,000,000,000 in BA for pollution control and abatement, which results in $418,000,000 in fiscal year 1991 outlays; $585,000,000 in BA for recreation, which results in $208,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; supports the funding of urban and community forestry programs, budgeting $5,000,000 for this program (under Public Law 95-313); and funds $5,000,000 for the preliminary development plans for an African-American Heritage Museum on the Federal mall.

(f) AGRICULTURE (350).—(1) This budget would expand by $949,000,000 current proposals for farm income stabilization programs.

(2) It would expand by $235,000,000 current proposals for Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program and commits.

(3) It would expand by $252,000,000 current proposals for agriculture R&D, focusing on 1890 institutions.

(g) COMMERCE AND HOUSING CREDIT (370).—(1) To reverse the dramatic decline in housing funding that occurred during the 1980s, this budget would invest substantial resources in rural and urban housing construction and development, and provide for the effective operation of the Small Business Administration.

(2) It would spend an additional $1,000,000,000 on the rural housing program, an additional $668,000,000 on elderly and handicapped housing, and an additional $1,300,000,000 on advancement of commerce and assistance to minority and small businesses.

(h) TRANSPORTATION (400).—(1) In recognizing the significant decline in the efficiency of our highway, rail, and air transportation systems, this budget reverses cutbacks in funding over the past decade.

(2) It would spend an additional $1,400,000,000 on ground transportation as follows:

(A) $231,000,000 more in highway aid,

(B) $687,000,000 more on AMTRAK, and

(C) $531,000,000 more for urban mass transit.

(3) It would spend an additional $110,000,000 on air transportation and safety and would raise an additional $350,000,000 in fees to be used for marine safety.

(i) COMMUNITY AND REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT (450).—This budget significantly expands resources for disaster relief and provides an additional $375,000,000 for community development block grants.

(j) EDUCATION, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT AND SOCIAL SERVICES (500).—(1) Because the education of our children is one of the central elements of Government responsibility, this budget allocates an additional $241,000,000 in elementary, secondary, and vocational education, including funds for adult education, and an additional $784,000,000 on higher education, including increases in grants to students.

(2) It initiates a new child care program, which will cost $1,800,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; a new program for education research and development districts, which will cost $570,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; a new program for high school dropout and drug prevention, which will cost $405,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; a new youth employment program, which will cost $325,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; and a new teacher training program which will cost $34,000,000 in fiscal year 1991.

(k) HEALTH (550).—(1) This budget authorizes $4,600,000,000 and spends $3,800,000,000 over current proposals for health care services, and focuses on prevention and increased funding for AIDS treatment, expansion of available healthcare through MEDICAID, and expanded drug treatment programs.

(2) It would spend an additional $562,000,000 for health research, including additional funds for AIDS research and $306,000,000 on health worker education and training.

(l) MEDICARE (570).—This budget would maintain this function at current services levels.

(m) INCOME SECURITY (INCLUDES SUBSIDIZED HOUSING) (600).—(1) This budget would spend an additional $5,300,000,000 in fiscal year 1991.

(2) It would spend an additional $2,000,000,000 on housing assistance of which $1,000,000,000 is for public housing modernization and $1,000,000,000 is for transitional housing and emergency shelters.

(3) It provides an additional $415,000,000 for child nutrition, $777,000,000 for the WIC program, $343,000,000 for low-income-home energy assistance, and $220,000,000 for the JOBS training program.

(n) SOCIAL SECURITY (650).—The budget would spend an additional $938,000,000 in this function: $792,000,000 on old-age and survivors insurance, and $146,000,000 on disability insurance.

(o) VETERANS BENEFITS AND SERVICES (700).—The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget expands funding for all of the principle functions of the Department of Veterans Affairs, including an additional $620,000,000 in income security, $345,000,000 in medical care, and $178,000,000 in housing.

(p) ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE (750).—(1) The FY '91 Quality of Life Budget provides an additional $2,000,000,000 in BA, resulting in $1,000,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991. The increases principally are for law enforcement efforts in the drug interdiction field across the various subfunctions.

(2) It initiates a new program to provide child protective services for children of drug and alcohol-abusing parents.

(q) GENERAL GOVERNMENT (800).—The budget provides for expanded monitoring of Government activity.

(r) NET INTEREST (900).—The budget accepts OMB projections for this function.

(s) ALLOWANCES (920).—This function includes employee health benefit plans and Government mail rates. This budget rejects proposed reform measures in this function.

(t) UNDISTRIBUTED OFFSETTING RECEIPTS (950).—This function includes financial transactions that are deducted from budget authority and outlays. The core items in this function are employer-share of retirement benefits, rents, and royalties from the Outer Continental Shelf, and sale of major assets. This budget accepts general OMB projections for this function.

SEC. 4. THE BUDGET.

The budget for fiscal year 1991 is established, and the appropriate budgetary levels for fiscal years 1992 and 1993 are set forth in sections 5 and 6.

SEC. 5. MAXIMUM DEFICIT AMOUNTS.

The following levels and amounts in this section are set forth for purposes of determining, in accordance with section 301(i) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, as amended by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, whether the maximum deficit amount for a fiscal year has been exceeded, and as set forth in this concurrent resolution, shall be considered to be mathematically consistent with the other amounts and levels set forth in this concurrent resolution:

(1) The recommended levels of Federal revenues are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,176,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,262,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,337,600,000,000.

(2) The appropriate levels of total new budget authority are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,371,858,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,447,740,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,534,390,000,000.

(3) The appropriate levels of total budget outlays are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,239,862,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,287,228,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,342,565,000,000.

(4) The amounts of the deficits are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $63,752,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $24,928,000,000.

Fiscal year 1993: −$5,035,000,000.

SEC. 6. RECOMMENDED LEVELS AND AMOUNTS.

(a) The following budgetary levels are appropriate for the fiscal years beginning on October 1, 1990, October 1, 1991, and October 1, 1992:

(1) The recommended levels of Federal revenues are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $867,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $932,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $995,400,000,000.

and the amounts by which the aggregate levels of Federal revenues should be increased are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $60,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $159,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $200,000,000.

and the amounts for Federal Insurance Contributions Act revenues for hospital insurance within the recommended levels of Federal revenues are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $74,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $79,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $85,100,000,000.

(2) The appropriate levels of total new budget authority are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,026,649,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,067,710,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,116,687,000,000.

(3) The appropriate levels of total budget outlays are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $974,103,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,003,686,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,040,711,000,000.

(4) The amounts of the deficits are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $106,903,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $71,086,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $45,311,000,000.

(5) The appropriate levels of the public debt are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $3,410,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $3,667,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $3,967,000,000.

(6) The appropriate levels of total Federal credit activity for the fiscal years beginning on October 1, 1990, October 1, 1991, and October 1, 1992, are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $21,100,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $103,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $17,900,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $104,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $18,200,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $106,800,000,000.

(b) The Congress hereby determines and declares the appropriate levels of budget authority and budget outlays, and the appropriate levels of new direct loan obligations and new primary loan guarantee commitments for fiscal years 1991 through 1993 for each major functional category are:

(1) National Defense (050):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $259,410,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $279,540,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $246,440,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $263,415,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $234,118,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $247,145,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(2) International Affairs (150):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $21,448,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $19,886,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,903,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,718,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $23,593,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $21,875,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,980,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,985,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $25,952,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $24,062,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,059,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,277,000,000.

(3) General Science, Space, and Technology (250):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $14,502,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $15,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $15,952,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,720,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $17,547,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,392,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(4) Energy (270):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $5,357,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,030,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,982,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $5,893,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,433,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,637,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $6,482,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,876,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,960,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(5) Natural Resources and Environment (300):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $19,197,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,828,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $64,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $21,117,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $20,711,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $67,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $23,228,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $22,782,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $70,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(6) Agriculture (350):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $20,650,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,521,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $9,117,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,998,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $22,715,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,173,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $8,691,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,259,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $24,987,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $19,990,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $8,779,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,650,000,000.

(7) Commerce and Housing Credit (370):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $14,756,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,902,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $6,012,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $60,264,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $16,232,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $22,792,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $3,297,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $59,675,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $17,855,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $24,871,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $3,392,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $62,023,000,000.

(8) Transportation (400):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $32,653,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $30,968,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $48,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $35,918,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $34,065,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $50,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $39,510,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $37,471,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $52,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(9) Community and Regional Development (450):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $9,464,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $8,220,000,000.

(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,134,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $403,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $10,410,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $9,022,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,176,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $373,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $11,451,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $9,924,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,219,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $387,000,000.
(10) Education, Training, Employment, and Social Services (500):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $46,309,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $45,226,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $31,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $12,810,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $50,940,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $49,727,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $32,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $13,490,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $56,034,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $54,699,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $34,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $13,845,000,000.
(11) Health (550):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $69,366,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $67,543,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $290,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $76,303,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $74,297,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $305,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $83,933,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $81,727,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $322,000,000.
(12) Medicare (570):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $125,119,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $104,153,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $137,631,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $114,568,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $151,384,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $125,026,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(13) Income Security (600):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $200,537,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $159,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $88,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $220,591,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $174,900,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $89,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $242,650,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $192,390,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $90,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(14) Social Security (650):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $345,209,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $265,749,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $379,730,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $283,542,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $417,703,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $301,854,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(15) Veterans Benefits and Services (700):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $32,119,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $31,456,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $675,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $15,650,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $35,331,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $34,602,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $612,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $15,975,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $38,864,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $38,062,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $566,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $16,316,000,000.
(16) Administration of Justice (750):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $14,590,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $13,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $16,049,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $14,960,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $17,654,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,456,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(17) General Government (800):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $11,771,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $11,606,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $12,948,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $12,767,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $14,243,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $14,043,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(18) Net Interest (900):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $172,979,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $172,979,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $163,482,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $163,482,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $156,963,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $156,963,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(19) Allowances (920):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $0.
(B) Outlays, $63,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $0.
(B) Outlays, $65,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $0.
(B) Outlays, $67,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(20) Undistributed Offsetting Receipts (950):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, −$43,578,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$43,578,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, −$43,833,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$44,885,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, −$46,177,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$46,232,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.

(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] will be recognized for 1 hour, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I seek designation from the Chairman to be the Member opposed to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] will be recognized as being opposed, and will control 1 hour of the time.

The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, as I stated twice before in the general debate on the budget, this is a significant moment. This is perhaps the most important business this body can engage in, the establishment of our national budget, for how our Nation spends its money is a statement about its priorities, and its priorities in turn are a significant statement about its values.

□ 1400

This is a moment that we come to that is very rare in the career of many elected officials, and that is a moment when we have an opportunity to shape an emerging new consensus. This is an important moment, a moment that we can develop a new budget.

The world is changing, Mr. Chairman, and in some basic and profound ways the world has already changed, so that gives us an opportunity to come here, Mr. Chairman, to the floor of the House of Representatives to engage in the shaping of a new consensus. That is why I stated on two occasions that it makes sense that there be significant budget alternatives presented to this body, and in the process of looking at several different approaches we can develop new consensus that speaks to the world as it is evolving.

Mr. Chairman, in that regard, against the backdrop of those opening remarks, it is with a great deal of pride and pleasure that I introduce the Congressional Black Caucus's quality of life alternative budget for fiscal 1991. In this gentleman's humble opinion, this budget is a coherent, cogent budget, cloaked in competence, cloaked in integrity and cloaked in compassion, a budget that embraces a new vision for America in three ways.

We wrote a budget, Mr. Chairman, that expanded, continued to support present social program initiatives, and even new programs to address the human misery that is the reality of America. Second, we establish a defense policy, a foreign policy, an international affairs budget that speaks to an emerging new reality in the world, not a foreign policy rooted in the obsolete ideas of the cold war. Finally, Mr. Chairman, we wrote a budget that embraced our fiduciary and statutory responsibilities to address the budget deficit by responsible utilization of taxpayer dollars, and by equitably changing the nature of America's tax structure.

Mr. Chairman, with that process we came up with $45.1 billion in new revenue, real dollars, not smoke and mirror moneys, real dollars; $19.8 billion in general revenue; $25.3 billion in budget cuts, for a total of $45.1 billion.

How did we come to the $19.8 billion in general revenue? The President of the United States on a number of occasions stated, "Watch my lips; no new taxes." But in the President's budget submitted for fiscal 1991, in the budget the President used a euphemism called new revenue options to the tune of $13.9 billion. The Congressional Black Caucus looked at the President's list of $13.9 billion, Mr. Chairman, and we said that in good faith we could not accept $5.7 billion of the President's $13.9 billion in new revenue options. For example, we could not support the capital gains initiative for $4.2 billion. So we agreed to accept $8.2 billion of the President's $13.9 billion. So we were honest enough to come public, up front and say what part of the President's revenue package we could support and what part we could not support, so we start with $8.2 billion in revenues.

Mr. Chairman, there are some Americans, by virtue of their wealth and status in our society, who only pay a 28 percent marginal tax rate, while the majority of the American people pay 33 percent and above. We said why should these people pay at 28 percent? So in the spirit of tax equity, we removed the so-called tax bubble. That gave us $4.1 billion additional in revenue.

We looked at who benefited over the last 10 years in the budget in tax benefits. During the Reagan era, corporate America benefited magnificently by these incredible tax gifts. So we looked not at individual American taxpayers but corporate taxpayers, the top 10 percent of the corporations in this country, and we said let us levy a 10 percent surtax on them. That gave us $6.5 billion.

We then looked at the Humphrey-Hawkins legislation and said that if we are able to demonstrate our capacity to lower the unemployment rate by one-tenth of 1 percent, we derive at least $1 billion in new revenue.

So $8.2 billion, $4.1 billion, $6.5 billion and $1 billion adds up to $19.8 billion in general revenue, real money, new money.

We then looked at the ongoing budget. We decided not to engage in draconian cuts in social programs at a time when human misery is being visited upon millions of the American people. We looked at the military budget in an emerging new world. We said we are presently spending at the rate of $306 billion. The President wants to spend at $303 billion. The Congressional Black Caucus said they can live with $279.4 billion. That is one incredible amount of money, Mr. Chairman. So we reduced the President's request by $23.7 billion net. We had really cut $3.2 billion in addition to that, but we took the $3.2 billion and put it back in the budget, one, for economic conversion because we said as we close plants and we close military facilities at the Federal level we ought to assume the responsiblity that if we make a decision in the national interest of offset the economic pain and hardship that is felt by human beings out there in the hinterlands when they are forced to absorb this national commitment. We also felt that based upon our responsibility to turn over to our children a better world environment than the one that was turned over to us that we have a responsibility to clean up the toxic waste.

So the net cut was $23.7 billion. Some people said how can you cut $23.7 billion.

When this gentleman first came to Congress nearly 20 years ago, the 1971 military budget was $73 billion. Ten years late, the last year of the Carter administration, the military budget had doubled to $143 billion. Ten years later the military budget is in excess of $300 billion.

So in the short span of 19-plus years, we have seen our military budget go from $73 billion to $300 billion some odd, an incredible amount of money. If anyone thinks that cutting $23.7 billion is suddenly going to create war in Europe, my question is this: Who is the enemy? We are spending $160 billion per year to maintain America's role in NATO. Where is the enemy?

At best, the Warsaw Pact has been rendered impotent as a military entity, it is nonexistent as a military entity, worst case. What do the West Germans have to fear from the East Germans? They are talking about unification.

If we are spending $160 billion to maintain our role in NATO, and the world has changed, the Berlin Wall has collapsed, Communist governments have collapsed, what makes us think we cannot find some money to save?

Mr. Chairman, $23.7 billion would not suddenly render America impotent. If anyone thinks the Soviet Union is sitting there saying, "Ah ha, they have cut their budget by $23.7 billion, let us attack," why did they not attack when it was $73 billion or $143 billion or $218 billion? There is nothing sacrosanct about dollars, Mr. Chairman. Our military budget ought to reflect the realities of the world, not some abstract idea.

We look at the military budget and we build it on the basis of worst case scenario, where the probability of war breaking out is 1,000 to 1. But let us look at the worst case scenario in terms of poverty in America. There are 13 million children in America who live in poverty, 10 million blacks who live in poverty, millions of people, blacks, brown, red, yellow, white, who live in poverty in America. Let us look at the worst case scenario in terms of housing. There are millions of America's people living on the streets of America in the wealthiest Nation in the world, and we have hundreds of thousands of people who eat out of garbage cans everyday, worst case scenario; 22 million American people, Mr. Chairman, who are functionally illiterate, worst case scenario; in some urban areas we have a dropout rate in excess of 70 percent, worst case scenario; we have drug problems that are crippling this Nation and destroying our communities and killing our children, worst case scenario; $23.7 billion is not much money to cut. We cut $23.7 billion.

We looked at the science and technology budget and we cut $1.4 billion out of that because we saw research designed to enhance war, not to perpetuate human life. We then cut $200 million in the foreign military credit sales for a total of $25.3 billion; $19.8, $25.3, that comes to $45.1 billion.

□ 1410

How did we apply this money? First we met our fiduciary responsibility. Gramm-Rudman gives us a statutory responsibility to meet at least $64 billion in deficit reduction. The Congressional Black Caucus' budget comes to $63.7 billion in deficit reduction. We have met our statutory responsibility in fiscal 1991.

We introduced this budget as a House concurrent resolution which required us to project our budget calculations into the out years. Very interesting reflection: In fiscal 1992 we are also able to meet our statutory responsibility under Gramm-Rudman, and in fiscal 1993, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, we in the Congressional Black Caucus are proud to say we give America a $5 billion surplus. We give it back; surplus.

So we have met that responsibility. What do we do with the remainder of the dollars? We took $33 billion above the President's request, $33 billion and put it in nonmilitary issues.

Mr. Chairman and members, we just celebrated Earth Day. We believe that we have a responsibility to preserve the fragile nature of our ecological system, to turn over to our children and to our children's children a planet where you can drink clean water and breathe clean air.

What is the function of a nuclear bomb but to destroy human life? We cut these weapons. We cut them in program design to preserve the integrity of our planet. We gave some time, some money to education, to housing, to an incredible amount of programs that we desperately need to deal with.

$1.5 billion to rural America for agriculture. We did these things. We said if you are going to fight a real war on drugs, it is not just about building jails and hiring more police.

If 100 children walked in here now and said, "Give us treatment," we could not do it. We do not have the facilities. That is a bizarre and absurd notion.

We have to be about the business of saving American children, and our budget ought to reflect that.

So this is what the Congressional Black Caucus' budget has done.

To summarize, we have developed a budget based on competence, based on compassion and based on integrity. We have written a budget that focuses a new vision for America by expanding existing social programs and engaging in new initiatives, by developing a military budget not rooted in the obsolete idea of the cold war but rather of an emerging new reality.

Finally, we assume our fiduciary responsibility to meet our statutory requirements to bring down the deficit and 3 years out give America $5 billion surplus.

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I have said to my colleagues, many who have served in this body for nearly 20 years: We have earned the right to present a budget on the floor of the House.

I would say with all due respect I really believe this budget ought to be where the Democratic Party is. This is no way-out budget. This is no off-the-wall budget. We have assumed a tremendous responsibility.

That is where we ought to be. We came today to place ourselves in juxtaposition to the President's budget so that we can have an opportunity to look at the full range of ideas.

So we are here alone, but that is all right. We go forward with pride and with dignity and if Members want to oppose the budget, fine. But let us do it on the basis of your honest belief that you disagree with us intellectually and politically but for no other reason.

With those opening remarks, Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has consumed 15 minutes.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3½ minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the fiscal year 1991 budget amendment of the Congressional Black Caucus. It has two principal flaws. First, the Caucus' substitute budget is far below the President's budget in defense, and below even the Democrats' budget as well. Second, this budget far exceeds the President's budget on new revenues, and includes raising personal income tax rates.

The Black Caucus' budget proposes defense outlays of $279.5 billion in fiscal year 1991, outlays $23.8 billion below the President's budget. Budget authority is slashed even further, to $259.4 billion, a level $47.5 billion below the President's proposed budget.

Despite welcome changes in the international arena, there are still threats to peace and stability in the world which suggest it is too early to dismantle our defenses. The defense spending cuts in the Black Caucus' budget are dangerous. They mean cutting defense by 22 percent in just 3 years. The Panetta budget cuts too deep for most Republicans. The BCB is even worse. While substantial defense savings will be recognized in future years, we must resist the temptation to make large, ill-conceived cuts in the very first year of major global change.

The other major problem with this budget is its revenue proposal of $19.8 billion, $5.9 billion above the Bush budget. This budget raises the marginal income tax rate of individual taxpayers and imposes an income tax surcharge on the top 10 percent of corporate taxpayers. I hate to be picky, but to penalize our most competitive companies, just because they are successful, is a woundreful way to give away all our competitiveness. At a time when there is considerable concern in this House over the competitiveness of U.S. companies in the international market, I find it impossible to support a budget that would impose such a surcharge on corporate taxpayers.

Although the Congressional Black Caucus' budget meets the fiscal year 1991 Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit target with a projected deficit of $63.75 billion, it does so through substantial defense cuts and substantial tax increases. For these reasons I oppose this amendment. However, I congratulate the Congressional Black Caucus for a thorough careful and comprehensive job of presenting its budget. It has added a significant demension to the budget debate.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I have never felt more proud than to be here to support the Congressional Black Caucus budget initiative. I thank our chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], for the magnificient and eloquent job he has done in presenting it.

For those that find it easy to attack us in what we consider to be a fairer and more kind treatment of taxes, I would suggest that if you compare this to the President's "read my lips" policy, you might find there is far more equity in this than what is being presented to us by the White House.

We of course support the President and Mr. Bennett's initiative in the area of fighting the war against drugs. Whatever success is being had by Mr. Bennett in South America, in Asia, to stop the cocaine and opium from coming into this country, we want to be a part of that support team.

Whatever Mr. Bennett suggests that we do in protecting our borders, we certainly want to be a part of that team as well.

□ 1420

However, when it reaches the point that the solution looks like it means that we have to build bigger jails and shift that responsibility to local and State governments, then we are proud to come forward and say the solution to this problem is not in building the jails, it is there that we have failed. We seek to find a solution in preventing our young people from feeling that in this great republic we do not give them the opportunity to come down and to have the option on the side of being drug free.

We truly believe that we are not going to ask our local and State governments to build $100,000 per cell jails at a cost from $20,000 to $60,000 to keep them in jail, and not be willing to provide recreation facilities, increase education for prevention, and most of all, to get involved in saying that we are going to treat these people before they end up in our emergency wards or before they end up in intensive care at the expense of $1,500 a day, yes; at the expense of $600 a day for hospitalization, yes; at the already hard expense of what we lose in terms of breaking up families and communities. Again, we would rather invest in people rather than jails so that we can have the labor market that is necessary for the United States to be productive, for the United States to be competitive, and for the United States to really get at what we should be doing. That is, reducing the deficit by increasing our ability to compete effectively.

If we take a look at everything that we are talking about in our Congressional Black Caucus budget, we will see that it emphasizes the confidence we have in investing in human beings, in investing in our young people, in our school system, and in our treatment system. It seems to me that we can talk about the death penalty all we want. We are talking about an investment and incentive in creating and extending life.

One of the saddest things that is going on in America today is the explosion of young children being born not only infected sometimes with the AIDS disease, but infants that are wracking in pain because they come into this world addicted to drugs. It seems to me that after this is over, many people would say that we in the Congressional Black Caucus have made a scholarly effort in presenting a budget for Members to consider. However, when we know that what comes to Members is smoke and mirrors from downtown, I hope there will be more courage than just innoculation for our efforts.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROGERS], a member of the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, we hear it said on both sides of the aisle these days that it does not matter what kind of a budget resolution we pass in the House, becuase this is only the first stage in a long process whereby negotiations with the White House will result in a compromise. I am sure that is true, that we will eventually get a compromise.

However, what this body passes in the form of the passed budget resolution will have some teeth for the reason that the Committee on Appropriations, following on in the next 2 to 3 weeks, will be required to take the House-passed resolution numbers and divvy them up in what is called the 302(b) allocations to the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, and that will become the mark of the appropriations bills that we are going to be seeing flowing out of this House floor, by law must be done by July 1.

What I am saying to Members is the House-passed budget resolution, whatever we pass, whether it be the Black Caucus resolution or the committee resolution or what have you, the House-passed budget resolution, as we saw last year, has real teeth in it, and your vote on today's budget resolution may come back to haunt Members in one way or the other.

Now, like the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL], I have no real argument with the Black Caucus proposal. I think it represents a lot of compassion, represents a lot of hard work, and lots of thought. Mainly, it represents, as I have said, compassion for this country, and no one can fault that. I can argue that it takes too much from defense, and I will make that point to my friend—$23.8 billion below the Bush budget on defense outlays, to me, is simply unacceptable.

Let me get back to the point that I wanted to make, mainly, before I sit down, the real main player I think today on the floor is the committee-passed resolution, and when it comes for a vote later in the day, I hope our colleagues will bear in mind what I have said before that your budget resolution we vote on today will be meaningful, it will bind the Committee on Appropriations, and we are going to be seeing on the floor of this House, very soon thereafter, the Subcommittee on Defense appropriations bill for defense for fiscal year 1991. It will reflect the defense number that is included in the resolution that passes the House.

Now, if that is the committee resolution we are going to see, then an appropriations bill on the floor of this body that will come $11.5 billion from outlays, that will represent budget authority cuts of $33.5 billion. Does that mean anything to Members? I am talking plainly to those on the other side of the aisle, now who have been told that this is meaningless, it is only a debating point.

Let me wave before Members four pages of a list from a Department of Defense representing illustrative additional military construction cuts under the committee-passed resolution. Practically every Member of this body will be affected by these enormous, decimating cuts in your Nation's defense, at home. At home. This list is available to all Members. Members can ask the Department of Defense for it. I will be happy to make Members a copy. One that I have, and I am sure other lists are floating around the body, but this is real stuff. These are real cuts. These are real people in the military that will be cut. These are real programs at home in your district that will be cut if the House-passed budget resolution is divvied up, as I am sure it will be by the Committee on Appropriations, and passed into the appropriations bill.

I hope that Members will reflect, very carefully, on the vote they cast when we get to the committee version of the bill, and will bear in mind that this is the real world we are dealing with in this resolution.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BOXER].

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Chairman, thank you, I say to the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] for this opportunity to speak out very clearly on behalf of this quality of life budget, the Black Caucus budget.

I feel this is the budget that comes down on the side of the values of all the American people who have really sacrificed during the eighties when our resources and productivity were drained off for the Cold War. This budget, Mr. Chairman, should be the American agenda for the nineties. This quality of life budget looks at the world as it is now, and it responds accordingly.

□ 1430

This budget begins to pay back to America the cost of the cold war. Margaret Thatcher, who is no dove by any means, has said, "The cold war is over," and the cold war, I say to my friends, was a very costly war for this country.

We sacrificed a great deal to take on the burden of defending our European allies from the Warsaw Pact, and we took on a big burden of defending our ally, Japan.

Let us look at what has happened to the Warsaw Pact in the last year or so. We spent $175 billion a year defending NATO from the Warsaw Pact. That is more than half our military budget. What has happened in Poland? They established the first noncommunist-led government of the Warsaw Pact in August, 1989, with an elected President. The Communists were soundly defeated, the Communist party disbanded.

Romania: The dictatorship is overthrown and new elections promised.

East Germany: Communist government replaced with pro-reform officials. The Berlin Wall crumbles. Reunification plans with West Germany are progressing.

Czechoslovakia: Communist party leaders are dismissed. Dissident playright Havel named President—and on and on.

Hungary: Elections held; Communists defeated.

Bulgaria: Party and state leaders resigned in 1989 and multiparty elections are held.

Thousands of United States nuclear warheads are aimed at these countries, I say to my friends, and we are spending $175 billion a year to defend West Germany from these countries. I think there has to be room to cut just a little bit this year and more in future years from what we have been paying for so many years.

Let us look at Japan. We certainly have spent a great deal defending Japan. How much? Conventional defense of Japan in the Pacific sealanes: $26.1 billion. In every single year we pay that, I say to my friends.

I think it is time, if the Japanese want us to continue this kind of expenditure, that they reimburse us for just some of it, and maybe they do not really need this level of defense anymore, given the changes in the world.

So we have $175 billion to defend NATO from the Warsaw Pact and $26 billion that we pay from our tax dollars to protect Japan, the No. 1 economic power in the world, and this Black Caucus just cuts $16 billion less than we spent this year from next year's budget.

Do we not think there is room for even more cuts than they have made in this budget? I think so.

Now, if that does not convince Members that we have a changing world, I have another chart that I hope will. Sixty of the top 100 defense contractors, as we sit here today, are under investigation for waste, fraud, and abuse by the Defense Department and the inspector general. Everyday we read about outrageous things, cost overruns, cheating, lying, stealing. Do we not think there is room in a $90 billion procurement budget to find a few billion dollars to cut and tell them to shape up? Not even our Democratic budget goes far enough on that.

I say to Secretary of Defense Cheney, "You're a good man. Reform thyself." The only way we will get this done is to look at this chart and cut the money, because otherwise it will not happen. It is too ingrained in our way of life.

Mr. Chairman, the budget before us is a great budget because what it does is it looks at the people who have made the sacrifices in this country, and that is all of us during this period of buildup, and what it says is that we have a new war to win. It is a war of economic competition.

Our previous sacrifices have made us vulnerable, so we need new priorities. We need to invest in our people. We need to invest in deficit reduction, as this budget does. We cannot afford $180 billion a year in interest payments on our debt. We need to invest in education so our kids will become productive. We need to invest in the war on drugs. We need to give every kid who is at risk a mentor to help that child through so that child will be productive. And I think it is un-American, Mr. Chairman, that tonight 100,000 American children will sleep in the street.

Let us talk about what patriotism is about. It is about investing in those children. That is what this budget does.

It also invests in our infrastructure. We are wasting 2 billion hours a year sitting on roads we cannot move on. Every day a bridge collapses.

So this budget is about rebuilding America. It is about reality. It is about a changing world and the needs of our people, and I am very proud to once more support this Black Caucus budget.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I, too want to praise the Black Caucus for coming forward with a budget presentation that reflects the reality of the world as they see it. It is a reality, though that puzzles me to some degree with regard to some of the budget cuts that I am most familiar with, and those do not lie in the area of defense; they lie in the area of function 250, the Space and Science accounts of this Nation.

One of the things that is agreed to by most observers is that if we are to be a nation competing in a world economy and making certain that we are in the forefront of an investment in the future, what we have to do right now is make investments in that future by investing in science in this country, investing in high technology, and investing in programs like the space program.

That is the reason I must say that I am somewhat puzzled, indeed chagrinned and somewhat shocked, that the particular budget we have before us right now slashes the science account, the National Science Foundation, the space account, science education, all those programs, by 20 percent in budget authority over the President's request. That is a very, very major cut. It would mean that programs like "Mission to Planet Earth." a major environmental probe study program would have to be cut, if not eliminated. It would mean that Space Station "Freedom" cannot move forward and give us the new materials processing that we need for our future. It would mean that our attempts to move this Nation toward a Mars and Moon program could not be pursued.

If this was being done in a vacuum, I might understand it, but the fact is that the basis of this priority in the Black Caucus budget is also reflected in the budget given to us by the Democrats in their overall budget presentation, the Panetta budget. In that budget the Democrats slash the President's budget authority request in the science accounts by $1.2 billion in budget authority and $600 million in budget outlays. So they, too, have made a conscious determination that it is not only defense they want to cut, it is science, and it is the investment in the future that we need to create, because we need the new wealth of that future to make certain that we are in the forefront of what has to be done in order to participate in a high-technology world econony.

I am stunned by the numbers of Members who have come to the floor today and suggest that the budgets we have before us today, the Black Caucus budget and the Panetta budget, somehow recognize that reality and that they are in fact in line with what needs to be done for our global economy in the future. They are not. If we are willing to say that one of our priorities is to slash science accounts, the way these budgets do, then I have to say that it is clear you are not willing to make the investments that are necessary for the future.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I must say that they say they are making these vague cuts because they are taking it out of the hide of the military, but function 250 does not have any military money in it. They cannot say they are taking that out of military research and development, because that is not where it is.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am glad to yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The gentleman has lauded the Bush budget for what it does in the science area. Is the gentleman planning to offer the Bush budget to this body today so we can vote on it?

Mr. WALKER. Of course, as the gentlewoman knows, because I am sure she is at least familiar enough with the rule by which it was brought to the floor to know this, this gentleman cannot offer that budget, and no other Member can offer it except the Member designated in the rule.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. FRENZEL can appoint a designee.

Mr. WALKER. I would say to the gentlewoman that I would have proudly voted for the Bush budget because it does recognize the reality I am talking about. I would have been very glad to come up here and defend the Bush budget, because the Bush budget does the things that are necessary to do instead of putting money——

Mrs. BOXER. Then why does the gentleman not ask Mr. FRENZEL——

Mr. WALKER. I have the time, I say to the gentlewoman, and——

Mrs. BOXER. The gentleman could have been named as the designee.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has the time.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I wish the gentlewoman would familiarize herself with the rules of the House so she would know that she cannot speak until she is yielded to. I was glad to yield to the gentlewoman.

□ 1440

Now, Mr. Chairman, let me explain where the Democrats do put money in their budget. They slash it out of science. They take it out of the hide of National Science Foundation, out of our space program, but where do they put the money? Well, if my colleagues look at the overall, 5-year budget, they take it out of the science accounts $7.5 billion. The take $214 billion out of defense, and where do they put the money?

Mr. Chairman, they put it into welfare programs. There is a 30-percent increase in welfare programs. They take it out of science, put it into welfare. Now is that what the real priorities of the American people are? The Democratic Party has long been criticized as the party that is too much concentrating on welfare when, in fact, in their budget they prove that.

They also, Mr. Chairman, claim that they are putting the money toward fighting the drug war. When I look at the budget, that is not there—$214 billion out of defense; they give a 1-percent increase over 5 years to the Department of Justice to fight crime and fight drugs. In this year in budget outlays they give absolutely nothing. They slash $7.8 billion from defense and give absolutely nothing in the Panetta budget to increased money for fighting crime and drugs.

So, Mr. Chairman, it is clear that it is not toward crime and drugs that they are aiming their money. It is toward welfare. It is a big, big welfare budget, and, if my colleagues think that the priority of the Nation should be to slash our accounts for handling science in the future and give the money to welfare, then they will love both the Black Caucus budget, and they will love the Panetta budget because that is where we are going.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think those represent the priorities of the American people.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY].

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Chairman, I deem it a rare privilege to rise in full support of the Dellums/Congressional Black Caucus substitute to House Concurrent Resolution 310, the congressional budget resolution for fiscal year 1991. This substitute budget resolution reflects the basic values of the United States. It facilitates the institutionalizing of democratic values at home and abroad in its concern for peace, harmony, social justice, and for meeting the needs of the underprivileged as the world moves towards a postindustrial, high-technology society.

These laudable aims are scheduled to be accomplished basically by reducing fiscal year 1991 defense funding by $56.4 billion in budget authority and $27.4 billion in outlays below the baseline level. These cuts are in stark contrast to those of the congressional budget resolution where cuts are only $32.8 billion and $11.5 billion, respectively.

The Dellums/CBC substitute resolution, humanely, and in keeping with the tenats of social justice, reallocates much of the defense savings to increased funding for such domestic programs as job training, housing, education, environment, food, and nutrition programs.

This substitute resolution assumes $19.8 billion in increased revenues. This is significantly different from the $13.9 billion assumed in the congressional budget resolution.

It is of significance that this substitute resolution provides for a $1.9 billion expansion of international development and humanitarian aid with emphasis on the sadly neglected needs of African and Caribbean development and increased food assistance programs particularly the Food for Peace Program to alleviate widespread poverty, famine and hunger in Africa for which Congressman Mickey Leland died.

It is, therefore, fitting and appropriate and in keeping with CBC commitment that an amendment was tailormade to accomplish the above is entitled the "Mickey Leland African and Caribbean Development Act of 1991." This legislative provision has also been incorporated into H.R. 4610, the Foreign Assistance Authorization Act of fiscal year 1991.

As the United States sets foreign policy priorities for the post-Cold War 1990's, Africa and the Caribbean keep slipping further behind other regions of the world.

In 1984, excluding food aid, Africa received $667 million in economic assistance from the United States constituting approximately 14 percent of total U.S. foreign economic aid. However, this year, the figure decreased to $575 million or approximately 11 percent of total U.S. foreign economic aid. Moreover, while one non-African nation received about $700 per capita in United States aid, Africa received less than $1 per capita.

The need is, therefore, dire and great for significantly more funding for Africa particularly when 30 of the continent's 51 countries are endeavoring to implement economic reforms to facilitate the building of modern economies.

These events are taking place at a time when France is reducing its role in its African ex-colonies. It is quite clear that the focus and attention of the United States foreign policy thrust and aid are shifting dramatically to Eastern Europe and Central America, particularly Panama and Nicaragua with the continuing neglect of Africa and the Caribbean.

The Mickey Leland African and Caribbean Development Act is structured to increase significantly, foreign assistance to Africa and the Caribbean. For Africa, it would provide $1 billion in development assistance with $15 million earmarked for Namibia and $85 million earmarked for the Southern Africa Development Coordinating Committee [SADCC].

For the Caribbean, the bill authorizes: $60 million in ESF funds for the Caribbean; $93.6 million in development assistance for the Caribbean; as well as $49 million in development assistance and $39 million in ESF funds for Haiti.

Africa, however, in spite of this $1 billion, will still receive the smallest share going to any region of the world with 31 of the 46 countries in Africa classified as the world's poorest nations. Moreover, for the past decade, Africa has been consistently allocated the smallest portion of United States foreign assistance. Additionally, over the last several years, Africa is seemingly the only continent that has experienced both proportional and absolute cuts in U.S. economic assistance.

It is indeed difficult and well nigh impossible to think functionally about global peace and harmony in what is increasingly becoming a global village, without giving serious consideration to the social and politico-economic needs of the important geopolitical regions of Africa and the Caribbean.

Within this context, therefore, the underlying philosophy of the Dellums/CBC substitute budget resolution, in terms of its programmatic thrust, will be most reflective of the United States as a great and caring nation. This substitute budget epitomises the basic value orientation of a kinder, gentler nation that can safely serve as a model of democracy throughout the global village and is, therefore, richly deserving of the support of all of my colleagues.

With that in mind, Mr. Chairman, I ask all my colleagues to vote for this measure.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYMALLY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I just want to point out to the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] that there are only two places that he cuts in his budget. One of those is function 50, and one of them is function 250. Function 250 is where the NSF is, and he slashes $3.5 billion out of budget authority in that account so that there is no transfer of defense money to National Science Foundation. In fact, he cuts both of the budgets in this presentation.

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Chairman, what we basically looked at was the military-related research activities and shifted that into the historically black colleges and all other NS funds.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Chairman, I relinquish the balance of my time.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I just wish the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] would debate me on the point.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] has expired.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] an additional minute, and would the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. DYMALLY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, let me simply say to my learned colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], that I know the gentleman studies very hard. However, Mr. Chairman, in this particular instance I am sure the gentleman did not look at the subcategories of function 250 because in the National Science Foundation the Congressional Black Caucus plussed up the President's budget by $900 million, and in the area of DOE general science that the gentleman alluded to we plussed up the President's budget by $509 million. Where we cut was in military related science.

Mr. Chairman, I would simply say that NSA, when it first started out, was a civilian organization. I know the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] knows that almost half of the NSA's missions are now militarily related. We cut some money out of that, not out of the programs that my colleague responded to.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, this is on the charts that we have produced.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to yield if I have the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time is controlled by the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY].

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] has a great deal of time, and I am sure that he will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield an additional minute to the gentleman in the well, the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY].

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Chairman, that is very, very kind.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield an additional 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYMALLY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to point out that indeed NASA does spend money that is money from the military. It is money which, however, is reflected in function 50, which is transferred then to NASA. In function 250, handled by our committee and handled by the committee headed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. TRAXLER], the subcommittee, that money is purely civilian research money, and it is money that is being slashed by $3.5 billion in budget authority over the President's request in this budget.

That is the problem, that they are taking the money out of the civilian side, and what they do in the subcategories has no meaning here because that will be determined by the Committee on Appropriations when they get their account.

In this particular instance what is happening is that they are taking money out of civilian science.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYMALLY. I yield to the chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I listened very carefully to my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], and I say, "Now you're walking with your legs wide open because you're walking on both sides of the street. If you say that the subfunctions don't count, because ultimately authorization and appropriation would deal with it, then I would suggest the gentleman pulled the leg out from under his own argument. So, how can you argue so diligently about a subfunction when you just said it doesn't count? Either you accept this gentleman's integrity in telling you what we've done in trying to plus up the categories, or the gentleman walks away from his own argument."

Now I have listened very carefully to my colleague.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYMALLY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] for yielding because it seems to me that this is exactly what we are debating here.

I say to the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], "You are only presenting numbers on the House floor. You're not presenting your subcategories. You know that as well as anyone else in the House, and the numbers that you are presenting for function 250, which is what the 302(b) allocation will be to the civilian science accounts, are such that you have slashed $3.5 billion out of their budget authority, which means that will come out of the hide of NASA, NSF and all the rest of the accounts that are the civilian accounts."

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DYMALLY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. Just one last comment, Mr. Chairman. I am sure we will not resolve this.

I would simply say, Mr. Chairman and Members of the body, that we submitted this budget in the form of a House concurrent resolution, and we met all those responsibilities to articulate specific numbers even in self-functions. That is a matter of record, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] can take a look at it.

Nine hundred million dollars above the President on National Science Foundation and $509 million above the President on Department of Energy general science.

Mr. Chairman, I rest my case.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, I think, as the dialog we just had shows, the Congressional Black Caucus and my colleagues, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] is to be congratulated for the intellectual exercises they have gone through today in bringing their proposed budget substitute to the floor. I think it does this body a service to be able to have debate on some of these substantive issues.

Mr. Chairman, I do not, as I am sure the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] might suspect, do not support that resolution, but I think it is a good amendment and substitute that deserves consideration. I have asked for this time to speak here this afternoon because the amendment carrying the President's budget proposal is not going to be on the floor, and it is the issue of comparison between the committee's budget resolution and the President's budget submission that I want to talk about.

Mr. Chairman, many accusations have been leveled as to which of the budget proposals—the President's, or this resolution—is more honest.

If honesty is desired, let's be honest in stating that neither of these proposals is an honest attempt to craft a legitimate, workable budget for our country.

The budget resolution under consideration is not honest or real, and frankly, the President's proposal isn't much better.

In fact, this debate isn't even grounded in reality.

Instead of debating the merits of the proposal, and the budget priorities of our Nation, we have spent 2 days debating to achieve a position to negotiate.

This is Congress in the "Twilight Zone!"

And if you think the House of Representatives has fallen down on the job, we should consider what is happening in the Senate.

Instead of setting priorities and needs, the Senate is working from the other end, auctioning off acceptable deficit numbers. When they are able to reach agreement on a final number, only then will they consider plugging in program numbers.

It is time both sides get down to business, and get serious about what this budget needs to accomplish.

We need a budget that focuses on the needs of this Nation: The need to be competitive in the world, to address social concerns at home, to provide for security into the future, to react to changing global realities, and to deal with underlying economic concerns.

We need flexibility and strength of a coherent fiscal and economic policy that will allow the United States to continue to be a leader in the world.

We need leadership not only abroad, but at home.

Leadership to stop the cycle of game-playing to set us back on course for strength in the next century.

We need to debate a budget resolution that sets our priorities, and provides the means to meet them.

At the same time, we must be willing to reform or eliminate programs that are no longer priorities, or whose usefulness has been outlived.

Instead, the only priority apparent in this debate is the priority of politicians concerned with slipping something through—applying another band-aid—to get us by until the next election.

President Bush was elected partly on the belief that more cooperation between the White House and Congress was needed.

The American people expect new leadership and new priorities, not the same old stalemate, and tinkering around the edges that has become the nightly news staple.

Instead of taking on challenges we are fleeing from them. But this doesn't have to continue.

I urge my colleagues to reject this budget resolution and send a message: Send a message to the leadership in this body and the Senate that we want substance and results; send a message to the President that we want courage, cooperation, and leadership; and finally send a message to America that Congress is ready to roll up its sleeves and get down to work.

□ 1450

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WEISS].

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Chairman, perhaps even more than other years, this year's budget offered by our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] on behalf of the Congressional Black Caucus represents the future.

I believe that the Congressional Black Caucus budget clearly represents changes in our Nation's budget priorities that will occur in the next few years. This budget responds to our Nation's new military posture and begins to address a series of domestic problems that have for far too long gone unattended. It is a very real, rational, compassionate and just budget.

Mr. Chairman, perhaps even more than other years, this year's budget offered by our distinguished colleague [Mr. DELLUMS] on behalf of the Congressional Black Caucus represents the future. I believe that the Black Caucus budget clearly represents the changes in our Nation's budget priorities that will occur in the next few years. This budget responds to our Nation's new military posture, and begins to address a series of domestic problems that have for too long gone unattended.

Moreover, this budget is a just budget. A rational budget. A compassionate budget. A realistic budget.

The Black Caucus has offered a budget of which Congress can be proud. It makes realistic and practical cuts in military spending. More than any other proposal before us, the Black Caucus budget makes large new investments in the areas of education, housing, health care, and the environment. Further, as in past years, the Black Caucus budget reduces the deficit by more than any other alternative. Through a practical and fair combination of cuts in military spending and revenue increases, this budget would dramatically reduce the budget deficit. The Black Caucus budget would, if enacted, finally break through the political log jam which has prevented a comprehensive solution to our budget crisis. This budget would bring the budget into balance by fiscal year 1993.

The Dellums alternative recognizes that not only are our spending priorities askew, but so are our tax policies. Increasing revenues will be a part of any comprehensive solution to the deficit problem. Revenues must be raised, however, without penalizing lower and middle income Americans. They are the people who have suffered disproportionately as a result of the Reagan tax and spending policies. The tax burden has shifted dramatically away from those who are most able to pay and onto those least able to do so. The Black Caucus budget would raise revenues to help balance the budget by bringing back to the Tax Code a degree of fairness that was lost during the Reagan years.

One of the speakers on the other side of the aisle said some minutes ago that this budget creates problems for every Member who has any kind of defense establishment in his or her district and that therefore it should be defeated. Quite the contrary, what this budget does is to provide a challenge and an opportunity to every single one of us to look at the real national security needs of this country and not to distort those needs by spending money on wasteful, needless, redundant, unnecessary projects.

The fact is that no matter how many Panamas or Perus the Defense Department or the Bush administration dreams up, they cannot possibly come with the same kind of economic cost or consequence that a projected invasion of Western Europe by the Soviet Union would have cost.

Therefore, it seems to me that it is absolutely essential that we start providing for the American people and American communities the kind of retraining and reorientation help that will be of real substance and support to them, rather than the kind of rhetoric which says that you cannot close a single plant anyplace, you cannot close down a single base anyplace, you cannot take a single person out of the Armed Forces anyplace, and that even when the threat disappears you still have the communities to spend $300 billion a year on in order to save jobs. The way to save jobs is to create civilian jobs, and this budget does that.

While this budget cuts almost $27 billion from military spending as proposed by the Bush administration, it restores $3 billion for the purposes of beginning a full scale, comprehensive program of economic conversion.

This budget recognizes that the Federal Government has an obligation to help workers and communities who will be affected by military spending reductions in the coming years. The $3 billion provided for this purpose would be used for income support, training assistance, and relocation assistance for affected employees. It could also be used as planning grants for communities who are vulnerable to a reduction in military spending.

Taken together, this program would help communities avoid the serious economic dislocation that occurs alongside a military program cancellation or cutback. In addition, it would give workers a chance to learn skills that will make them more employable in the civilian sector of the economy. Through this process, we can use vital resources for the purpose of revitalizing our economy, rebuilding our Nation's infrastructure, and make many of our industries more competitive internationally.

I urge my colleagues to support the Dellums substitute.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the Congressional Black Caucus alternative budget for fiscal year 1991. The CBC alternative budget provides for a secure national defense and realizes a significant peace dividend to help pay for neglected domestic needs such as education, housing, health care, and public infrastructure.

In the preamble of our Constitution, we as elected officials are charged to "provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." Our posterity—that is our future generations—our children.

But what about promoting the general welfare?

In the last decade, our Federal budget has more than provided for the common defense with the massive buildup of our military. However, as Americans we have failed in our charge to promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty for our Nation's children. Currently, the poorest segment of our society is our children—those who we expect to keep our Nation great into the 21st century. One in five children under age 18 is poor.

But the poorest segment of all is children under 6. In 1987, 5 million children under age 6 lived in families with incomes below the Federal poverty level. In other words, nearly one in four children under age 6 were poor that year.

Minority children under 6 are much more likely to be poor than white children under 6. Nearly one in two young black children are poor, and more than two out of five Hispanic young children are poor. Poor children are more likely than nonpoor children to struggle in school and eventually drop out.

We are raising generations of poor minority children in the midst of what Time magazine has called "The Browning of America." By the year 2000, one in three Americans will be a minority. By the year 2020, African-Americans, Latinos, Asian-Americans, and Native Americans together will become the majority of students in the United States. At the same time, the United States is facing a shortage of trained scientific workers with advanced degrees.

We know that we need educated workers for an increasingly knowledge-intensive economy. The pool we will have to draw from for those workers is those who are poorer, and less educated. They are the poor children of today.

I am pleased to inform my colleagues that the New Jersey State Assembly led by the pro tem speaker, assemblyman Willie Brown, approved a resolution yesterday endorsing the Congressional Black Caucus budget. The resolution praises our budget plan as a blueprint of monetary and social responsibility that offers an optional vision for the country.

Mr. Chairman, the Congressional Black Caucus alternative budget seeks to shift the balance in our Federal budget from weapons for a war we may never fight to people who have tangible human needs. The CBC budget is fair, and it is the only one we can all support. Therefore, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the Congressional Black Caucus budget resolution.

□ 1500

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. OWENS of New York. Mr. Chairman, this Congressional Black Caucus quality-of-life budget could easily be called a commonsense budget. This is a very profound document that is very practical. It was prepared by people who are quite creative, but on the other hand, one does not have to be a genius to understand this budget. It makes a very simple statement.

Mr. Chairman, it debunks some myths that are being deliberately promulgated to frighten the American people. We have demonstrated in the Congressional Black Caucus quality-of-life budget that one can make military cuts of great substance. We can cut deeply and we can cut immediately without endangering the economy of the Nation in any way, without displacing large numbers of workers.

We cut first in the defenses for Europe. For years I have been able to understand why we have insisted on spending billions of dollars for the defense of Europe and Japan. Germany and Japan are two of our major competitors in the economic arena. They are able to take care of themselves. Yet, we have been spending more than $150 billion a year to defend these areas that could defend themselves and are using the resources that they do not put into their own defense to bolster their own economies and to be more competitive with us in their products.

This has been a silly adventure. I assume that somebody in the military-industrial complex profits from it and is making a lot of money, because it has gone on and on.

We can immediately cut the budget without jeopardizing our internal economy by cutting the vast amounts of money that are allocated for the defense of Germany and Japan. We can immediately create a peace dividend that can be used for much more productive purposes, for example, education.

Mr. Chairman, I am primarily concerned about education, and education should be the concern of every American. The best defense, our major national-security initiative, should be in the area of defense; brainpower is the power that we need. Brainpower is what we need to revamp our economy. Brainpower is what we need to compete with our competitors in the economic arena, and two of those are the competitors I just mentioned.

A large amount of money is put into education in Germany and Japan. A large emphasis is placed on education. Teachers are given a status by raising their salaries to levels of doctors and dentists in the places like Japan.

We should move our resources in the areas that are important for the last decade of this century and for the 21st century to come.

The President has initiated a new education initiative with six goals, but he does not propose in his budget to put any money behind it. We have gone so far as to increase the budget for education by $4.2 billion. Most of that $4.2 billion would go to programs which are not at all controversial.

Head Start is not controversial. All experts agree that Head Start is a good program.

Presently Head Start is funded to take care of only 20 percent of the children who are eligible. The other 80 percent we propose to take care of in this budget.

Chapter 1 has been a great success, and nobody quarrels about the success of chapter 1. We are proposing to fully fund chapter 1.

These are simple matters. One does not have to be genius to understand it. There is no controversy among experts.

I wish my colleagues would adopt a different attitude toward his budget. It is a commonsense budget that they can go back to their constituency and defend. It is a budget that they can use to offer something new and productive to their constituents.

I hope we can get people to break out of the usual cocoon of thinking and vote for a budget that makes sense, a budget that will turn our priorities around and give back to the American people what has been taken so long in a silly military strategy defending countries that can pay for their own defense.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MFUME].

Mr. MFUME. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to come here in the well to stand as have many of my colleagues in very strong support of the Congressional Black Caucus' fiscal 1991 quality-of-life budget.

It offers something that has not been spoken of quite a bit here today, and that is that it offers vision for this Nation. It addresses real human needs and real human potential. It does so by supporting proven social plans and creating new initiatives by providing a national defense that is based on the international evolving realities of our world and not based on the obsolescent cold war policies that have for so long dictated our budget priorities, and by making substantive progress in budget reductions through true fiscal responsibility.

The interesting point is that the centerpiece of this alternative budget is, and remains, an unyielding commitment to our most precious resource, our children.

I have not come to talk about specifics and to debate category and subcategory funding levels. The chairman of the caucus, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], has done that adequately.

I have come, rather, and instead, to talk about the common sense of this budget and to remind us that it still does some basic things here in this House. The CBC budget still differs from the Bush budget, as it did with previous Reagan budgets, and it does so in three different ways.

First of all, it rejects the domestic cuts that are proposed by the President. Second, yes, it does reduce military spending, and, third, it raises new revenue by eliminating the unfair tax rate that is enjoyed by so many of our wealthy citizens.

More importantly, Mr. Chairman, it is a move in the direction of common sense, and it allows us once and for all to step up to the plate and to do what we came here to do.

I would say to the chairman and remind myself that I did not come to this Congress to preside over a Nation in bankruptcy with no resources in its great vaults of compassion, unable to summon its own courage, with no will to dare to be different, and in the process to dare to make a difference, with checks that have been deposited in the great coffers of commitment that continue to come back marked "insufficient funds."

A few will remember what we say here this afternoon, but all will remember what we do.

We oftentimes find ourselves speaking in glowing terms about the great precepts of this Nation and what we stand for and what makes us proud. Yet, there are those who are saying, "I cannot hear what you say, because I see what you do." What you do essentially is to turn your back on the neediest and to fail to have the vision to move all of us into a new era.

I would ask my colleagues to look honestly at this budget and to ask the very basic question: Are we prepared to do something of substance that is, yes, a daring step in the right direction?

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding me this time.

I must say that I think this is a very important day.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard so much rhetoric in this country about the "T" word for taxes. What the gentleman from California and the Black Caucus are bringing to this caucus is the "P" word on priorities. They are talking about what is this country's priority. We do not need to raise taxes if we can change our priorities.

I think if we take some of our current priorities and break them out on what we spend on a per-day basis, we begin to understand why this budget is so important.

Right now, the average taxpayer spends $15.2 million a day just for the B–2 bomber program. They only spend about $700,000 a day for the entire substance abuse and prevention program.

I think the average American would certainly think substance abuse and prevention is a whole lot more important than the B–2 bomber. This is a lot of what this budget does. It says that for our future getting substance abuse and prevention under control is much more important than building this plane that we do not know what we are going to do with.

If we again look at some other statistics, on a day-by-day basis, we are only spending about $440,000 federally to deal with the homeless. Again, I think an awful lot of people think that maybe we ought to be more concerned about the homeless and less concerned about maintaining the B–2 bomber and many other such programs. Now, people say how can you do this? Well, you can do it very easily. This is what this budget has done. It has converted priorities without a tax rise into all sorts of important educational programs, and to all sorts of things that are really going to have to do with the future, with the quality of life and all of that.

□ 1510

I have another way that one can save a lot of money. I remind you the Black Caucus budget just gives numbers. We have come up with a different concept for how we base our troops. It is called dual basing, the idea being you base American troops in the United States and you give them a dual assignment overseas, but with the entire family, the infrastructure and the organization in the United States, you save so much money, this whole budget works without laying people off.

Not only that, then when they are sent to their dual base, only the service member goes to that assignment. You then are practicing air and sealift, which is terribly important. You have maximum mobility. Right now where we have all sorts of people forward based, they are not even permitted to exercise, because those countries do not allow them to exercise, do not allow them to do close air support, or anything else. So they are really already dual based.

There are many ideas to save money. This is a good one, and I think we ought to really deal with our priorities.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, over the last few minutes we have heard again a lot of discussion about this particular budget as a budget which has vision, which deals in education, that deals in forward thinking, and all of those nice things. We have heard a lot of talk that we are doing this by cutting the defense budget.

I want to make it clear that in addition to cutting the defense budget, that this budget slashes by 20 percent the President's request in budget authority for the science accounts of this Nation.

Those science accounts pay for programs such as global warming, the research that we need in order to deal with this major environmental disaster. One of the major increases in the President's science budget was in that account.

It deals with alternative energies, of finding ways to use hydrogen, finding ways to use other kinds of fuels to make certain that we deal with our environmental problems.

It deals with science education and all of the things that we need to build up our science base in this country.

It deals with agricultural research to find ways of handling all of the crops and the livestock that we need in the future.

It deals with supercomputer networking to assure that we are competitive with other nations.

It deals with advanced technology development, to make certain we are building the new products that will be needed for the economy of the future.

It deals with Mission to Planet Earth, the ability to look down at Earth and figure out what is going on with our environment and trying to figure out a way to avoid an ecological disaster.

It deals with the Moon-Mars mission, a forward-looking kind of mission that will pay back enormously to this mission in new scientific kinds of achievements.

So that when this budget that we have before us and when the Panetta budget that is to come later slashes the science accounts of this Nation, it has an immediate impact. These are not budgets that can be said to be forward-looking. These are budgets that take us back.

There was an economist that won a Nobel Prize just within the last couple of years, did so because he pointed out that what we develop in terms of technology is what pays off in terms of jobs in the future. That was his premise. It is a premise that I think most of us agree with.

When you slash the research and development accounts of this Nation, as you do in this budget and as you do in the Panetta budget, you disastrously impact on our ability to be a viable economy in the future. That is a shame. And I am sorry that this budget and the Panetta budget are brought to us with major cuts in function 250, the science and space accounts of the country.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute. Mr. Chairman, first of all, I respect my distinguished colleagues from Pennsylvania. And as I have said on more than one occasion, the debate on the budget is too important to engage in hyperbole.

This gentleman sent a staff person over to you just 10 or 15 minutes ago to walk through in very specific terms exactly what we did in the budget. I would suggest that we do not do each other any great service when we attempt to overstate.

The gentleman has a set of politics; then articulate them. But do not attribute unto us ideas, thoughts, that are not there.

We sent a staff person over in good faith to say to you exactly what we have done. Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, it does not take a very bright person to understand that in this budget the Congressional Black Caucus has taken an incredible step to assist in educating the American people, and it does not serve us well, Mr. Chairman, to engage in that kind of overstatement and hyperbole. In fact, it is disingenuous to even interpret the caucus in that fashion.

Mr. Chairman, I am happy to yield whatever time I have to my colleague.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. It seems to me that I have a perfect right to reflect upon the numbers that are in your budget.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has expired.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] 2 minutes.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, let me say to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] that this is not coming off our time. The gentleman will be recognized at the appropriate points. But I think it is important for us to engage Members.

Mr. Chairman, I yield briefly to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I would hope that the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] would not say that it is disingenuous to debate the details of this budget. The gentleman did send a staff person over and we talked about it. I fundamentally disagreed with where you took the money out of the science accounts. When it was explained to me, it turns out that you probably did not take into account the fact that there are Defense Department transfers to take care of the spending that is in your budget that you have now cut out of the civilian R&D. That is a major mistake, in my estimation.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, if I might reclaim my time at this point, let me just say to my colleague that we stated our point not challenging your right. The beauty of debating on the floor of this Congress is you can stand up and say what it is you choose to say. But all this gentleman is saying is deal with us from a position of mutual respect. If we are saying to you that that is not our function, that was not in any way the direction or the thrust of what we attempted to do, then the gentleman ought to let it lie.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. WALKER. I am sure that the gentleman's intention was not to do that. The problem is that the functional way in which it happens in your budget is you take $3.5 billion out of budget authority for science, and that will have the kinds of results I am talking about.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, if I might reclaim my time, on that point we simply have an intellectual disagreement, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. WALKER. Well, that is fine.

Mr. DELLUMS. We just disagree.

Mr. WALKER. But it is not disingenuous then to have an intellectual disagreement, and we do have an intellectual disagreement.

Mr. DELLUMS. If you do not challenge motives, then you just have an intellectual disagreement.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS].

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, today I rise in strong support of the amendment offered by my good friend from California, the Congressional Black Caucus "quality of life" budget.

As a body, the House of Representatives spends more time and energy on drafting and passing the annual Federal budget than on any other activity. The American people elect us to draft and pass a budget that reflects the priorities of our people and the needs of our Nation. And it is our responsibility to represent the views of our people as best we can.

The American people support the principles in this budget. The American people want us to spend more on child care, health care, and education, not on the Stealth bomber. The American people want us to expand housing assistance for low-income families and anti-drug programs, not the "star wars" strategic defense initiative.

The American people know that every dollar we spend on our children and people who want to improve themselves is a dollar wisely spent. The money we spend on these Americans today is money that we will save for years to come.

But what return will we get on an investment in a Stealth bomber that may never be able to achieve its mission? What return will we get on an investment in weapons designed to destroy human lives, instead of tools meant to improve human lives?

Until recently, there was understandable motivation behind higher levels of defense spending. But given the recent changes in the world, this body could not justify continuing the high levels of defense spending given the needs of the American people today.

Mr. Chairman, this year we have witnessed revolutions and the dawning of a new age when peace is not an impossible dream. This year, we must again take the lead in crafting the direction of mankind, a course that America has helped plot for over 200 years. We must take the lead in fighting for peace and all the benefits that peace will bring.

The challenge of fighting for peace is almost as great as the restraint that practicing peace requires. But we must be courageous in our efforts to advance the causes this Nation stands for: liberty, freedom, and opportunity.

Mr. Chairman, this year let the House of Representatives signal a new day for America's people, because that is what this amendment represents. The quality of life budget is a budget for the citizens of this Nation who want to build a stronger America, and it is a budget that we who recognize that a stronger America means an economically more competitive America will support.

The key to national security in the 1990's does not lie in the Stealth bomber nor the MX missile. Only economic power can safeguard our future and the future of our children. By reinvesting in the education of our youth, the health care of our people, and the training of our workers, we can achieve the economic strength we will need in the 1990's.

This substitute budget is not only the direction we ought to take in the future; it is the path we should take today. This substitute is one we should enact at the beginning of this decade and we should maintain its principles throughout the 1990's.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, there are several ways that one can mischaracterize this budget. The one earlier that I heard was that this was a budget for welfare, that it would help swell the rolls of welfare and the moneys that go to that. I am happy that I am not hearing that right now.

Another way then is to find a technicality, for example in a particular account, and then attribute a mischaracterization of what will happen from it.

But for this to be coming from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] strikes me as a very interesting position, since the gentleman was the one, when I just recently brought up the bill to create a Cabinet for environmental protection, was the one that was in total opposition because it spent too much money.

The new gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] is a gentleman who now comes to us with deep concerns about the environment.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. I will yield at some point. I cannot yield, as a matter of fact. I only have 2 minutes.

Mr. WALKER. Well, the gentleman mentioned my name. I thought maybe he would yield.

Mr. CONYERS. I know, but you will get plenty of time.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished gentleman in the well, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS], 2 additional minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to yield right now, no. What I want to say to you, sir, is that this is not the way to proceed. We voted and supported every environmental concern that you recite, and still do. You challenged it. I do not know what your ultimate position was, but you were clearly unsupportive of raising this to a Cabinet level. So I come here with some surprise.

Mr. WALKER. That is not true. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. And I find that this is now your concern.

Mr. Chairman, I now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

That is not true. I supported the Hastert approach, for instance, of raising it to a Cabinet level. But I think that we ought to spend money on real environmental research and real environmental action and not on environmental bureaucracy. And the gentleman's bill it seemed to me was overloaded with bureaucracy.

Mr. CONYERS. Thank you. That explains that. I do not think that too many people are going to be concerned about one person's new found concern about the environment, but to challenge a budget that creates jobs, redistributes resources, alleviates suffering of the poorest among us, improves education, deals with housing, deals with health care, helps fight the drug epidemic on all fronts, that to me is incredible.

□ 1520

I am hoping that we will keep hope alive, we will keep hope alive for Americans who would support the Congressional Black Caucus budget and realize one thing, because the one thing we count is who is joining us in this fight every year, a fight that is for all Americans.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER.]

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding me this time, and I rise in support of the Congressional Black Caucus budget. It is a real budget, it is a quality of life budget, it speaks to the needs of this country and it makes choices.

Unfortunately, we are not going to have a vote, I understand, on the President's budget. I do not know why we do not want to make choices on behalf of the President. Apparently there are no members of the President's party who want to offer his budget on the floor, and that is a lamentable fact that speaks to the leadership of this Nation.

My experience over the last 10 years is that we have not been playing for real with respect to the budgets that we have received in this Congress—10 years, Mr. Speaker, is long enough; 10 years, indeed, is far too long. We must finally in this country begin to make tough choices, not just read lips, but make choices. We must begin to choose among the alternatives.

The CBC quality of life budget is, as it has been in the past, an exercise in making tough choices. I want to say that I intend to vote for the Democractic budget committee's budget as well. It too makes choices. I think it is an excellent document. I am proud of both documents.

The CBC alternative budget raises $20 billion in revenue. We need that revenue.

Campaign against me. Let the world know that STENY HOYER on the floor of the House said we need to feed hungry children, we need to help homeless people, we need to educate the young people of this country, we need to invest in our infrastructure, we need to invest the wealth of this Nation in the future of this Nation.

The Congressional Black Caucus imposes a surcharge on the top corporate taxpayers in our country. We ought to do that. The CBC alternative also eliminates the bubble. We ought to do that, because it permits taxpayers with the highest incomes to pay Federal income tax at a lower rate.

Tough choices, tough choices that will help finance new and proven programs that enhance the quality of life for ordinary Americans; no voodoo economic, no smoke, no mirrors, no 30-second sound bites and cute campaign slogans, no more delay, just tough choices.

We may argue about some of the particulars. Is the cut in the defense budget too large? I happen to believe it is.

Will we again hear the White House chorus singing the old worn out tune about "tax and spend Democrats," as opposed to "borrow and spend Republicans"? If I had the unenviable responsibility of drafting the budget, some of my choices may not be the choices that you would make. But the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] and the CBC are offering today a budget that is clearly on the right track. It is a good step forward. It speaks to the priorities we should set in America. Let us support it.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES].

Mr. HAYES of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I again rise to express my full support for the passage of the Congressional Black Caucus' "quality of life" budget, which we are considering today as an amendment in the nature of a substitute to House Concurrent Resolution 310, the congressional budget resolution for fiscal year 1991.

I rise also to encourage that my colleagues take a very close review of this alternative budget. We, here in the House of Representatives, are always full of rhetoric. We talk about the needs of children and families—everyone is in support, we talk about the needs of the elderly—everyone jumps on the bandwagon, and we talk about eradicating poverty—everyone signs on as cosponsors. I want to know why it is then so difficult to back up the rhetoric with strong support for a budget which reflects more clearly the values which the majority of our country hold.

The "quality of life" budget enhances the proven social service programs, while creating new initiatives especially in job training and education. The proposal most importantly modifies Tax Codes, ensuring fiscal responsibilities to encourage deficit reduction efforts. Finally, the CBC budget promotes appropriate reductions in the military by eliminating unnecessary missile programs like the MX and Midgetman.

The CBC budget is fiscally sound, programmatically sensible, and morally right. It is a budget which shows that spending for crucial social programs can be maintained and increased where needed, while our national security does not have to be compromised. Most importantly, this alternative budget shows us that deficits can be reduced to the mandated levels under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law. In fact, the CBC budget creates a $5.3 billion surplus in fiscal year 1993.

As you make your decision today whether or not to support this proposal, please know that this is not a black budget, it is a human budget—that is designed to reach out to those that are in need of some attention in this great Nation of ours. I have always held the position that sending our money to foreign countries in an attempt to spread democracy throughout the world is wrong. I implore you to support this budget today so that democracy can be spread right here in these United States to those who are being neglected, to those who are victims of poverty, to those with no health insurance, to those who cannot access an education, to those who are hungry, and to those who are homeless.

In closing I want to thank my chairman, RON DELLUMS, along with my colleagues of the CBC for again answering the call of the people, and accepting the responsibility of drafting this very important document. I encourage all of my colleagues, particularly those persons of conscience here in the Congress, to vote for the passage of the CBC fiscal year 1991 "quality of life" budget.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Chairman, I thank our colleague from California who has played an enormously important role in trying to lead this House and educate this country as to the proper allocation of resources, because that is what we are dealing with today.

I envy my colleagues on the other side. They have the perfect political position: nothing whatsoever to defend. By acknowledging that a budget is too hard, they have made their rhetorical job easier. I think they have made their political job harder, but that is where we are.

We now have the budget that has tough choices, and any budget that comes forward, given the deficit, is going to have tough choices. The quality of life budget carefully put forward, it seems to me, does a better job of meeting the constraints than any other.

We, of course, understand that we are talking about a budget which, for example, mandates cuts in certain programs, but does not by its terms compel those cuts. It deals in broad categories. It defers, as this House has always deferred, to the expertise of the substantive committees. No budget dictates the specifics. The budgets do allocate resources, none having done nearly as good a job as this one.

We have had, fortunately, in the man who has been leading the debate here on behalf of the CBC and the quality of life budget, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], a senior member of the Armed Services Committee who has the advantage of having been proven correct in a number of areas. I know there are Members who say that they do not like to say, "I told you so." Mr. Chairman, I think that is not true.

□ 1530

I think everybody likes to say "I told you so."

Mr. Chairman, I think that is not true. I think everybody likes to say "I told you so." I have personally found it is one of the few pleasures that improves with age.

The gentleman from California and others are entitled to say that now.

Mr. Chairman, this budget makes a radical statement that Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, East Germany are not going to invade France. That alone saves a large amount of money. Now that may be controversial. If the President's budget had been presented by the Republicans, we would have had a chance to defend France against Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, and Bulgaria. But in the absence of that budget, we are going to have to accept the fact that that is not coming.

We had the Secretary of Defense come and say, "By the way, all those B–2 bombers I said I needed, I don't need as many." He violated his own precept, which is, "If you don't want to afford a weapons system, get rid of it, don't stretch it out, pull it up, shake it down, and cost us more money."

This is a budget which begins to address real human needs. We here as representatives of a great country have as our obligation building a strong America. This is a budget that does more to build a strong America than does any other before us because it recognizes the victories we have gained in the military area. It recognizes that freedom has come to Eastern Europe, that it is the Soviet Union which is on the defensive.

I understand many of us are critical of what they are doing in Lithuania. But a country that finds itself at military swords points with an entity that it has long felt was an internal part of itself is hardly, by that reasoning, a stronger enemy. This is a country in serious difficulty.

Even Outer Mongolia has not opted, apparently, for greater democracy. We can probably save $400 or $500 on that alone.

This is a budget which says primarily that the military expenditures of past years are unnecessary in that degree. It leaves us with a military that will be stronger than any in the world. No one can argue that this would leave us vulnerable in any area where our national interest needs to be protected. Instead it frees up resources to meet those needs in housing, in child care. No one, again, can deny that there is a great need.

What this does is it takes President Bush's admirable rhetoric from the 1988 campaign and it makes an honest campaign out of it.

It puts some flesh on those bones. It in fact provides for education and for the environment and for housing and for other areas where the President said he wanted to be helped.

In taxation, it is a relatively small amount over the President. Let us not forget that the President calls for increased taxes in the teens. This calls for somewhat more and in a more progressive way.

But again I want to say Members are entitled under this to vote for this budget as a declaration of allocation of resources and then decide in finding $6 billion more than the President wants in new taxes, how they would do it. I think that the kind of progressive taxation this talks about is quite admirable. But I recognize that we would have it wide open before us.

The fundamental issue here is the allocation of resources. No budget does it as well, and I congratulate its authors.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Budget, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA].

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I take this time to pay tribute to my friend from California [Mr. DELLUMS] and to the work of the Black Caucus for the serious effort that they put into this alternative budget, for the work that they have done, for their willingness to show courage and to provide directions.

I think the greatest satisfaction in this institution, is when an idea becomes reality. That is what is happening today because the Black Caucus, time and time again in the past few years, has argued how important it is not to just simply continue to increase defense spending and to continue to undermine our nondefense areas and our social needs, but instead to begin to find a better balance between our security needs abroad and our security needs within this country.

Time and time again they have been willing to offer those kinds of budgets, sometimes never knowing just how many votes they might or might not have.

But in doing that, they have provided direction and they have provided guidance and they have been willing to show specifics on taxes, on entitlements, on defense, on investments within our own society. Time has now caught up with these ideas. Changes in the world are taking place, and it is clear that the transition in the world is now reflected in the work that we must do.

Even the President talks about a kinder and gentler society.

So the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], has helped influence his direction and he has most certainly influenced the direction of the Committee on the Budget in the resolution that we bring here.

I am committed out of loyalty to the work of the committee because they worked hard to develop the package that is here. But it does reflect the transition that needs to take place from a cold war economy to a peacetime economy.

I will be loyal to the work of the committee because I think it provides for the gradual change that needs to take place in our society. But in doing that, I also want to pay tribute to the leadership the gentleman from California has provided because he has indeed lighted the path for the committee and for this Nation.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, in recognition of the outstanding work of the Congressional Black Caucus and its chairman the gentleman from Califorinia, [Mr. DELLUMS], the Republican side is proud to yield to him, in acknowledgement of his work but not in affirmation of its result, 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. MFUME). The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. GRAY].

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAY] is recognized for 3 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Chairman, we come once again to debate the priorities of our Nation. Where will we make our investments? What will be our values? As one prominent book says, "Where a person's treasure is there will be their heart."

The same thing is true not only of individuals but also of societies. Where we invest our resources tell more about us than all of the rhetoric and all of the reading of our collective lips.

So today, as we are drawing to a conclusion the decisions as to where we will place our values, our direction and our treasure, in fiscal 1991, I rise in support of the Congressional Black Caucus budget and the work that has been presented by its distinguished chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

I do so because I believe that fundamentally we must look forward, not look back, not maintain the past. The President's budget is a maintenance of the past. It is "let's keep things just the way they are."

If you believe that is what is good for America, then you ought to vote for the President's budget. Unfortunately no one wants to present the President's budget for a vote.

However, if you believe that we ought to change priorities because of changing world circumstances, that perhaps we do not need 75 B-2 bombers at a $1 billion per copy, and that perhaps we need to invest more money in education so that we can have a literate, productive work force to compete with the economic giants in the Pacific and in Europe and in the 1990's and on into the 21st century, then you will want a different direction.

If you believe that star wars are more important than star students, if you believe that we ought to be concerned about continuing the weapons systems of the past rather than investing in the infrastructure, then you will stay where you are; you will say "No" to the Congressional Black Caucus; you will say "No" to the Democratic budget as well.

However, I do not think that is where America is. I think most Americans recognize that the world has changed a great deal and that we need to look forward to the future and to look forward to the future we need to invest in the infrastructure, and the Congressional Black Caucus budget does that to the tune of $3 billion more than the President.

We need to fight the war on drugs and crimes. The Congressional Black Caucus puts nearly $1 billion more into law enforcement than this law-and-order administration.

The Congressional Black Caucus says that we ought to do more with regard to health care. So instead of cutting Medicare by $5 billion from our seniors, it puts $5 billion back and goes above that by $500 million to cover additional people in need and in education.

It does not call a summit. It does not set goals. It does not call a summit and set goals and have meaningless rhetoric. It does not have only a 2-percent increase in education for fiscal year 1991 like the President's budget. If we are going to meet the goals of a literate society, let Members put the resources there. So the Congressional Black Caucus budget is $4.2 billion above the President in education.

Mr. Chairman, where is America? Does America want 75 B-2's at $1 billion a copy, or does America want more resources to educate its people and build roads, build bridges, and put people to work? That is what it is about. That is why I am proud to support the substitute offered by the gentleman from California.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. MFUME). The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] now has 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY].

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] is recognized for such time as he may consume.

There was no objection.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the quality of life budget resolution.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Congressional Black Caucus' quality of life budget for fiscal year 1991. This budget alternative would reduce the defense budget authority by approximately $42 billion and use this peace dividend for housing, health care, food and nutrition, education and training, environmental protection, veterans services and antidrug abuse programs.

Today we are facing a critical test of our national resolve. We have entered an era of diminishing superpower aggression and cannot justify the expenditure of billions and billions of dollars on a defense program that's not needed. Mr. Speaker, this Congress must recognize that changing political conditions throughout the world have created a unique opportunity for us to reorder our financial resources to meet the human needs of our society.

The quality of life budget is the only budget alternative which seeks to create a more compassionate America. As we watch the Soviet Union and its allies abandoning communism and adopting democracy, we must put our own democratic house in order.

We have a moral obligation to acknowledge that the future of our great Nation is jeopardized by the dwindling ranks of our middle class. A rapidly growing number of American children live in poverty and an ever increasing number of homeless Americans have little hope of overcoming the economic enslavement of poverty. Our public education system is overrun with problems and our children are finishing school without the life skills necessary to become contributing members of our society. We cannot continue to ignore the desperate social conditions which are responsible for the economic enslavement of a growing half of the American people and which threaten the future strength, stability and prosperity of our great Nation.

Mr. Chairman, I envision a society where the hungry are fed, the homeless are housed and the sick are treated. That's not too much to ask of a government that can spend $200 billion to protect the embezzlers of megabucks from our savings and loan companies and its not too much to ask of a government that spends $500 million for one airplane and a billion and half dollars for a telescope to explore outer space.

Right now we have the opportunity and the resources to provide life support assistance to the helpless, the denied and the deprived. Right now, the debate is about what we are going to do with the "peace dividend."

We have a historic opportunity to reorder our Federal budget priorities and to address the desperate social problems which divide our society into those who have a decent quality of life and those who have no hope of a decent standard of living.

Mr. Chairman, we must seize this opportunity to reaffirm the traditional values of moral leadership. Government, after providing for the general welfare and the national defense exists to do for the people what the people cannot do for themselves. The quality of life budget provides us with the framework to establish policies that guarantee every family an opportunity to live in a decent home and a decent neighborhood. It would establish programs to educate every child to the fullest extent of his or her potential and it would create, through economic policies, jobs for all individuals.

Mr. Chairman, I believe most in this Congress share a vision of a better society and I believe the quality of life budget offers the opportunity to make our dream of a better America a reality. I urge my colleagues to overcome the fear of change, the chaos and the paranoia permeating the Halls of Congress—we must seize the dividend of peace to restore the spirit of America by ensuring that all citizens have equal access to the basic necessities of human life.

I urge my colleagues to vote in support of the Congressional Black Caucus' quality of life budget proposal.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

First, let me thank the distinguished gentleman on the other side of the aisle for his generosity. I am deeply appreciative. It gives me an opportunity to close the debate. Let me also thank the distinguished chairman of the committee, my friend from California [Mr. PANETTA], for his very kind and generous remarks. I appreciate both of these gentlemen's integrity and their courage in their convictions. Let me finally thank all of my colleagues who assisted in presenting the Congressional Black Caucus budget to this Nation.

In closing and bringing the debate to an end, let me make a few observations. Mr. Chairman, we indicated in our opening remarks that this budget is framed in competence, framed in compassion, and framed in integrity. Mr. Chairman, no Member here has questioned the competence of the Congressional Black Caucus' budget. As a matter of fact, a number of our colleagues on both sides of the aisle, irrespective of political ideology, complimented the competence of the Congressional Black Caucus' budget. Mr. Chairman, no one has challenged the compassion of the Congressional Black Caucus' budget. As a matter of fact, a number of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle spoke eloquently to the compassion of the Congressional Black Caucus' budget.

We have said this is not a black budget, though we recognize that pain and human misery is acutely felt in the black condition in people who are intelligent people. We recognize it is not exclusive of the black condition. Human pain and human misery cuts across all the lines that divide people in this country—black, brown, yellow, red, and white. This budget, as a human budget, is a national budget that embraces the realities of this Nation.

Finally, in that regard, no Member has questioned the integrity of the Congressional Black Caucus' budget. Where people have challenged has been on our analysis on the substantive issues. Even there, only on the fringe, only on the fringe. Mr. Chairman, no Member has said we should not expand the social programs and create new initiatives. It is just some people lack the courage and the will to do it.

Mr. Chairman, with respect to fashioning a new foreign/military policy, not rooted in the obsolete ideas of the cold war, but rather the emerging new realities, the Congressional Black Caucus has the courage to do just that. No one really wants to question that. But those who did said that "We think that the Black Caucus' budget does not address the real world." I wrote that down because I wanted to comment to it. The real world, Mr. Chairman, we will talk about. The real world, the Berlin Wall no longer exists. The real world, Communist governments crumbled in Eastern Europe. The real world, East Germany and West Germany are uniting. The real world, Warsaw Pact impotence, if not nonexistent as a military entity. The real world, all these things happened not because of B–2s and MX's and Trident submarines and Midgetmen, but happened because of the power of ideas, people's commitment to take charge of their destiny, people's desire to move beyond tyranny that had nothing to do with this madness. Mr. Chairman, that is the real world. The real world, American people in my humble opinion want peace, want nuclear disarmament. In the real world, American people know we do not need 132 B–2 bombers, $91 billion means 132 were not sacrosanct.

Think about this, Mr. Chairman: if every person thinks we are never going to use nuclear weapons, the B–2 bomber is Stealth, that means we cannot see it. If we cannot see it, and we do not want to use it, why not tell the Russians we built 132? Hell, if we can, not see it, nobody knows if we are lying, and we can take the money and go on and build America.

The real world, Mr. Chairman, the real world: MX missiles and Midgetmen, "The United States will be vulnerable to Soviet attack by the mid to late 1980's." Here we are in the 1990's, and we have not been attacked by the Soviet Union, have no mobile missile system, land-based, so it is crazy to assume that if the Soviet Union is having the tattoo without it, that some kind of way they will tattoo onto building it. But what do we do once we build, go to the table, go to the brink, back from the brink of disaster? We do not get the millions we wasted.

Real world, hundreds of our children are dying in every major metropolitan city in this country because of drugs and violence related to it. In the real world, we are not fighting drugs. In the real world, 13 million children live in poverty in America. What does it say about a nation that is more committed to building smart nuclear bombs than evolving an intellectual, smart generation of young people? What does it say, Mr. Chairman, in the real world, about a nation that is not committed to providing our young children resources from the fragile stage of the beginnings of life? The real world, there are 10 million black Americans living in poverty, millions of white persons living in poverty, millions of brown Americans, red Americans living in poverty. In the real world, there are millions of people living on the streets in America. We ought to be ashamed of ourselves. The wealthiest Nation, in a nation where we spend $300 billion a year, we can ride home and see people eating out of garbage cans. I cry, Mr. Chairman, every time I see it, because in the real world, I feel pain. I did not come here as an IBM machine. I came here to fight, to fight to change the reality.

I have been saying to Members for 20 years, "the Russians are not coming, the Russians are not coming, the Russians are not coming." But I made a mistake. A few weeks ago they came—not in the spirit of war and violence, but in the framework of peace, and the desire to exchange ideas. Why do we need to build all these weapon systems? We just celebrated Earth Day. Now we want to build more bombs that have no other function but to destroy human life on this planet? What does it say about a nation that threatens its own children with nuclear war, threatens its children with tragic priorities while we march off trying to challenge some abstract enemy that is there trying to feed their minds and feed their people?

Then we hear the Secretary of Defense saying the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency is wrong because he said that what is happening in Eastern Europe and in the Soviet Union is irreversible. It sets logic on its head, when the Secretary of Defense gets angry at an objective analysis of the threat of the world, who is having problems selling a $300 billion military budget to Congress, which means it is about politics.

Mr. Chairman, in the real world there is pain. There is a need to change in the real world, Mr. Chairman. We have a few moments. Maybe that little 5, 10, or 15 minutes that Andy Warhol said that we "have on center stage," this Congress has that few moments when we can redirect the priorities of this Nation. Millions of Americans and people need it. We think American people care we tax the wealthy? Do we think American people care if we cut some of the military budget? I think not. I think the American people do want Members to engage in new priorities. They want their children educated, want affordable housing, because oxymoron—something is wrong. If we don't know what oxymoron means, it is a phrase that connotes apparent contradiction. I used to use rightwing intellectuals as my example of oxymoron, but now I use "affordable housing," because in America, the children cannot afford it. Kids are living at home, people living together, people living on the street. But we are busy marching off, building B-2's. There is something wrong in our society when we can find money to house the MX but cannot find money to house children, to house people in America. This budget is no flaming extreme budget.

□ 1550

We have been saying for 20 years that the world is changing. You wrote us off as the radical extremists of the 1970's. Then we were the ultraprogressive liberals of the 1980's. Well, we are here to tell you we are mainstream America in the 1990's, but not because we changed. The world has changed.

And I will say to my colleagues we have to change. No one really engaged us in debate here. People complimented us, patted us on the head and said, "You did a great job." Well, if we did, the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

Vote for it. We do not need your rhetoric. Vote for it because it is real. We do not need your rhetoric. Vote for it because America needs it. We do not need your rhetoric.

Yes, we did a competent job because we went about it competently. Yes, we did a compassionate job because we went about it caring about people. And, yes, we are not surrendering this Nation because anybody who thinks that a $279 billion military budget in some way is a surrender of America is living in an absurd world. I do not see the Soviet Union running across the central path of Europe. I do not see them coming to the United States, because they know what we know. We are all crazy enough to put these triggers under certain circumstances that would annihilate human life on this planet.

Our future does not lie in technology and nuclear weapon capability but in our commitment to peace and in our commitment to human beings.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I have been here almost 20 years, and I have said on more than one occasion that I believe our responsibility is to the future. I am concerned about a world I will never see, the world of the children, the world of the future, the world of the tomorrows. Too many of us in this body are concerned about the world of today and the world of the next election. I am concerned about turning over the world to my children and my children's children. That is the world I want to see. That is the world that is included in this budget.

Mr. Chairman, I say to the Members, dignify us. Dignify America. Dignify the work we have done. Vote for the Congressional Black Caucus budget. Vote for an investment in America and an investment in the future of this country and the future of the world.

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Chairman, time and events have placed our colleague, RON DELLUMS, in an environment where he appears a true moderate, if not actually a conservative, in the context of recent events that have taken place in Europe. The Baltic States are rushing, not walking, to the nearest exit. The Communist States of Eastern and Central Europe have abandoned communism and are opting for multi-party democracy in a domino effect, the likes of which no one could have imagined a year ago. The Warsaw Pact has absolutely disappeared from the firmament as a practical matter. And even in the Soviet Union there are ominous rumblings of independence coming from the Ukraine.

Mr. Chairman, LEE HAMILTON and I chaired a long hearing of the Joint Economic Committee last week with three experts on the Soviet Union who testified that the Soviet Union has commenced what they described as a free-fall depression. Literally, they told us the Soviet economy is falling apart. They predict widespread famine. They predict violent consumer demonstrations for food and other basic consumer products. Mr. Gorbachev's prospects of holding the very basic fabric of life together, the very basic essentials of an orderly society together, seem questionable. All of his efforts and those around him must be, it seems to me, devoted to avoiding these stark, harsh predictions made by two distinguished Soviets, one of whom is a Member of their Parliament, who also joined in predicting violent demonstrations for the basic necessities of human life. The suggestion, with the Soviet economy and society balanced at the edge of a precipice, that at this point in time Mr. Gorbachev and his generals could conceivably contemplate a major nuclear confrontation with the United States is utter fantasy.

We do have a security problem, Mr. Chairman. Our security problem is kids who can't read, write, and count; workers who are functionally illiterate and not very productive; a society that is far from competitive with our main competition in Europe and Asia; a society that spends 50 percent more on health care than any of the other industrialized democracies, yet still ranks 19th in infant mortality. We still exclude 37 million Americans from the health-care system. We still fail to provide senior citizens with long-term care and catastrophic care. A society where the infrastructure—roads, bridges, tunnels, sewer systems, water systems—are falling to pieces before our eyes.

Mr. Chairman, these are the problems the Soviets are looking forward to; this is not what our great Country should look forward to. The Black Caucus Budget is a reasonable first step in reordering our priorities so as to direct our resources where they belong in rebuilding our country and establishing the quality of life we deserve.

I commend my colleague, RON DELLUMS, whose proposals may have seemed outlandish and "outleftish" in past years, but this year seem to me to be eminently practical, doable, and appropriate. Indeed, to continue the bloated level of military expenditures that the administration budget calls for—including $5.5 billion for the B-2 bomber, $4.7 billion for star wars, $2.2 billion for rail-mobile MX missiles,

$1.75 billion for the Trident II missile and $1.4 billion for yet another unneeded Trident Submarine—to me is the height of absurdity and an outrageous squandering of precious resources that are desperately need in the civilian sector of our society.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in enthusiastic support of Mr. DELLUMS' substitute amendment to the congressional budget resolution for fiscal year 1991 House Concurrent Resolution 310. I am proud to join my colleagues in the Congressional Black Caucus in endorsing this amendment.

When Ronald Reagan first addressed the Congress in 1981, he challenged those who opposed the impending policies of Reaganomics to devise an alternative which offers a greater chance of balancing the budget, stimulating the creation of jobs and reducing inflation. The CBC has responded annually with sound, innovative budget proposals which address the needs of this Nation with pragmatism, compassion and integrity. This year is no exception. Like its predecessors, the alternative budget proposal fashioned by Mr. DELLUMS and the CBC for fiscal year 1991 offers sensible and humane alternatives to the skewed fiscal priorities that have heaped pain and neglect upon our Nation's most vulnerable and disadvantaged citizens over the past decade.

The Dellums amendment proceeds from the belief that a major reordering of priorities must occur if the United States is truly to emerge a kinder and gentler nation in the 1990's. The substitute recognizes that recent developments in Eastern Europe and within the Soviet Union have dramatically altered the geopolitical landscape and warrant serious reconsideration of current military spending levels. It further recognizes that these long-awaited changes present our Nation with a tremendous opportunity to revitalize critical domestic programs which have withered during a decade of rampant defense overspending.

Accordingly, the Dellums substitute proposes $23.7 billion more in defense spending cuts than the Bush budget. This peace dividend is part of $45.1 billion in total revenues to go toward reducing the deficit and breathing new life into non-military programs of benefit to middle- and low-income Americans. Nearly $20 billion will be raised through progressive new revenue measures designed to restore equity to America's tax structure. The Dellums substitute proposes temporary tax increases for the wealthiest individual and corporate taxpayers, the primary beneficiaries of Reagan era tax reform.

This combination of defense savings and progressive revenue measures allows the CBC to commit $33.2 billion more than the Bush budget for nonmilitary spending, while still achieving greater deficit-reduction than the Bush budget. The substitute meets Graham-Rudman requirements for fiscal years 1991 and 1992 and produces a surplus in fiscal year 1993.

The CBC calls for a halt to the continued Reagan/Bush assault on Medicare, rejecting the Bush administration's proposed $5.5 billion in Medicare funding reductions. Moreover, the CBC supports the recommendations of the Pepper Commission and calls for the creation of a national health policy which provides full health coverage for the 37 million Americans who lack insurance and which addresses the needs of minorities, the poor, and other underserved groups.

The Dellums amendment increases support for education and job-training training programs, including Head Start and programs for education of the handicapped. It supports the creation of youth-incentive, employment, dropout prevention, and anti-gang violence programs, and increases funding for sorely needed programs in drug education and treatment.

The CBC provides funds for the expansion of the supply of permanent, affordable low- and moderate-income housing, and preserves Federal support for public housing rehabilitation and construction. It increases funding for agriculture, energy conservation and the development of alternative and renewable energy sources; and provides increased assistance to emerging democracies in Europe, Africa and the Caribbean, including enactment of the Mickey Leland African and Caribbean Development Act.

Mr. Chairman, no single document offers a more candid statement of our national priorities and values than the Federal budget. For 10 years, the Federal budget has manifested an obsession with military spending and production that defies rational justification. For 10 years, our Nation's wealthiest individuals and corporations have reaped the benefits of targeted tax rate reductions. For 10 years, we have watched the inevitable consequences of these policies materialize in the form of massive deficits and the deterioration of domestic programs. And, for 10 years, the disadvantaged of this Nation have paid the price.

America can no longer afford to spend huge sums of money on unnecessary weapons and to indulge the whims of the wealthy at the expense of those who lack adequate food, housing, clothing, and opportunities for quality education and employment. It is imperative that our Nation seize this momentous opportunity to set its priorities straight. I submit that the Dellums amendment offers a sensible and feasible plan for doing so, and that it deserves the careful consideration and support of this body.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, the amendment we have before us today is the Congressional Black Caucus' alternative to President Bush's proposed fiscal year 1991 budget. This alternative budget would emphasize large reductions in Defense budget authority and meet the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit target of $64 billion in 1991. While the CBC had hoped that the Bush administration would discontinue the inequitable budget policies of its predecessor, the administration's proposed fiscal year 1991 budget would increase military spending by $7 billion while calling for well over $20 billion in social program reductions. Therefore, the CBC crafted its own budget plan.

The resolution proposed by the House Budget Committee is a vast improvement over the President's budget. However, the members of the Congressional Black Caucus feel that it is possible to find additional funds for critical domestic programs. The CBC alternative budget would realize a peace dividend by reducing the military budget by 7.8 percent in outlays and 15.5 percent budget authority from the fiscal year 1990 level. It also raises new revenues through tax equity measures, which would eliminate the unfair tax rate enjoyed by those with the very highest incomes. Under the CBC budget, we can begin to redirect our Nation's priorities toward preparing our citizens for the 21st century.

We must recognize this country will be ill prepared to enter the 21st century if millions of our children are in poor health, or cannot read or write well enough to function in our increasingly high-tech world, or they have fallen victims to drug abuse. In the year 2000, one-third of the new entrants to our work force will be minorities. We are not currently meeting the health and educational needs of minorities and the disadvantaged. If we expect to remain a competitive force in the global economy, we cannot ignore what will soon be one-third of our Nation. These are the truly important challenges our national budget must focus upon.

The alternative budget focuses on these major objectives: expanding educational and training opportunities for disadvantaged, minority, and handicapped persons; providing full health coverage to all Americans; renewing the Nation's commitment to providing income, housing, and food for low-income Americans; fully funding urban, rural, and area development programs to combat economic displacement; and supporting full funding of the Social Security Program, rejecting any effort to limit COLA's to retirees and disabled persons. This alternative budget calls for substantially more funding than does the President's budget in the areas of education, housing, health, training and food assistance, all of which represent the central focus of the CBC.

In addition to providing full funding for critical existing programs, such as Head Start and education for the handicapped, the alternative budget would also support a number of initiatives that would improve the quality of life for millions of Americans. The alternative budget that we are presenting here, consistent with the Pepper Commission recommendations, rejects the notion that the Nation has insufficient resources to meet the health needs of its citizens and calls for the creation of a national health policy focused on prevention and improvement of the Nation's well-being. Our alternative also supports a major new initiative to create educational research and development districts and an intensive education extension program for at risk students. These are just a few examples of programs the CBC would like to see funded in fiscal year 1991.

My colleagues and I have heard from many of our constituents who demand to see greater priority given to important domestic programs. I am sure that many of you have heard from your constituents as well. I urge you to vote for the budget that would provide the highest quality of life for our citizens. Vote for the CBC alternative budget.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 90, noes 334, not voting 9, as follows:

[Roll No. 88]

AYES—90

Akaka	Hoyer	Perkins
Atkins	Jacobs	Rangel
AuCoin	Johnson (SD)	Roybal
Bates	Jontz	Sabo
Berman	Kastenmeier	Savage
Boggs	Kennedy	Sawyer
Boxer	Kildee	Scheuer
Brown (CA)	Kostmayer	Schroeder
Clay	Lehman (CA)	Schumer
Conyers	Lehman (FL)	Serrano
Coyne	Levine (CA)	Sikorski
Crockett	Lewis (GA)	Slaughter (NY)
DeFazio	Lowey (NY)	Solarz
Dellums	Markey	Stark
Dixon	Martinez	Stokes
Durbin	Matsui	Studds
Dymally	McDermott	Torres
Early	Mfume	Towns
Edwards (CA)	Miller (CA)	Traficant
Espy	Mineta	Traxler
Evans	Moakley	Udall
Flake	Moody	Vento
Foglietta	Nagle	Walgren
Ford (MI)	Neal (MA)	Washington
Ford (TN)	Nowak	Waxman
Frank	Oakar	Weiss
Gonzalez	Oberstar	Wheat
Gray	Owens (NY)	Williams
Hawkins	Payne (NJ)	Wyden
Hayes (IL)	Pelosi	Yates

NOES—334

Alexander	Chapman	Flippo
Anderson	Clarke	Frenzel
Andrews	Clement	Frost
Annunzio	Clinger	Gallegly
Anthony	Coble	Gallo
Applegate	Coleman (MO)	Gaydos
Archer	Coleman (TX)	Gejdenson
Armey	Combest	Gekas
Aspin	Condit	Gephardt
Baker	Conte	Geren
Ballenger	Cooper	Gibbons
Barnard	Costello	Gillmor
Bartlett	Coughlin	Gilman
Barton	Courter	Gingrich
Bateman	Cox	Glickman
Bellenson	Craig	Goodling
Bennett	Crane	Gordon
Bentley	Dannemeyer	Goss
Bereuter	Darden	Gradison
Bevill	Davis	Grandy
Bilbray	de la Garza	Grant
Bilirakis	DeLay	Green
Billey	Derrick	Guarini
Boehlert	DeWine	Gunderson
Bonior	Dickinson	Hall (OH)
Borski	Dicks	Hall (TX)
Bosco	Donnelly	Hamilton
Boucher	Dorgan (ND)	Hammerschmidt
Brennan	Dornan (CA)	Hancock
Brooks	Douglas	Hansen
Broomfield	Downey	Harris
Browder	Dreier	Hastert
Brown (CO)	Duncan	Hatcher
Bruce	Dwyer	Hayes (LA)
Bryant	Dyson	Hefley
Buechner	Eckart	Hefner
Bunning	Edwards (OK)	Henry
Burton	Emerson	Herger
Bustamante	Engel	Hertel
Byron	English	Hiler
Callahan	Erdreich	Hoagland
Campbell (CA)	Fascell	Hochbrueckner
Campbell (CO)	Fawell	Holloway
Cardin	Fazio	Hopkins
Carper	Feighan	Horton
Carr	Fields	Houghton
Chandler	Fish	Hubbard
Huckaby	Morella	Shays
Hughes	Morrison (CT)	Shumway
Hunter	Morrison (WA)	Shuster
Hutto	Mrazek	Sisisky
Hyde	Murphy	Skaggs
Inhofe	Murtha	Skeen
Ireland	Myers	Skelton
James	Natcher	Slattery
Jenkins	Neal (NC)	Slaughter (VA)
Johnson (CT)	Nielson	Smith (IA)
Johnston	Obey	Smith (NE)
Jones (GA)	Olin	Smith (NJ)
Jones (NC)	Ortiz	Smith (TX)
Kanjorski	Owens (UT)	Smith (VT)
Kaptur	Oxley	Smith, Denny (OR)
Kasich	Packard
Kennelly	Pallone	Smith, Robert (NH)
Kleczka	Panetta
Kolbe	Parker	Smith, Robert (OR)
Kolter	Parris
Kyl	Pashayan	Snowe
LaFalce	Patterson	Solomon
Lagomarsino	Paxon	Spence
Lancaster	Payne (VA)	Spratt
Lantos	Pease	Staggers
Laughlin	Penny	Stallings
Leach (IA)	Petri	Stangeland
Lent	Pickett	Stearns
Levin (MI)	Pickle	Stenholm
Lewis (CA)	Porter	Stump
Lightfoot	Poshard	Sundquist
Lipinski	Price	Swift
Livingston	Pursell	Synar
Lloyd	Quillen	Tallon
Long	Ravenel	Tanner
Lowery (CA)	Ray	Tauke
Luken, Thomas	Regula	Tauzin
Lukens, Donald	Rhodes	Taylor
Machtley	Richardson	Thomas (CA)
Madigan	Ridge	Thomas (GA)
Manton	Rinaldo	Thomas (WY)
Marlenee	Roberts	Torricelli
Martin (IL)	Robinson	Unsoeld
Martin (NY)	Roe	Upton
Mavroules	Rogers	Valentine
Mazzoli	Rohrabacher	Vander Jagt
McCandless	Ros-Lehtinen	Visclosky
McCloskey	Rose	Volkmer
McCollum	Rostenkowski	Vucanovich
McCrery	Roth	Walker
McCurdy	Roukema	Walsh
McDade	Rowland (CT)	Watkins
McEwen	Rowland (GA)	Weber
McGrath	Russo	Weldon
McHugh	Saiki	Whittaker
McMillan (NC)	Sangmeister	Whitten
McMillen (MD)	Sarpalius	Wilson
McNulty	Saxton	Wise
Meyers	Schaefer	Wolf
Michel	Schiff	Wolpe
Miller (OH)	Schneider	Wylie
Miller (WA)	Schuette	Yatron
Molinari	Schulze	Young (AK)
Mollohan	Sensenbrenner	Young (FL)
Montgomery	Sharp
Moorhead	Shaw

NOT VOTING—9

Ackerman	Leath (TX)	Rahall
Collins	Lewis (FL)	Ritter
Dingell	Nelson	Smith (FL)

□ 1615

Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri and Mr. VOLKMER changed their vote from "aye" to "no."

So the amendment in the nature of a substitute was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] has announced he would not offer the fourth amendment.

Pursuant to the order of the House of earlier today, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] will be recognized for 15 minutes and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] will be recognized for 15 minutes of general debate.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA].

□ 1620

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the Frenzel amendment, the Bush budget, be placed on the floor so that we all might have an opportunity to vote on it.

Mr. Chairman, I think this is an important issue. The President has submitted a budget to us. At the very least, he deserves to be heard, and if none of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will offer it, I would like to offer it simply so that we might get a referendum and see where that budget lies. Maybe it is a better budget than our budget. Members of this House will see.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to have the opportunity to offer that budget simply as a way to measure how much support the budget has on both sides of the aisle.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would inform the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] that the Chair cannot entertain such a request in the Committee of the Whole. It would be inappropriate to do so. It would constitute a change in the rule, House Resolution 382, previously adopted by the House.

The gentleman from California is, therefore, recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. JENKINS] for the purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the chairman recognizing me for this colloquy.

As the chairman knows, I have supported a reduction in the tax on capital gains.

Is it my understanding that this could be accomplished within the framework of this Budget Committee resolution? Am I correct?

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is correct.

As usual, with regard to the tax segment of the budget resolution, neither the resolution nor the report makes any specific recommendations about how the tax committee should respond to the revenue-reconciliation instructions.

With respect to a capital gains tax cut, there is no specific language either favoring it or opposing it.

The committee intends that the revenue-reconciliation target be a net target. Legislation that includes some revenue-reducing provisions is consistent with the reconciliation instructions as long as, on balance, the legislation raises the necessary revenue.

Mr. JENKINS. I thank the chairman.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, I just want to talk a few minutes about the process and what we are trying to do here.

I have been meeting with the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAY] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] and a number of other Members for the last couple of months. What we tried to address is the changed threat in the entire Nation, and the budget that we confront because of that changed threat.

What am I talking about now? The major thing that we tried to look at was the change in Europe. Obviously a substantial portion of our budget was directed toward sustainability in Europe. We had to have 10 divisions in Europe in 10 days. Since that has changed so dramatically, we are now talking about all kinds of warning time in Europe before we need to mobilize.

We believe the threat has changed so substantially that we could call up the Reserves and the Guard in times of a national emergency in order to take care of any sustainability. The threat has changed so dramatically that we could mobilize the Reserves and Guard and get them to Europe in the time that is necessary in order to deflect any conventional attack.

Where is the threat then? The threat then is in the Middle East and in the oilfields of the Middle East. We are going to need a substantial-size Navy. We are going to need transportation to get our forces to Europe and to the Middle East.

We also have to worry about Korea. We have to worry about the Pacific. The thrust of the budget, as I see it this next year, will be to reduce the size of forces in the Pacific and in Europe.

I can see that in the next year we could reduce the forces in Europe by at least 100,000 troops. I am not sure that we would want to do that unilaterally. I am convinced that we would want to do that unilaterally. I am convinced that we will not be able to mark up a bill until July.

It is necessary for us to have some sort of agreement from the White House. We are really talking about a starting point. We are talking about a strong strategic deterrent, a credible deterrent. We are talking about a reduced size in our number of troops and civilians in the Defense Department.

I have been talking to Secretary Cheney trying to get him to reduce the number of people in the Pentagon, some of the administrative people over there in the Pentagon, and we are going to take advantage of the management review that Secretary Atwood has worked so hard on. So there are tremendous savings with this build-down.

I certainly do not foresee what a lot of people consider a peace dividend this year, or if there is a dividend, it will be a dividend that is directed toward no new taxes this year, but I do see with the cut in budget authority down the road, substantial savings that will be able to be redirected at infrastructure problems.

Some of the weapons systems are going to have to be scrubbed very hard. We are going to have to look at each one of the weapons systems that we have available to us and decide which ones of these strategic weapons and tactical weapons are necessary in order to support the threat, and if the threat continues to diminish as it has, we will have to make decisions as that time changes.

I am convinced that this is the starting point for this budget, and this is the key question.

Senator NUNN and I sat down, and we met for 2 hours. He and I worked out a model budget. We actually had cut more from his model than the one that I cut from. We came up with a figure that is less than the budget that is being presented by the chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA], but we see in the end that we are now at the starting point of a budget resolution.

It will have to go to the Senate. It will be negotiated, and we will have the leeway to pass a budget under the changed threat that we face in Europe and the changed threat that we face throughout the world.

We will have to meet the terrorism and the possibility of terrorism and Third World action and instability in the Middle East. That is what I see as meeting the threat that faces the United States which means that we can reduce our conventional forces substantially. We have to evaluate which of the strategic forces and tactical forces have to be funded.

I would urge everybody in this House to vote for the start of the process, because the public is well aware of the changes that need to be made in this budget in order to change the thrust and to take advantage of the changed situation and the changed threat throughout the rest of the world.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished vice chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DICKINSON].

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, it is very seldom that I find myself at variance with the very distinguished gentleman who preceded me in the well, especially on matters of defense. He and I have worked together many years trying to fashion budgets, trying to fashion a defense bill that we feel is necessary, imperative actually, so that we might have a strong defense in this country.

However, I have to part company with him on this budget. Everybody recognizes that the world situation has changed. Everybody has recognized the diminished and decreasing threat that we see coming from Europe. Everybody recognizes, I am sure, that we must accordingly readjust our thinking and our spending toward our defense posture.

□ 1630

Mr. Chairman, I agree with this. The question is what would be the correct amount of budget for this year? I cannot believe that an additional cut of over $10 billion of outlays is in the best interests of our country, that it is doable, that it would not cause irrevocable harm in our defense posture.

In order to arrive at a savings of over $10 billion in outlays, that means we will have to cut over $20 billion, closer to $25 billion, in budget authority. If we are going to have to take that dramatic cut in this budget, after Secretary Cheney has already cut it 2 percent, if we have to take this additional cut, where is it going to come from? There are many things we need to be aware of that would result from such a dramatic cut.

Last year we set in motion and created a Base Closure Commission. They came back with a recommendation of some 48 bases to be closed that this House approved, and we are in the process of doing that.

This year Secretary Cheney has sent over a list of some 61, as I recall, additional proposed closings that he would suggest and we will probably start working on next year. This is on top of those that have already been identified by the Commission.

Now we are told that the Navy has come out with an additional list hitting most of the bases that are included in the home portings. So we are looking at additional closures of bases. We are looking at ports that will be closed on the Gulf Coast. You have a serious impact in New York, on Staten Island, and Washington. These are things that will inevitably come if we have to take these tremendous cuts.

Look at the weapons systems that will be affected. Every strategic system. If we took out every one of these strategic systems, it still would not meet the targets that would have to be met under this budget proposal.

I know these weapons systems do not mean something to everybody. They mean something to most of us here. The advanced technical fighter, the ATF, and SDI, so-called star wars, if you eliminate both of those, if you eliminated the MX Program, both Midgetman and Rail-Garrison, if you eliminated the SSN submarine, nuclear submarines that are presently planned to be built, they still would not reach the targets that this budget would require us to meet.

It means an early out for over 100,000 people that are presently in uniform, people that have made a contract with us in good faith. We have an all-volunteer service. They are going to be forced out or will be denied promotions that they are entitled to.

We have just approved the transfer of $500 million to Panama out of the defense budget. We have just approved $200 million more to Nicaragua out of the defense budget. We have approved some $150 million more than that for the relocation of Jewish emigrants out of the defense budget. All of these are already done even before we get to this budget.

Mr. Chairman, I am saying to the members of this committee that I do not think they recognize the importance of what we are doing here, or the impact of what we are doing here. If we are going to have to find approximately $25 billion more to take out of the defense budget, it is just not there. It is going to cause irreparable harm. It is unworkable.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge my colleagues to vote against this budget.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR].

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of House Concurrent Resolution 310, the budget resolution for fiscal year 1991. I commend Chairman PANETTA for his fine leadership in crafting a budget that protects America's economic integrity and begins to rebuild America for the 21st century.

The budget resolution, unlike the Bush administration budget, provides a 5-year plan to fully balance the budget wtihout relying on the Social Security trust fund to mask the true dimensions of the Federal deficit. The budget plan results in $497 billion in gross deficit reduction and $382 billion in net deficit reduction between 1991 and 1995. Net deficit reduction is greater than that in the President's budget in each year. The budget resolution's plan to operate under a pay as you go system will result in interest rates dropping as the Government reduces borrowing huge sums of money from private domestic and foreign sources to finance its spending. A sufficient pool of capital will be released to the private sector to stimulate investment and advance productivity.

The reordering of priorities within this budget ceiling to invest in technology and the people to apply and advance that technology lays the foundation to rebuild America's economic competitiveness. The budget resolution's investments in economic competitiveness and adjustment initiative invests $2.8 billion more than the President's budget in programs to rebuild the competitiveness of the U.S. economy in cooperation with the private sector. Where the President's budget tears down, the budget resolution rebuilds.

The Federal Government's investment in basic and applied research and development is increased, particularly in new technologies that can be commercially applied—in manufacturing, in medicine and health research, and other industries of the future. Expanded trade and export opportunities for U.S. businesses are supported in this budget. Resources are also targeted to people and communities adjusting to economic dislocation. Education and retraining are emphasized, especially for laid-off and dislocated workers. The Government's commitment to math and science education at the elementary and university levels is deepened with the additional funds contained in this budget.

The budget resolution's investment in people is reflected in the $800 million increase above the baseline for the Job Training Partnership Act, the Community Development Block Grant Program, the Economic Development Administration, the Farmers Home Administration, and Vocational Education. These funds will be used to rebuild the lives of individuals and communities coping with economic dislocation. The funds will help dislocated workers adjust to the global nature of today's economy and educate a new generation of workers who have the knowledge and skills to further America's leadership in the international marketplace. The Bush budget, in stark contrast, provides $2.1 billion less than the budget resolution—$351 million less than the baseline—for these programs. Where the Bush budget tears down, the budget resolution rebuilds:

The budget resolution contains a $300 million increase above the baseline to assist dislocated workers through the Job Training Partnership Act. This increase will assist approximately 170,000 dislocated workers who are stripped of their jobs and do not possess skills that are transferable to another occupation. The Bush budget requests $302 million less than the baseline—and $600 million less than the budget resolution contains—for dislocated workers. Rather than trying to rebuild the lives of dislocated workers so that they can again contribute to society in a productive manner, the President leaves them high and dry.

The budget resolution increases funding for important vocational education programs by $140 million over the baseline. This increase will be used for the Tech Prep Program and will result in the training of thousands of additional technicians. The budget resolution contains $169 million more than the President's budget for vocational education programs.

The budget resolution's investment in individuals is augmented with initiatives that alleviate the domino effect experienced by entire communities when plants or industries shut down or relocate offshore. The $200 million increase above the baseline for the Community Development Block Grant will be used to assist communities in finding alternative uses for existing industrial facilities, making infrastructure improvements, and carrying out other economic development projects to create new job bases for low- and middle-income workers. Funding for the Economic Development Administration is increased by $77 million above the baseline to assist communities threatened by sudden and severe economic dislocation. The Budget Committee recognizes the need to provide timely and adequate resources to assist communities such as those affected last year by Hurricane Hugo and the Loma Prieta earthquake. Apparently President Bush thought the Federal Government's response last year was more than sufficient as his budget cuts the Economic Development Administation's budget to $26 million below the baseline. The budget resolution also increases funding for rural development programs so that the Farmers Home Administration can provide grants and loans to communities to improve facilities, expand industrial development, and initiate water and waste disposal programs. Again, the President cuts assistance to needy communities to the tune of $76 million below the baseline for rural development programs.

The budget resolution recognizes the importance of educating tomorrow's work force in the areas of math and science. The resolution increases the National Science Foundation budget by $215 million above the baseline next year and doubles its budget over the next 5 years for investment in basic research and the scientific personnel infrastructure of the Nation. Part of the increase for the National Science Foundation reflects the committee's belief that science engineering education program investments are needed to raise the ability of our population to cope successfully with our new national economic challenges. Funding for the Department of Education math and science education programs are also increased in the budget resolution.

The budget resolution recognizes that the Nation's budget and trade deficits are inextricably linked. Although elimination of the budget deficit will lead to a lowering of the trade deficit, the Government must also enforce its trade laws to eliminate other nations' unfair trade practices and create export opportunities for U.S. businesses. The budget resolution enhances export opportunities through a $125 million increase over the baseline for Eximbank's direct loan program and a $125 million increase over the baseline for Eximbank loan guarantees to assist businesses in tapping new markets in Central and Eastern Europe. The President's budget makes no special provision for the Eximbank to target funds for the newly emerging democracies in Central and Eastern Europe struggling to make the transition to market economies. Although President Bush certainly was eager to see the governments in Central and Eastern Europe fall, he has not followed through with initiatives that involve our private sector in rebuilding their fragile economies. Further, the budget resolution contains $7 million above the baseline for the foreign commercial service. Until the United States adequately staffs its foreign embassies in Japan and other important trading nations, domestic industry will be unable to penetrate markets, expand United States exports, and forge new trading relationships.

The budget resolution reflects the committee's belief that national security is synonymous with economic security. It also recognizes the synergy between reliable modern defense technologies and an industrial base that is up-to-date and technologically innovative. The committee supports research into generic technologies that will ensure defense-preparedness and simultaneously rebuild and strengthen the manufacturing and high technology industrial base on which our economy depends. The Bush budget continues to pour increases into the military budget but refuses to acknowledge the great potential for commercialization of defense technology.

The budget resolution provides $281 million more than the President's budget in Function 050 for Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency [DARPA], including $100 million for Sematech, the collaborative semiconductor research and development initiative, $25 million for the National Center for Manufacturing Sciences, and a $20 million increase for high resolution information systems research. As the threat to our national defense lessens, it is imperative that the Department of Defense invest in dual use technologies. Investing now in dual use technologies will ease the economic dislocation that will be the inevitable result of downsizing the defense budget. The administration's defense budget request, coupled with the recent decision to remove Craig Fields as the Director of DARPA, illustrates the President's inability to envision a new world outlook which emphasizes economic, rather than military, competitiveness.

The budget resolution also invests in technology development and transfer programs that are administered outside of the Defense Department. The resolution contains $76 million above the baseline, $51 million more than the President's budget, for the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The advanced technology program, within the National Institute of Standards and Technology, will receive an increase of $37 million above the baseline. An additional $2 million is provided for the technology extension service, a program the President proposed to eliminate. The technology extension service will give businesses access to a cooperative Federal-State network of information which will allow efficient dissemination of technology. The resolution also contains $11 million beyond the baseline for research support centers. Each region of the Nation will ultimately have a resource center for technology tailored to meet the needs of industries operating within it. In addition to these increases, the budget resolution provides $75 million in loan guarantees so that the Small Business Administration can target technology development loans to small businesses.

Where the Bush budget tears down the manufacturing base of our Nation, ignores the plight of displaced workers and struggling communities, and fails to shift its emphasis from military preparedness to economic security, the budget resolution invests in initiatives to rebuild America. The resolution's investments in economic competitiveness and adjustment initiative lays out a path for America to follow to invest in people and technology in order to regain America's economic sovereignty and meet the challenges of the 21st century.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the budget resolution as prepared by my distinguished colleagues on the Budget Committee. They have done an excellent job of responding to the budget crisis facing this country. This resolution puts us on a path towards a real balanced budget by fiscal year 1996, and it does a much better job of addressing urgent domestic needs than the President's budget proposal did.

But in all honesty, Mr. Chairman, I must say that while this resolution makes tremendous strides over the President's proposal and sets a positive course for the future, it does not squarely address the pressing needs to our country. The huge Federal deficit continues to keep real interest rates high and the amount of capital available to American businesses low. Mr. Speaker, the time has come to say to the President, "Read our lips—no new borrowing." While the President talks of economic growth and no new taxes, taxpayers are paying indirectly for an unwise if not potentially disastrious fiscal policy. As the national debt goes shooting past the $3 trillion mark, the interest Americans pay on their mortgages, their credit cards, and their car loans remains ridiculously high.

In addition, the President's concern for the capital available for private investment suddenly disappears when the conversation turns from tax breaks to Federal borrowing. We are doing this country a great disservice if we do not admit that the greatest competitive advantage that Japanese and other foreign companies have is that their governments haven't borrowed every last dime that should be available for investment. What does this mean? It means that a decade of deficit spending is depriving American companies of investment capital, American workers of new opportunities, and the American economy of the growth that it should be experiencing. There is no free lunch, and now there is quite a tab to pay.

The budget resolution before us is a good first step towards the fiscal conservative notion of paying your bills, a departure from the recent ideological conservative notion of leaving them for future generations. It, unlike the President's budget, recognizes that our national security is being endangered, rather than enhanced, by wasteful and excessive defense spending. The budget resolution calls for responsible limits on defense spending, now and in the future. This aspect is one of the budget's strong points, although I am concerned that the first year reductions will prove to be difficult to achieve.

Another positive aspect of this budget resolution is a provision to restore the meaning of the term trust fund as it applies to the Social Security system. Right now we are spending that surplus on other things, along with surpluses in the aviation and highway trust funds, because neither we nor the President has had the courage to face up to the deficit. We know that these funds are needed for the purposes they were collected—our roads and bridges are falling apart, our air traffic control system is overwhelmed, and Social Security offices do not have enough employees to adequately administer the program—but these facts have not stopped the diversion of trust fund monies for other uses.

Senior citizens will be better off under the committee's proposal, since it cuts Medicare by $4 billion less than the President proposes. However, even the $1.7 billion in the committee resolution may be too high, and I am concerned about hospitals who have repeatedly seen their Medicare funds slashed.

In addition to these concerns, I have reservations about other provisions in the resolution. We know that the economic assumptions used in this budget were overly optimistic even when the President included them in his budget proposal back in February. The President's office of smoke and mirrors, alias the Office of Management and Budget, has criticized the Budget Committee for using these assumptions since the recent economic trends have indicated that the deficit will be significantly larger than forecast. In OMB's fit of courage and responsibility, however, they somehow forgot to supply Congress with a proposal as to how they would adjust the President's budget to make up for the increased deficit.

In addition to optimistic economic assumptions, the Budget Committee also borrowed the optimistic revenue/user fee figures from the President's budget. Although this resolution does not contain specifics on some of these counts, the President's budget includes many questionable revenue sources. For example, I do not expect a Coast Guard user fee to be passed to begin with, and even if it is, I doubt it will raise $200 million in real money.

Finally, while I firmly support aid to emerging democracies in Eastern Europe and Central America, I feel strongly that we must cut spending in other areas to provide such aid. The $1.3 billion increase in foreign assistance provided for in this budget seems high at a time when we appear to be headed toward another Gramm-Rudman sequestration.

As anyone can see, this resolution is far from perfect. However, it is a better budget than the President's proposal, and one that puts us on the right course. Without Presidential leadership and/or a bit more honesty from the Office of Management and Budget, it is probably the best budget anyone could have produced. I hope that the administration will be a little more realistic about our economy in the future and join us in working out the details of a budget that addresses this country's needs while staying within the Gramm-Rudman limits on the deficit.

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Chairman, today I plan to support the fiscal year 1991 budget resolution. While the resolution is not a perfect solution to all budget issues, it begins to redistribute national resources from military spending to domestic priorities while maintaining U.S. national security interests. Most important, the resolution diagrams a complete budget plan for the future. Over 5 years, the budget achieves deficit reduction of $487 billion and does so without using the Social Security surplus. The amount of deficit reduction for 1991 is even more than that proposed by President Bush.

My major concern with the budget resolution is that it accepts the economic forecasts of the administration. While I am concerned that the prospects for economic growth are overly optimistic, I am willing to go along with the Office of Management and Budget [OMB] assumptions for 1 year as the OMB is mandated by law to determine the 1991 deficit reduction. I am happy to see that the more realistic assumptions of the Congressional Budget Office are used in the following 3 years.

This budget resolution does go a long way toward a "pay-as-you-go" approach to budgeting. On a long-term basis, the budget moves toward removing the Social Security trust fund from the deficit calculations. I have endorsed legislation both to return to "pay-as-you-go" and to repeal Gramm-Rudman. The resolution moves toward that goal by reducing the budget and accounting tricks so common in past years.

The resolution does contain major program cuts, but they are implemented in a more equitable fashion than those proposed in the administration's budget. In light of the dissolution of the Warsaw Pact and the greatly diminished Soviet threat, defense spending is reduced gradually, with approximately $18.6 billion cuts in budget authority. Medicare is cut $1.7 billion as compared to $5.5 billion under the President's budget. Other savings in mandatory and entitlement programs will save $3.8 billion. There are increases in other domestic initiatives which will go a long way toward repairing the damage done over the past 10 years and to rebuilding the social infractructure of society. Finally, the resolution includes full cost of living adjustments [COLA's] for Federal, civilian military retirees and employees, which are not included in the President's budget.

Finally, the budget assumes that there will be increases in Government revenues of $13.9 billion, the same amount proposed by the President. The resolution leaves these revenue measures to the Ways and Means Committee, where I am convinced they can be implemented. My "Fire Sale" bill addresses the failure of the administration to collect the appropriate market value in selling or leasing Federal assets. According to conservative estimates, between $5–10 billion could be collected simply be implementing good business practices in this area.

Although I did not support the Congressional Black Caucus' [CBC] quality of life budget, I want to commend the CBC for it's work on attempting to reorder our budget priorities. It is my hope that, with continued improvement in United States-Soviet relations, including the ratification of a START agreement, the priorities of the CBC budget will become a reality in the near future.

Mr. HAWKINS. I rise today in support of House Concurrent Resolution 310, the budget resolution for fiscal year 1991. This budget provides $3.5 billion in budget authority for education programs above the fiscal year 1990 level; it increases funding for Head Start by $600 million above the baseline; assumes full funding of the House-passed discretionary child care program, as well as other increases.

The increase in education funding represents real growth of 12 percent as compared with the administrative's increase of 2 percent. The committee's resolution provides five times the growth assumed by the administration.

These increases represent a substantial change in direction from the budgets of the previous decade when domestic discretionary programs were squeezed in a misguided attempt to produce deficit reduction. This resolution reflects the realization that to prosper, we must invest.

I wish the committee had been able to do more to undo the damage done to education and training programs over the last 10 years. That budget tries to balance competing interests and I understand that, after 10 year of neglect, all committees feel shortchanged. I am confident that we will do better in future years.

Finally, I note that the budget resolution is a blueprint and that, after all is said and done, equally difficult decisions must be made by the Appropriations Committee. In this regard, I look forward to working closely with Chairman NATCHER, Chairman WHITTEN, and Mr. CONTE to produce increases in the appropriations arena that meet or exceed those assumed in the Budget Resolution.

In the meantime, I want to thank Mr. KILDEE, and Mr. GOODLING for their tireless efforts on behalf of the Education and Labor Committee, as well as Chairman PANETTA and the other members of the Budget Committee who worked so hard to fund education and training programs more adequately.

Mr. KYL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the committee budget.

I also have to agree with the decision by our colleague from Minnesota, BILL FRENZEL, not to offer the President's budget for consideration on the House floor today.

It is with some reluctance that I agree with that decision because there are many good things in the President's budget: it provides adequate funding for the national defense, funds a number of important new environmental initiatives, devotes substantial new money toward the drug war, and provides for capital gains reform to name a few.

On the other hand, I think it takes too much money from Medicare, and I do not support the proposed COLA freeze for military and Federal retirees. Moreover, it is based on economic assumptions that are so rosy that the deficit will not be anywhere near the limit established by Gramm-Rudman-Hollings for the year. The Congressional Budget Office has already estimated that the administration's budget will result in a deficit more than twice as high as the $61 billion deficit the administration originally projected.

By the same token, and despite all of the criticism, the committee budget uses the same rosy economic assumptions and some of the same questionable savings that the administration used to put its budget together. The committee slashes defense and will undermine the quality of U.S. forces in terms of people, weapons, training, and readiness.

The committee budget relies on substantial tax increases, a total of $117 billion in higher taxes over 5 years compared to the President's proposed $41.7 billion. Tax increases under either plan will not result in a lower budget deficit. If history is any guide, tax increases will actually lead to more spending and a higher budget deficit. Since World War II, Congress has spent $1.58 for every dollar it has raised.

Mr. Chairman, neither the President's budget nor the committee budget is acceptable. Neither will produce the desired result—the result required by law by Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. I think the time has come for the Congress and the President to convene a budget summit and negotiate an alternative that will make significant reductions in spending. It is time to put an end to the gamesmanship, the smoke and mirrors, and partisanship and get serious.

I urge my colleagues to reject the committee alternative and force both sides to the bargaining table.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, today I rise in opposition to House Concurrent Resolution 310, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1991. The proposal is fraught with fudged and unrealistic economic assumptions that fail to address honestly deficit reduction. Once again, the Budget Committee has neglected its constitutional and traditional responsibility with regard to budget matters, a responsibility that is greater than that of the President and the Senate.

Article 1, section 7 of the Constitution provides: "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives * * *." While there is no similar constitutional provision as to appropriations bills, traditionally those too have originated in the House.

The Federalist Papers do not explicitly explain the constitutional decision, but it is not hard to divine from them the reason. The Continental Congress did not have the authority to write tax laws under the Articles of Confederation; all it could do under article VIII was levy charges on the State legislatures. Thus in 1787 a controversial feature of the new Constitution was the granting of taxing power to the Federal Government. Hamilton, Jay, and Madison devote seven of their Federalist Papers to it.

Small wonder then that the power to initiate such legislation was granted to the legislative House whose Members were under "the restraint of frequent elections * * * They will be compelled to anticipate the moment when their power is to cease, when their exercise of it is to be reviewed, and when they must descend to the level from which they were raised; there forever to remain unless the faithful discharge of their trust shall have established their title to a renewal of it." (Federalist Paper No. 56.)

As we can see, the House, and the Budget Committee in particular, have both a constitutional and traditional responsibility with regard to budgetary matters, a responsibility that is far greater than that of the President and the Senate. Disappointingly, after criticizing the President's budget for using economic assumptions that are overly optimistic, the Budget Committee adopted a resolution that contrives the identical, overly optimistic, assumptions. Although the budget resolution assumes total deficit reduction of $36.9 billion, more than $14 billion, or 39 percent, is widely considered to be false and unattainable. The Budget Committee should not use phony economic assumptions even if the President did, and certainly not when the White House has now repudiated them.

Unfortunately, the budget resolution before the House today fails to address honestly and adequately the priority of deficit reduction. The budget resolution does not achieve the fiscal year 1991 Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit target of $64 billion nor does it lead to a balanced budget by fiscal year 1993. It falls almost $20 billion short of the $56 to $60 billion necessary to meet this year's deficit target.

Any office holder may sympathize with the desire to avoid unpopular actions, but surrendering the House's constitutional and traditional prerogatives is far too high a price to pay. The Budget Committee has abdicated its fiscal responsibility, and the House must not follow suit. Let us reverse that course to craft a responsible budget that speaks to the needs of the American people and works not only to reduce, but eliminate, our deficit.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in reluctant support for the budget resolution that has been brought to the floor by our colleagues on the Budget Committee. I commend the committee for crafting a budget that represents an enormous improvement over the alternative budget submitted by President Bush. As a Member who is extremely concerned that we move in the direction of meaningful budget deficit reduction while at the same time enhancing the priorities of our elderly, veterans, and rural Americans, there can be no doubt that the Budget Committee's proposal is vastly superior to the White House proposal.

The committee proposal before us today includes a 5-year budget reconciliation, thereby lessening what has been the past temptation to include provisions in budget reconciliation that save money in the first year but actually add to the deficit in the outyears. The Social Security Trust Fund has been excluded from the calculation of the budget deficit, a move which is essential in order to protect the integrity of the Social Security system.

The gradual shift in defense spending that has been proposed will allow us to gauge international developments while investing in America's future through increased budget assistance for education, housing, law enforcement, research, Head Start, and transportation infrastructure improvements. Far better funding for veterans and for community development is provided for in this budget.

There are two areas, however, where I continue to have special concerns. The committee proposes an $800-million reduction for agricultural programs for fiscal 1991 and $8.6 billion in budget reductions over the next 5 years. This is certainly better than the other alternative I face: President Bush's budget would provide $1.5 billion less than the committee budget for 1991 alone. Nonetheless, I do not believe that any cuts in the ag budget, particularly in the area of crop price supports, is justifiable. Our farmers would rather prosper from good market prices than from Government support, but so long as the policy of this Government is to drive down the market price of grain, we have a corresponding obligation to provide for a decent level of income protection for family farmers. I believe that higher nonrecourse loan rates would result in better market prices and less reliance on Government payments;, however, if that goal cannot be accomplished, fundamental fairness requires that target price levels be raised to cover increasing costs of production for family farmers. While the committee's cuts in ag spending are far preferable than President Bush's proposal, they do make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for those of us on the House Agriculture Committee to craft a 1990 farm bill which adequately protects farm income.

My second particular concern lies in the area of Medicare funding. The committee proposal will result in the increases in Medicare spending falling about $1.7 billion short of covering inflation. This is certainly superior to the Bush administration's proposal for a $5.5-billion shortfall, but it still should be recognized as less than adequate.

I appreciate that this budget resolution is merely a starting point, and that numerous changes will be made as the budget progresses through the Senate and perhaps through a budget summit conference with the White House. There is much to applaud in this budget, but there also remain serious deficiencies. I am today supporting the committee budget as the clearly superior alternative of the choices before me, but I will continue to work with our colleagues, Republican and Democrat, to better perfect a budget which significantly reduces the Federal deficit while enhancing the interests of family farmers and Medicare providers.

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to state that I will be voting for the Budget Committee's fiscal year 1991 budget resolution and against the Congressional Black Caucus budget.

While there are many good things contained in the CBC budget, our No. 1 priority is dealing with the Federal budget deficit plaguing our Nation's economy. The CBC transfers cuts in the defense budget and increases in Federal revenues to support increased domestic spending. I concur with several of these reductions, given a diminished Soviet threat and an increased allied ability to shoulder more mutual defense costs. Nonmilitary programs have faced more than their fair share of budget slashing during the past decade, so I would prefer to see the budgets for many of these valuable human service programs sustained. But the use of Social Security trust funds to support the deficit projections in the CBC budget—as well as in the committee's proposal—makes the deficit look lower than it really is. It's time to put our fiscal affairs back on track. We need real deficit reduction as a priority.

The Budget Committee package is certainly more realistic than President Bush's proposal. The recommendations reverse the last 10 years of domestic spending reductions and reorder budget priorities to reflect the changing world situation.

Nevertheless, I think that there could be a better balance in the committee budget package in meeting the legitimate needs of society. It especially falls short in agriculture. Less than 1 percent of the budget is devoted to support our family farmers. I will work in the weeks and months ahead, both during the reconciliation process and the farm bill negotiations, to transfer funding to get this up to 1 percent. At that level, we would be able to provide decent price supports for farmers. That's critical to the future of family farming.

Additionally, the Budget Committee recommendations and the substitutes that have been offered during the fiscal year 1991 budget debate fudge on the question of Social Security surpluses. All of these budget proposals use Social Security trust fund savings to help reduce the Federal budget. These proposed budget packages may claim to bring the Federal deficit within the $64 billion Gramm-Rudman budget deficit target, but the reality of the situation is much different. Using the Social Security trust funds to offset the true budget deficit is simply budget gimmickry.

I intend to continue pushing for my proposal to move the Social Security trust funds off-budget completely and irrevocably during the budget reconciliation debate. This illusion must be halted.

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, I had intended to support the President's budget. I felt that although it has more than its share of inadequacies, the Bush budget was a position from which to start. Furthermore, the Chief Executive of our country must become more involved—have a piece of his skin in the process—if we are to make serious progress toward developing a realistic budget for fiscal year 1991. So supporting the President and bringing the administration positively into the negotiations seemed to move us as a nation in the right direction.

Evidently, this is not to be. I cannot control the legislative agenda so I will have to vote as I see best on the proposals which are offered.

Suffice it to say that a so-called summit of heavy-hitting leaders of both Houses and the administration is a must, and for only one reason. To date, any budget proposal which has been dished up for us to analyze falls far short of the numbers required to meet the law Congress passed years ago—not only to discipline itself, but to eliminate the deficit.

The hour has come. The estimates and actual deficit figures are so far apart today that no amount of jiggling and sharp pencil work will do any longer. We are where we had not wanted to be, but where we have been headed for too long.

So as one small voice in the House Chamber let me say this: No matter what budget gets the most votes at the end of today, the heavy work by our leaders is still to come—and I stand ready to help in any way I am able to put this process on the right track and achieve a budget which will let us sleep better at night.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the House budget resolution. I compliment the chairman, LEON PANETTA, for the long and hard work that he has put in to get us here today. He went the last mile to produce a budget which addresses urgent unmet needs at home and recognizes the dynamic changes occurring around the world. It rejects the "define the problem, smother them with platitudes, but offer no resources" approach taken by the administration. It's a good budget that starts us down the path of reshaping the future of our country, and it deserves our support.

The President's defense budget falls far short of being a credible plan and appears to be nothing more than a negotiating position. Its negligible cuts do not reflect the reality taking place in the Soviet Union and the rest of Eastern Europe—economic and political events have passed it by.

The House budget offers a more realistic defense plan for meeting our Nation's national security needs and the dramatic changes taking place around the world. It reduces defense spending by 25 percent in real terms over the next 5 years. Senator NUNN, one of the most respected spokesmen in the Congress on defense matters, has said that our funding levels for defense fall "within the range of responsibility."

I also strongly support the generous funding increases for education, health, and science research, child care, and the environment in the House budget. I am hopeful that the increases provided for these critical programs are only the beginning of what will be a long-term investment in the human and natural resources of our country.

In the few minutes that I have, I would like to spend most of it on the international affairs component of the budget—specifically on why the House budget for foreign aid is significantly better than the administration's request.

Since 1985, U.S. foreign aid spending has declined by over $4 billion, from $19 billion to just under $15 billion—in real terms by almost a third. The poorest regions of the world, principally Africa, have seen drastic declines in United States assistance. After decades of clear world leadership, the United States has now fallen behind other developed countries in foreign aid spending. The Japanese and West Germans, among others, have surpassed us in terms of development aid as a percentage of GNP—at the expense of our political and economic influence worldwide. The Japanese have become the largest aid donors in a number of key African countries, specifically Kenya, Nigeria, Zambia, and Ghana.

The administration's fiscal year 1991 budget does little to reverse these trends, or to seize the historic moment in our Nation's foreign affairs. While the administration has requested a significant increase overall for the funding of international affairs, the bulk of this increase would go for payment of U.N. arrearages and rebuilding the Moscow Embassy—programs which have nothing to do with our foreign assistance programs.

Of the administration's overall total request, $15.4 billion has been requested for direct foreign aid. This, in my judgment, is woefully inadequate considering the increasing needs worldwide. For instance, only $300 million has been requested for aid to Eastern Europe—no more than will have been spent in direct aid in fiscal year 1990. Surely, the transformation of communism to capitalism and totalitarianism to democracy is worthy of more American resources.

The House budget resolution does recognize the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe, as well as other unprecedented worldwide demands and provides sufficient resources to address them. It reverses declining foreign aid budgets of recent years and rejects the "forsake our old friends for our new friends" approach originally advanced by Senator DOLE to cut accounts within the existing foreign aid budget to fund increasing demands around the world.

For Eastern Europe, the budget provides $550 million in new direct aid and credits. The new direct aid portion includes funding for development assistance, economic support funds, and funds for the startup of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. The package also provides $125 million in new direct loans and $125 million in new guaranteed loans which will help U.S. firms more effectively compete for market share in the emerging markets of Eastern Europe.

The Eastern European package demonstrates that American foreign assistance in the nineties will go beyond promoting democracy and stability in the world. It will be used as a strategic policy tool by the Federal Government to assist U.S. firms in their effort to gain markets in the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe and around the world. Western European and Pacific Rim countries have been providing enormous resources to businesses in their countries for years. The United States must be engaged in the world if we are to compete with them economically.

The budget also provides for major new initiatives in Africa, $250 million; the Caribbean, $150 million; and Nicaragua, $200 million. It fully funds all commitments to the Philippines. The resolution also provides for a $220 million counternarcotics initiative for the Andes countries, and boosts refugee funding by $41 million. Finally, it makes no reduction in the level of aid for Israel and Egypt, and provides for $400 million in credit authority for housing loans guarantees for Israel.

Mr. Chairman, we must change our notion of national security for the decade ahead. The events of the past 10 years, and particularly of 1989, provide historic opportunities to foster freedom, peace, and political stability in a dramatically changing world. The committee's budget assumes vital assistance increases to the poorest regions of the world, and to fragile democracies. It targets the root economic causes of international conflict to make our post cold-war world more stable and secure.

In our $5 trillion economy, I believe that the United States, in this historic moment, can and must provide substantially more in foreign aid than we have done in past years. This budget does so in the context of obvious fiscal constraints, and I strongly urge my colleagues to support its adoption.

Mr. BRENNAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of House Concurrent Resolution 310, the House budget resolution. I want to commend Chairman PANETTA and my colleagues on the House Budget Committee for their efforts to bring this measure to the floor.

This budget plan supports a number of domestic initiatives that make a difference in the lives of many Americans. The plan expands Head Start, provides increased support for basic education programs, housing assistance, AIDS research, and veterans health care. This budget plans for expanded Medicaid coverage for pregnant women and infants, our frail elderly as well as our mentally retarded citizens, and provides for full cost-of-living adjustments for Federal and military retirees.

The Budget Committee's proposal fully supports environmental quality by adequately funding the important Superfund Program. The resolution makes room to assist in the adjustment of those citizens displaced by international economic competition and the change from a cold war to a peacetime economy. This budget addresses the infrastructural needs of our country that have suffered for the past decade. Finally, as a member of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control I am pleased to support the solid commitment made by the Budget Committee to law enforcement, treatment, and education programs designed to fight the war against illegal drugs and the horrors of addiction that it creates.

This budget resolution presents a realistic 5-year plan for our Nation's defense. With the changing dynamics of the world scene, it is becoming clear that soon the productivity of our work force will say more about our role in the world than the size of our Army. This budget takes the lead in transforming our economy from one meant to fight the cold war to one designed to meet the challenges of the international marketplace. This budget plan does not take a meatax approach to our Nation's military, but rather seeks savings in future years when expensive and dubious weapons programs, such as the B–2 bomber, are terminated. Clearly the changes we have witnessed over the past year indicate a decline in the threat to our Nation and therefore spending can be reduced proportionately.

Mr. Chairman, this budget is certainly not perfect, but it offers leadership where there has been none. In my 3 years in this body I have yet to see real Presidential leadership in perhaps the greatest crisis facing this Nation—the budget deficit. Last year President Bush failed to propose a budget blueprint for meaningful deficit reduction. This year the President again fails to offer the Nation leadership in this important issue. We need to have purposeful dialog between the President and Congress on a course for deficit reduction.

This budget could be altered, but it is an honest proposal. It does not seek radical cuts in spending but rather a balanced approach to reducing the deficit along with reinvesting in America to meet many long-neglected needs. I look forward to when Congress can produce a budget without accounting gimmicks, without the use of trust funds, and without the threat of mindless across-the-board budget cuts hanging over its head.

This budget will initiate a course for curbing our enormous Federal deficit. We must return our country to fiscal sanity. This Nation has too many needs and too many challenges to be left adrift without long-term budget planning. I look forward to continued dialog to achieve budget savings and urge my colleagues to join me in support of the budget resolution.

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman. I rise in support of the budget resolution put forth by the House Budget Committee.

This is a comprehensive, fiscally responsible package fashioned to maintain a strong national security, eliminate the budget deficit, increase national savings and private investment. I believe it will move our country toward fiscal responsibility in a timely manner. In order to accomplish these goals, the Congress and the administration will need to work together to make tough choices and I am confident that we will be able to do so. Through hard work and bipartisanship we can eliminate budget deficits and strengthen our economic leadership in the world. I view the package before us today as a good starting point toward meeting those objectives.

I have always believed that the United States must do what is necessary to guarantee its security. Events of the past 6 months have dramatically transformed the threat confronting the United States. For example, 1 year ago intelligence analysts and defense planners assumed that the United States and its NATO allies would have only 10 days warning time in advance of a Soviet attack. Today those intelligence estimates have been revised to 30 to 44 days. CIA Director William Webster has also testified that the Warsaw Pact is, for all intents and purposes, defunct and that the Soviets could not rely on assistance from their Eastern allies in an attack against the West.

Given these changes in the threat, it is appropriate to spend less on a defense. However, we must resist the temptation to slash haphazardly at the defense budget simply because it makes an inviting target. A rational, planned drawdown in the context of an integrated security policy must guide our action on defense spending cuts.

For fiscal year 1991, the resolution calls for approximately $36 billion in net deficit reduction, thereby meeting the Gramm-Rudman deficit limit of $64 billion for fiscal year 1991. It seeks to balance the Federal budget by the year 1995 without using the Social Security surplus to mask the true size of the deficit. This is particularly important because I have supported efforts for some time to see that Federal budget estimates are calculated as accurately as possible. This resolution also includes instructions directing various committees to report legislation producing significant savings in each of the next 5 years, in order to help ensure that this year's deficit reduction legislation focuses on permanent savings rather than temporary solutions.

The American people are deeply concerned over the Federal budget deficit and they want decisive action. Enactment of this resolution will chart a clear course for further, substantive deficit reduction while meeting the pressing needs which exist for such national priorities as quality education, affordable housing, a clean environment, health care, economic development, job creation, the war against drugs, and seeing that our senior citizens receive the full benefits they have worked so hard for all their lives.

Throughout my years in the Congress I have worked to encourage restraint in the growth of Federal spending and I have pushed for realistic and responsible Federal budgets. I believe this legislation meets that criteria.

I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting the passage of House Concurrent Resolution 310.

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Chairman, I would like to take this opportunity to voice my support for the congressional budget resolution for fiscal year 1991. I would also like to commend Chairman PANETTA and the Budget Committee members for their tremendous work in bringing this resolution to the floor.

This year's budget resolution goes a long way in laying out a blueprint for this country's future. With the changing nature of the world around us, it is important to realize that priorities of yesterday can no longer be the priorities of today. We must begin to focus on gradually converting our economy from a defense-based economy to a peace-based economy. Education, health care, housing, job training, antidrug programs, safe infrastructure, clean air and water, and space and science research must be the priorities of the future. We simply do not need and cannot afford the strategic defense initiative, the B–2 bomber, or any other costly and extravagant program.

The budget resolution—through a 5-year budget plan—will direct one-half of defense cuts to domestic priorities and the other half will go toward reducing the overall budget deficit. On the revenue side, the budget resolution adopts exactly the same numbers as President Bush's budget by assuming $13.9 billion in revenues. Instead of relying on the overly optimistic economic assumptions that are used in the President's budget, the budget resolution relies on Congressional Budget Office economic statistics which are more realistic. And in another victory for truth in budgeting, the Social Security trust fund is excluded from deficit calculations so that by 1995 a balanced budget is achieved without counting the Social Security trust fund surpluses.

Mr. Chairman, what we have here is a democratic budget which keeps its promises to the American public. The President in his budget proposed deep cuts in Medicare of $5.5 billion, no cost-of-living adjustments [COLA's] for Federal and military retirees, cuts in subsidized housing, and a decrease in infrastructure repair funds. We cannot tolerate a budget that neglects the basic needs of the average American. The congressional budget resolution, on the other hand, increases funding for education programs five times more than the President's budget, trims Medicare payments to physicians, grants full COLA's to Federal and military retirees, and increases funding for infrastructure repair.

This budget resolution represents a solid first step in achieving long-term deficit reduction while also gradually shifting resources from defense to high-priority domestic programs. There is no doubt that we have many difficult choices and decisions ahead of us. Our economic situation is not at all rosy and it requires leadership and consensus from both the administration and the Congress. I support this budget resolution as a way of beginning the many steps it will take to attain a better America.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the budget resolutions before us today and the reordering of national priorities which it represents.

Our task today is to choose a budget plan which reflects our national values and priorities. Budget choices go to the heart of our responsibility as legislators. It is the time when we put the flesh and bones on the vision we have for American's future. The decisions we make aren't easy, and by their nature they aren't supposed to be. Making tough decisions about which programs to cut and what programs to increase is what we come here for.

This year the choices we make are even more important than in previous years. The crumbling of the Berlin Wall, the blooming of democracy in Eastern Europe, and the lessening of tensions between the superpowers are remarkable changes which have significant implications for our Nation. These changes have given us an opportunity to reduce defense spending and make investments in the important domestic programs in the areas of housing, education, child care, and the war on drugs.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard a lot of debate about the peace dividend in recent months. We argue among ourselves about what the peace dividend is, when we will get it, and what we are going to do with it when we get it. Well, the peace dividend just doesn't happen, Congress must make it happen. The committee budget before us today is a good start on the process, although the substantial yet prudent cuts in defense which I support will not occur for several years.

Under the committee resolution, defense spending for fiscal year 1991 would be cut by $32.8 billion in budget authority and $11.5 billion in outlays below the baseline level that represents the amounts needed to keep pace with inflation. Compared to the spending levels for fiscal year 1990, with no adjustment for inflation, budget authority would be reduced by $18.6 billion in authority and $1.3 billion in outlays.

Mr. Chairman, I sincerely congratulate Chairman PANETTA and the members of the Budget Committee for their efforts in reporting these defense spending reductions to the House. They represent the beginning of what may prove to be the first substantial reductions in defense spending since the unprecedented $2 trillion defense buildup during the Reagan-Bush administration between 1981 and 1989.

While actual outlays would be reduced only modestly during the next fiscal year, by fiscal year 1995 outlay would be more substantial. This budget takes a much more realistic look at our strategic and conventional defense requirements over the next several years.

Recently, Defense Secretary Cheney has proposed an additional round of new cuts in defense spending. This "Johnny-come-lately" approach is really a subterfuge to conceal the implausibility of basically continuing to support a cold war strategy in a vastly different era. While the Berlin Wall has crumbled and dictators have tumbled, the Bush administration's defense spending blueprint resembles the nervous cat who constantly chases his shadow.

Over the next 5 years, the committee budget shifts over $100 billion from military spending to domestic and international programs. Cuts proposed by the Bush administration in child nutrition, mass transit, the community services block grant, and housing are rejected. In addition, the administration's plan to freeze the cost-of-living adjustment for military and civilian retirees is rejected.

The budget resolution makes major investments in America's future by funding programs which will give us true national security: job training, infrastructure, the war on drugs, and health care. Funding for compensatory education, Pell grants, and worker retraining will be increased. In addition, funds have been included to accommodate the recently passed comprehensive child care bill. I am also pleased that funding for housing programs is increased.

The committee budget is more compassionate in addressing America's health care needs than the administration's plan. It rejects the $3.5 billion in Medicare cuts and it provides significant funding for Medicaid Programs to serve pregnant women and infants in poverty. The resolution provides $8.65 billion for the National Institutes for Health, a full $750 billion over the President's plan. Finally, the plan provides an increase of $1 billion over current spending for veteran's medical care to support an additional 2,837 full-time medical personnel.

The budget before us today is not just a good plan because of the priorities it sets, it also is fiscally sound. The budget meets targets set by the deficit reduction law and achieves a balanced budget by fiscal year 1993. In addition, the budget balances the budget for the first time without including the Social Security trust fund in the calculations of the Nation's budget deficit. The long-term effects of a budget practice that allows for the misuse of the Social Security trust fund should be of deep concern to everyone. Slowly, but surely, we are jeopardizing the financial integrity of our most successful and most efficiently funded social program. As long as we continue to base deficit reduction targets upon figures artificially lowered with the surpluses in the trust fund, we can never truthfully address our serious deficit problem.

While I am voting for the committee budget resolution, I also am supporting the Congressional Black Caucus quality of life budget. The caucus has produced an outstanding amendment which really puts urgent priorities into perspective. This is especially true with respect to defense spending. Indeed, the proposed cuts for programs such as the strategic defense initiatives, the MX missile, nuclear submarines, and the B–2 bomber are justifiable. The qualified of life budget makes even greater investments in important domestic programs and addresses real human needs.

Mr. Chairman, we must begin to address the human deficit which has been neglected over the past 10 years. I urge my colleagues to support both the quality of life amendment and the committee budget resolution to make strides toward that goal of reducing both the fiscal deficit and human deficit.

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Chairman, I commend the chairman and the Budget Committee for their diligence and commitment to formulating a responsible and fair budget resolution which reflects the dramatic changes internationally and responds to important human and social needs at home.

No one can deny that a new reality exists in world affairs. These changes must be reflected in our Nation's budget priorities. In particular, it simply cannot be argued that military spending should remain at the extraordinarily high levels of the Reagan years.

The budget presented by the committee, in sharp contrast to that of the administration, recognizes that military spending can come down significantly in the next several years without compromising our national security. Further, the savings from this reduction in defense spending must be applied to a combination of deficit reduction and new investments in the areas of health care, education, infrastructure, job training, and other important areas of social spending.

The fundamental principles which govern the President's approach to budgeting are flawed. This administration continues to believe that it can achieve a more balanced budget without cutting defense spending and without raising any new revenue. By this logic, all spending reductions would come from cutting social programs, many of which were slashed by the Reagan administration.

The Democratic budget realizes the first installment of the much-discussed peace dividend. While some have argued that the peace dividend does not exist, this budget shows that it does in fact exist, and further, illustrates that it exists to the extent that policymakers have the will to cut military spending.

Many of us in Congress believe that defense spending can be cut further in the short run than it has been in the committee budget. I am one of those Members. A large peace dividend is not only possible, it is a crucial component of any effort to reindustrialize our economy. Major investments in human and capital resources will not be possible without deeper cuts in military spending. I commend the long-range cuts in military spending represented in the committee budget, however, I do believe it would be possible to responsibly cut more sooner.

Despite this, the committee budget contains several important new spending initiatives. This budget increases aid to education by $2.5 billion. It increases funds for subsidized housing programs. It includes new funding for child care. It increases funding for antidrug abuse programs by $1.5 billion. Further, the budget includes significant increases for Head Start, food stamps, environmental programs, and Medicaid. Finally, this budget allows for increases of over $700 million for AIDS research and treatment programs, with $104 million of that increase targeted for pediatric AIDS Programs.

I would like to commend Chairman Panetta for including in his budget substantial increases in a variety of programs that are to be targeted for the purposes of helping communities and individuals who will be affected by cutbacks in defense programs. I testified before the budget Committee earlier this year and talked at that time about the need for money to begin a program of economic conversion and adjustment. I am grateful to Chairman Panetta for recognizing this need and including funding for this purpose in this budget.

This budget includes increases in worker dislocation programs, the community development block grant program [CDBG], the Economic Development Administration [EDA], rural development programs, and civilian high technology transfer programs. These increases will help communities plan for the transition from military oriented economies to civilian ones.

No matter what defense spending number is agreed to today, it is clear that billions of defense dollars will not be spent that many workers and communities have anticipated. In future years, this need will increase. I have sponsored legislation, H.R. 101, the Defense Economic Adjustment Act, which would help alleviate the worker dislocation and economic hardship that will coincide with defense cuts. I am hopeful that legislation of this type will be considered on the House floor in the near future.

Today, I will support the resolution offered by the Budget Committee. In difficult circumstances, this budget represents a new direction. I hope we continue down this path in years to come.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, today we debate the 1991 budget resolution. As a member of both the Budget Committee and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, I would like to address what this budget means for our Nation's transportation system and infrastructure.

AVIATION

Mr. Chairman, our airport and airway systems are now inadequate to handle the demands they face. Airline passenger traffic has increased from 276 million passengers in 1978 to 475 million in 1988. By the year 2000, FAA estimates that traffic will increase to 820 million passengers.

Last year, American air travelers were forced to endure more than 117 million hours of delay. Those delays were not trivial—they cost air travelers and the economy some $5 billion.

We must move ahead with a program to improve airport capacity or face a future of airborne gridlock.

The House budget resolution contains $8.5 billion in budget authority for the four major aviation programs: operations, facilities and equipment, Airport Improvement grants, and research.

The Airport Improvement Program [AIP] is most notable here, for this is the major source of funds for the expansion of existing airports and the construction of new airports to alleviate air traffic congestion and expand capacity. This is the program that will help our air transportation system handle those 820 million passengers 10 years from now.

To his credit, President Bush has proposed an increase in funding for this program—the first such request to come from the White House in 10 years. This is evidence that the administration grasps the serious airport capacity situation we face, and is willing to do something about it. The House budget resolution is identical to the Presdent's request for AIP, but assumes obligations to the full authorized level—an additional $300 million.

Mr. Chairman, we are sitting on a $7.6 billion surplus in the Aviation Trust Fund. This money has been collected over years from airline passengers in the form of a ticket tax. When the tax was enacted, we promised those passengers that their money would go to building airports and improving the national air transportation system to make it easier and safer for them to travel. However, as we allowed that surplus to accumulate and the air transportation system to deteriorate, we have reneged on that promise.

The President and his advisers have come up with a dandy way out of this dilemma: "Let us impose a new tax on the traveling public," they say. "Let us explain to them that it is necessary to maintain and improve the air transport system." In other words, let us again make them the same promise we have broken.

The House Budget Committee recommends we live up to our original promise. Our plan for funding airport improvements and the other aviation functions calls for drawing down that trust fund surplus and eliminating that surplus by 1995. Unlike the administration plan, this will allow us to make the necessary improvements with no new taxes.

HIGHWAYS

Mr. Chairman, we also have an $11 billion surplus in the Highway Trust Fund. We must also live up to our promise and put those dollars to work. The Budget Committee's recommendation would draw down that surplus down to $5 billion—just above the minimum reserve level of $3 billion—over the next 5 years. By contrast, President Bush's budget proposal would allow the surplus to grow to $19 billion in the same period.

The Budget Committee is recommending an obligation ceiling of $13.3 billion for the Federal-aid highway program in 1991, an increase of $1.1 billion over the fiscal year 1990 ceiling. In addition, the committee recommends that ceiling increase to $18.85 billion by 1995. In contrast, the administration would freeze these obligations at $12.0 billion—below the fiscal year 1990 level—for the entire period.

EDA

Mr. Chairman, the Economic Development Administration [EDA] and the Appalachian Regional Commission [ARC] are lifelines of hope to those parts of our Nation most devastated by the economic downturns of the 1980's. These two agencies provide the stimuli that generate new industry where the factories have closed, and new jobs where the mines have gone silent.

The administration's budgets of the past 10 years have consistently eliminated funding for these two programs. This year is no exception. However, the House budget resolution keeps hope alive by proposing $300 million for EDA and another $154 million for ARC.

Mr. Chairman, this budget resolution is an investment in our future. We face a world of increasing international competition. If we are to compete with Europe and the Far East, we must maintain and improve our transportation system and infrastructure.

Unfortunately, Mr. Chairman, we are falling badly behind. Our country ranks 55th in the world in capital investment. Japan spends five times as much as we do on its infrastructure needs.

Sixty percent of our highways and 41 percent of our bridges are badly in need of repair.

Traffic congestion has increased over 50 percent in the last 10 years. Here in Washington and other major urban areas, we are wasting 2 billion hours of time each year due to traffic tieups. In the next 10 years traffic delays will cost us $50 billion in lost wages and wasted fuel.

Many of our urban water systems are over 100 years old and are wasting precious water as they wait to be replaced.

The last major airport built in this country is 16 years old, and new ones planned for Denver, Chicago, and elsewhere are several years from reality.

Mr. Chairman, San Francisco's longshoreman-philosopher Eric Hoffer said "the success of a modern society is likely to be reflected in the quality of its maintenance."

Show Hoffer a failed political system and he'll show you failed water systems, clogged sewers, and congested highways and airways.

Let us not allow Hoffer's brilliant insight to become the epitaph for our generation.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the budget resolution proposed by the House Budget Committee.

Under the resolution, programs which have suffered under a decade of neglect—such as Medicaid, WIC, and food stamps—are given a much-needed injection of funding.

On April 16, I met in my home district with the Family Services Committee of the North-Northeast Economic Development task force, who issued recommendations to reduce infant mortality and improve the quality of life for low-income residents in north-northeast Portland.

In Multnomah County each year, nearly 100 babies will die before their first birthday. Twenty percent of the women in north-northeast Portland do not receive adequate prenatal care—that's double the statewide average. The lack of affordable and accessible prenatal care is the primary reason for this tragic situation.

For a country that spends nearly $600 billion annually on health care, it's inexcusable that infants are dying because pregnant women can't get basic medical attention.

Who are these women? According to the report, about half are Hispanic, black or American Indian. One-third have less than a seventh grade education. Most suffer from poor nutrition, live with fragmented families in crowded living conditions, lack employment opportunities, and have limited transportation.

Prenatal care is one of the best values in health care today. The Institute of Medicine estimates that for every dollar spent on prenatal care, $3.38 is saved on future medical costs.

Just $400 in prenatal care can make the difference between a normal, healthy baby and a baby who needs hundreds of thousands of dollars of medical care. Good prenatal care reduces the number of children who will suffer from disabilities such as cerebral palsy, mental retardation, and epilepsy.

This budget resolution provides an increase of $285 million for Medicaid, the Federal/State program which provides medical care to the poor. This increase will extend medical care to 223,000 pregnant women by expanding Medicaid to those with incomes at or below 185 percent of the poverty level.

In addition, 2.5 million poor children ages 6 through 17 who currently lack health insurance will be able to qualify for Medicaid under this budget resolution.

This budget resolution proposes immediate hunger relief for poor families with a $300 million increase to the Food Stamp Program in 1991, followed by a $4.7 billion increase over the next 5 years. As a result of this increase, more hungry children will get the nourishment they need in order to become strong, healthy adults.

In addition, this budget resolution calls for a $150 million increase in 1991 with a $2.25 billion increase over 5 years in WIC, the Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children. The WIC Program is a key program in combating infant mortality and in promoting child health. Often, a pregnant woman's first contact with prenatal health care is in a local WIC clinic.

This budget resolution also provides a $93 million increase in the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health block grant. The number of drug addicted babies born in Oregon has skyrocketed in recent years. Currently, there is a dire need for perinatal substance abuse treatment in Oregon where the waiting lists for such programs can run as high as 4 years.

According to the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality, infants born to women who use illegal drugs while pregnant are much more likely to be born prematurely, have low birthweight, and congenital defects. Many of these babies suffer from painful drug withdrawal and developmental and learning disabilities. Mothers who use drugs during pregnancy also put their babies at greater risk for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome [SIDS].

All of these programs are essential for putting an end to the shameful tragedy of infant mortality in my State and throughout the rest of the Nation. This budget resolution represents a humane and practical expansion of these programs.

These are not the only reasons I am supporting the House Budget Committee's alternative to the budget proposed by President Bush. The committee's budget resolution proposed defense spending that reflects the post-Cold War realities. It also envisions a $444 million increase in funding for veterans' hospital and medical care. This crucial addition will allow the Veterans' Administration to hire another 2,837 full-time medical care personnel, including another 808 nurses and 132 physicians.

I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for the committee resolution.

Ms. LONG. Mr. Chairman, I reluctantly rise in opposition to the budget resolution. There are many good provisions in the measure that I do support in and of themselves. However, the nemesis that continues to haunt bills brought before the House has shown its head in the budget resolution. That nemesis is taxes.

As the Congress continues to consider legislation which includes new calls for taxes, it reminds me of the anecdote of the Member of Congress who said during the course of a speech, "And now people, I want to tax your memory." Another Member of Congress who was present muttered, "Good heavens, why haven't we thought of that before?"

The budget resolution includes a provision calling upon the Committee on Ways and Means to report legislation to raise $13.9 billion in revenues in the next fiscal year alone. This figure is identical to the revenue increase called for by President Bush. Furthermore, the resolution calls on several House committees to report legislation to raise $1.4 billion in fiscal year 1991 by increasing user fees.

I made a promise to the people of my congressional district not to support new taxes. I intend to keep that promise, and that is why I cannot, in good conscience, support the budget resolution today.

Mr. Chairman, at this time I would like to make another point with regard to new taxes. You know, I was not the first person to make that "no new taxes" promise. Although, sometimes I question whether everyone who made that promise has kept his word. But what really concerns me is that we seem to be slipping taxes into many substantive measures brought before the House which otherwise would receive my support.

For example, I had to oppose the child care legislation. Why did we have to include in the measures—both H.R. 3 and the Stenholm substitute—provisions to increase taxes for families currently using the Earned Income Tax Credit [EITC]? And even more confusing is why we had to turn the 3 percent telephone excise tax, which was due to expire this year, into a permanent tax. I think it is a reasonable question that should be asked: Why include a telephone tax on a child care bill?

But it is not only that one piece of legislation. Last year, when we considered an amendment with regard to the capital gains tax cut, the rule provided for an alternative to be offered by the majority leader, Mr. GEPHARDT. The Gephardt measure was a good solid proposal which included provisions which would assist families with the education of their children and the buying of a home. But, the Gephardt measure also contained a tax increase. Ultimately, I opposed a very thoughtful proposal all due to this seemingly continual effort to include taxes in legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I do not want my colleagues to think that this is a complaint waged against Members of either party. It is a concern that both parties should be alerted to.

For example, the President himself in his budget document calls for increased taxes, and the President himself supported the Stenholm measure on child care which included new taxes.

So, as I stated before, I reluctantly rise in opposition to the budget resolution. The measure crafted by the Budget Committee is a substantive piece of work and I congratulate the Members of that committee. The Budget Committee budget resolution is a far better budget blueprint than the President's proposal. It is also a far better proposal than any of the alternative plans that have been considered during debate on this bill.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of House Concurrent Resolution 310, the fiscal year 1991 budget resolution. Chairman LEON PANETTA and the budget committee should be commended for their outstanding effort in putting together this budget.

The Democratic budget is a responsible budget which addresses the needs and priorities of this Nation. It restores funding for many important domestic programs, many of which were significantly underfunded and in some cases, nearly decimated during the years of the Reagan administration. It also reflects the changing realities we face as we transform from a cold war economy to a peacetime economy, and reasserts our international leadership well into the next century.

While the administration's budgets over the past decade have left behind a legacy of tremendous debt and unmet needs for our society, the Democratic budget responsibly reduces the deficit, identifies clear priorities and provides the funds to meet them. In fact, there could not be a clearer difference in the priorities between Democrats and Republicans than in the budgets that this House will consider today.

For example, unlike the President's budget, the Democratic budget does not merely pay lipservice to the important programs so vital to the Nation and so strongly supported by the American people. Rather than provide rhetoric about education programs, this budget funds them. In fact, the Democratic budget provides over five times the amount of funding for education as President Bush requested.

This budget also rejects the substantial cuts in Medicare called for by President Bush and vehemently opposed by seniors across the country. The $5.2 billion Medicare cut proposed by the president would have been a back-door cut in health care for so many of our seniors dependent on Medicare for their medical care.

This budget is also fair for all of our retirees. Unlike the Bush administration's budget, which undercut some of our retirees by calling for a freeze in the cost-of-living adjustment [COLA] for military and civilian retirees, the Democrats provide a full 4.1-percent COLA for Social Security and Federal and civilian retirees.

The Democrats also reject the President's cuts to our Nation's infrastructure, which had already been substantially neglected during the Reagan administration. In contrast, the Democratic budget provides $1.3 billion over the President's budget for vital highway funding.

House Concurrent Resolution 310 also rejects the massive spending cuts proposed by the administration in such important programs as child nutrition, EPA grants, rural housing loans, Amtrak, mass transit, Community Services Block Grant, housing and juvenile justice.

Instead, the Democratic budget provides for critical investment in several key areas—economic competitiveness an assistance for workers affected by defense changes; programs for children, including Head Start and child care; programs for critical research for the future, including NASA, the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health; health, nutrition and housing programs such as Medicaid, AIDS research, prevention and treatment, Food Stamps, WIC and subsidized and rural housing; antidrug and anticrime programs; restoration of the Nation's infrastructure and preservation of the environment; and, investments in democracy and development abroad, including aid to emerging democracies in Eastern Europe.

Finally, this budget is fiscally responsible in that it meets the Gramm-Rudman deficit target and removes Social Security from the deficit calculation.

The Democrat's budget is an investment in the future. It commits the resources that are necessary to maintain the United States as a world leader well into the next century and provides a clear direction of where we want to take this Nation. We live in a far different world now—one which this Democratic budget correctly reflects. I urge my colleagues to support this budget.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Chairman, I cannot in good conscience support the budget resolution that we have under consideration today. I am not going to vote against it because we have put too much or too little money into defense. I am not going to vote against it because we did or did not include enough money for important social programs.

Today I will be voting against the budget resolution because I think that by approving this budget we are avoiding making tough decisions on the future of our Nation's economic health.

There are a lot of good things in this budget resolution. For example, I think the funding increases for expanding Medicaid, extending Head Start to cover more children and to provide year-round programs, and AIDS research and treatment are all steps in the right direction.

While these funding increases, along with a decreased reliance on defense spending, all bode well for the future of our Nation and our citizens, our economic health will remain in danger unless we take some serious steps toward deficit reduction.

The real Federal budget deficit is now over $200 billion. How can we go home and face our constituents and tell them we are cutting the deficit when $74 billion of these so-called savings are coming from the Social Security trust funds, trust funds that were created so we will be able to pay Social Security benefits to today's work force when they retire.

The public will soon catch on to the games we play to make it appear that we have reached our deficit reduction target. I am sorry to have to vote against the budget resolution today. But I cannot in good faith vote for a budget that does not honestly address this Nation's financial situation.

Mr. COLEMAN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the budget resolution for fiscal year 1991 as reported by the committee. I want to qualify my support for this budget, however, on at least two points. First, I have a serious problem with the vagueness of the revenue targets in this budget. As a member of the Committee on Appropriations, I am very aware that the cuts ordered by sequestration earlier in this fiscal year came out of our hides. The Committee on Appropriations has done its part in keeping spending down to agreed upon levels. We know that we can't control entitlements very effectively. In fact, this budget recognizes that situation—it calls for large savings from entitlement reforms. But the resolution says more broadly that we will ask the authorizing committees of the Congress to find an additional $13.9 billion in new revenues by September 30. It gives us the target, but no ammunition.

The total of $13.9 billion in new revenues is the figure proposed by OMB Director Richard Darman. It is a hollow number. This House does not have the luxury that the President seems to think he has—namely to make speeches saying "read my lips." I have said repeatedly that the Congress is inherently not very good at providing leadership on the broadest policy issues we face as a nation. We are better at solving problems than in offering direction and vision. But we are not getting that leadership from this administration. To a certain degree, we are conspiring with OMB and the White House on the question of taxes. We all know that the reconciliation bill we will vote on later this year will contain new taxes—of course it will.

The second thing that troubles me about this budget is what it proposes to take from Medicare. The resolution is obviously a great improvement on the administration's proposal to cut $5.2 billion in Medicare, but where are we going to find even the $1.7 billion in savings recommended here? Each year for as long as I can remember, we have been raiding Medicare to pay our bills. If what we get in the fall is a package which tightens the screws on the elderly—and which says that they will have to forego eligibility for medicines or specified medical procedures—then I will not be able to support it, no matter how well intentioned the Ways and Means Committee may have been.

Having said this, I still intend to vote for the committee-reported budget. Given the complete lack of any sense of responsibility on the part of the White House and the minority party to produce any meaningful alternatives on our fiscal priorities, this may indeed be the best we can do at this time. I believe in the general emphases this budget offers. I believe that the defense number, while on the low side, puts us in a good position for negotiations with the other body on conference. Unlike the budget submitted by the executive branch, it keeps faith with retirees and veterans by including full cost of living adjustments, or COLA's. I believe it also puts us where we ought to be in rejecting the cuts proposed by President Bush for the Community Development Block Grant Program. I also believe it goes beyond the tentative recommendations made by this administration, as we need to, in providing support for the emerging democracies around the world. This is not a perfect product by any means, but it deserves our support.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM].

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, on many occasions in the last 11 years that I have had the privilege of serving in this body I have stood in the well on budget day and offered substitutes, amendments, differing versions of the budget that is being considered. But today I do not do so. I stand in the well today to urge the support of this House, both sides of the aisle, for the budget that is before us. I do so because it is incumbent upon the House of Representatives to live up to our title, Representatives of the people, and deal with the fiscal responsibilities of this country.

Now, others among us, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH], the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER], the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], have offered substitutes, of which most of us have voted no.

The President offered a budget earlier this year, which he is supposed to do, and we are not even going to get an opportunity to vote upon it, because no one is proposing that we vote on the President's budget. But yet we hear criticism from members of the President's party of the Democratic budget.

Now, it seems to me that it is now time for us to fish or cut bait. If you are going to criticize, you must offer something better. And so far no one has offered anything better than what the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] and the Democrats on the Committee on the Budget have offered. And when one looks at it, it is not that bad.

If you live in rural America, as I do, take a look at what we do for Medicare and what we do for rural hospitals. That one issue alone is a high priority to me in my area.

Now, we can criticize and we can pick and we can choose, and it will all be valid. But I think it is extremely important for us as the House of Representatives at this point in time to make the system work, to set a budget, to pass a budget, and to begin the negotiating process that is going to be so necessary if we are going to deal with the real problem of this century, a fiscal deficit that is much larger than anybody is talking about. But unless we are prepared to stand today and to vote for something, how are we going to explain to our constituencies at home that we are against everything that anybody offered, from the President on down?

Mr. Chairman, I guess I have got about as good a reputation as being against things as anybody else in this body. But I have taken a good hard look this year, and I could not come up with an alternative that I could offer that could get the votes, any more than the President or anyone else. Take a good hard look at the effort of the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA].

Mr. HUCKABY. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. STENHOLM. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. HUCKABY. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] agree that this budget does actually cut more and does close the gap more than any other budget before the House in recent years?

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, exactly. That is exactly the absolute fact of the proposal that we have before us. I commend the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HUCKABY], who serves on the Committee on the Budget, for his work. I know the gentleman was not totally happy. Nobody is going to be totally happy with anything we do. But if you simply vote no, how are you going to explain to those that suggest this is such a failure? Where is the President's budget? Where is it? If we are going to vote on a proposal from the other side of the aisle, where is the proposal? I voted for the Kasich amendment. I voted for the Dannemeyer amendment. Where are the votes for something? Can we run this country by being against everything that comes down the pike? Can we run our country that way? I think the answer is no. Vote for the House Democratic budget today.

□ 1640

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH], the minority whip.

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] just suggested that the only two alternatives here are to vote yes or to somehow have the legislative process come to a halt.

Let me say there are many occasions in this House when saying to a committee you tried hard, you did the best you could, it is not quite good enough, go back to committee and work a little harder is a legitimate thing to say. There are many occasions in this House when we serve the American people far better by being willing to be tough-minded about what is being presented.

When people look at public opinion polls and they see Congress dramatically below the President in approval/disapproval, when people look at 61 percent of the country favoring a limitation on terms for incumbents and say why is that true, they ought to look at today's budget, and they ought to look at the debate which is being established around this budget as though the budget itself did not exist, that this is a press release for a summit. But we have conservatives who get on the Democratic side and say that it does not matter, vote yes because we have to vote yes on something, or liberals saying it does not matter, vote yes, because we have to vote yes for something, but in fact this is a legitimate budget, at least in theory.

What does it do? It offers over three times as much taxes as the President over the next 5 years, over three times as big a tax increase. It offers a substantially bigger welfare state than the President, subtantially bigger. And then magically it cures the problem by declaring the world safe and unilaterally disarming and gutting defense.

This is not a hard budget to arrive at. This is the Dukakis platform. This is the Mondale platform. This is the Carter Presidency. This is the McGovern movement. This is an easy budget for somebody to understand. There is nothing new here.

All one has to do is say boy, I am really mad about Lithuania and I will prove it, I am going to gut the Navy. Or boy, I am really upset with Bush for being too soft on Gorbachev, and I will prove it and unilaterally discharge strategic weapons. Boy, I am going to be really tough with the Russians and send them a really powerful signal, I am going to give their military the biggest gift in cutting defense than they have been able to get in the last 10 years.

What will happen here in the House? It is very simple and it is very straightforward. Member after Member will go back home and say I do not know why Dick Cheney is going to cut our military base, because I am opposed to closing our military base. Or I do not know why Dick Cheney is trying to close down our particular assembly line or our particular factory, because I am opposed to closing that. And, "Oh, do you mean my vote when we set the 302(b)," and I assume the Democrats in the House actually intend to follow this budget, "you mean my vote had a relationship to this? You mean when I voted to gut defense that meant my factory, that meant my military base? Oh, gee, I can't understand why you would think that my vote mattered."

I just want to say to my colleagues it is not going to be that simple. They cannot have it both ways. If we are going to cut defense spending and raise taxes, and have a bigger welfare state, folks are going to begin to figure out that maybe the Congress has an impact on what happens.

Let me carry it a stage further. There are men and women sacrificing today to serve their country. They are all over the world. They are the people who contained the Soviet Empire. They are the people who did so brilliantly in Panama. They are the people who saved the students in Grenada. What are they seeing when they read the various and sundry newspapers that explain to the military personnel? They see the Democrats and Congress once again melting down defense. They see once again that Democrats do not care about what happens to their families, they do not care about what happens to their schools, they do not care about what happens to their future, and so we are capriciously being told today let us vote for a dramatic, radical cut in the budget authority, and then pretend that it does not mean anything.

But all over the world in the next week if this budget passes, young men and women will be making a decision, a decision not to reenlist, a decision not to trust the U.S. Government, a decision not to stay in the services. Why? Because this Congress will have reverted to a policy of weakness, to a policy of radical disarmament, and to a policy of gutting the budget.

So my final word to my friends in the Democratic Party is simply I know you have been told you ought to vote for this to keep the process going, as though we had a process here. I know you have been told it really will not matter because later on something magic will happen.

I just want to suggest when they come back later on and explain why their weapons system ought to be funded, when they come back later on and explain why their military base ought to be kept open, that today's vote is going to be a very, very powerful argument for saying wait a minute, you want a lot less, and maybe you are going to get a lot less, and when you get a lot less do not go home and tell the folks you did not know it was coming because we are trying to tell you today. This budget relates directly to defense spending, and defense spending relates directly to all of those particular things that you claim you want but you do not want to vote for.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HEFNER].

Mr. HEFNER. Mr. Chairman, I have served for 6 years on the Budget Committee and I have been around here during the last administration and 2 years of this administration, and to my knowledge there are about 35 votes or so that have been cast in 10 years for the administration's budget.

If Members do not like this budget, where is their budget? At least this is something. It talks about Medicare and it talks about a lot of other things.

You have offered nothing except a lecture to this House, to some of the Members who have been here as long as you have, Mr. Minority Leader.

And I will go home and defend this budget, just as I did for 10 straight years, the Democratic budget. If you have something better, you still have time, and nobody on this side will object to a unanimous consent request for you to offer the administration's budget.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Chairman, I just want to say that the gentleman from North Carolina has made an honorable statement, and I have no problem with it. I think any Member who wants to go home and say yes, I voted for this budget; yes, I understood it had three times as much taxes as Bush; and yes, I understood it cut defense and I voted for it because in my judgment this was the best we could do. I think that is an honorable position, and I am glad the gentleman said it.

Mr. HEFNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. HEFNER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has offered nothing, absolutely, and you cannot beat something with nothing. You have offered nothing. Do you have a budget? You have a budget that you will not offer, and we will give you unanimous consent to offer it.

Mr. GINGRICH. I will reclaim my time to say to the gentleman very simply, as anyone knows who has been reading the newspapers, the budget the President sent up in January is in fact in the process of changing. It would have been ludicrous, given what Secretary Cheney said last week, to have brought that budget to the floor in its current form, and none of the Members believe that the numbers in January are the numbers that will come to the floor today.

I am quite comfortable with our position. We do not run the House, we do not set the legislative agenda, and it is the Democratic Party's job to bring it to the floor.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 4½ minutes.

Mr. COLEMAN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PANETTA. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. COLEMAN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, just a moment ago we were all treated to a statement by the minority whip that the Democratic budget has three times the amount of taxes as George Bush's budget. Three times zero is zero, because we understood the read-my-lips President did not have any taxes. So three times that zero that the President claims to have must be no taxes.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, we arrive at the conclusion of the debate on the budget a little faster than anyone would have hoped, very frankly, because we did provide a rule in which the President's budget was to be offered, and it would have permitted a 2-hour debate on the President's budget and comparisons to the committee budget. But neither the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] nor any other Republican in the leadership was willing to offer the President's budget.

But perhaps the absence of the President's budget speaks louder than even offering the President's budget and having a vote on the President's budget. The failure even to offer the President's budget makes clear that the President offers no choices that are acceptable to either a majority of Democrats or a majority of Republicans.

□ 1650

The fact is that the test of a budget is not what it says it does nor even its author. It is whether or not you get a majority of votes on the floor of the House and in the Congress. That is the ultimate test of the success or failure of any budget.

According to that test, the President's budget is a failure. The failure to offer the budget by the President also makes clear how tough it is to develop a budget that balances the priorities, that recognizes that we have to provide new directions for this country and that tries to achieve a majority vote on the floor of the House.

Ask the Democrats on the Committee on the Budget what 4 weeks of agonizing we had to go through in order to develop a budget resolution and bring it to the floor. Ask BILL FRENZEL and the Republicans who tried to develop options and now offer nothing what it means to try to develop that kind of balanced approach.

The fact is there are clear choices, recognizing the fact that there is no agreement between the White House and the Congress. The fact is that we are not going to force a freeze on cost-of-living indexes or retirees, military retirees, veterans, or civil servants, the way the President's budget calls for because our budget recognizes the equity of providing a full cost-of-living adjustment to those retirees. We are not going to cut the cost-of-living pay adjustment of our military personnel or our civil servants, as recommended by the President's budget, because we think they are entitled to full pay for the duty that they perform.

We are not going to cut deeply into Medicare, as the President's budget recommended, a $5.2 billion cut in Medicare. We are not going to cut deeply into the farm programs the way the President's budget recommended, or on child nutrition.

We are not going to take the approach, as was done during the 1980's, of bleeding the domestic programs in order to pay for increases in defense. That must end. That is what our budget does.

The President's budget does not recognize those realities. The committee budget does.

Finally, the failure to offer the President's budget on this floor shows how important it is that the House not run from its responsibility to govern, the way the minority has by not offering the President's budget.

I recognize that some prefer to make no choice at all. I recognize that there are some who would rather have a summit make that decision, or have a budget produced by immaculate conception so they do not have to have any responsibility for what goes into a budget. I recognize that. Because these decisions are tough.

But remember that last year, when we did the summit, there were many here who said, "We don't want those decisions made by a summit. We want to make those decisions." That is essentially what we have done here. We have made the decisions.

We have the opportunity now to make the choices. To govern is to choose, not to cop out.

The budget here provides for a transition from a Cold War economy to a peacetime economy, and that is what we need to do for the future. I ask you to exert that leadership for the future.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PANETTA. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RUSSO].

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the reason the Republicans will not offer the President's budget—and they have the only opportunity to do that because the rule grants it to only them and not to the Democrats—is because they raised defense spending $7 billion and they cut Medicare programs $5.5 billion and they cannot take the heat of the vote in clear daylight. That is why they will not offer the budget of the President.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield my undistinguished self 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, we on this side do not want a fist fight with anybody today. We have tried through the exercise of comity and good judgment and courtesy to help in the process, to not slow it up at any point. We recognize that what we do today is what I would call the quarter finals. We do not get to the finals until we get to the summit where the decisions are made jointly. No matter how much this House would like to exercise its own will, it is not going to be able to do that.

And for those who are sorry that they do not have a chance to vote for or against the President's budget, I must take full responsibility for that.

Last week we found out, had finally confirmed to us, that the economic conditions have outrun both the Panetta budget, which uses the President's assumptions, and the President's budget by a small factor of 20 billions of dollars. So we are looking at a deficit reduction requirement or a sequester probability not of $36 billion but perhaps a figure in the mid-50's.

With that, it seemed to me pretty ridiculous to allow Members to delude themselves into thinking that they could get away with the minimum sacrifice called for under either of those budgets and still fulfill the requirements of Gramm-Rudman.

Therefore, I determined not to offer this budget.

Am I a sissy? Maybe.

I offered the Bush budget in committee. Our committee members were not afraid to vote on it. I might also suggest that I almost offered the Rostenkowski budget and most of the committee members looked a little uncomfortable. But I did not.

But it is going to require a sacrifice in those proportions.

We are going to have to stop eating cream puffs and begin biting bullets if we are going to get anywhere.

On the Republican side we have tried for summitry since February. We believe that that is where the final judgments are going to be made, and we expect them to be made then.

We agree that political and economic events have outrun both of these budgets, and we believe that we can only rationally decide this game at the summit with the President, with Members of both Houses making some kind of agreement.

Therefore, we believe that this debate is irrelevant and that it is somewhat counterproductive in that it is going to establish the basis for the 302's that are going to be voted out of our appropriations committee which are likely to get us all in trouble because the military numbers are going to be lower than the final agreements, and all of the other numbers, with the possible exception of space and science, are going to be higher than we are going to be able to agree on at the summit.

So I think we are in some respects perhaps not using our time well here.

Now if the Democratic leadership insists on passing its budget, God bless them. It is the law that they should do it, and that is their business.

If we do not, without pouring any unnecessary ashes on that budget, choose to join them, I think they should respect that too.

Somebody over there said leadership requires a vote on the Bush budget. In our judgment, leadership requires meeting with the President 2 months ago when we should have begun the process so that we could get somewhere.

Now with respect to the Panetta budget, I do not want to heap any trash upon it. The committee worked hard and the chairman worked hard, and they tried to deliver a budget. It is not our cup of tea. I think the whole world should know that. We do not believe in raising over 5 years three times as much tax money as the President suggested. We do not believe in cutting the military quite as vigorously as the Democrats want to.

We do not believe in increasing domestic discretionary spending, particularly when you call it new spending but it is increased spending on old programs.

Finally, I must classify the budget as what I would call an undisciplined Democratic budget. It is one that raises taxes, it raises domestic spending. So if you believe that America is under-taxed, you should vote for the Panetta budget. If you believe that we are underspent, vote for the Panetta budget. If on the other hand you think we ought to be going to the summit to make some rational judgments jointly, then I think, with me, you will want to vote against it.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the distinguished Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY].

□ 1700

Mr. FOLEY. The Speaker, having listened to this debate, I share, I think, the frustration of some of the Members, perhaps on both sides of the aisle.

We had expected, indeed it was provided in the rule, that there would be an opportunity to debate and vote on the President's budget. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] a man I admire as much as any Member I have served with, and whose integrity, ability, and commitment to this House are respected by all Members, has just spoken to explain the circumstances by which the President's budget is not being offered.

The fact of the matter is that at any time the President wished to send an amended budget to the House, I would have personally been in support of having that made in order. In fact, I think it is fair to say that we have accommodated Republican desires to have budget substitutes made in order. Just as the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. KASICH's, and the gentleman from California, Mr. DANNEMEYER's, were, other budgets would have been given consideration.

The President is not just another Member, not just another voice. He is the Chief Executive of this Nation who, as such has a responsibility under the Budget Act to submit a budget to the Congress. Without belaboring the point I will tell the House that it is my view that in the future, whatever the circumstances of party or office, the President's budget, when submitted to the Congress, or any revised version of it submitted by him, should on an automatic basis and regardless of being offered or proposed by either side, be the subject of a vote in the House.

I think that if the President of the United States were to submit a budget to Congress, and we would not even do him the courtesy of voting on it, he would have extremely valid grounds for complaint against this House. In this instance, however, it has been decided, for various reasons, not to even offer the President's budget. Under the circumstances I think it is a bit unrealistic to sit and offer comparisons between a budget that has not been offered and will not be offered here, and one that the Committee on the Budget has reported to the House.

It is not a perfect budget. I do not think it is possible to ever devise a perfect, absolute line-by-line budget that satisfies every Member of the House of Representatives. But I want to commend the Committee on the Budget and its distinguished chairman for bringing forth a resolution that provides, for the first time, a broad-gauge look at the future of our country, for approaching the problems of both deficit and investment in our future, for making the hard and important choices necessary for our country. In addition the resolution not only begins the process of discussion with the Senate but also, of engaging the President, at a later date in the final decision as to how we should go forward.

We have an obligation in the House of Representatives, because the process and the effort begins here, to move forward today, to make those decisions, to reach those conclusions, and to set a course for the country. The events of the last 9 months have changed the world. They have set forth a new opportunity for the people of this country. After 40 years of bipartisan effort, in supporting the values of economic and political freedom, we now have an opportunity to turn some of those resources and attention we have devoted to that purpose to making the problems that face our country at home more the center of our concern. That is what this budget does. It makes investment in our children, our education, our infrastructure, our industrial competitiveness, and other key areas of national concern.

Members can be proud to vote for this budget. But most of all, we would be derelict in our responsibility if we do not set forth today the agenda that this Congress and this country require to take a new course, to follow new challenges, to grapple with new achievements, and to seize the important opportunities presented us. We, in the latter part of the century, are still the best hope in the world for political and economic liberty. We established that tradition 200 years ago. It is American ideals that are exciting the world today, American government that is a model of the world today. Let Members in this House show that we can make our traditions real, that we can help our people solve their problems, that we can march—not drift—into the next century, which, like this century, we have an obligation to give the name "America"—American in background, American in principle, American in achievement.

I hope all Members of the House can vote for this budget. I know that that will not happen, but I ask the Members on my side of the aisle to give it the overwhelming vote of our membership, and say that we will be true to our responsibilities.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GRAY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 310) setting forth the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal years 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995, pursuant to House Resolution 382, he reported the concurrent resolution back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the concurrent resolution.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent now that we are in the Whole House, having heard your eloquent words, and the words of the gentleman from Georgia who seemed to feel that there was no alternative, I ask unanimous consent that the Presidential motion be allowed to be debated and voted upon. The President, has submitted a budget to Members. It is quite different than this budget, and the burden of leadership is not just on the President. It is not just on this side of the aisle. It is on the whole House. Instead of criticizing the carping, I would ask my colleagues to permit this unanimous consent and allow the President's budget to be submitted for a debate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, after that speech, I am afraid beyond what the unanimous-consent request was, I am confused.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to explain it again, and again, and again, and again.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, that is fine if the gentleman is asking that the President's budget, by unanimous consent, be brought to the floor.

Mr. SCHUMER. I am asking that the Frenzel motion, including 2 hours of debate on the President's budget, which was in order in the rule, except that Mr. FRENZEL does not wish to offer it, I would ask that this House be given a chance to vote yes or no on the Bush budget, instead of just criticism of this budget. We saw what the other alternative was.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I ask the gentleman whether or not he is willing to amend the request to also allow the Rostenkowski budget as a part of the that request?

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I am sure the gentleman can make whatever request he wants, but the Frenzel budget was made in order by the rule, and at the last minute was pulled back. It is quite different than the Rostenkowski request. I do not know what request he is speaking of, because here we have an amendment on the floor that was ready, voted on, and was pulled back at the last minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has reserved the right to object and is engaged in a colloquy. That gentleman has the time.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for being loud if not enlightening, and I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] objects. The question is on the concurrent resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 218, nays 208, not voting 7, as follows:

[Roll No. 89]

YEAS—218

Akaka	Cooper	Frost
Anderson	Costello	Gaydos
Andrews	Coyne	Gejdenson
Annunzio	Crockett	Gephardt
Anthony	Darden	Geren
Aspin	de la Garza	Gibbons
Atkins	DeFazio	Glickman
AuCoin	Dellums	Gonzalez
Bates	Derrick	Gordon
Bellenson	Dicks	Gray
Berman	Dingell	Guarini
Bevill	Dixon	Hall (OH)
Bilbray	Donnelly	Harris
Boggs	Dorgan (ND)	Hatcher
Bonior	Downey	Hawkins
Borski	Durbin	Hayes (IL)
Bosco	Dwyer	Hayes (LA)
Boucher	Dymally	Hefner
Boxer	Dyson	Hertel
Brennan	Early	Hoagland
Brooks	Eckart	Hochbrueckner
Brown (CA)	Edwards (CA)	Hoyer
Bruce	Engel	Hubbard
Bryant	Erdreich	Huckaby
Bustamante	Espy	Hughes
Campbell (CO)	Evans	Jenkins
Cardin	Fascell	Johnson (SD)
Carper	Fazio	Johnston
Clarke	Feighan	Jones (GA)
Clay	Flake	Jones (NC)
Clement	Flippo	Jontz
Coleman (TX)	Foglietta	Kanjorski
Condit	Ford (MI)	Kaptur
Conyers	Frank	Kastenmeier
Kennedy	Neal (MA)	Slattery
Kennelly	Neal (NC)	Slaughter (NY)
Kildee	Nelson	Smith (IA)
Kleczka	Nowak	Solarz
Kolter	Oakar	Spratt
Kostmayer	Oberstar	Staggers
Lancaster	Obey	Stallings
Lantos	Olin	Stark
Lehman (CA)	Owens (NY)	Stenholm
Lehman (FL)	Pallone	Stokes
Levin (MI)	Panetta	Studds
Levine (CA)	Parker	Swift
Lewis (GA)	Payne (NJ)	Synar
Lipinski	Payne (VA)	Tanner
Lloyd	Pease	Thomas (GA)
Lowey (NY)	Pelosi	Torres
Luken, Thomas	Penny	Torricelli
Manton	Perkins	Towns
Markey	Pickle	Traficant
Martinez	Poshard	Traxler
Mavroules	Price	Udall
Mazzoli	Rangel	Unsoeld
McCloskey	Richardson	Valentine
McDermott	Roe	Vento
McMillen (MD)	Rose	Visclosky
McNulty	Rostenkowski	Volkmer
Mfume	Rowland (GA)	Walgren
Miller (CA)	Roybal	Washington
Mineta	Russo	Waxman
Moakley	Sabo	Weiss
Mollohan	Sangmeister	Wheat
Montgomery	Savage	Whitten
Moody	Sawyer	Williams
Morrison (CT)	Scheuer	Wise
Mrazek	Schroeder	Wolpe
Murphy	Schumer	Wyden
Murtha	Serrano	Yates
Nagle	Sikorski	Yatron
Natcher	Skaggs

NAYS—208

Alexander	Gallegly	Martin (NY)
Applegate	Gallo	Matsui
Archer	Gekas	McCandless
Armey	Gillmor	McCollum
Baker	Gilman	McCrery
Ballenger	Gingrich	McCurdy
Barnard	Goodling	McDade
Bartlett	Goss	McEwen
Barton	Gradison	McGrath
Bateman	Grandy	McHugh
Bennett	Grant	McMillan (NC)
Bentley	Green	Meyers
Bereuter	Gunderson	Miller (OH)
Bilirakis	Hall (TX)	Miller (WA)
Bliley	Hamilton	Molinari
Boehlert	Hammerschmidt	Moorhead
Broomfield	Hancock	Morella
Browder	Hansen	Morrison (WA)
Brown (CO)	Hastert	Myers
Buechner	Hefley	Nielson
Bunning	Henry	Ortiz
Burton	Herger	Owens (UT)
Byron	Hiler	Oxley
Callahan	Holloway	Packard
Campbell (CA)	Hopkins	Parris
Carr	Horton	Pashayan
Chandler	Houghton	Patterson
Chapman	Hunter	Paxon
Clinger	Hutto	Petri
Coble	Hyde	Pickett
Coleman (MO)	Inhofe	Porter
Combest	Ireland	Pursell
Conte	Jacobs	Quillen
Coughlin	James	Ravenel
Courter	Johnson (CT)	Ray
Cox	Kasich	Regula
Craig	Kolbe	Rhodes
Crane	Kyl	Ridge
Dannemeyer	LaFalce	Rinaldo
Davis	Lagomarsino	Ritter
DeLay	Laughlin	Roberts
DeWine	Leach (IA)	Robinson
Dickinson	Leath (TX)	Rogers
Dornan (CA)	Lent	Rohrabacher
Douglas	Lewis (CA)	Ros-Lehtinen
Dreier	Lightfoot	Roth
Duncan	Livingston	Roukema
Edwards (OK)	Long	Rowland (CT)
Emerson	Lowery (CA)	Saiki
English	Lukens, Donald	Sarpalius
Fawell	Machtley	Saxton
Fields	Madigan	Schaefer
Fish	Marlenee	Schiff
Frenzel	Martin (IL)	Schneider
Schuette	Smith, Robert (NH)	Upton
Schulze	Smith, Robert (OR)	Vander Jagt
Sensenbrenner	Snowe	Vucanovich
Sharp	Solomon	Walker
Shaw	Spence	Walsh
Shays	Stangeland	Watkins
Shumway	Stearns	Weber
Shuster	Stump	Weldon
Sisisky	Sundquist	Whittaker
Skeen	Tallon	Wilson
Skelton	Tauke	Wolf
Slaughter (VA)	Tauzin	Wylie
Smith (NE)	Taylor	Young (AK)
Smith (NJ)	Thomas (CA)	Young (FL)
Smith (TX)	Thomas (WY)
Smith (VT)
Smith, Denny (OR)

NOT VOTING—7

Ackerman	Lewis (FL)	Smith (FL)
Collins	Michel
Ford (TN)	Rahall

□ 1728

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Ackerman for, with Mr. Michel against.

Mrs. Collins for, with Mr. Lewis of Florida against.

Mr. TALLON changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, had I been present, I would have voted "nay" on rollcall No. 88 and "aye" on rollcalls No. 86 and No. 87.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, today, I had the privilege of escorting the First Lady, Barbara Bush, through Connors' Nursery, a wonderful project in my district. Connors' Nursery is the only nursery in the country that will provide long-term care for those unfortunate children afflicted with AIDS. Naturally, I was extremely proud to escort Mrs. Bush through this facility.

However, due to this wonderful opportunity, I could not participate in today's House proceedings. Therefore, I missed four votes.

Had I been here, I would have voted "yes" on H.R. 743, the negotiated rulemaking procedures, and I would also have voted "yes" on S. 1485, the Quad Cities Interstate Compact.

The House also considered House Concurrent Resolution 310, the 1991 budget resolution. Had I been here, I would have voted against the Congressional Black Caucus substitute amendment, and "no" on final passage of House Concurrent Resolution 310.

Mr. Speaker, as my voting record clearly indicates, I always make the utmost effort to vote in this House. However, today I felt it very important to show the First Lady the beauty of Connors' Nursery.

TRIBUTE TO HON. BILL FRENZEL

(Mr. THOMAS of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I seek recognition to alert the House that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] has argued his last budget. Democrats and Republicans will always differ on issues, but competence should be recognized.

I ask the House to acknowledge many contributions from my friend, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

[Applause, the Members rising.]

AUTHORIZING THE CLERK TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN ENGROSSMENT OF HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 310, CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET, FISCAL YEAR 1991

Mr. PANETTA. I ask unanimous consent that in the engrossment of House Concurrent Resolution 310, the clerk be authorized to correct section numbers, punctuation, and cross references, and to make such other technical and conforming changes as may be necessary to reflect the actions of the House in passing the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on House Concurrent Resolution 310, the concurrent resolution just agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF POSSIBLE RULES COMMITTEE ACTION ON H.R. 4636, SUPPLEMENTAL ASSISTANCE FOR EMERGING DEMOCRACIES ACT OF FISCAL YEAR 1990

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to inform Members of possible Rules Committee action on H.R. 4636, the Supplemental Assistance for Emerging Democracies Act of Fiscal Year 1990. The committee is scheduled to take testimony on H.R. 4636 on Thursday, May 3, 1990 at 1:30 p.m.

Members should be aware that in light of the urgency of this bill, the Rules Committee is contemplating granting a rule that might limit the offering of amendments. Therefore, all Members who have amendments to the bill should submit those amendments, together with an explanatory statement, to the Rules Committee by 6 p.m., Thursday, May 3, room H-312, in the Capitol.

Again, the Rules Committee is scheduled to take testimony on H.R. 4636 at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 3, 1990, with amendments to be submitted to the committee by 6 p.m. that same day.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4038

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to remove my name as a cosponsor of H.R. 4038. My name was inadvertently added to this measure.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS TO H.R. 2585

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, pursuant to clause 4 of rule XXII, cosponsors may be added to the bill, H.R. 2585, and I present the list:

Representatives CAMPBELL of California, BEILENSON, KENNEDY, ROWLAND of Connecticut, RINALDO, SLAUGHTER of New York, GUARINI, BOXER, MILLER of Washington, ACKERMAN, NEAL of Massachusetts, ROYBAL, and Goss.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 3978

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed from the list of cosponsors of H.R. 3978.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule 1, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on the remaining motions to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken on Wednesday, May 2, 1990.

VIRGINIA D. SMITH ANIMAL HEALTH RESEARCH LABORATORY

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3048) to designate the Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, animal health research building in Clay Center, NE, as the "Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory."

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3048

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Agricultural Research Service, United States Department of Agriculture, animal health research building located at the Roman L. Hruska United States Meat Animal Research Center in Clay Center, Nebraska, is hereby designated as the "Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory". Any reference to the Laboratory in a rule, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall be considered to be a reference to the "Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory".

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I reserve my time, and the gentleman from Kansas may proceed on his time.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The purpose of this legislation is simple. We are all aware of the upcoming retirement of Congresswoman VIRGINIA SMITH, one of Agriculture's staunchest supporters. To honor her many contributions to farm country and her hard work and dedication to agriculture in her position on the House Appropriations Committee's Agriculture Subcommittee, I introduced legislation last year to name an animal research building at the Clay Center, NE, animal health research facility as the Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory.

This legislation is cosponsored by nearly 60 Members, including all members of the House Agriculture Committee, as well as several Appropriations Committee colleagues and other Members of the House. Just as important, during these times of extreme budget pressures, this bill requires no budget outlays.

I urge my colleagues to support this tribute to a good friend of agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON].

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Kansas for yielding me this time.

I am very proud to be a cosponsor of the legislation to honor our colleague, the gentlewoman from Nebraska [Mrs. SMITH] by naming a research facility after her.

VIRGINIA SMITH's name is synonymous with agricultural research. She has been a tremendous advocate of research over the time of her career here in the Congress. This is a very fitting way to pay tribute to her.

I want to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Kansas and to take this opportunity to urge all my colleagues to support this very worthwhile designation of an agricultural research facility in the name of our dear colleague, VIRGINIA SMITH.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend and colleague for his contribution.

Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated, every member of the Agriculture Committee has cosponsored this bill.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTS. I am delighted to yield to the gentleman from Mississippi, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues in their fine statements about my friend and colleague, VIRGINIA SMITH.

VIRGINIA, a most able, effective and gracious Member of Congress and our Committee on Appropriations, has been on our Committee on Appropriations since 1977. For years she has been ranking member on our Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture. Always present, always for all sections of our Nation, her contributions to the welfare of our country and its people, she leaves a record of public service that will be hard for any Member to attain. It has been my privilege to serve on this subcommittee with VIRGINIA as well as that on Energy and Water Development—Public Works.

Present and future generations will profit from VIRGINIA's service. It is most fitting that this laboratory carry VIRGINIA's name.

We wish for her the best of everything, and again, I deeply appreciate the years when we have worked together for all of our Nation.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for his contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me add to what our colleagues have already said, that this is a well-earned designation by a gentlewoman who has not only contributed to her family, but to her country, both in the outside world and in the Government.

□ 1740

I am very happy that we are able to do this at a time when she might be able to enjoy the designation of the naming of this building in her name. I do not know of anyone I have enjoyed working with more than with the distinguished gentlewoman from Nebraska. She has contributed immensely to American agriculture, to world agriculture, and it is, indeed, appropriate that her name be linked to something agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to unanimously adopt this resolution, for all of us have some yearning for recognition at some point for our contributions.

Indeed, I think that I do not know that this humble lady would have that yearning herself, but I think it behooves us, having been the recipients of her contributions, to afford her this designation, and knowing full well that she has done something worthy to be remembered by.

This building in her name will be her statue, will be her remembrance, and will be our thank you to this distinguished lady.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, having come to the Congress with this distinguished lady, I want to compliment the gentleman and the ranking member and others for honoring her in this manner. She has served with all of us for the last 16 years and has provided an outstanding service not only to her constituents but to all farmers throughout the United States and all consumers of those things that farmers produce.

I compliment the gentleman very much. We are honoring an outstanding American.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, we are a better people. We are a better country because a lady named VIRGINIA D. SMITH came our way.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3048, designating the Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory in her home State of Nebraska.

Since coming to Congress last year and joining the Committee on Agriculture, VIRGINIA has been of tremendous support and assistance in understanding the process of agricultural appropriations. Her keen knowledge and advice has helped me in drafting amendments for the upcoming farm bill.

VIRGINIA and I have also worked on a rural agricultural caucus and her guidance here has also been most beneficial.

An animal research laboratory in her name is only a small token of the appreciation we can show our colleague for the many years of her fine work.

VIRGINIA's retirement will be a loss for all of us. I join my colleagues in wishing her well in her future endeavors. It has been an honor to work with VIRGINIA and I encourage my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, it is a true pleasure to have this opportunity to honor my very dear friend VIRGINIA SMITH. I do not think there is a finer, more loyal, nor more concerned friend of this country's farmers and ranchers than VIRGINIA SMITH. Since she first came to Congress 16 years ago, VIRGINIA has fought for the interests of rural America, promoted the values and ethics of America's heartland, and served her constituents with a vigor and commitment that continues to astound.

I have had the good fortune to work with VIRGINIA for the past 14 years on the Appropriations Committee, and I have watched her put her wealth of experience to work for her district, her State, and her country. The Meat Animal Research Center is a wonderful example of the contributions that VIRGINIA SMITH has made. She has made it the premier livestock research facility in the Nation. The new veterinarian training school begun at the center is a direct result of VIRGINIA's work. Research, education, constituent service—VIRGINIA has brought it all together at the center. So I think it is fitting that she be honored and recognized for her work there. I am proud that we are naming the center's animal health research laboratory after VIRGINIA. She truly deserves the honor.

Mr. Speaker, I feel privileged to have worked with VIRGINIA these past 16 years, and I look forward to working with her over the last months of the 101st Congress. She is a first-class lady and a first-class Congresswoman, and I am going to miss her when she departs at the end of this session.

I want to thank PAT ROBERTS for his great job in honoring VIRGINIA in this way, and I think I can speak for everyone when I say that not only does Nebraska love VIRGINIA, but so do we all.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3048, to designate the animal health research facility operated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service in Clay Center, NE, as the Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory. My distinguished colleague from Nebraska has provided exceptional service to the people of the Third District of Nebraska for eight terms, and this Member has had the pleasure of serving with her for all but two of those terms. The research facility at Clay Center is one of the finest animal science research facilities in the United States, providing invaluable information for livestock producers throughout the United States, as well as Nebraska. My colleague has worked hard and effectively to support agricultural research at this important facility, therefore, it is especially fitting that it be renamed in her honor.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3048.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3048, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

BOUNDARY CHANGE AT GETTYSBURG NATIONAL MILITARY PARK IN PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3248) to revise the boundary of Gettysburg National Military Park in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3248

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. GETTYSBURG NATIONAL MILITARY PARK BOUNDARY REVISION.

(a) LANDS INCLUDED IN THE PARK.—In furtherance of the purposes of the Act entitled "An Act to establish a national military park at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania", approved February 11, 1895 (16 U.S.C. 430g et seq.), the Gettysburg National Military Park (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "park") shall hereafter comprise the lands and interests in lands within the boundary generally depicted as "Park Boundary" on the map entitled "Gettysburg National Military Park Boundary Map", numbered NPS 305/80034-B, and dated March 1990, which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

(b) LANDS EXCLUDED FROM THE PARK.—Lands and interests in lands outside of the boundary so depicted as "Park Boundary" on the map referred to in subsection (a) are hereby excluded from the park and shall be disposed of in accordance with the provisions of section 2(c).

SEC. 2. ACQUISITION AND DISPOSAL OF LANDS.

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to acquire lands and interests in lands within the park by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, exchange, or otherwise. In acquiring lands and interests in lands under this Act, the Secretary shall acquire the minimum Federal interests necessary to achieve the objectives identified for specific areas and the park.

(b) AUTHORITY TO CONVEY FREEHOLD AND LEASEHOLD INTERESTS WITHIN PARK.—The Secretary may convey lands and interests in lands within the park authorized in accordance with subsection (a) of the Act of July 15, 1968 (16 U.S.C. 4601-22), except that, notwithstanding subsection (d) of that section, the net proceeds from any such conveyance may be used, subject to appropriations, to acquire lands and interests within the park.

(c) CONVEYANCE OF LANDS EXCLUDED FROM PARK.—(1) The Secretary is authorized, in accordance with applicable existing law, to exchange Federal Lands and interests excluded from the park pursuant to section 1(b) for the purpose of acquiring lands within the park boundary.

(2) If any such Federal lands or interests are not exchanged within five years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary may sell any or all such lands or interests to the highest bidder, in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, but any such conveyance shall be at not less than the fair market value of the land or interest, as determined by the Secretary.

(3) All Federal lands and interests sold or exchanged pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to such terms and conditions as will assure the use of the property in a manner which, in the judgment of the Secretary, will protect the park and the Gettysburg Battlefield Historic District (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "historic district"). Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the net proceeds from any such sale or exchange shall be used, subject to appropriations, to acquire lands and interests within the park.

(d) RELINQUISHMENT OF LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION TO PENNSYLVANIA.—With respect to any lands over which the United States exercises exclusive or concurrent legislative jurisdiction and which are excluded from the park pursuant to section 1(b), the Secretary may relinquish to the State of Pennsylvania such exclusive or concurrent legislative jurisdiction by filing with the Governor a notice of relinquishment to take effect upon acceptance thereof, unless otherwise provided by the laws of the State.

SEC. 3. AGREEMENTS WITH RESPECT TO MONUMENTS AND TABLETS LOCATED OUTSIDE PARK BOUNDARY.

The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with the owners of property in proximity to but outside the boundary of the park on which historic monuments and tablets commemorating the Battle of Gettysburg have been erected on or beofre January 1, 1990. The Secretary may make funds available, subject to appropriations, for the maintenance, protection, and interpretation of such monuments and tablets pursuant to such agreements. In addition, within the area depicted as the "Gettysburg Battlefield Historic District" on the map referred to in section 1(a), or in proximity thereto, the Secretary may, with the consent of the owner, acquire, by donation, purchase, or exchange, lands and interests comprising such monuments and tablets together with lands and interests necessary to provide adequate public access thereto.

SEC. 4. CONSERVATION WITHIN GETTYSBURG BATTLEFIELD HISTORIC DISTRICT.

(a) ENCOURAGEMENT OF CONSERVATION.—The Secretary shall take appropriate action to encourage conservation of the historic district by landowners, local governments, organizations, and businesses.

(b) PRIORITIZATION OF GRANTS.—Within the historic district, the Secretary shall give priority in making grants under section 101(d), and in providing technical assistance, information, and advice under section 101(h), of the National Historic Preservation Act (16 U.S.C. 470a (d), (h)) to those programs and activities in the historic district that will assure development and use of natural and cultural resources in a manner that is consistent with the conservation and maintenance of the district's historic character.

(c) PROVISION OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary may provide technical assistance to assist local governments in cooperative efforts which complement the values of the park and the historic district and to help landowners prepare individual property plans which meet landowner and conservation objectives in the historic district.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT OF PLANNING COSTS.—The Secretary, under such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe and at the request of any local or county government within the historic district, shall provide matching reimbursements for up to 50 percent of the planning costs incurred by such government in the development of comprehensive plans and land use guidelines which are consistent with conserving the historic character of the historic district. Reimbursements may only be provided under this subsection to the extent or in such amounts as are provided in appropriation Acts.

(e) ACCEPTANCE OF EASEMENT DONATIONS.—The Secretary, upon recommendation from the Director of the National Park Service, in consultation with the Advisory Commission established under section 5, is authorized to accept donations of conservation easements on land located within the historic district.

(f) FEDERAL CONSISTENCY.—(1) Any Federal or federally assisted activity or undertaking in the historic district, shall be consistent to the maximum extent possible with the purposes of the preservation of the historic district, including its rural, agricultural, and town elements, and shall also comply with the National Historic Preservation Act and other applicable laws.

(2) The head of any Federal agency (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the "agency") having direct or indirect jurisdiction over a proposed Federal or federally assisted undertaking in the historic district, and the head of any Federal agency having authority to license or permit any undertaking in such area, shall at the earliest feasible date prepare a detailed analysis of any proposed action and submit it to the Secretary.

(3) The Secretary shall review the analysis and consult with the agency. If after such review and consultation, the Secretary finds that the proposed action is not consistent with the purposes identified in ths subsection, the agency shall not proceed with the action until after a justification for the action has been submitted to the appropriate committees of Congress with adequate time allowed for Congressional comment. Such justification shall include the following elements: the anticipated effects on the historic and commemorative character of the historic district, the social and economic necessity for the proposed action, all possible alternatives to the proposed action, the comparative benefits of proposed alternative actions; and the mitigation measures outlined in the proposed action.

SEC. 5. ADVISORY COMMISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is hereby established the Gettysburg National Military

Park Advisory Commission (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Advisory Commission"). The Advisory Commission shall be composed of 11 members, as follows:

(1) One member representing each of the local governments from the four townships surrounding the park and the Borough of Gettysburg, appointed by the Secretary.

(2) One member representing the Adams County, Pennsylvania government, appointed by the Secretary.

(3) One member representing the State Historic Preservation Office of the State of Pennsylvania, appointed by the Secretary.

(4) Two members who are residents of Adams County and who are knowledgeable about the park and its resources, appointed by the Secretary, one of whom shall own land or interests in land within the park boundary.

(5) One member with expertise in local historic preservation, appointed by the Secretary.

(6) The Director of the National Park Service or his designee, ex officio.

Members shall be appointed for staggered terms of three years, as designated by the Secretary at the time of the initial appointments. Any member of the Advisory Commission appointed for a definite term may serve after the expiration of his term until his successor is appointed. The Advisory Commission shall designate one of its members as Chairperson. Six members of the Advisory Commission shall constitute a quorum.

(b) MANAGEMENT AND DEVELOPMENT ISSUES.—The Secretary, or his designee, shall from time to time, but at least semiannually, meet and consult with the Advisory Commission to coordinate the management of the park and the historic district with local jurisdictions.

(c) MEETINGS.—The Advisory Commission shall meet on a regular basis. Notice of meetings and agenda shall be published in local newspapers which have a distribution which generally covers the area affected by the park. Advisory Commission meetings shall be held at locations and in such a manner as to ensure adequate public involvement.

(d) EXPENSES.—Members of the Advisory Commission shall serve without compensation as such, but the Secretary may pay expenses reasonably incurred in carrying out their responsibilities under this Act on vouchers signed by the Chairperson.

(e) CHARTER.—The provisions of section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) are hereby waived with respect to this Advisory Commission.

SEC. 6. INTERPRETATION.

In administering the park, the Secretary shall take such action as is necessary and appropriate to interpret, for the benefit of visitors to the park and the general public, the Battle of Gettysburg in the larger context of the Civil War and American history, including the causes and consequences of the Civil War and including the effects of the war on all the American people.

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3248, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, located on part of the Gettysburg Battlefield are the remains of a small farm, the Granite Farm. John and Catherine Slyder, the owners of this farm, left shortly before the Battle of Gettysburg. After the devastation that occurred in their frontyard, they never returned to their home which is now part of the park. Their home had become a field hospital; their barnyard a graveyard. The story of that family and that farm is intrinsic to the story of the Civil War, a war fought not overseas but here, in our wheat fields, peach orchards, and backyards. The Civil War continues to fascinate and to perplex us. It haunts us even as we try to understand its meaning today.

Shortly after the Battle of Gettysburg in July 1863, the high water mark of the Confederacy, President Lincoln shared his sense of that battle and those who fought in it in his "Gettysburg Address." A few months later, veterans of the battle sought to preserve their battlefield. In 1895, the battlefield was established as a park. Since that time, millions of Americans have visited it, and, hopefully, have gained insights into their Nation's history.

Ironically, this same battlefield has never had a legislated boundary. Today, Mr. Speaker, we seek to provide this park with such a boundary. By so doing, we will give this park greater protection as well. H.R. 3248, introduced by Congressman GOODLING and cosponsored by our colleague PETER KOSTMAYER, establishes a boundary for Gettysburg National Military Park. This legislation results from Congress' directive 2 years ago to the National Park Service to prepare a boundary study and to recommend a legislated boundary.

I want to thank both Congressman KOSTMAYER and Congressman GOODLING, and their staffs, for their good efforts to find an appropriate and balanced approach to the protection of these resources. Their cooperation has been essential in this legislation. Mr. Speaker, the committee adopted an amendment to H.R. 3248 which makes some minor changes in the park boundary. It now references the Gettysburg Battlefield Historic District as the basis for additional protection for the battlefield area. The historic district, first established in 1973, preserves various historic resources and complements those located within the park's boundaries.

As amended, H.R. 3248 strongly promotes and encourages conservation within the historic district, directing priority to grants in the Gettysburg Historic District under the historic preservation fund to those activities that help protect its historic character, provides for technical assistance and for the partial reimbursement of planning costs, and authorizes the acceptance of easement donations. It directs consistency in Federal actions and establishes an advisory commission to coordinate the management of the park and historic district with the local jurisdictions. The bill directs the park's interpretation to place this battle in the larger context of the Civil War and American history, and authorizes appropriations.

The bill directs the National Park Service to acquire the least interest in land that will sufficiently protect the resources for which they were designated and that will provide the highest cost benefit to taxpayers. Where easements are effective in protecting the resources, they should be used. Where fee simple acquisition provides the better benefit and cost effectiveness to protect the resources, it should be used. The National Park Service needs flexibility to employ different resource protection strategies to ensure appropriate resource protection and to achieve a balance between past and present.

Mr. Speaker, I endorse this legislation because I believe that it will help protect the historic resources of the Gettysburg National Military Park and the Gettysburg Battlefield Historic District for us and for future generations. We need to remember both those who fought in the battle and those whose lives were so profoundly affected by it, as the Slyder family was affected. And we need to use parks such as Gettysburg to better understand who we are as Americans today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3248, a bill which would establish a legislated boundary and provide other protection measures for Gettysburg National Historical Park.

This bill would expand the existing, 3,900-acre park area by adding 1,900 acres. Such a significant park expansion proposal on the immediate outskirts of the town of Gettysburg had great potential for being highly controversial. However, the outstanding work of the National Park Service in conducting the congressionally mandated boundary study and the close communication maintained between Mr. GOODLING and his constituents has enabled the subcommittee to develop a very good bill.

The NPS Boundary Study was not only professionally done, but contained a thorough analysis of the interests which are needed in order to protect the resources of this park. In fact, of the 1,900 acres proposed for addition in this measure, the NPS study recommends that only 175 acres needs to be acquired in fee. This approach for minimizing fee acquisition is recognized both in the language of the bill, and in the report language which specifically cites the NPS study. I believe this acquisition approach was a key factor in securing agreement for park expansion and that this agreement should be implemented to the fullest extent possible.

I would like to recognize the efforts of the chairman for his leadership on this measure both in the addition of important park protection measures and in resisting a number of proposals for further additions to the park which were not substantiated by information supplied by the NPS.

Mr. Speaker, this bill represents a comprehensive approach to protecting an important portion of our national heritage and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KOSTMAYER], a member of the committee and one of the principal architects of the measure before us.

Mr. KOSTMAYER. Mr. Speaker, I want to first commend the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO], for his hard work on this important piece of legislation, and his able staff, and also I want to commend my distinguished colleague and very good friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], who has labored long and hard to reach a compromise acceptable to the people he represents with such distinction, those people lucky enough to be represented by him who live in the 19th District of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] has said, this enlarges the Gettysburg National Park. It adds a little bit over 2,000 acres to the Gettysburg National Park, and during the consideration by the subcommittee of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] of the legislation, I authored a substitute which the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] offered which added an additional 3 acres or about an additional 175 acres.

□ 1750

But, Mr. Speaker, that is not what I want to talk about in the few minutes I have this evening. I want to mention two other provisions of this bill which I think are precedent setting and which I think are terribly important.

The first is the Federal constituency provision. Mr. Speaker, the Federal constituency provision simply says that any Federal activity or federally permitted or licensed activity to take place in the battlefield setting, and that is the area surrounding the park itself, Mr. Speaker, must be consistent with the preservation of the historic district, including its rural, agricultural, and town elements.

What that means, Mr. Speaker, is that any Federal agency that wants to engage in that kind of an activity in the area surrounding the battlefield itself must submit under the law a detailed analysis to the Secretary of the Interior, who is required by law to review that plan and consult with the appropriate agency.

After the Secretary of the Interior reviews that plan, he must determine whether or not it is consistent or inconsistent with the battlefield setting and with the rural, agricultural, and town setting of the battlefield setting itself. If the Secretary finds that the plan is inconsistent, he can, under the law, indeed he must, under the law, direct the agency to submit the plan to the appropriate committees of the Congress. In the House that would be the Committee on the Interior, and in the Senate it would be the Senate Committee on Energy. Those committees under the law would have adequate time to consider the proposal and the proposal could not proceed unless those committees of the Congress had released it.

The second provision directs the Secretary at his discretion to reimburse up to 50 percent of the cost to local and county governments for the development of comprehensive plans and land use guidelines consistent with conserving the historic character of the battlefield setting.

That is to say that in the gentleman's district from Pennsylvania, rural townships which cannot afford to develop a comprehensive zoning plan, townships in rural Pennsylvania which cannot afford to develop a comprehensive land use plan, can get reimbursed to the extent of 50 percent by the Federal Government if they will develop those plans, and we hope they will.

Let me say finally, Mr. Speaker, I think these two provisions are important. They are fine provisions, as far as they go. In my judgment, they do not go nearly far enough.

The sad truth of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, that under the bill the House considers this evening private landowners owning land in the battlefield setting can sell to private developers to build condominiums, hotdog stands, shopping centers, hard on the battlefield border itself. I think that is an appalling situation. Mr. Speaker, I think if we suggested that condominiums or shopping centers or hotdog stands were to be built on the beaches at Normandy, that the people of that country would be appalled.

I am appalled that this Congress would allow this situation to exist. It exists, Mr. Speaker, not because Mr. VENTO and others have not tried to correct it. Lord knows they have. It exists because we are consumed with this notion of "It is my property, by God I can do anything I want with it."

I believe that those who own property in the battlefield setting should be compensated fully for that property, and I believe that it should be purchased by the Federal Government. No one is suggesting that anyone should have their property taken. That is unfair. But to allow a McDonald's, to allow a shopping plaza, to allow a condominium exactly on the border of the Gettysburg Battlefield, is in my view sacrilegious. It is as wrong as it can be. I hope the time will come when the people of this country will rise up and urge the Congress to change this situation.

So this is a good law. It is good as far as it goes. I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] for the great job they have done. I only wish it went further.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the primary author of the legislation, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my enthusiasm at seeing this bill before us on the House floor today. And I am especially pleased to see it come in a bipartisan fashion.

Representing my constituents on this matter is not always easy, Mr. Speaker. While Adams County residents recognize the value of this park to the local economy as well as the battlefield's place in our Nation's history, they have strongly held convictions about individual property rights and frugal government spending. This is made more complex by the shrinking effect the growth of the park has had on the local tax base. I, personally, share the dual concerns of my constituents.

The bill before us today meets these challenges quite well. First, it will add nearly 2,000 acres to the park, while also dropping several unneeded parcels of land. I see this as the final boundary for Gettysburg, and the battlefield will now be protected and presented extremely well for posterity.

The legislation is based upon a National Park Service boundary study which calls for the use of scenic easements as the predominant land protection method in the new boundary area. The use of this strategy will meet all goals: park protection, retention of ownership by current landowners, and tax base preservation.

Equally, H.R. 3248 continues efforts initiated by the Park Service in the boundary study to work with local citizens on park issues. The House version of the boundary bill creates an 11 member advisory board which will consult with the Park Service in the future. In addition, local governments will be able to gain assistance with their planning efforts as long as those efforts concur with the purposes of the park.

Finally, the bill recognizes the already existant Gettysburg Battlefield Historic District. The Park Service may accept the donation of scenic easements to the park within this area surrounding the battlefield proper.

I would like to thank the chairman of the subcommittee, the ranking member, and my colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. KOSTMAYER, for their diligent efforts on this legislation. The chairman is to be commended for his determination to forge a bipartisan bill and I think our final product is the better for it. I hope he will pass my personal thanks as well as to the fine Interior Committee staff for their tireless efforts.

Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to commend the former park superintendent, Mr. Keuhn, and his staff. When they started this procedure I had all sorts of fears. I expected an uproar in the area, and I am pleased to say because of the manner in which the former park superintendent handled this and those who worked with him and for him, we had no such problems.

Mr. Speaker, again I want to compliment all of them, and I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLING. I would be happy to yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the cooperation of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING]. I want to commend him. I know this has not been an easy process for him, representing the local area, but I think it is a real milestone in terms of this famous and historic park.

Obviously, I have some of the same trepidations expressed by my colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. KOSTMAYER], with regard to what might happen in and around that park. But I am confident that with the type of direction and focus that is placed here, that we also have reason to be optimistic that that scenario that is painted with hamburger and hotdog stands all over the historic districts will not happen, because the local governments we think with the technical assistance and planning that will be and is possible with this legislation, will obviously not have that type of development occur. They obviously have a responsibility.

Finally, with any type of park, with any type of resource, cultural or natural, there is the interface between that resource and private land. We just have to find a means to provide a basis where they come together where we find the compatibility and adjustments made on that side of the boundary where we have the private lands. I hope that is accommodated.

Mr. Speaker, I also appreciate the recognition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] of the professional work done by Superintendent Keuhn, who is now retired and has returned home to Minnesota to my congressional district. I will convey to him the kind comments for his effort made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING]. I am pleased to have him as a constituent and that he has served in this capacity.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I think this is an example of how to work with the local constituency. Mr. Keuhn and others did a very good job, including the committee, who went up and visited the area.

□ 1800

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3248, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOUR OF MEETING ON TOMORROW

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to reconvene at noon tomorrow, May 2, 1990.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

INDIANA DUNES NATIONAL LAKESHORE ACCESS AND ENHANCEMENT ACT

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3209) to modify the boundaries of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3209

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore Access and Enhancement Act".

SEC. 2. BOUNDARIES.

The first section of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u), is amended by striking out "October 1986, and numbered 626-80, 033-B" and inserting in lieu thereof "March 1990, and numbered 80,038A".

SEC. 3. ROAD RIGHT-OF-WAYS.

The Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 25. (a) Within 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report identifying road rights-of-way within the boundaries of the lakeshore that are proposed to be relinquished, as well as any actions taken to date to effectuate the relinquishment of such rights-of-way and a summary of any impediments there may be to each relinquishment. The Secretary shall take such action as he deems necessary to notify Federal, State, and local transportation authorities of road rights-of-way so identified.

"(b) The Secretary is authorized to reimburse the appropriate political subdivision for reasonable administrative costs associated with vacating each road right-of-way within the boundaries of the lakeshore."

SEC. 4. RIVER CORRIDORS AND WETLAND STUDIES AND PLANS.

Section 2 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u-1) is amended by adding the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"(c)(1) Within two years following the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall complete a protection plan for the areas identified as Unit VIII-A, 'Little Calumet River Corridor' and VIII-B 'Salt Creek Corridor' on the map referred to in the first section of this Act. The plan shall include, but shall not be limited to, a determination of the lands, waters and interests therein to be acquired to provide for the protection of these riverine and wetland systems. The plan shall also include provisions for public access for the purposes of fishing, canoeing, hiking and other public activities consistent with continued wetland and resource protection.

"(2) Within two years following the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall complete a study of the Deep River Corridor. The area to be studied shall include (A) the segment from the abandoned Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad right-of-way south of the existing Deep River County Park to the confluence of Deep River, (B) that portion of the Little Calumet River from Lake Michigan west to Martin Luther King Drive in Gary, Indiana, and (C) the Lake George Segment of the Deep River Corridor, including an area known as the Hobart Prairie Grove on the northwest side of Lake George. The study shall include an inventory of the area's natural, cultural and recreational values and features; recommendations for the provisions of the public access for the purposes of fishing, canoeing, hiking and other public activities; and a determination of the lands, waters and interest therein recommended to provide for the protection of the resources in the corridor, including recommendations regarding the State, local, or Federal agencies or jurisdictions recommended to administer these lands and interests in lands.

"(3) Within two years following the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall complete a study of the Beverly Shores wetlands. The study shall include an inventory and description of all wetlands identified by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service on National Wetlands Inventory maps in the town of Beverly Shores currently outside the boundaries of the lakeshore and shall make recommendations on means to protect these wetlands and adjoining wetlands within the lakeshore. The recommendations may include recommendations for the acquisition of such lands or interests in lands as are necessary to ensure protection of the resource. In making any recommendations for acquisition, the Secretary shall give full consideration to the protection already afforded wetlands in the community of Beverly Shores by the Nontidal Wetland Protection Ordinance of the town of Beverly Shores.

"(4) Within one year following the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall complete a study of Union Station, which is located directly adjacent to the western boundary of the lakeshore. In conducting such study, the Secretary shall examine the feasibility of United States ownership of Union Station and shall include in the study a structural analysis and feasibility study of the possible uses of the structure, including renovation as a multi-use facility

"(5) The Secretary shall submit the results of the plans and studies prepared under this subsection to the Committee on the Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate.".

SEC. 5. IMPROVED PROPERTY; RETENTION OF RIGHTS.

(a) ADDITIONAL AREAS.—The table in section 4 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u-3) is amended to read as follows:

"Property within boundaries of map	Construction began before
Dated March 1990, No. 80,038A	August 1, 1989
Dated October 1986, No. 626–80,033–B	February 1, 1986
Dated December 1980, No. 626–91014	January 1, 1981
Dated September 1976, No. 626–91007	February 1, 1973
Dated September 1966, No. LNPNE–1008–ID	January 4, 1965".

(b) RETENTION OF RIGHTS.—Section 5(a) of such Act (16 U.S.C. 460u-4) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(B), by striking "subparagraph (A)" and inserting "subparagraph (A)(ii)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(3)(A) In the case of improved property included within the boundaries of the lakeshore after August 1, 1989, which was not included within such boundaries before that date, any individual who is an owner of record of such property as of that date may retain a right of use and occupancy of such improved property for noncommercial residential purposes for a term ending at either of the following:

"(i) A fixed term not to exceed September 30, 2010, or such lesser fixed term as such owner may elect at the time of acquisition.

"(ii) A term ending at the death of such owner or of the owner's spouse.

The owner or owners shall elect the term to be reserved.

"(B) The provisions of subparagraph (A)(ii) shall apply only to improved property owned by an individual who (i) was an owner of record of the property as of August 1, 1989, (ii) had attained the age of majority as of that date, and (iii) made a bona fide written offer not later than July 1, 1994, to sell such property to the Secretary.".

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 5(a)(1) of such Act is amended by striking the period after "626-91014" and inserting a comma.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

The first sentence of section 9 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u-8) is amended by striking out "lands and interests in lands" and all that follows through "development:" and inserting in lieu thereof "lands and interests in lands nor more than $27,500,000 for development:".

SEC. 7. COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT.

The Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u and following) is amended by adding the following new section at the end thereof:

"SEC. 26. COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT.

"In furtherance of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary is authorized to enter into a cooperative agreement with the city of Gary, Indiana, pursuant to which the Secretary may provide technical assistance in interpretation, planning, and resource management for programs and developments in the city of Gary's Marquette Park and Lake Street Beach.".

SEC. 8. UNIT I-M.

The Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u and following) is amended by adding the following new section at the end thereof:

"SEC. 27. UNIT I-M AND UNIT VII-D.

"(a) Unit I-M.—Before acquiring lands or interests in lands in Unit I-M (as designated on the map referred to in the first section of this Act), the Secretary shall consult with the Commissioner of the Indiana Department of Transportation to determine what lands or interests in lands are required by the State of Indiana for improvements to State Road 49 and the reconstruction and relocation of the interchange with State Road 49 and U.S. 20 so that the acquisition by the Secretary of lands or interests in lands in Unit I-M shall not interfere with planned improvements to such interchange and State Road 49 in the area.

"(b) Unit VII-D.—Before acquiring any lands or interest in lands in Unit VII-D (as designated on the map referred to in the first section of this Act) the Secretary shall consult with the Commissioner of the Indiana Department of Transportation to determine what lands or interests in lands are required by the State of Indiana for improvements to Old Hobart Road and reconstruction and relocation of the intersection of Old Hobart Road and State Road 51 so that the acquisition by the Secretary of lands or interests in lands in Unit VII-D will not interfere with planned improvements to such interchange and Old Hobart Road in the areas.".

SEC. 9. CRESCENT DUNES.

Section 12 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u-12) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 12. The Secretary is authorized to acquire the area on the map referred to in the first section of this Act as area III-B.".

SEC. 10. GREENBELT.

Section 18 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u-12) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 18."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) The Secretary shall enter into a memorandum of agreement with Northern India Public Service Company (hereafter in this section referred to as NIPSCO) which shall provide for the following with respect to the area referred to as Unit II-A on the map referenced in the first section of this Act:

"(1) NIPSCO will provide the National Park Service with access through the Greenbelt and across the dike for purposes of a public hiking trail.

"(2) The National Park Service shall continue to have rights of assessment, resource management, and interpretation of the Greenbelt area.

"(3) NIPSCO will continue to preserve the Greenbelt in its natural state. If NIPSCO utilizes the Greenbelt temporarily for projects involving pollution mitigation or construction on its adjacent facilities, it will continue to restore the utilized area to its natural state.

"(4) NIPSCO will notify the National Park Service, the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate if NIPSCO proposes a different use for this property. No changes in the use of the property will take place for three years following such notification.".

SEC. 11. VISITOR CENTER.

In order to commemorate the vision, dedication, and work of Dorothy Buell in saving the Indiana Dunes, the National Park Service visitor center at the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore is hereby designated as the "Dorothy Buell Memorial Visitor Center".

SEC. 12. AUTHORIZATION.

Section 9 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes", approved November 5, 1966 (16 U.S.C. 460u-9) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 9."; and

(2) by inserting at the end the following:

"(b) Except for the limitations provided in subsection (a) for development, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3209, the bill presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3209, introduced by our colleague Representative PETER VISCLOSKY, amends the act establishing the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore to modify the boundaries of the National Lakeshore, make adjustments in the authorization of appropriations and authorize a cooperative agreement and several studies and plans.

Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore was born out of compromise and has been a creature of further compromises since its establishment. The legislative proposal before us today is no different in that regard. The Committee on Interior and Insular affairs was presented with some thorny issues. Given this park's close proximity to a major population and industrial center and its patchwork of surrounding land uses it is not surprising that new issues arise or that attempts are made to reopen old matters.

H.R. 3209, as amended, provides what I believe is a clear, consistent and workable policy regarding the resource and administrative issues of the National Lakeshore that were brought before the Interior Committee. The addition of certain lands to the park boundary, made by H.R. 3209, will enhance park resources, improve access and promote efficient management while minimizing potential conflicts with adjacent landowners. Further, the studies and plans directed to be prepared by the legislation will provide us with information by which we can monitor resource and administrative issues addressed by the bill.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3209, as amended, reflects the resource needs of the area, the management needs of the National Park Service and the interests of the local communities. Indiana Dunes is a unique and varied resource that has generated significant interest and appreciation from the public. I want to commend the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. VISCLOSKY], who represents the area in question, for his advocacy of this park unit and its diverse constituency. In my experience, Indiana Dunes legislation has never been an easy matter. The legislative policy embodied in H.R. 3209, as amended, is a credit to the parties involved. I also must commend Representative JONTZ for his interest and advocacy for this measure before the House.

I support the legislation and recommend its passage by the House.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3209, a bill to amend the boundaries of Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. This important urban park area provides needed recreational opportunities for millions of people who reside in the Northern Illinois/Northern Indiana/Southern Michigan area.

I would like to recognize the efforts of the gentleman from the first district of Indiana [Mr. VISCLOSKY], for all his work on this bill. Mr. Speaker, his intimate knowledge of the Lakeshore and willingness openly discuss the controversial aspects of this bill with members on both sides of the aisle have contributed heavily to the success of this effort.

This bill represents the fourth boundary modification at this park area in the last 14 years. It would add approximately 2000 acres to the existing 14,000-acre Lakeshore. About ¾ of this land is contained in two river corridors which have received only cursory studies to date. This lack of information regarding the proposed additions, especially the river corridors, was cited by the administration as one of their primary reasons for opposing the bill. Further, based on the studies of other areas for potential inclusion in the Lakeshore which are directed by this bill, additional legislation to amend the boundary of this unit in the near future appear likely.

It is clear from this record that Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore would benefit from a comprehensive boundary study rather than the piecemeal approach which has been pursued in the past. Development of objective boundary modification criteria have recently been advocated in a bill introduced by the chairman of the National Parks and Public Lands Subcommittee, and I commend him for advancing that proposal especially as it has been amended in cooperation with the minority.

Despite these concerns, because the bill does resolve a number of important management issues, it is a worthy one and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. VISCLOSKY], a member of the committee.

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, I must take this opportunity to thank Chairman VENTO, Congressman LAGOMARSINO and the other members of the Committee on Interior for their assistance with H.R. 3209. It has been a bill not without controversy and has occupied much of their time over the past several months. I also extend my gratitude to the staff of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands, particularly Richard Healy and Steve Hodap, for their invaluable assistance as well as Diane Newberg of my staff.

I began to formulate H.R. 3209 in December of 1988 out of concern for the growing demands placed on the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. Throughout the process, I have maintained the goals of increasing access to the National Lakeshore and enhancing the recreational opportunities it offers the public. I believe that the result of this extended effort is a proposal that reflects those purposes.

During the past decade, tremendous changes have occurred in Northwest Indiana due to the restructuring of its preeminent industry, steel. The public officials and citizens of Northwest Indiana have been reviewing options for maintaining and improving the economic vitality of the region.

Throughout these often harsh times, the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore has remained a constant source of serene beauty and recreation. This urban national park weaves through small communities, the urban center of Gary, neighbors two massive steel mills and three electric generating stations. Approximately 8 million people live within easy commuting distance of the park. It provides beaches, picnic areas, trails for biking and hiking, seasonal festivals and educational facilities for park visitors. Throughout the years, the Lakeshore has been an anchor for the quality of life in Northwest Indiana.

As the park is being called upon to meet new demands created by the region's and Nation's changing atmosphere, many new challenges and pressures have resulted. Park visitorship grew from 264,000 in 1977 to 1,791,902 in 1989. All signs indicate that this trend will continue. As visitor demand grows, internal and external challenges on the park grow. These challenges must be met.

While my legislatiion does call for some land acquisition, I believe it has been kept to a minimum. Each parcel has been proposed for a specific purpose, be it campground development recreation, additional parking facilities, handicapped access, green corridors or necessary preservation. I would like to briefly describe the various parcels and provisions of the bill and explan my reasons for their inclusion.

LAND PARCELS

Area III-G: The Beverly Shores addition, includes the rights-of-way of Broadway and Beverly Drive as well as a small parcel of land along the northeast side of Broadway near the beach.

The General Management Plan [GMP] of the National Lakeshore presumed that the remainder of the Beverly Shores island would be acquired. The GMP proposed utilization of Broadway within the island as an access route to the beach. It also presumed the use of Beverly Drive as a park access road. Since Beverly Shores has not been added to the National Lakeshore, portions of Broadway and Beverly Drive cannot be controlled in any way by the National Park Service.

In order to ensure that the National Park Service can protect the right of the public to access via these public rights-of-way, I have proposed that they be included within the boundaries of the National Lakeshore.

The small parcel along Broadway will allow for a small scale parking lot to alleviate pressure at the park's beach facility on Lake Front Drive.

Area II-M: The campground addition would add 64 acres to the East Unit Campground, which is scheduled for construction in 1990. The parcel, which holds many natural features including sand dunes and a shallow pond, will provide needed space for campground facilities including a proposed campground amphitheater. It will also provide a buffer zone between the campground and surrounding areas.

It is my intention that the flat disturbed plat at the southwestern corner of U.S. 20 and Brown Road be developed as a shuttle service staging area providing transporation for campers to the several local beaches.

Area II-N: The U.S. 20 completion has been included for the purpose of improving the integrity of park boundaries and to provide an uninterrupted greenbelt area in this area of the park along U.S. 20.

Area III-B: Language regarding Crescent Dune would remove all restrictions in existing language of the law that prevent the National Park Service from acquiring this 33-acre tract. The inclusion of Crescent Dune will free it from its decade-long court battle and place it firmly within the public domain. Instead of continued profit by attorneys, the public will profit by access to the land.

Area II-L: The Porter Beach addition is a small 3-acre parcel which features one of the only sections of available shoreline where the slope of the land will permit beach access for physically handicapped persons. I am concerned that the National Lakeshore has no such access point at this time.

The flat, disturbed area at the northern end of this parcel will provide space for additional parking, a restroom facility and small concession stand.

Inclusion will also allow the National Lakeshore to relocate a road which protrudes onto the beach resulting in erosion problems. The National Lakeshore could relocate this road south away from the beach, thereby increasing lakefront access and safety.

Area I-M: The State road 49 corridor addition, is often referred to as the most frequently used entrance and exit to the State and national parks. In an effort to maintain the attractive and natural status of this entrance, a 33-acre corridor surrounding the area is designated for acquisition in H.R. 3209.

While I am concerned that this area not fall prey to incompatible development, it is not my intention that its inclusion hinder actions by the Indiana Department of Highways to improve and reconstruct the interchange of State road 49 and U.S. 20. This antiquated interchange desperately needs attention which may have minor effects on the parcel. H.R. 3209 includes language to allow for necessary construction.

Areas VIII-A and VIII-B: Approximately 22 miles of river corridor along the Little Calumet River and Salt Creek will be incorporated into the park boundary. These areas are significant as some of the last remnants of a preindustrial Northwest Indiana environment and are locally important as salmon spawning areas vital to northern Lake Michigan fisheries. The National Park Service will examine the recreational possibilities of the rivers, including nature and bike trail development, canoeing, and fishing.

The Little Calumet River corridor will provide a direct connection between one of the Lakeshore's most valuable natural areas—the Blue Heron Rookery—and the rest of the park. At the present time, the rookery is isolated from the National Lakeshore. By including this corridor within the boundaries of the Lakeshore, the National Park Service will be able to more effectively manage this natural resource.

It is my intention that the Salt Creek corridor, which was initiated under the 1986 legislation, now be completed. Riddled with wetlands and beautiful terrain, preservation of this corridor is essential.

Area I-L: The Old University of Chicago property, is strategically located and will be advantageous to the Lakeshore for purposes of both preservation and increasing options for connecting the east and west units of the park.

The 13-acre parcel contains a small gravel road immediately across U.S. 12 and in line with the entrance to Ogden Dunes. This disturbed roadway will allow the National Park Service to develop a new entrance to the Tolleston Dune unit and provide for a trail system in the future.

Area IIV-D: The Calumet Prairie addition, is a 173-acre plat, 140 acres of which are currently managed by the Indiana Department of Natural Resources. The prairie contains a high quality example of wet sand prairie, unlike any found within the Lakeshore's current boundaries. The prairie provides a habitat for several rare plant and animal species.

The significant stretch of Little Calumet riverbank within the parcel will be a great asset to the National Lakeshore. This addition will provide new recreational opportunities including fishing and conoeing.

Gary Parcels: I am pleased that after years of impasse, parcels within the city of Gary have been included in the legislation. I congratulate Mayor Barnes on his support for the addition of the Inland Woods area in Miller. This 200-acre area includes the Woodlake Dune Savannah which has been identified by the Indiana Department of Natural Resources as environmentally unique in our State. The Fadell property, a 45-acre dune ridge north of Rt. 20 in Miller, will be preserved. This parcel is currently threatened by sand mining. Also to be included is a small parcel along County Line Road where the National Park Service will be making improvements to an entrance road.

Area VI-B: the Gaylord Butterfly addition, provides a habitat unlike any other in either the National Lakeshore or the Indiana State Park system. This 173-acre dry sand prairie is home to several unusual plants and rare butterflies. The Little Blue Stem and Indiana grasses, Blazing Stars and Sweet Fern provide food for several butterflies found at no other location in Indiana. These species include the Karner Blue Butterfly, currently under consideration for Federal listing as a threatened species, the Silvery Blue Butterfly, the Byssus Skipper Butterfly, and the Regal Frittillary, which has been proposed for Federal listing as a threatened species.

While the Gaylord Butterfly parcel is proposed for inclusion in the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, in the future the parcel will be transferred over to the State of Indiana Department of Natural Resources in exchange for the State's Little Calumet Prairie property.

MANAGEMENT STUDIES

LITTLE CALUMET-DEEP RIVER CORRIDOR STUDY

This study, to be performed by the National Park Service, will compile an inventory of the natural, cultural, and recreational values of the corridor. It will give specific recommendations for improving public access, fishing, canoeing and hiking within the corridor. The study will also recommend the most appropriate government agency or agencies to administer these areas.

BEVERLY SHORES WETLANDS STUDY

Many individuals and groups have called for the inclusion of the Beverly Shores' wetlands in the National Lakeshore. I do not oppose such inclusion, however, in a spirit of compromise with the town board, which opposes annexation, H.R. 3209 mandates a study of the wetlands and their relationship to the park.

The unspoiled wetlands of Beverly Shores are contiguous to the boundaries of the National Lakeshore. These marshes, public and private, are a delicate remnant of a vast grand marsh that once stretched unbroken from Michigan City to northern Lake County.

The study proposed in H.R. 3209 requires the National Park Service to examine these wetlands and recommend management options to Congress—keeping fully in mind the protections afforded wetlands in the Beverly Shores' National Wetland Protection Ordinance.

STUDY OF UNION STATION IN GARY

The National Park Service is to complete a study of the old Union Station in Gary. The study is to encompass a structural analysis of the station and a feasibility report of the possible uses of the structure.

COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS

COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT WITH THE CITY OF GARY

The purpose of the proposed cooperative agreement between the National Park Service and the city of Gary is twofold. One purpose is to take pressure off of the National Lakeshore's nearby West Beach which suffers from overcrowding during the summer months. The other purpose is to provide technical assistance for capital improvements at Lake Street Beach and Marquette Park.

Marequette Park and Lake Street Beach are designed to handle much larger crowds than West Beach and other areas of the National Lakeshore. By providing this assistance, Gary's lakefront usage can be more fully realized and the Park Service can more effectively accomplish its mission to preserve and protect its natural areas.

COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT WITH THE NORTHERN INDIANA PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY (NIPSCO)

One issue which has been unresolved for decades is the NIPSCO Greenbelt. I have always believed that acquisition of the Greenbelt was unnecessary for preservation. Provisions of H.R. 3209 ensure that NIPSCO will continue to preserve the Greenbelt in its natural state and, at the same time, allow the National Park Service to continue to manage the natural resources of the land. Trails now open to park visitor will remain open—preservation and continued access at no cost to the taxpayer.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

RETENTION OF RIGHTS

H.R. 3209 provides two options for homeowners whose lands are placed within the National Lakeshore after August 1, 1989. The generous nature of the options rise from the fact that the parcels where homeowners are present are not essential for park management or immediate access.

The first option will permit the homeowner to enter into a leaseback agreement with the National Park Service to retain noncommercial use of their home through 2010.

The second option would allow the homeowner to enter into a life estate ageement with the National Park Service to retain the noncommercial use of their home until both the primary owner and his or her spouse die.

THE DOROTHY BUELL MEMORIAL VISITOR CENTER

In commemoration and celebration of Dorothy Buell, founder and first president of the Save the Dunes Council, this legislation would rename the Lakeshore's visitor center in her honor. Ms. Buell dedicated her life to preserving the natural beauty of Indiana's Lakeshore. She worked diligently for years to ensure that the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore was established and played a crucial role in the establishment of the National Lakeshore in 1966. Upon his retirement, Illinois Senator Paul Douglas called Dorothy and the Save the Dunes Council, "One of the most unselfish groups of men and women, it has been my pleasure to know."

INCREASE TO THE NATIONAL LAKESHORE DEVELOPMENT CEILING

Of the $20 million development ceiling authorized by Congress, $7 million remains. When fiscal year 1990 appropriated projects, for which appropriations have been made, are completed, only $5 million will remain. This authorization for a $7.5 million increase will ensure that funds for future National Lakeshore improvements can be appropriated by Congress.

ROAD RIGHTS-OF-WAY

Abandoned roadways located within the park's boundaries have been causing problems for some time. In terms of preservation, the unused roads spoil the natural characteristics of the landscape. However, they also pose management problems. Young people have been found drinking and "parking" on the secluded roadways which are difficult to monitor. Illegal dumping has also been a problem.

Under existing law, the Federal Government cannot purchase this publicly owned property. This deters local governments from reverting the right-of-way to the park. As written, this provision would permit the National Park Service to reimburse the affected local government for the cost of transferring the rights-of-way of abandoned roads located within the boundaries of the National Lakeshore. It is my hope that reimbursement will spur the donation of these lands to the National Lakeshore.

In conclusion, I reiterate the need for increased public access to the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. This need has been documented in a 1989 report issued by the Indiana Department of Natural Resources. The report states that "only 3 percent of [Indiana] is in public ownership, so that only a small percentage of land in each region is available for outdoor recreation * * *. Recreation opportunities are fewer in both the industrial north and the rich agricultural central parts of the state where most of the population resides." We must make the most of the public lands we do have.

The Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore Access and Enhancement Act represents the best policy for this national park. It offers visitors a vast array of new opportunities and provides the park with additional room to maneuver. Now is the time to accept the challenges faced by this national park. For, as the National Lakeshore has improved the lives of national visitors and local residents, so too must we continue to improve the Lakeshore.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3209.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JONTZ], an active participant in this debate.

Mr. JONTZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my full support for H.R. 3209, the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore Access and Enhancement Act. I want to commend my colleague and neighbor, Representative PETER VISCLOSKY, for his leadership and initiative on this issue. His hard work on behalf of our National Lakeshore Park has resulted in improved facilities and expanded opportunities for our constituents and for the thousands of Americans who visit this beautiful park annually. H.R. 3209 will further extend and improve the park, and Mr. VISCLOSKY deserves the credit for this important achievement.

I also want to commend Chairman VENTO for his leadership and expertise in crafting the bill which is before us today. The chairman's patience and insight has been invaluable in guiding this piece of legislation through its more difficult days.

Mr. VISCLOSKY has addressed many of the significant improvements that H.R. 3209 will make to the National Lakeshore, so I will not spend time reiterating them. What I wish to address is the section of the bill which extends the Lakeshore Park into Indiana's Fifth Congressional District, the Salt Creek River corridor.

The Salt Creek corridor will extend the park along the creek southward about 7 miles from the point where it now enters the park. This corridor consists of wetlands and other undeveloped riverine environments and provides habitat for such game fish as steelhead trout and coho salmon. The extension of the park upstream along Salt Creek is intended to preserve these wetland environments.

The Salt Creek corridor, along with the Little Calumet River corridor also included in the bill, help to complete the inclusion within park boundaries of the ecological and geological systems which contribute to the uniqueness of the Indiana Dunes.

My professional training is in geology, and as a geologist I am particularly interested in the Salt Creek corridor because it provides insight into the geological history of the park. Unlike the other watersheds presently in the park, which generally run in an east-west direction, Salt Creek flows south to north. The present topography of northwest Indiana is the result of its being the terminal point of the Wisconsonian Glacier some 16,000 years ago. The terminal moraine formed by the glacier, the Valparaiso Moraine, once formed the southern shore of what is now Lake Michigan. Over the intervening centuries, the lake has gradually receded from the moraine leaving a series of aging dune ridges. The Salt Creek corridor slices through these formations and provides a cross-sectional view of the Lakeshore's geologic history unlike any other available in the park.

For these reasons I believe that the inclusion of the Salt Creek corridor is an especially important feature of H.R. 3209.

There has been some controversy over the intentions of Congress concerning the inclusion of the Salt Creek corridor in regard to the acquisition of private property and private homes. It is my understanding, confirmed with discussions with Congressman VISCLOSKY and Chairman VENTO as well as with the Park Service, that the intention of the legislation to acquire from the present property owners only such property rights to the riverine and wetland areas associated with Salt Creek as are necessary to protect and preserve the national values of these areas and no more. Such rights may but will not necessarily extend to acquisition by fee simple. It is not Congress' intention to acquire any developed property along either the Salt Creek or Little Calumet River corridors, and I will insist that this direction is followed by the Park Service as it implements this legislation.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I want to commend Chairman VENTO, Representative VISCLOSKY, and all the members of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands for their diligent work in bringing before us this important bill. The expansions and improvements to the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore for which this bill provides will prove to be wonderful assets to our system of national parks.

I would also like to ask for the chairman's assistance in addressing an area of concern which came to my attention after this legislation was reported by the Interior Committee. I am specifically concerned about some areas along the Salt Creek corridor that have been included in this legislation which are not necessary for the park. It is my desire to preserve the important natural values of the Salt Creek corridor, but at the same time, avoid potential land-use conflicts on adjacent property.

I hope the chairman can assist me in the legislative process to review and rectify this matter.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONTZ. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I will review this matter based on the new information the gentleman made available to me after the Interior Committee reported H.R. 3209. If adjustments in the boundaries of the Salt Creek corridor are necessary, I will assist the gentleman in addressing this matter as the legislation is further considered in the legislative process.

Mr. JONTZ. Reclaiming my time, I thank the chairman for his assistance, and again commend the chairman and my colleague from Indiana [Mr. VISCLOSKY] for the work they have done.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONTZ. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I too want to compliment the chairman of the committee and the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. VISCLOSKY and Mr. JONTZ, for the work all of them have done in trying to come up with a bill that would be appropriate to expand the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. It truly is one of the real wonders of the world.

So often our colleagues will talk about seeing dunes in different areas, and occasionally they will come out and visit the Indiana Dunes or maybe the dunes in southern Michigan, and they get a real appreciation for what sand is and what dunes are. I think that the job particularly that the gentleman from the first district, Mr. VISCLOSKY, has done is to be commended, and I certainly want to associate myself with his remarks earlier, and urge my colleagues to support passage of this bill.

Mr. JONTZ. I thank the gentleman from Indiana's third district, my neighbor, for his comments in support of the legislation.

□ 1810

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3209, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ESTABLISHING GRAND ISLAND NATIONAL RECREATION AREA IN MICHIGAN

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1472) to establish the Grand Island National Recreation Area in the State of Michigan, and for other purposes with Senate amendments thereto and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Senate amendments:

Page 1, line 9, strike out ", botany".

Page 5, line 6, after "shall" insert ", as a condition of acquisition,".

Page 5, line 23, after "children" insert ", stepchildren,".

Page 7, lines 10 and 11, strike out "the date of enactment of this Act" and insert "January 1, 1990".

Page 7, line 16, strike out "The" and insert "Subject to the provisions of subsection 3(b)(8) and subsection (b) of this section, the".

Page 7, line 21, after "Act" insert ": Provided, That the Secretary may not acquire any privately owned lands within the national recreation area other than with the consent of the owner so long as the owner agrees to the restrictions contained in subsection (b)(1) of this section and grants the Secretary a right of first refusal as provided in subsection (b)(2) of this section.

Page 8, line 7, strike out "historically consistent" and insert "architecturally compatible".

Page 9, line 4, after "adopted)," insert "stepchildren,".

Mr. VENTO (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I reserve the right to object in order to inquire of the chairman, are these Senate amendments the technical corrections to the text of the House-passed bill which we discussed?

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this is the Grand Island bill. The request is to concur in the Senate amendments to the bill on the Grand Island Recreation Area in Michigan. Yes; the Senate amendments make some noncontroversial and technical amendments. I am unaware of any objection to them.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in strong support of H.R. 1472, a bill I introduced in the House of Representatives, along with 15 of my colleagues from Michigan.

I would like to thank the chairman of the subcommittee for his work in bringing this bill to fruition. I have had the pleasure to serve with Mr. VENTO on the House Interior Committee for 8 years. Over this time, Mr. VENTO has established himself as a leader in protecting our Nation's precious natural resources, and I want to thank him for all he has done to protect the beautiful resources in my home State of Michigan.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1472 will establish the Grand Island National Recreation Area and authorize the U.S. Forest Service to manage its natural and cultural resources. Located in Lake Superior in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, this 13,000-acre island is one of the most beautiful parcels of land in our State. Grand Island is home to a diversity of fragile flora and fauna that clearly warrant Federal protection. The island contains the largest beaver-formed lake in North America, and is host to many endangered plant and wildlife species.

H.R. 1472 is designed to help the Forest Service better manage the resources of Grand Island. This legislation provides guidance to the Forest Service on many critical management issues, such as timber management, occupancy permits, and private development on the island. I believe that this bill is fair, and it represents the interests of all the involved parties.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, H.R. 1472 is designed to clarify certain management practices by the U.S. Forest Service in the management of Grand Island. When this bill first passed the House of Representatives, I included a statement on the House floor that addressed a few of the issues in the bill. First, it is the intent of the Congress that there will be no commercial timber harvesting on Grand Island. Rather, timber management shall be used only for the specific purposes listed in the bill; including the enhancement of public recreation, scenic quality, and the protection and enhancement of threatened, endangered, or sensitive species. In addition, it is intended that those individuals who currently own homes on Grand Island will be granted occupancy and use permits by the U.S. Forest Service. As long as the users of such permits are in compliance with the conditions of the permit, the permits will automatically be renewed by the U.S. Forest Service. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation so we can protect and preserve this beautiful island for generations to come.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 1472 and the Senate amendments thereto.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

EXTENDING CERTAIN EXCEPTIONS FOR FEDERAL AND MILITARY RETIREES EMPLOYED FOR THE 1990 CENSUS

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4637) to amend Public Law 101-86 to eliminate the 6-month limitation on the period for which civilian and miltiary retirees may serve as temporary employees, in connection with the 1990 decennial census of population, without being subject to certain offsets from pay or other benefits.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4637

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ELIMINATION OF LIMITATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Public Law 101-86 (13 U.S.C. 23 note) is amended by striking section 4.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Sections 2(b) and 3(b) of Public Law 101-86 are each amended—

(A) by striking paragraph (2);

(B) in paragraph (1) by striking "(1)", and by striking "; and" and inserting a period; and

(C) by striking "section—" and inserting "section" and running in thereafer the text of paragraph (1) (as amended by subparagraph (B)).

(2) Public Law 101-86 is amended by redesignating section 5 as section 4.

SEC. 2. PRIOR SERVICE IN EXCESS OF 6 MONTHS NOT AFFECTED

Nothing in this Act shall be considered to make an exemption under section 2 or 3 of Public Law 101-86 applicable to any service performed before the date of enactment of this Act which was in excess of that allowable under section 4 of Public Law 101-86 (as then in effect).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and include extraneous matter, on H.R. 4637, the bill presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to bring before the House legislation that will assist the Census Bureau in maintaining a qualified temporary work force through the remainder of census operations.

I am grateful for the support and assistance of my committee colleagues in this effort.

Last week, the Census Bureau began the enormous task of visiting 37 million households that did not return census questionnaires by mail. This is a task some 70 percent greater than it was in the last census. It will take an estimated 260,000 temporary enumerators to complete this activity. It poses substantial operational difficulty.

Under a law passed by Congress last August, Federal, postal, and military retirees can work for the Census Bureau for up to 6 months without a loss in pay or retirement benefits. However, after 6 months, they are subject to a dollar-for-dollar reduction in benefits.

Many Federal and military retirees began working in key census positions when district offices opened last fall. Nearly 5 percent of the temporary employees nationwide are Federal and military retirees. In some districts, 30 percent of the work force is comprised of these highly valued employees.

Retirees who already have worked for 6 months now are faced with a difficult decision: Whether to stop in midcount or to continue working without compensation. The loss of these managers and supervisors would be extremely disruptive to the Bureau's field operations.

H.R. 4637 will help the Bureau meet its unexpectedly high recruitment and productivity goals by eliminating the 6-month limitation. Retirees will be able to continue in their positions as long as they are needed. The authority for the exemption expires on December 31, 1990.

At this critical juncture in the conduct of the census, the extended exemption authorized by H.R. 4637 will greatly benefit the Bureau's efforts to complete the census in a timely and accurate manner. I urge my colleagues to support this important measure today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4637, and thank my good friend and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population, Mr. SAWYER, for expeditiously handling this legislation.

H.R. 4637 amends Public Law 101-86 to extend the 6-month earnings exemption for temporary census employment for Federal, Postal, and military retirees. This bill will prevent reduction in annuities through the calendar year for these individuals.

Since the mail response rate fell far below the Bureau's projected 70 percent, an additional 56,000 enumerators must be hired to compensate for the increase in number of households that will be visited for followup. Extending Public Law 101-86 increases significantly the pool of qualified applicants available for employment with the Census. These retirees have experience in Government service and bring with them a wealth of administrative and technical skills, as well as a knowledge of and commitment to public service.

The practical effect of H.R. 4637 would allow many top- and mid-level managers and enumerators to continue in their current positions. With the Census Bureau's current recruiting difficulties, the anticipated reduced productivity, and extended field operations, H.R. 4637 would serve as a vehicle to enhance the quality of the Census work force.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER] and the ranking member on the subcommittee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE].

Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER] and congratulate him on bringing this legislation. It is very necessary. It facilitates the ability of the Census to hire folks who are obviously very capable, skilled people who but for this legislation would not be able to continue to serve the Census Bureau in this way.

As a Representative from a jurisdiction which has a large number of folks who fall into this category because obviously, first of all, the Census Bureau itself falls within the Fourth and Fifth Districts of Maryland but also because we have a large number of employees who work in related offices as well.

So I congratulate the chairman for this legislation and believe it will facilitate the work that the Census Bureau is undergoing now, under difficult circumstances at best.

If I might just transgress another second, the gentlelady from Illinois, and say that there has been some criticism of the Census Bureau. I want to say very frankly, Mr. Speaker, that the President in his inaugural address said that the State of the Union is in many respects up to each and every one of us. That is the issue of personal responsibility.

I would hope that every American would take upon himself or herself the personal responsibility of assuring that the Census Bureau can in fact do its job because without the personal responsibility of every citizen of our country they cannot do their job.

So we need to urge the citizens of America to participate, cooperate and facilitate.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his kindly and thoughtful comments. His points are well taken, and I am pleased to associate myself with his remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4637 and commend the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER], and the vice chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE], for bringing this legislation, which is critical to the operations of the 1990 census, to the House floor today. H.R. 4637 will enhance the Census Bureau's ability to retain and attract a quality work force in order to complete the 1990 census.

Mr. Speaker, I am certain that the Members of this body are fully aware of the difficulties the Census Bureau has been experiencing with the mail questionnaires. As a result of the slow rate of response, it will be necessary for the Bureau to conduct a more extensive field operation than initially anticipated.

H.R. 4637 will allow many military, postal, and federal retirees currently employed with the Census Bureau to continue working without any offset to their annuities. This bill is imperative for the Bureau to conduct its operations smoothly and efficiently. By extending the period for earnings exemption through the calendar year, disruption to the current census work force will be averted, as well as increasing the pool of qualified applicant available for census employment.

The 1990 census is the largest and most complex ever undertaken. Data collected in the 1990 census will be used to determine the political, social, and economic realities for our Nation for the next 10 years. We must be willing to work with the Census Bureau and to do whatever is necessary to secure a complete and accurate count. We cannot allow the quality of data to be placed in jeopardy.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 4637, and in supporting all the efforts of the census in the coming months.

□ 1820

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4637.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZATION TO SUBMIT NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR ON H.R. 2273

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be authorized to sign and submit requests to add the name of the following Member to the list of cosponsors on H.R. 2273:

Pursuant to clause 4 of rule XXII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the following sponsor is hereby added to H.R. 2273: Romano L. Mazzoli of Kentucky.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

AWARDING A CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL TO LAURANCE SPELMAN ROCKEFELLER

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1853) to award a congressional gold medal to Laurance Spelman Rockefeller.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 1853

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assumbled,

SECTION 1. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller followed in the tradition of his father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., by enlarging and enhancing the National Park System of the United States, including the donation of five thousand acres on the Island of St. John for the Virgin Islands National Park;

(2) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller was appointed by President Dwight D. Eisenhower as chairman of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission, and his work led to the establishment of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the Wilderness Act, the National System of Scenic Rivers, and other landmark conservation programs;

(3) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller was appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson as Chairman of the 1965 White House Conference on Natural Beauty, and his recommendations brought the concept of natural beauty to urban areas, led to the Highway Beautification Act, and increased State and local awareness of environmental issues;

(4) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller collaborated with Lady Bird Johnson in her quest to beautify the United States and the Capital, and assisted her in the creation of the Lyndon Baines Johnson Memorial Grove in Washington, District of Columbia;

(5) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller served President Richard M. Nixon and President Gerald R. Ford as chairman of Presidential advisory committees on environmental quality, and served on other Federal advisory groups, including the Public Land Law Review Commission and the National Park Foundation;

(6) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller served as a member of the New York State Council of Parks for thirty years and, as its chairman, expanded and modernized the State park system through an innovative bond program which was replicated across the Nation;

(7) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller served as a principal advisor on environmental matters to his brother, Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, and helped to develop the Adirondack Park Agency, the Hudson River Valley Commission, the first State water pollution bond issues, and the first comprehensive State environmental and conservation agency;

(8) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller served as a member and President of the Palisades Interstate Park Commission for forty years and made major donations to expand the Palisades Interstate Park System;

(9) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller contributed to the environmental quality of New York City through his efforts on behalf of the New York Zoological Society and the Bronx Zoo, the New York Aquarium, Central Park, and other parks in the city;

(10) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller, as a parttime resident of Woodstock, Vermont, has contributed to the environmental aesthetics of that community through promotion of the placement of power lines underground, the initiation of watershed planning, and the preservation and display of historic properties and objects;

(11) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller has been the long-time guiding force in three significant private conservation organizations: Jackson Hole Preserve, Incorporated, which has preserved park land in the Grand Tetons of Wyoming, the Virgin Islands, and the Hudson Valley; the American Conservation Association, which has provided support and encouragement for innovative government and private conservation programs; and Historic Hudson Valley, Incorporated, which has preserved outstanding historic properties of the Hudson Valley for public use;

(12) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller has played an important role in creating or leading other private conservation organizations, including Resources for the Future, the National Recreation and Park Association, and the Conservation Foundation; and

(13) Laurance Spelman Rockefeller, in addition to his extraordinary contributions to the environment in the United States, is one of the leaders in the fight against cancer with more than forty years of dedicated work and benefactions to the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

SEC. 2. CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL.

(a) PRESENTATION AUTHORIZED.—The President is authorized to present, on behalf of the Congress, a gold medal of appropriate design to Laurance Spelman Rockefeller in recognition of his leadership on behalf of natural resource conservation and historic preservation.

(b) DESIGN AND STRIKING.—For purposes of the presentation referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary of the Treasury shall strike a gold medal with suitable emblems, devices, and inscriptions to be determined by the Secretary.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $25,000 to carry out this section.

SEC. 3. DUPLICATE MEDALS.

(a) STRIKING AND SALE.—The Secretary of the Treasury may strike and sell duplicates in bronze of the gold medal struck pursuant to section 2 under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, at a price sufficient to cover the costs thereof, including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, and overhead expenses and the cost of the gold medal.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT OF APPROPRIATION.—The appropriation used to carry out section 2 shall be reimbursed out of the proceeds of sales under subsection (a).

SEC. 4. NATIONAL MEDALS.

The medals struck pursuant to this Act shall be considered national medals for purposes of chapter 51 of title 31, United States Code.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from California [Mr. LEHMAN] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HILER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. LEHMAN].

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the bill, S. 1853, authorizes the minting of a congressional gold medal to be awarded to Mr. Laurance Spelman Rockefeller, and bronze duplicates of the medal to be made available to the American public. The bill authorizes an appropriation not to exceed $25,000 to carry out this act, which shall be reimbursed by sales of the medal resulting at no net cost to the Government.

The subcommittee passed, without amendment and by unanimous consent, the House version of the bill, H.R. 3625. The Senate version of the bill, S. 1853, was passed on March 26, 1990, with one minor amendment correcting a drafting error. Other than that one change, the House and the Senate bills are identical. We are considering the Senate bill here today in order to expedite the legislative process so that the Mint shall have adequate time to prepare and produce the medal.

Mr. Rockefeller's contributions as a conservationist are truly extraordinary. Mr. Rockefeller has dedicated a lifetime promoting and giving to our national and State parks, helping to preserve for future generations some of our Nation's most treasured assets. He is primarily responsible for the enlargement of the Palisades Interstate Park System. As President Eisenhower's appointment to chair the Outdoor Recreational Resources Commission, his leadership led to the establishment of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the Wilderness Act, the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System and other important conservation efforts.

Mr. Rockefeller has served in official capacity as an environmental adviser to four Presidents, long before the environment was a popular issue. His personal generosity and his indefatigable environmental concerns are well-known and well-documented. He is certainly deserving of this award.

I want to thank the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL], chairman of the Committee on the Interior, for his leadership on this legislation, and to acknowledge the very hard work done in acquiring the 218 cosponsors that we require in the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs for commemorative medal legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this is a noncontroversial bill that has bipartisan support. The bill was reported by our committee without dissent. I urge its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of a congressional gold medal to Laurance Spelman Rockefeller. We are recognizing Laurance Rockefeller's achievements today as an environmentalist and a humanitarian. He has dedicated over 40 years of his life to environmental and health care causes. He is the type of individual truly deserving of congressional recognition.

I would like to commend Mr. UDALL for the fine work he did on the House version of this bill. He has complied with all of the Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee rules and we appreciate those efforts.

The bill we are taking up today is the Senate bill, S. 1853. S. 1853 is virtually identical to the House bill, H.R. 3625. The language of the bills is standard language for national medal legislation we have used in the past.

Section 1 of the bill describes at great length the truly remarkable achievements of Laurance Rockefeller over the course of his lifetime.

Section 2 authorizes the medal and requires that the design and inscriptions represented on the medal shall be selected by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Section 3 authorizes duplicates of the medal to be minted at no net cost to the Government.

Section 4 designates the medals as national medals.

I am pleased that we can take up the Senate bill today and send this legislation directly to the President. I urge my colleagues to support S. 1853.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, as an original cosponsor of H.R. 3625, which is similar to S. 1853, awarding a congressional gold medal to Laurance Spelman Rockefeller, I am pleased to rise in strong support of this important legislation and I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. LEHMAN], and gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HILER] of the Banking and Finance Subcommittee for bringing this measure to us. I would like to thank the other original cosponsors of this legislation, Mr. UDALL, Mr. FISH, Mr. GONZALEZ, Mr. PICKLE, Mr. PAXON, and Mrs. BOGGS, as well as the distinguished Speaker of the House, the distinguished minority leader, and the majority leader, for their assistance in bringing this legislation to the floor.

Laurance Rockefeller is universally recognized as a monumental founder of the cause for environmental preservation. When the history books are written, Mr. Rockefeller will be remembered for his major role in fostering a new era of environmental concern in the United States. He has served with several administrations beginning with President Eisenhower and concluding with President Ford, but his contributions to our Nation's environmental movement continue and go far beyond his governmental service.

Mr. Rockefeller first served under President Eisenhower as Chairman of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission which led to the establishment of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, and the National System of Scenic Rivers. In 1965, Laurance Rockefeller was appointed by President Johnson to chair the White House Conference on Natural Beauty. This conference led to the establishment of several landmark programs including the Highway Beautification Act as well as other initiatives to promote State and local awareness of environmental issues. In addition, he collaborated closely with Lady Bird Johnson to promote the beautification of our Nation's Capital.

As an adviser to his brother, the late Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, Laurance Rockefeller helped to develop the Adriondack Park Agency, and the Hudson River Valley Commission. As a representative of that region in New York, I fondly remember Laurance Rockefeller as the father of our local environmental conservation movement, and indeed he helped to establish the first comprehensive State environmental and conservation agency in our home State of New York.

Finally, Mr. Rockefeller has served as chairman of the Presidential Advisory Committees on Environmental Quality under both President Nixon and President Ford. In addition to his legendary efforts on environmental matters, Mr. Rockefeller has devoted more than 40 years of his insight, wisdom, benefactions, and tireless assistance to the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

H.R. 3625 instructs the Department of the Treasury to strike a gold medal of suitable design and authorizes $25,000 for this purpose. As we approach Laurance Rockefeller's 80th birthday, I feel confident that enactment of H.R. 3625 will mark an appropriate way for the Congress to celebrate the birth and contributions of this environmental hero. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation awarding Laurance Rockefeller with a congressional gold medal.

□ 1830

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE].

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I would just make an inquiry of my friend, the gentleman from California, and of the ranking member of the subcommittee. First of all, I join the gentleman as a member of that subcommittee certainly in strong support of this legislation. But on the day we reported out this piece of legislation with the overwhelming bipartisan support of the committee, I think there were one or two other pieces of legislation, including a commemorative coin for the USO. I was wondering if I might inquire as to the status of that particular commemorative legislation.

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, to my knowledge, that legislation is in the full committee.

Mr. RIDGE. That one is going to the full committee?

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Yes.

Mr. RIDGE. I might make a private inquiry of the gentleman.

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, let me say that this gentleman does not have any control over that process.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and I appreciate his response.

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3625, of which I am a cosponsor. This bill pays tribute to one of the pillars of our society, Mr. Laurance Spelman Rockefeller, by awarding him a Congressional gold medal for his outstanding work in the areas of historic and natural resource preservation.

On behalf of the Governor and the people of the U.S. Virgin Islands, I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks and appreciation to Laurance Rockefeller. His generous gift of 5,000 acres in the 1950's formed the heart of our national park on the island of St. John. Due to Laurance Rockefeller's donation and foresight, millions of Virgin Islands residents and visitors are able to enjoy one of the most beautiful park lands in the world, and this incomparable scenery will be preserved for generations to come.

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, before us today is a special bill to recognize one of America's greatest conservationists. Laurance Rockefeller, by word and deed, has greatly advanced the causes of conservation and historic preservation throughout the United States. Often acting alone, almost a solitary voice in the wilderness, he has promoted land conservation and helped to set aside natural wilderness areas long before it became popular on the national agenda.

Laurance Rockefeller's contributions have played a major role in fostering a new era of environmental concern in the United States. He has served with five administrations beginning with President Eisenhower and concluding with President Ford.

He was first appointed Chairman of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission under President Eisenhower. His leadership of that Commission resulted in the establishment of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the Wilderness Act, the National System of Scenic Rivers as well as other important conservation programs.

In 1965 his chairmanship of President Lyndon B. Johnson's White House Conference on Natural Beauty brought about many programs that we possibly take for granted today. The Highway Beautification Act is a specific example. In addition, he collaborated with Lady Bird Johnson to promote the beautification of this Nation and it's Capitol.

In more recent time, Laurance Rockefeller has worked closely with Lady Bird Johnson in the promotion of the National Wildflower Center. His personal contributions in cash and time have been marvelous. You may also recall he was instrumental in advancing the designation of the LBJ Memorial Grove here in Washington.

Mr. Speaker, the action the Congress takes today is proper and fitting, and this recognition is long overdue. This congressional gold medal will recognize his contribution and lifelong dedication to the conservation and wise use of America's natural resources and the preservation of its historic recourses.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, on this day when we take up legislation to award a congressional gold medal to Laurance Rockefeller, the words of Lady Bird Johnson come to mind. She recently said, "Among the legions of us who are aware of Laurance's love for and contributions to our country, you'll find no voice filled with more gratitude, praise and deeply-held esteem than mine." It would be difficult to to any better than Mrs. Johnson when attempting to describe my admiration for Laurance and what he has accomplished in the fields of conservation and the environment.

Laurance Rockefeller's contributions have played a major role in fostering a new era of environmental concern in the United States. He has served with administrations beginning with President Eisenhower and concluding with President Ford.

It was apparent from the start that Mr. Rockefeller's path would leave in its wake some indisputably landmark programs. His first Presidential appointment was chairman of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission under President Eisenhower. His leadership on this Commission resulted in the establishment of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the Wilderness Act, the National System of Scenic Rivers, as well as other important conservation programs.

In 1965, his chairmanship of President Johnson's White House Conference on Natural Beauty brought about programs that we possibly take for granted today. He was responsible for the Highway Beautification Act, as well as other rural and urban beautification projects. In addition, he collaborated with Lady Bird Johnson to promote the beautification of this Nation and its Capital.

The United States might be a vastly different place if Laurance Rockefeller chose a different cause. Mr. Rockefeller 's acts of philanthropy with respect to the preservation and conservation of public lands are numerous. To name just two, he donated over 5,000 acres on the island of St. John for the Virgin Island National Park, as well as a sizeable acreage for Grand Teton National Park.

Moreover, Laurance Rockefeller's contributions go beyond the environment. He has been one of the foremost leaders in the fight against cancer through more than 40 years of dedicated work and benefactions to the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

Mr. Speaker, the congressional gold medal has been awarded in the past to groups and individuals in a multitude of endeavors, yet we have never given one in recognition of achievements in the field of conservation and historic preservation. It is high time that someone in this field is honored, and I cannot think of anyone more deserving than Laurance Spelman Rockefeller.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise today in support of H.R. 3625, and to pay tribute to a man most deserving of a congressional gold medal—Laurance Spelman Rockefeller.

Long before the first Earth Day in 1970, Laurance Rockefeller's contributions played a major role in fostering a new era of environmental concern in the United States. Throughout the Eisenhower, Johnson, Nixon, and Ford administrations, Mr. Rockefeller spearheaded efforts to preserve national and State parks. He was instrumental in the establishment of numerous invaluable park system programs in New York State, including park land in my district, the historic Hudson Valley.

Following in the tradition of his grandfather and father, Laurance Rockefeller's dedicated leadership and generous financial support have made him a world leader in the protection and preservation of our environment. Mr. Rockefeller is uniquely qualified to be the first recipient of this award in the field of natural resources conservation and historic preservation—and I join 232 of my colleagues in saying there is no one more deserving.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. LEHMAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1853.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks, and include extraneous material, on S. 1853, the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

FAA CIVIL PENALTY ASSESSMENT DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM EXTENSION

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 2533) to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to extend the civil penalty assessment demonstation program, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 2533

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. (a) Section 905(d)(4) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 App. U.S.C. 1475(d)(4)) is amended by striking "28 month" and inserting in lieu thereof "31-month".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective as of April 30, 1990.

SEC. 2. Section 511 of the Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982 (49 App. U.S.C. 2210) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) USE OF AIRPORT GENERATED REVENUES IN HAWAII.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—Notwithstanding the limitation on the use of revenues generated by airports contained in subsection (a)(12) of this section, the State of Hawaii may use for eligible transportation projects revenues generated on the sale at off-airport locations in the State of duty-free merchandise under a contract between the State and a duty-free sales enterprise.

"(2) LIMITATIONS.—

"(A) APPLICABILITY PERIOD.—This subsection only applies to revenues generated after the date of enactment of this subsection and before December 31, 1994, on sales referred to in paragraph (1) and to amounts in the Airport Revenue Fund of the State of Hawaii which are attributable to revenues generated before the date of enactment of this subsection on such sales.

"(B) COVERAGE OF AIRPORT CAPITAL AND OPERATING COSTS.—The State of Hawaii may use under paragraph (1) revenues generated on sales referred to in paragraph (1) in a fiscal year of the State only if the amount of such revenues, when added to the amount of funds received in such year by the State for airport capital and operating costs from all other sources (including revenues, unrestricted cash on hand, and Federal funds made available under this Act for expenditure at such airports), exceeds 150 percent of the projected airport capital and operating costs for such year.

"(C) ANNUAL CAP.—The Amount of revenues generated on sales referred to in paragraph (1) in a fiscal year of the State of Hawaii which the State may use under paragraph (1) may not exceed the amount of the excess determined under subparagraph (B) for such year.

"(D) AGGREGATE CAP.—The maximum amount of revenues which the State of Hawaii may use under paragraph (1) may not exceed $250,000,000 in the aggregate.

"(E) REDUCTION DUE TO LANDING FEE INCREASE.—If any fee levied or collected by an airport operated by the State of Hawaii for a rental charge, landing fee, or other service charge from an aircraft operator for the use of airport facilities is increased in the period beginning on the date of enactment of this subsection and ending December 31, 1994, by a percentage which is greater than the percentage change in the Consumer Price

Index of All Urban Consumers for Honolulu, Hawaii, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor in such period and if, as a result of such fee increase, there is an increase in the revenues derived from such fee, the $250,000,000 limit established by subparagraph (D) shall be reduced by the amount of the projected increase in such revenues in such period less any portion of such increase which is attributable to changes in such Index in such period.

"(F) DETERMINATION OF COSTS AND PROJECTED INCREASES IN REVENUES.—The State of Hawaii shall determine capital and operating costs and revenues under subparagraph (B) and the amount of projected increases in revenues from fee increases referred to in subparagraph (E). Determinations shall be submitted by the State to the Secretary for approval. A determination shall be treated as approved by the Secretary unless the Secretary disapproves such determination on or before the 30th day after the State submits such determination to the Secretary.

"(G) ELIGIBILITY FOR DISCRETIONARY GRANTS.—The State of Hawaii shall not be eligible for a grant under section 507(c) in any fiscal year in which the State uses under paragraph (1) revenues generated on sales referred to in paragraph (1). If the State receives a grant in a fiscal year in which the State as a result of this subparagraph is not eligible to receive a grant, the State shall repay all amounts received by the State under such grant to the Secretary for deposit in the discretionary fund established under section 507(c).

"(3) PERIOD OF USE.—Revenues generated on sales referred to in paragraph (1) in the period of applicability set forth in paragraph (2)(A) may be used under paragraph (1) in any fiscal year of the State, including a fiscal year of the State beginning after December 31, 1994.

"(4) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection, the following apply:

"(A) AIRPORT CAPITAL AND OPERATING COSTS.—The term 'airport capital and operating costs' means costs incurred by the State of Hawaii for operation of all airports operated by such State and costs for debt service incurred by such State in connection with capital projects for such airports, including interest and amortization of principal costs.

"(B) DUTY-FREE SALES ENTERPRISE; DUTY-FREE MERCHANDISE.—The terms 'duty-free sales enterprise' and 'duty-free merchandise' have the meaning such terms have under section 555(b) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1555(b)).

"(C) ELIGIBLE TRANSPORTATION PROJECT.—The term 'eligible transportation project' means a project for construction or reconstruction of a highway on a Federal-aid system which will facilitate access to an airport and which is located within 10 miles by road of such airport.

"(D) FEDERAL-AID SYSTEM; HIGHWAY.—The terms 'Federal aid system' and 'highway' have the meaning such terms have under section 101 of title 23, United States Code.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLINGER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON].

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the bill now before us extends for 3 months the authority of the Federal Aviation Administration to assess civil penalties in small cases. In addition, it includes a compromise on legislation previously passed by both Houses to allow the state of Hawaii to fund highway construction with revenues generated by a duty-free shop associated with the Honolulu Airport.

Civil penalties for violations of FAA regulations are an important part of FAA's program for ensuring aviation safety. In 1987, FAA was given authority for a 2-year demonstration program allowing FAA to assess civil penalties in cases involving penalties of less than $50,000. Previously, penalties in those cases were assessed by the courts. In support of the demonstration program, FAA pointed out that in these small cases it was difficult to persuade a U.S. attorney to take a case to a U.S. district court and that, in any event, these types of cases were not an efficient use of the time of U.S. attorneys of the courts.

Unfortunately, in implementing the demonstration program, FAA adopted procedural regulations without following the Adminsitrative Procedure Act requirements of notice and comment. In addition, the regulations themselves were severely criticized as being unfair to defendants.

Late in the last congressional session, legislation was enacted extending the program through April 30—yesterday—to give the FAA an opportunity to improve its procedural regulations. FAA has been highly responsive and last week issued rulemaking proposals which, when finally adopted, will meet the major objections which have been raised.

In the short time since FAA's recent rulemaking, it has not been possible to get an agreement with the other body on a long-term extension of the program. A 3-month extension should give us the time needed to develop and pass legislation dealing with the program on a more permanent basis.

While technically the program expired yesterday, the bill establishes an effective date of April 30. This will ensure that when it is enacted, FAA will have authority to continue the more than 4,000 civil penalty cases now under way. The effective date will also permit FAA to assess penalties for violations occurring between April 30 and the date the bill is signed.

The provision on Hawaii duty-free revenues is a compromise on legislation which has been previously passed by both Houses. Before outlining it, however, I do want to commend and pay special tribute to Mr. AKAKA. It was through his efforts that the Hawaii provision of this bill has reached the floor today. Countless hours were spent crafting this, and without his skillful negotiating, none of this would have been possible.

Mr. Speaker, under current law, all revenues generated by an airport, including revenues generated by a duty-free shop associated with an airport, must be spent on the airport. The State of Hawaii has asked for a limited exception to this requirement to permit it to spend duty-free shop revenues for the construction of highways which will facilitate access to an airport.

We are willing to support this exception because of unique circumstances in Hawaii. Hawaii is almost totally dependent on air service for transportation between the islands, and between Hawaii and the rest of the United States. Because of this situation, we do not regard the pending legislation as a precedent for allowing revenues generated by airports in other States to be spent off the airport.

The pending legislation also contains several conditions designed to ensure that the revenues involved will be spent for purposes related to the airport and that revenues will not be used off the airport until airport needs have been met. Under the conditions in the bill, duty-free revenues may be spent for nonairport purposes only when the airport has generated enough revenues to cover 150 percent of its operating and capital costs. The bill further provides that the use of duty-free revenues for highway construction is limited to a 5-year period and that there is an overall cap of $250 million on use of revenues off the airport. The cap on total spending is reduced if the airport raises landing fees beyond the rate of increase in the Consumer Price Index.

The bill further provides that, in any year in which the airport uses duty-free revenues for off-airport purposes, the airport may not receive a discretionary grant under the Airport Improvement Program. Finally, the bill provides that the only purpose for which duty-free revenues may be spent off the airport is to construct highways which are located within 10 miles of the airport and which will facilitate access to the airport.

With these conditions, we believe that the legislation is a reasonable approach to unique circumstances in the State of Hawaii.

In sum, S. 2533 will promote aviation safety by continuing civil penalties. It also represents a good compromise on the Hawaii issue. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as has been explained, the FAA's Civil Penalty demonstration program expired at the end of April. I rise in support of S. 2533, to extend the program for an additional 90 days.

By way of background, the Civil Penalty Demonstration Program was established in 1987 to give FAA an enhanced ability to bring enforcement actions against carriers, pilots, and airports found to have violated Federal regulations.

Prior to demonstration program, the FAA had to rely completely on the U.S. attorney's office to prosecute all contested charges. As Members can appreciate, if the charges carried relatively small fines or penalties, the U.S. attorney was not inclined to pursue these cases, given the press of other business.

Consequently, the FAA's ability to enforce its regulations was seriously undermined. Individuals charged with violations knew that if they challenged the FAA, chances were very good that they would not be taken to court.

The Civil Penalties Demonstration Program remedied this flaw. It gave the FAA the ability to impose small civil penalties administratively without having to go through a U.S. attorney.

The FAA's management of their new responsibilities has not been without severe criticism, however. Nearly all aviation user groups have argued that the regulations developed to charge, adjudicate and assess violations lacked essential fairness.

The FAA has attempted to address these criticisms. Within the last 2 weeks, through rulemaking the FAA significantly amended their rules of procedure, and they've done so in such a fashion that most user groups are now satisfied with the program.

Nevertheless, Members of the House and Senate have continued to express a desire to hold hearings on the civil penalty program with the possibility that amendments be offered. Under this legislation, their rights will be preserved. By extending the program for 90 days, Congress must revisit this issue before the end of July or the program will lapse.

A second feature of S. 2533 allows the State of Hawaii to retain excess earnings from its off-airport duty-free shop and use these funds to finance highway projects. Current law requires all earnings from duty-fee shops to be spent on airport operations. Hawaii's duty-free shops earn extraordinary profits, largely from visitors arriving from Pacific rim nations. Hawaii faces an unusual dilemma of being unable to spend all of their revenues on legitimate airport projects. Rather than allow these funds to sit idle, up to $250 million will now be put to use in needed highway projects.

S. 2533 gives Hawaii the authority to divert excess earnings for Federal-aid highway projects. The bill conditions these funds to insure that airport projects do not suffer at the expense of highways, and further, this exception is one-time only, with a 5-year limitation.

I want to emphasize to Members that Hawaii presents a very unique set of circumstances—from its heavy reliance on tourism to its self-contained system of roads and highways—that are not shared by other U.S. airports having duty-free shops. I believe Hawaii merits this exception.

Mr. Speaker, I support this legislation and encourage all Members to support it as well.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that in the 4 months since our last extension of the civil penalty assessment demonstration program, the FAA has agreed to make needed improvements in the program. However much I would like to think that these improvements resulted from the concerns that I and other Members of Congress have expressed regarding the FAA's skirting of due process procedures, in reality, these changes are coming about because a U.S. court of appeals recently ruled that the FAA had improperly adopted rules to establish this civil penalty assessment program.

In other words the court had to step in and stop what these people were doing. And what were they doing with this Civil Penalties Assessment Demonstration Program? One of the things they were doing at the FAA chief counsel's office was to see to it that the final judge and the prosecutor were all there in the same office. Under this new system the person who is charged with a violation has the right to appeal to a DOT low judge who conducts a hearing. This is a waste of time because if the FAA loses, there is a final appeal—where—to the FAA final decisionmaker. The FAA prosecutes and the FAA makes the final decision.

No one disagrees with the goal of enhancing aviation safety. I believe that the FAA should have every tool it needs to ensure safety for the flying public. But I continue to have deep reservations about aspects of the FAA's enforcement procedures.

At a hearing last year before the House Aviation Subcommittee, I criticized the FAA for supporting an enforcement program that allows the prosecutor to also be the judge and the jury. Such a system is a gross violation of the basic principles and spirit of American jurisprudence.

How the FAA has implemented this program up to now is not due process. And due process will not be served until the FAA agrees to separate the roles of prosecutor and judge.

I hope that with the extension of this civil penalty program for an additional 3 months, the Congress will again take a close look at the FAA's enforcement procedures and take steps, if necessary, to ensure that the tenets of due process are being served.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE], a very valued member of the Subcommittee on Aviation.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. Speaker, I think a lot of things have already been said about this issue before us, but I think that the ranking member said it very clearly, that perhaps an exception to the rule is justified in the State of Hawaii.

Mr. Speaker, I have had a chance to talk to the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. SAIKI], and she explains to us that there is a very unique situation.

My concern about this has been the foot in the door, the fact that it may be something that is justified in one case, one isolated case, and yet that is the foot in the door that many Members of this body would like to be able to use to jar some of the money out of its designed purpose for expansion and improvements of airports and airways and into some other area, and I think that with this it has been said several times.

This is the only exception. That is an understanding that we can have, several of us, and still support this issue.

It had been my original intent to oppose this. I have an extensive background in general aviation. I have been concerned for quite some time about the idea of this civil penalty program.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] said it very well when he said that we should have an independent judicial review, and there are a lot of Members here who have backgrounds in the judiciary, which I do not, who made this very clear.

However, Mr. Speaker, I would say this: that perhaps somebody, such as the NTSB, would be a more appropriate body to have this power.

I would like to say also that I speak for several Members of the House in saying that this would be the last extension, this 90-day extension of the civil penalty program, as it is in place right now, that we will support, and I am talking about several members of this Subcommittee on Aviation who share this feeling. We were told toward the end of the last session that the extension that we had at that time until April 30, would be the last one.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think this is a good time to serve notice on behalf of a number of members of the Subcommittee on Aviation that we do not want any more extensions, and we want to have this system in place where the judicial process would be a more fair process.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA].

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON], the chairman, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR], the subcommittee chairman, the ranking members, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLINGER], and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT], for their efforts on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is very important to the transportation superstructure of Hawaii, and I appreciate all this committee has done to fashion the bill and to bring it to the floor.

My colleagues, as we debate this bill today, the Hawaii State Legislature is in the closing days of their legislative session. Our counterparts in Hawaii are awaiting word of the passage of this bill so that they can consider legislation of their own and bring this session to a close. They have spent many months hammering out a rapid transit proposal, and this bill will ensure that the State's airports and surrounding highways will not be overlooked. Tourism is what drives Hawaii's economy, and that is why this bill is very, very important.

As a consequence of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, we can undertake improvements for a highway system which will provide more convenient access to the State's airports, a vital link with the outside world. Hawaii has experienced a tremendous increase in foreign visitors, the majority of whom patronize duty-free shops. The State receives substantial fees from duty-free sales, but until now these revenues could only be used within the confines of the airport. With this bill, the State will be able to invest up to $250 million in much-needed improvements that will benefit everyone who uses our airports, whether they be in business, business travelers, or vacationers or State residents.

□ 1850

Because Hawaii has become such a popular destination point, we now expect that airports on three of our islands, Maui, Kauai, and the Big Island, will be granted status as international airports.

In addition to the civil penalties component of the bill, this legislation will permit the State of Hawaii to use funds from sales generated by duty-free shops for badly needed highway construction projects. The reason why the bill contains this authority is that the sales generated by duty-free shops, and consequently the revenues that accrue to the State from such sales, are of such magnitude that it makes it impossible for the State to spend these funds solely on airport facilities.

There are a number of rather stringent restrictions associated with the special authority contained in this bill. First, although the bill grants the State the authority to use duty-free revenues for highway construction, the State must first maintain in reserve an amount equal to 150 percent of the capital and operating costs of the airport system.

Second, the duty-free revenues in excess of this 150-percent threshold may only be spent on highway improvements within 10 miles of an airport.

Third, the measure caps the total amount that can be utilized for highway construction at $250 million.

And fourth, the Hawaii provision will expire on December 31, 1994.

Even with these restrictions, we expect that Hawaii will enjoy up to $250 million in highway improvements that will enhance access to our airports.

This will open the opportunity for direct international flights to our neighbor islands. Highway projects to improve access to those airports must be undertaken now so that travelers and residents will not be inconvenienced by this influx.

Mr. Speaker, I support this bill and ask my colleagues to pass this bill.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. SAIKI].

Mrs. SAIKI. Mr. Speaker, I do support this legislation. I think that it is a great idea to allow Hawaii to be able to use surplus funds from the airport fund, which are really from the duty-free facilities in Hawaii.

However, while I am going to support the bill, I do have one concern about this legislation. It was my understanding early on that the bill would allow the use of these funds, not just for highways, but also for the rapid transit project planned for Honolulu. I believe this would make a great deal of sense, since the rapid transit project would also link the airport to urban areas, and would facilitate access to the airport.

Furthermore, the State legislature in Hawaii is currently struggling over an expansion to struggle with the funding for the rapid transit project for Honolulu. Certainly these funds would make it much easier for them to face up to the fact that 70 percent of the moneys must come from Hawaii, and these duty-free moneys certainly are generating out of Hawaii.

So I feel strongly that if this money were available to be used for rapid transit projects, it would tremendously assist those of us in the State; however, I understand that this intent was already included in the House version of the measure before it went over to the Senate that mass transit was included.

I really cannot understand how the process broke down so that we have the legislation before us today that does not include the words "mass transit." I think the intent was there. Something happened.

Since the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA] was a negotiator, I wanted to hear from the gentleman since he understands about the transit project; I wanted to hear from him and he understands the necessity for the rapid transit project. I yield to the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA] to explain to us why mass transit is not included.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. SAIKI. I yield to the gentleman from Hawaii.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me.

This bill, as you see, came from the Senate and it is the Senate bill that we are taking up here and not the House bill.

The Senate bill does not include mass transit.

I would tell the gentlewoman from Hawaii that part of the reason why it was not included was that I felt personally it was moot, moot because UMTA requires that funds that are used for mass transit must be committed and dedicated funds, and funds that will come from this source are not dedicated and committed. Therefore, it does not meet the requirements.

Mrs. SAIKI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for answering part of the question. I was not asking whether these funds could be used as a dedicated source to fund the rapid transit system. I am saying, however, that the plans on the books do allow for the rapid transit system to be hooked up to the airport. Therefore, there is this access that has to be funded. Therefore, if the $250 million were available for that, it would certainly be a help to getting the rapid transit project on the books; so this money would have been helpful. The gentleman would have to agree with that, I am sure.

The gentleman does say this bill originated in the Senate and that is what we are voting on today. My understanding is that, shall we say, the very intelligent and concerned House Public Works Committee, of which the gentleman is a member, did consider this at one time, and as it went into negotiations it may have been dropped at the urging of someone that I do not really understand or know about. I thought maybe the gentleman could clarify that.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlewoman will yield further, the mass transit inclusion, as I pointed out, would have been moot because of the fact that UMTA required a stable, dedicated and committed source, which this does not bring about at all. So therefore, the mass transit could not be added on to this bill.

Mrs. SAIKI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I do support the bill even without the mass transit language. I would certainly have preferred it. I introduced a bill to cause this to be in effect, but under the rules as we have it in the House, I will not be able to do so, but I would like to have it on RECORD that the moneys would have been very helpful to Honolulu to be used for a rapid transit system in conjunction with the highway system that is already on the books.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman was correct that the committee leadership was agreeable to making mass transit projects eligible for funding at the suggestion of the proponents of the legislation.

However, those representing Hawaii desired legislative language which would have included transportation projects in addition to mass transit and highways.

The Hawaii negotiators did not want to reference mass transit specifically. Since the House negotiators wanted to be precise, the proposal was rejected and the Hawaii negotiators withdrew their proposal.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I was going to ask somebody to yield, but I think I have some time.

I just wanted to read briefly the bill that we did pass last time through the House on November 20, 1989.

□ 1900

It says,

Notwithstanding the limitations on the use of revenues generated by airports contained in subsection (a)(12) of this section, the State of Hawaii may use for highway construction which would facilitate access to airports revenue generated on the sale of all airport locations in the State of duty-free merchandise under a contract between the State and a duty-free sales enterprise.

That is what we passed last time.

We also discussed, and this was what we felt: This bill establishes an exception to the general rule in the airport grant program, and airports receiving grants must agree to spend all of their revenue for the operation or capital development of the airport, and because this is an exception, we wanted to keep it as narrow as possible, and for this reason we only allowed duty-free revenues to be used for highways, and, too, those would improve access to the airport. It was our understanding that Hawaii plans highway construction of $500 million or more on roads within 10 miles of the airport which are eligible under the bill, and this is more than double the $250 million which the bill would allow Hawaii to spend.

For this reason we felt there was no need to also make mass transit eligible at the time we took it up.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, the Senate bill now before us extends for 3 months the authority of the Federal Aviation Administration to assess civil penalties in small cases. The Senate bill also includes a compromise on legislation we previously passed dealing with the use of revenues generated by a duty-free shop associated with the airport in Honolulu.

Civil penalties are an important tool in ensuring aviation safety. Under current law, the FAA's civil penalty authority expired on April 30. The brief 3-month extension provided by the Senate bill will avoid a disruption of the 4,000 pending civil penalty cases, and will give us an opportunity to consider fully legislation to continue the program on a longer term basis. I would note that FAA has recently proposed new procedural regulations for the program and that these proposed regulations meet the objections which had been raised about the fairness of the original regulations for the program.

The Senate bill also includes a compromise on legislation previously passed by both the House and the Senate to allow the State of Hawaii a limited exception from the general requirement in the airport grant program that all revenues generated by an airport must be spent for airport purposes. This limited exception in the Senate bill will permit the State of Hawaii to spend excess revenues generated by a duty-free shop in Honolulu for the construction of highways to facilitate access to Hawaii's airports. It should be clearly understood that this provision does not involve Federal funds but merely deals with how Hawaii can use revenues generated by a duty-free shop.

We believe that the limited exception permitted by the Senate bill is warranted by unique circumstances in the State of Hawaii. Unlike other States Hawaii is totally surrounded by water and uniquely dependent on air service. This unique circumstance warrants allowing Hawaii to use some of the excess revenues generated by its duty-free shop for the construction of highways which will facilitate access to its airports.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the legislation now before us is in the public interest and should be adopted by the House.

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 2533, to extend the Federal Aviation Administration's [FAA] Civil Penalty Demonstration Program for an additional 3 months.

The civil penalty demonstration program is an important safety tool in the hands of the FAA. Although the program has experienced some shortcomings, Congress would be sending the wrong message on safety if we were to allow the program to expire.

A 3-month extension is necessary to correct one last problem. The civil penalty program, as currently constructed, gives FAA the option of "forum shopping" cases involving airmen violations. This is wrong, it isn't fair, and it should be corrected. In cases involving airmen violations, the FAA should have the option of deciding whether to take action on an airmen's certificate or levy a fine. The FAA should not decide what type of action to take based on which appeals process, whether through the Department of Transportation or the National Transportation Safety Board [NTSB], gives FAA a better result. This is what the current civil penalty program allows.

Only Congress can act to make sure the appeals process for airmen violations is heard by the same agency. I look forward in the next 3 months to another hearing on the civil penalty demonstration program and the opportunity to offer language that will transfer the adjudicatory function in airmen's cases to the National Transportation Safety Board.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 2533.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on S. 2533, the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING PRINTING OF JOINT COMMITTEE PRINT ENTITLED "MEDICAL ALERT"

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 282) authorizing the printing of the joint committee print entitled "Medical Alert" as a House document.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 282

Resolved, That the joint committee print entitled "Medical Alert", dated October 2, 1989, shall be printed as a House document. In addition to the usual number, 3,000 copies of the document shall be printed for the use of the Joint Economic Committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TORRICELLI). Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from California [Mr. BATES] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLINGER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES].

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 282, to authorize an additional printing of "Medical Alert," the Joint Economic Committee staff report summarizing a series of nine hearings on "The Future of Health Care in America," held by the Subcommittee on Education and Health, and chaired by our colleague from New York [Mr. SCHEUER].

There is no more pressing issue facing this Nation than the mounting cost of health care. We spend an enormous 12 percent of our gross national product on health care, 50 percent more than any other developed nation. Yet, 37 million Americans still lack health insurance.

The recent report of the Pepper Commission, outlining a plan for universal health coverage, was a giant step in the right direction. Combined with the recommendations in "Medical Alert," we now have a prescription for expanding medical coverage while reining in health care costs. Currently, we are the only developed nation besides South Africa that does not provide universal access to medical care.

Due to widespread interest in "Medical Alert," the committee staff has distributed all except a handful of the 1,000 copies which were originally produced. In addition to responding to additional requests for the report, the committee is planning to send out copies to leaders in the public health field who may find this report to be a valuable resource.

This resolution, introduced by Mr. HAMILTON and Mr. SCHEUER, would provide the committee with 3,000 copies, which should meet foreseeable demand. Printing the report as a House document, rather than a committee reprint, would make it available through the House and Senate documents rooms as well as the Federal depository libraries.

I place in the RECORD a copy of a recent article from the Washington Post, outlining the report's findings and their relevance for a national health care plan.

[From the Washington Post, Mar. 25, 1990]

FUNDING THE PEPPER PLAN WITHOUT NEW TAXES

(By James H. Scheuer)

This month, almost two years after it was mandated by Congress, the Bipartisan "Pepper" Commission on Comprehensive Health Care, chaired by Sen. Jay Rockefeller (D-W. Va.), released its report—with a resounding thud.

"It is a non-starter," said one panel member. "It is legislatively dead."

The reason for the cool reception of this bold and courageous report was its estimate of a daunting $66.2 billion annual federal price tag for universal health coverage and long-term care for the elderly—without any concrete recommendations on how to pay for it. Critics have accused the administration of killing the plan, by vetoing any suggestion that taxes be increased to foot the bill.

But we should address one simple reality: we can fully fund all of its proposals without raising a penny of new taxes. How? By squeezing the waste and fat out of America's chaotic health-care system, which would free more than enough funds to pay for the Pepper plan.

In the last Congress, I chaired nine days of hearings in the Joint Economic Committee on how to get a handle on our escalating health-care costs. Witnesses testified that one-fifth to one-quarter of all U.S. health-care spending is wasted—on excessive paperwork, duplicative services and unwarranted procedures, including unnecessary operations, prescription drugs, X-rays and other tests.

According to Joseph Califano, former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, "about 25 percent of that $550 billion spen[t in 1988] on health care is wasted." This year's health bill will be more than $600 billion, meaning we will waste about $150 billion, or more than twice the amount necessary to fund the Pepper program fully.

Immediate steps can and should be taken to eliminate the waste:

Institute Standards of Care—Americans undergo coronary bypass surgery four times as often as Western Europeans, despite the fact that in most cases there is no increase in life expectancy beyond what could be achieved less expensively by alternative procedures. The price tag for this one set of unnecessary surgeries, at $25,000 an operation, exceeds $5 billion annually. To eliminate such procedures, doctors need rational treatment guidelines based on "outcomes research." A doctor should not perform a procedure, and an insurance company should not pay for it, unless guidelines based on scientific studies suggest it will be beneficial.

Rationalize Malpractice.—Skyrocketing malpractice rates have increased the cost of health care. Physicians pass the costs of insurance to their patients. From 1983 to 1985, malpractice premiums nearly doubled, from $2.5 billion to $4.7 billion.

Fear of lawsuits has spurred physicians to engage in "defensive medicine." They prescribe numerous tests and procedures simply to reduce their risk of being found negligent in a court of law. In a recent American Medical Association poll, 70 percent of physicians admitted to practicing defensive medicine, estimated to add $10.6 billion to annual medical costs.

Modifying our malpractice systems, perhaps requiring unanimous jury verdicts or establishing a standardized formula for court awards, could reduce these costs significantly. Alternately, we could abandon our entire method of malpractice adjudication in favor of a system of administrative boards, utilizing medication and arbitration to reach out-of-court settlements or incorporating a "no-fault" insurance philosophy.

Standardize Costs and Procedures.—Americans pay an average 20 percent surcharge on medical care, totaling tens of billions of dollars, just to handle paperwork, according to Prof. Uwe Reinhardt, a Princeton health economist. As a first step to standardizing health-service costs and payment procedures, the federal government should institute a truly uniform "fee schedule" for Medicare, which would set an example for private insurers.

The United States spends an enormous 12 percent of GNP on health care—more than any of the other industrialized nations in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. Yet, we are eighth in life expectancy, and a disgraceful 20th in infant mortality.

Our system is the envy of the world for America's affluent, who can afford our top doctors and hospitals. But our poor, elderly and working men and women without insurance either forgo medical treatment or wind up clogging hospital emergency rooms for treatment of routine maladies, at extraordinary expense to society.

The Pepper Commission plan would go on a long way toward rectifying this situation by providing cradle-to-grave health care for every needy American. Before we discard the plan as a "non-starter," we should take a hard look at creative ways to fund it—without raising taxes—by using money now being wasted.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES. I am happy to yield to the gentlewoman from Ohio.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I want to say, as a member of the Committee on House Administration, that I compliment the gentleman for pushing for the printing of this very important document, and as someone who has authored the national health universal coverage and long-term care bill, 4253, I want to thank the gentleman for mentioning that our country is the only industrialized country that does not have access to health insurance for all of its citizens with the exception of South Africa.

We certainly should be ashamed of ourselves that 77 million Americans have little or no insurance. These are working Americans who have little or no insurance, and hopefully the publication that makes people more aware of the problem and gives people more of a will to do something about it will assist in passing legislation to make that the right, national insurance the right, of each and every person in our country.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and certainly support the resolution.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 282, authorizing the printing of the joint committee printed entitled "Medical Alert" as a House document.

Originally printed October 2, 1989, at 1,000 copies the requests for this valuable document covering a range of topics from health care costs and trends to the role of modern technology, from the health-care needs of the elderly to ethical and legal problems faced by doctors throughout America have almost exceeded the original supply; and requests continue to pour in. In addition to filling these requests, the Joint Economic Committee plans to send copies to those leaders in the public health field who may find this report of particular interest and beneficence. With an additional 3,000 copies, made available through the House and Senate document rooms as well as the Federal depository libraries, these demands can be adequately met.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 282 is legislation that deserves our full support. With a relatively modest increase in funding, Medical Alert can continue to serve our citizens by offering the leaders of the medical and health-care professions with the most updated information on areas affecting the quality and accessibility of their services. I urge my colleagues to support this bill and help us continue to spread the information and ideas contained in "Medical Alert."

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 282).

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on House Resolution 282, the resolution just agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

JEWISH HERITAGE WEEK

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Public Works and Transportation be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 241) to designate the week of May 6 through 13, 1990, as "Jewish Heritage Week," and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to use the time under this reservation simply to yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], who is the chief sponsor of this joint resolution.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Joint Resolution 501 and its Senate companion measure, Senate Joint Resolution 241, both of which commemorate May 6-13, 1990, as Jewish Heritage Week. As sponsor of the House measure with my colleague from New York, Mr. SCHEUER, I would like to thank the many cosponsors of this bill for their support.

Jewish Heritage Week has become an annual part of the American-Jewish year. It notes important dates on the Jewish calendar that take place during the spring, such as the festival of Passover, commemorating the passage to freedom of the Israelites from bondage in Egypt. On its heels, just a few days ago, numerous ceremonies around this country were conducted in memory of the 6 million innocent Jewish victims of the Nazi Holocaust.

I was especially pleased that this year, the keynote speaker at the Days of Remembrance ceremony in our Capitol Rotunda was the Honorable Jack Kemp, Secretary of HUD, who, prior to his assuming that position, was one of the strongest supporters of Jewish Heritage Week in this body.

Jewish Heritage Week also marks the 42d year of the independence of the State of Israel. As the sole, stable democracy in the Middle East, the United States has strongly continued to support Israel in her ongoing struggle for survival.

This year, Mr. Speaker, Jewish Heritage Week takes on added significance. For the first time in recent memory, there are many thousands of Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

These men, women, and children have been denied the opportunity to explore and learn about their Jewish heritage. All that many of them know are a few words of Yiddish gleaned from a grandparent. They know precious little about their background, only that being Jewish in the Soviet Union meant being persecuted. Others persisted in efforts to learn Hebrew and Jewish customs, despite the fact that until recently this was patently illegal.

For them, this year's commemoration of Jewish Heritage Week means the freedom to be Jewish, without official repercussions from the state, and the freedom to grow and learn. It is therefore with great pleasure that I invite our colleague's support for the adoption of this legislation, so that Jewish Heritage Week can be viewed by all as something that has the official sanction of the American Government. As substantive proof of our everlasting commitment to freedom and religious expression.

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bill before us, House Joint Resolution 501, Jewish Heritage Week, introduced by myself and my distinguished colleague from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. Speaker, for over 200 years, this country has thrived on a richness of cultural diversity, a richness that has torn other countries apart, but has served to make America a strong, cohesive, democratic nation—a beacon of freedom, a bastion of liberty for the world.

Multitudes of people have flocked to the shores of this country because they heard that this was a land where they would be free to be different—free to participate in the marketplace of ideas. In this environment, many of these cultures have prospered and made contributions of immense proportions.

Mr. Speaker, by designating May 6 to 13 as Jewish Heritage Week, this House seeks to celebrate and to honor the contributions of one such culture. Jewish history, culture, and traditions—Jewish heritage—is inextricably linked with the American experience.

Since the birth of America—but especially at the turn of the last century and before and after World War II—Jews have fled oppression in Europe and elsewhere for the hope of freedom in the United States. That hope has been fulfilled, and the American-Jewish community has flourished, both within itself and as an integrated part of our Nation.

This year, the theme of Jewish Heritage Week is "American-Jewish Women of Valor."

American-Jewish women have served at the frontiers of American history. From the day the first Jewish settlers arrived in 1654, through the Revolutionary War, and into the frontiers of space, American-Jewish women have played vital roles.

They have led battles for social equality:

Ernestine Rose—a leader of the women's suffrage movement and Gloria Steinem—feminist leader and author.

They are leaders in the media:

Ellen Goodman—Pulitzer Prize winning columnist,

Katherine Meyer Graham—Chairman of the Board of the Washington Post, and Barbara Walters—television journalist.

They are our Government leaders:

Nita Lowey—U.S. Congresswoman,

Barbara Boxer—U.S. Congresswoman,

Madelin Kunin—Governor of Vermont, and

Clair Shulman—New York borough president in Queens, NY.

They are writers, poets, musicians, and actresses:

Cynthia Ozick—novelist,

Emma Lazarus—poet,

Gertrude Stein—author,

Maxine Kumin—Pulitzer Prize winning poet,

Beverly Sills—opera singer,

Carly Simon—singer,

Barbara Streisand—singer,

Lauren Bacall—actress,

Debra Winger—actress, and Wendy Wasserstein—playwright.

They are scientists:

Rosalyn Yalow—Nobel Laureatte,

Mathilde Krim—AIDS researcher, and Ellen Baker—astronaut.

And some, like Challenger astronaut Judith Resnick, have served with the ultimate loyalty to our Nation, paying the highest price.

These names are a mere sampling from the honor role of American-Jewish women.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution, to recognize the achievements and contributions of the American-Jewish woman, to commemorate and celebrate Jewish heritage, and—in so doing—to celebrate the diversity that is the glory of all Americans.

□ 1910

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BATES). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 241

Whereas May 10, 1990, marks the forty-second anniversary of the founding of the State of Israel;

Whereas the months of April, May, and June contain events of major significance in the Jewish calendar, including Passover, the anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising, Holocaust Memorial Day, and Jerusalem Day;

Whereas the Congress recognizes that an understanding of the heritage of all ethnic groups in this Nation contributes to the unity of this Nation; and

Whereas understanding among ethnic groups in this Nation may be fostered further through an appreciation of the culture, history, and traditions of the Jewish community and the contributions of Jewish people to this Nation: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of May 6, 1990 through May 13, 1990, is designated as "Jewish Heritage Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States, departments and agencies of State and local governments, and interested organizations to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL DRINKING WATER WEEK

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 230) to designate the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, under my reservation I simply want to acknowledge the work of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], the chief sponsor of this joint resolution, and I yield to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE] and rise to also acknowledge the work of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], and thank him for his effort and cite from the statement that the gentleman would have delivered had he been able to be here this afternoon, the fact that it is easy to take clean drinking water from the tap for granted, but we need to recognize that the only way we can continue to have clean, safe drinking water as a nation is to have wise planning and cautious monitoring. We have made gigantic leaps in building an infrastructure which makes water virtually available anywhere for people where they live or travel. But maintaining a water supply and the means to transport it is a continous process.

The effort that the sponsor of this worthwhile undertaking today has made to share the importance of that kind of investment that we make as a nation is important, and I thank the gentleman for his effort.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I want first of all to thank the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER], the chairman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population, and its ranking minority member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE]. I also thank my good friend BILL FORD, who is chairman of the full Post Office and Civil Service Committee. As original sponsor of House Joint Resolution 460, the House companion resolution, I am here today to strongly support the passage of Senate Joint Resolution 230, which declares the week of May 6, 1990 through May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week." With the dates marking the celebration about to begin, we have the opportunity today to reaffirm our commitment to the protection of something we have all grown to take for granted: safe, clean water we can drink and use.

It is easy to take having clean water from the tap for granted. But we need to realize that the only way we can continue to have safe, clean drinking water as a nation is with wise planning and cautious monitoring. During National Drinking Water Week, I anticipate numerous scheduled activities and programs to educate the public in water conservation and to highlight the need to continue efforts begun under the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act.

Thousands of toxic sites still threaten aquifers and rivers throughout our Nation. Pesticides, dioxin, and radon have been found in our ground water, and lead has raised concern in several of our cities. We are not merely talking about water to drink. What we are talking about is water that is safe to use. Water that is free of contaminants, free of carcinogens, water which we may drink free of fear. The name of this resolution should actually be "National Safe Drinking Water Week." That is what we are really talking about.

We have made gigantic leaps in building an infrastructure which makes water available virtually anywhere people live or travel to, but maintaining a water supply and the means to transport it is a continual process. Unfortunately, it is easy to take water from the tap for granted, but this need not be so. It can take a single act of nature or man to shock us into the horrible realization that safe drinking water will not continue to remain available.

Several national groups, including the American Water Works Association and the National Water Alliance, have joined in the support of this legislation and also hope to use this event to educate the public in water conservation and pollution.

Every year our demand for water increases and the available supply becomes more restricted. Pollution taints much of that supply, and in the last several years nature has been increasingly short in replenishing our reserves. The National Drinking Water Week is being set aside in the hope of making people more aware and more appreciative of this vital commodity which is essential to life. I want to thank all my colleagues who supported this measure and who realize the significance of our water resources. I believe this resolution is a fitting way to carry on our commitment to the environment, a commitment that was restated with the observance of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day. We must continue to work to ensure the preservation of water.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 230

Whereas water itself is God-given, and the drinking water that flows dependably through our household taps results from the dedication of the men and women who operate the public water systems of collection, storage, treatment, testing, and distribution that insures that drinking water is available, affordable, and of unquestionable quality:

Whereas the advances in health effects research and water analysis and treatment technologies, in conjunction with the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1986 (Public Law 99-339), could create major changes in the production and distribution of drinking water;

Whereas this substance, which the public uses with confidence in so many productive ways, is without doubt the single most important product in the world and a significant issue of the future:

Whereas the public expects high-quality drinking water to always be there when needed; and

Whereas the public continues to increase its demand for drinking water of unquestionable quality: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, is designated as "National Drinking Water Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such period with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs designed to enhance public awareness of drinking water issues and public recognition of the difference that drinking water makes to the health, safety, and quality of the life we enjoy.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS AND NATIONAL PET WEEK

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 236) designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I simply reserve the right to object to acknowledge the work of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GUARINI], the chief sponsor of this joint resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 236

Whereas 1990 marks the 75th anniversary of the American Humane Association's "Be Kind to Animals Week" and the 10th anniversary of "National Pet Week", sponsored by the American Veterinary Medical Association, the Auxiliary to the American Veterinary Medical Association, and the American Animal Hospital Association;

Whereas animals and pets give companionship and pleasure in daily living, share the homes of nearly 50,000,000 individuals or families in the United States, and provide special benefits to elderly persons and children;

Whereas the people of the United States have a firm commitment to promote responsible care of animals and pets and guard against cruel and irresponsible treatment;

Whereas teaching kindness and respect for all living animals through education in schools and communities is essential to the basic values of a humane and civilized society;

Whereas the people of the United States are grateful to the veterinary medical profession for providing preventive and emergency medical care and assistance to animals, spaying and neutering animals to combat overpopulation, and contributing to the education of animal owners; and

Whereas the people of the United States are indebted to animal protection organizations, State humane organizations, and local animal care and control agencies for promoting respect for animals and pets, educating children about humane attitudes, and caring for lost, unwanted, abused, and abandoned animals: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 6 through 12, 1990, is designated as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL TRAUMA AWARENESS MONTH

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 224) to designate the month of May 1990, as "National Trauma Awareness Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so simply to acknowledge the work of my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON], the chief cosponsor.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 224

Whereas more than eight million individuals in the United States suffer traumatic injury each year;

Whereas traumatic injury is the leading cause of death of individuals less than forty-four years of age in the United States;

Whereas every individual is a potential victim of traumatic injury;

Whereas traumatic injury often occurs without warning;

Whereas traumatic injury frequently renders its victims incapable of caring for themselves;

Whereas past inattention to the causes and effects of trauma has led to the inclusion of trauma among the most neglected medical conditions;

Whereas the people of the United States spend more than $110,000,000,000 on the problem of trauma;

Whereas the problem of trauma can be remedied only by prevention and treatment through emergency medical services and trauma systems; and

Whereas the people of the United States must be educated in the prevention and treatment of trauma and in the proper and effective use of emergency medical systems: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 1990 is designated as "National Trauma Awareness Month", and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF HEAD START

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 490) commemorating May 18, 1990, as the 25th anniversary of Head Start, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I simply do so to acknowledge the work of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], the chief sponsor of this joint resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague and subcommittee chairman on the Human Resources Subcommittee of the Education and Labor Committee, DALE KILDEE, for doing the work necessary to introduce this resolution. As many of my colleagues know, Chairman KILDEE is the most dedicated and effective advocate for the Head Start Program we have in Congress.

The Education and Labor Committee, under Mr. KILDEE's leadership, recently reauthorized Head Start, which currently serves approximately 450,000 American children. This is only about one-fifth of the children eligible to participate in Head Start, and the reauthorization which the committee completed today will increase Head Start funding with the goal of including every eligible child in a Head Start Program.

It is fitting that we commemorate the 25th anniversary of the Head Start Program.

Head Start is of great and proven efficacy in helping disadvantaged children enter school on equal footing with their more advantaged peers.

Children who have attended Head Start are held back less, are absent less, and need fewer placements in special education.

Just as important, children in Head Start have fewer cases of anemia, more immunizations, better nutrition and, in general, better health than their peers.

Head Start is one of the best investments this country can make in the future.

We know that for every $1 invested in quality preschool education, such as Head Start, we save more than $4.75 that would have been spent later on for special education, public assistance, and the costs of crime.

Children who attend Head Start are more likely to become the literate, educated, and employed adults America will depend on in the future.

So I commend Mr. KILDEE for bringing the important occasion of the 25th anniversary of Head Start to the attention of all of our colleagues, and look forward to working with him over the next 25 years on behalf of this important program.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I introduced House Joint Resolution 490 on February 27, 1990. Like the Head Start Program it honors, this resolution has received a great deal of bipartisan support.

May 18, 1990, marks the 25th anniversary of Head Start. House Joint Resolution 490, calls for the celebration of this important milestone. Project Head Start was launched in 1965 as part of the war on poverty to help ensure that economically disadvantaged children began school on an equal basis with their more advantaged peers. At the time Head Start was a pioneer in a unique approach to helping children, emphasizing strong parental involvement and comprehensive service delivery. This approach is reflected in the program's broad set of objectives. These include working to improve children's health; aiding their emotional, social, and motivational development; improving and expanding their ability to think, reason and speak clearly; and helping children and their families to gain greater confidence.

From President Johnson to President Bush this program has provided a head start experience to more than 11 million economically disadvantaged children. This resolution recognizes the important contributions of Head Start parents, teachers and volunteers during the past 25 years. These are the true heroes of the success of this vital program.

It is appropriate that this legislation come before the House today as the full Education and Labor Committee reported H.R. 4151, the Head Start reauthorization legislation, this morning. While House Joint Resolution 490 celebrates the past 25 years of success, the reauthorization builds on that success and provides a sound foundation for the children and families who will participate in the Head Start Program during the next 25 years. It would set authorizations at levels which would enable all eligible 3 and 4 year olds to participate within 4 years while maintaining and improving the quality of the program.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. TORRES. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure today to pay tribute to one of the most successful legacies of President Lyndon B. Johnson's "war on poverty," the Head Start Program. To celebrate this special milestone, the Los Angeles Early Childhood Federation of Teachers, American Federation of Teachers Local 1475, AFL–CIO, is sponsoring a special 25th anniversary dinner on Friday, May 11, 1990.

Project Head Start was launched in 1965 as an 8-week summer program by the Office of Economic Opportunity. It was designed to help families break the cycle of poverty by providing preschool children with a comprehensive program to meet their emotional, social, health, nutritional, and psychological needs. Over the years, Head Start evolved into an 8-month program and has been enthusiastically received by educators, child development specialists, community leaders, and parents across the Nation. Last year in California, Head Start served 35,835 preschoolers and 450,000 nationwide. Since its inception, the Head Start Program has served over 10.9 million low-income children and their families.

Head Start is a well-established and successful Federal program that remains innovative in its methods and philosophy. The program has made a significant impact on communities and early childhood programs by focusing attention on the importance of early childhood development, especially the first 5 years of life. The program has been a leader in nationwide efforts to improve the cognitive abilities of young children.

Mr. Speaker, on Friday May 11, 1990, the Los Angeles Early Childhood Federation of Teachers, American Federation of Teachers Local 1475, AFL–CIO, is sponsoring a special 25th anniversary dinner honoring Head Start and the Plaza de la Raza Head Start State Pre-School. I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting Project Head Start, particularly the Plaza de la Raza Head Start State Pre-School which for 25 years has worked toward "Building America's Future."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 490

Whereas on May 18, 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson announced the launching of the Head Start program;

Whereas Head Start has provided comprehensive services, including health, education, and social services, and parent involvement opportunities to more than 11,000,000 children and their families since 1965;

Whereas Head Start helped to ensure that children are prepared to succeed in school and become productive adults;

Whereas Head Start has been a pioneer in developing successful approaches for meeting the needs of young children and strengthening early childhood development programs;

Whereas Head Start has been a model for involving handicapped children and now more than 13 percent of Head Start participants are handicapped chidren;

Whereas Head Start now serves more than 450,000 children in every State, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Pacific Territories, and in Native American and migrant programs throughout the country;

Whereas Head Start provides children with a learning environment and varied experiences that help them develop socially, intellectually, physically, and emotionally in a manner appropriate to their age and stage of development;

Whereas Head Start maximizes the strengths and unique experiences of each child;

Whereas Head Start guarantees that children receive medical and dental screening and follow-up treatment, including necessary immunizations;

Whereas Head Start helps children become physically capable of learning by providing adequate meals and snacks to help meet their daily nutritional needs;

Whereas Head Start directly includes parents in decisionmaking for the program's planning and operation;

Whereas for every five children enrolled, more than four Head Start parents are providing a volunteer service;

Whereas more than 30 percent of Head Start staff members are parents of current or former Head Start children;

Whereas members of the Head Start staff have shown a high degree of dedication to children and families across the country;

Whereas Head Start has been widely recognized by the business community, policymakers, and child development experts as an important investment in the future of our country, one that should be made for all eligible children; and

Whereas the Congress supports Head Start's goal of ensuring the availability of comprehensive services to all eligible children: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 18, 1990, is hereby commemorated as the 25th anniversary of Head Start, and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe such day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on Senate Joint Resolution 241, on Senate Joint Resolution 230, Senate Joint Resolution 236, Senate Joint Resolution 224, and House Joint Resolution 490, the joint resolutions just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA 1991 BUDGET REQUEST AND 1990 BUDGET SUPPLEMENTAL REQUESTS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 101-186)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

In accordance with the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, I am transmitting the District of Columbia Government's 1992 Budget request and 1990 Budget supplemental requests.

The District's general fund 1991 operating budget request is $3,214 million. Total 1991 Federal payments anticipated in the District's budget are $450 million. The District's 1990 general fund budget supplemental request contains $111 million in cost increases and $131 million in budget authority rescissions, for a net decrease of $20 million. This transmittal does not affect the Federal budget.

There are three District budget issues to which I would direct your attention. First, I encourage you to continue the abortion funding policy that the Congress established in the District's 1989 and 1990 appropriations laws, which prohibit use of both Federal and local funds for abortions.

Second, the 1991 Budget proposes to modify and make permanent the 1990 pilot project that requires the District of Columbia to charge Federal establishments directly for water and sewer services. Inappropriate charges and excessive usage have been eliminated through this pilot project. As a result, Federal appropriations under the pilot program for water and sewer services for 1990 will be roughly $4 million (or about 12 percent) lower than under the old, lump-sum payment system.

Third, I ask that the Congress reinstate the President's apportionment authority over the Federal payment to the District of Columbia. Directing immediate disbursement of the Federal payment at the start of the fiscal year increases Treasury's cost of borrowing. Further, the Congress very clearly did not intend to exempt this payment from sequestration in the original Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act as current law permits.

GEORGE BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 1, 1990.

REPORT CONCERNING NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO NICARAGUA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 101-187)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

I hereby report to the Congress on developments since my last report of October 25, 1989, concerning the national emergency with respect to Nicaragua that was declared in Executive Order No. 12513 on May 1, 1985. This report also provides final information on total Administration expenses directly incurred in exercise of emergency authorities pursuant to that order from May 1, 1985, through my termination of the national emergency on March 13, 1990. Executive Order No. 12513 prohibited: (1) all imports into the United States of goods and services of Nicaraguan origin; (2) all exports from the United States of goods destined for Nicaragua except those destined for the organized democratic resistance; (3) Nicaraguan air carriers from engaging in air transportation to or from points in the United States; and (4) vessels of Nicaraguan registry from entering United States ports. On March 13, 1990, in Executive Order No. 12707, 55 Fed. Reg. 9707 (March 14, 1990), I terminated the emergency declared with respect to Nicaragua and lifted the economic sanctions imposed on that country, in response to the successful completion of a democratic presidential election in Nicaragua.

1. The declaration of emergency was made pursuant to the authority vested in the President by the Constitution and laws of the United States, including the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq. ("IEEPA"), the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1601 et seq. ("NEA"), chapter 12 of title 50 of the United States Code (50 U.S.C. 191 et seq.), and section 301 of title 3 of the United States Code. The termination of emergency and removal of sanctions were made pursuant to the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and laws of the United States, including those just noted. This report is submitted pursuant to 50 U.S.C. 1641(c) and 1703(c).

2. The Office of Foreign Assets Control ("FAC") of the Department of the Treasury issued the Nicaraguan Trade Control Regulations implementing the prohibitions in Executive Order No. 12513, effective May 7, 1985, 50 Fed. Reg. 19890 (May 10, 1985).

3. Since my report of October 25, 1989, fewer than 20 applications for licenses have been received by FAC with respect to Nicaragua, and the majority of these applications have been granted. Of the licenses issued in this period, some authorized exports for humanitarian purposes, covering donated articles beyond the scope of the exceptions to the export ban. Certain licenses authorized the export of equipment to La Prensa, the major opposition publication in Nicaragua, as well as to other opposition press groups. A license was also issued to the Free Trade Union Institute of the AFL-CIO to export equipment and supplies to the Nicaraguan Confederation of Trade Union Unity in Managua for use during the elections that were held on February 25, 1990, in Nicaragua. Our licensing action was taken pursuant to Public Law 101-119, which was enacted by the Congress to provide assistance for free and fair elections in Nicaragua.

4. Since my last report, several cases have been referred to the FAC civil penalties division for civil penalty actions. The companies in question are based in the United States and engaged in unauthorized exports to Nicaragua from the United States. We expect at least four of these exporting companies to be assessed penalties.

In addition to cases currently under civil penalty consideration, there are approximately 34 companies under active investigation by the U.S. Customs Service. These cases involve unauthorized importation and/or exportation of goods between the United States and Nicaragua.

5. The U.S. Government expects to have greatly improved relations with Nicaragua now that the new Nicaraguan government has taken office, particularly in light of President Chamorro's commitment to democratization and to a free market economy. For these reasons, I terminated the national emergency with respect to Nicaragua on March 13, 1990.

6. The expenses incurred by the Federal Government in the period from November 1, 1989, through May 1, 1990, that are directly attributable to the exercise of powers and authorities conferred by the declaration of the national emergency with respect to Nicaragua are estimated at $119,667.48, all of which represents wage and salary costs for Federal personnel. Personnel costs were largely centered in the Department of the Treasury (particularly in the Customs Service, as well as in FAC and the Office of the General Counsel), with expenses also incurred by the Department of State and the National Security Council.

7. For the full period of the national emergency with respect to Nicaragua (May 1, 1985, through March 13, 1990), the total expenditures of the Federal Government directly attributable to the exercise of powers and authorities conferred by the declaration of the national emergency are estimated at $1,309,783.48, all of which represents wage and salary costs for Federal personnel. Personnel costs were largely centered in the Departments of State and the Treasury, and the National Security Council.

8. The February 25, 1990, democratic election in Nicaragua ended the unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States previously posed by the policies and actions of the Sandinista government in that country, and led to my termination of the national emergency to deal with that threat. Accordingly, this is the last periodic report that will be submitted pursuant to 50 U.S.C. 1703(c). This report also constitutes the last semiannual report and the final report on Administration expenditures required pursuant to 50 U.S.C. 1641(c).

GEORGE BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 1, 1990.

□ 1920

GENERAL LEAVE

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include therein extraneous material, on the subject of the special order today by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BATES). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

ANSWERS TO FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT THE AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTLETT] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, the Senate has passed, and three House committees have completed, consideration of the Americans with Disabilities Act [ADA], H.R. 2273 and S. 933. The Committee on the Judiciary is the only House committee in which consideration is pending. Below are answers to frequent questions raised by business persons:

DEFINITIONS

Question. What are the 900 classes of disabilities covered by the ADA?

The ADA does not cover 900 classes of disability. The ADA includes a functional rather than a medical definition of disability. An individual with a disability is one who—has, has a record of, or is regarded as having—a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits a major life activity. (Sec. 3(2)[1]) This is the identical definition that has been in disability discrimination law for Federal contractors since 1973.

In order to be covered under the ADA an individual must meet this definition and be qualified for the job in question. The ADA defines "a qualified individual with a disability" as one who, with or without reasonable accommodation, can perform the essential functions of the job. (Sec. 101(7))

An employer is expected to provide reasonable accommodation (Sec. 101(8)) to such an individual if it would not be an "undue hardship." "Undue hardship" is defined as "an action requiring significant difficulty or expense." (Sec. 101(9))

An employer is allowed to establish qualification standards that may include a requirement that an individual with a contagious disease or infection not pose a direct threat to the health and safety of others in the workplace. (Sec. 103(b))

An employer is allowed to set alcohol and drug free workplace policies. (Sec. 104(c)) An individual who is using illegal drugs would not be protected under the ADA.

An applicant or employee covered under the ADA, if he or she sued, would have to charge and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission or court would have to find, that an adverse employer action was because of the applicant's or employee's disability as defined by the ADA.

Thus, in layman terms a person is protected by the ADA, if he or she has an impairment that substantially limits a major life activity, is otherwise qualified for the position, does not require a reasonable accommodation that would be a significant expense to the employer, does not have a contagious disease that is a direct threat to others, and is not using illegal drugs or drinking alcohol on the job.

Q. What does the term "undue hardship" mean? Would hiring a reader at $6.00 per hour to accommodate a $5.00 per hour blind clerk be considered an undue hardship?

The hypothetical posed would clearly be an undue hardship, assuming the question is a continuous "reading" requirement. On the other hand, hiring a $6.00 per hour reader for one hour per year would not be an undue hardship.

The factors to be considered in determining whether an action would be an "undue hardship" (defined as an action requiring significant difficulty or expense) are both the financial resources of the site and the resources of the parent company. Both factors would be involved in a reasonable test. Within this context, the overall size of the business; the number, type, and location of its facilities; and the type of operation, including the composition and structure of the work force, would also be considered. Since 1973, the essential judgement in determining an undue hardship has been determining what is "reasonable." The ADA would not change that. (Sec. 101(9)(B))

Q. What is meant by "readily achievable?" Is the cost of an accommodation measured in relation to the financial resources of the commercial enterprise (parent company) or of the particular establishment (store or facility)?

In terms of the question posed, both the resources of the parent company and the specific facility would be considered.

"Readily achievable" means "easily accomplishable and able to be carried out with little difficulty or expense." It is a lesser standard than "undue hardship."

In determining whether an action is "readily achievable," factors to be considered include: the overall size of the business with respect to the number of its employees; the number, type, and location of its facilities; the overall financial resources of the business and the financial resources of that facility; the type of operations maintained by the company, including functions of work force, geographic separateness and administrative relationship to each other. (Sec. 301(5))

Q. If an able-bodied employee who is about to be terminated for cause, claims a relationship with a disabled individual, can he or she claim discrimination by association and be protected by the ADA?

Given the hypothetical posed, the terminating employee would have to prove that the employer knew of the association and was terminating the employee because of that association, and not because he or she was otherwise qualified. (Sec. 102(b)(4))

EXAMINATIONS, ALCOHOL, AND DRUGS

Q. What pre-employment tests are permitted or prohibited by the ADA? (physicials? drug tests?)

The ADA allows employers to require medical examinations after a conditional offer of employment. (Sec. 102(c)(3))

In the ADA, drug testing is not considered a medical examination. Employers may test for use of illegal drugs at any point prior to and after employment. (Sec. 104(d))

Q. Must an employer hire or continue to employ a worker who is in a drug or alcohol rehabilitation program?

The ADA would require an employer to hire or continue to employ a qualified individual if that individual is not using illegal drugs. (Sec. 104(b)) Such protection is not provided for alcoholics.

Under the ADA the employer is allowed to set alcohol and drug free workplace policies that include: prohibiting the use of alcohol or illegal drugs at the work place by all employees; requiring that employees shall not be under the influence of alcohol or illegal drugs at the work place; and holding a drug user or alcoholic to the same qualification standards for employment or job performance and behavior as others, even if any unsatisfactory performance or behavior is related to drug use or alcoholism. (Sec. 104(c))

Q. What kind of medical monitoring is permitted or prohibited by the ADA?

As currently written, the ADA would prohibit medical monitoring such as that associated with corporate wellness programs. The Judiciary Committee version of the ADA to be marked up may remove this prohibition. (Sec. 102(c)(2)(A))

ACCOMMODATION AND ACCESS

Q. If the employee lounge or rest room is on a lower or upper floor, must an employer provide an equal facility on the main floor for a mobility-impaired employee?

Only if the cost is not significant and thus is not an undue hardship. Options like reallocating the use of space and moving furniture or redesignating who could use a rest room (male, female) on the floor on which the disabled employee worked, likely would not be an "undue hardship." Constructing an entirely new rest room likely would be an "undue hardship."

Q. Must all the aisles in a store be widened to accommodate wheelchairs?

No. The ADA does not require that aisles be widened. It does require access to shopping services, if making such services accessible is readily achievable; that is, "easily accomplishable and able to be carried out without much difficulty or expense." Thus, widening aisles is one way of providing access, but there are others: reorganizing the placement of frequently purchased items at the front or front end of aisles; making customer assistants willing to retrieve items for those with disabilities; taking phone orders for mailing or pick up at curb side; and providing catalogs and flyers.

ALTERATIONS

Q. Must all sales and checkout areas be retrofitted to accommodate disabled employees or disabled customers? What retrofits are required?

The work areas would not have to be retrofitted. Only "reasonable accommodations" would be required to the extent that such accommodations would not be an "undue hardship"; that is, not a significant difficulty or expense.

[1] Section number references are to the version of the ADA reported out by Education and Labor.

For disabled customers, the removal of barriers must be "readily achievable"; this is, "easily accomplishable without much difficulty or expense." (Sec. 302(b)(2)(A))

Q. If a store is damaged by vandalism or theft, will the repairs trigger a "major structural alteration?" What are the responsibilities in such a situation?

The term "major structural alteration" was deleted in the version of the ADA reported out by the Committee on Education and Labor. The Committee added that accessibility-related alterations are not required if the costs are "disproportionate to the overall alterations in terms of cost and scope." This provision also specifically excludes the installation of elevators in building of less than three stories or having less than 3,000 feet per story. This exclusion does not apply to a shopping center, shopping mall, or professional office of a health care provider. (Sec. 302(b)(2)(A)(vi))

Q. If a store is moved to a temporary location following a hurricane, fire, or other natural disaster, must the temporary worksite be fully accessible during renovation of the primary location?

If employment were involved, then the "undue hardship" standard, "significant difficulty or expense," would apply. If public accommodations were involved, then the "readily achievable" standard, "easily accomplishable and able to be carried out without much difficulty or expense," would apply.

Q. If a two-floor store has a basement where merchandise is stored, must an elevator be installed?

No, it would not be required for an existing building unless building an elevator could be easily accomplishable and could be carried out without too much difficulty or expense. In the case of new construction or renovation, installation of an elevator would be required if it is three stories or more, or is a shopping mall, or an office of a health care provider.

DAMAGES

Q. What "monetary damages" can be assessed in the event of a successful charge of discrimination in public accommodations?

None, except in a lawsuit brought by the Attorney General involving pattern and practice. The Attorney General must specifically request such damages. These damages do not include punitive damages. (Sec. 308(b)(2) (A) and (B), and (4))

H.R. 4700, THE CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT FISH AND WILDLIFE RESTORATION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. FAZIO], is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be an original cosponsor of legislation introduced today by my neighbor in California, Representative GEORGE MILLER, to begin a comprehensive program to restore the fish and waterfowl populations of California's Central Valley. Mr. MILLER's H.R. 4700 can be viewed as an enlargement on a concept embodied in H.R. 3613 by another of my neighbors, Representative DOUG BOSCO. This bill would implement a plan developed under the auspices of the State of California to restore the Sacramento River's salmon fishery. I cosponsored that bill and continue to support it.

Both of these bills are necessary. H.R. 3613 focuses directly on one major problem and would authorize definite measures to solve it. H.R. 4700 takes a broader, longer term look at what should be done to restore to the Central Valley something approaching the numbers of fish and waterfowl that once abounded there. Some of the elements of Mr. MILLER's larger package can be defined fairly clearly now. In particular, his bill includes the Upper Sacramento River Fishery Restoration Plan, and would maximize the potential of existing waterfowl refuges. Other elements of the program are more remotely understood. Their outlines, costs and benefits still need to be defined. The bill itself recognizes this fact by authorizing a series of studies and directing that the administration return to Congress with proposals to solve these longer range problems.

It is important that Congress move quickly to implement those aspects of the fish and waterfowl restoration program which are clearly enough defined to obtain political consensus on. It is also important to distinguish between those measures which can be implemented now and those which need to be defined for congressional authorization in a year or two.

Lastly, it is important to recognize that a division of responsibilities and costs which might be appropriate for the near term elements of the program may not continue to be appropriate for the measures to be proposed following submittal of the Interior Secretary's plans several years from now. For instance, while the Federal Central Valley Project has had a major impact on the fish and wildlife habitats of the Central Valley, it has been by no means the only impact on the Central Valley. The State, local districts, and individuals have also had their effects, as has spreading urbanization and human development of all sorts, particularly on wetlands in the Bay and at the junctures of historic water routes. A tendency might exist to hold the CVP or elements within the CVP responsible for more than their share of the problem simply because the CVP is readily identifiable and because it is available for Congress to use as a tool. We should resist that tendency.

I know Mr. MILLER is aware of these considerations and of the concerns which have been prevalent in California over the last several years as this general issue has risen in the public debate. His legislation as introduced gives every indication that he is proposing a vehicle for agreement and solutions. California is ready for agreement and solution. I look forward to working actively with him to facilitate them.

THE 42D ANNIVERSARY OF THE STATE OF ISRAEL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, 42 years ago, at midnight on May 14–15, 1948, the 5th and 6th days of Iyar 5708, under the Jewish calendar, a little over one half million Jews, driven by a vision and a desire to create a Jewish homeland, declared their independence.

This creation of the State of Israel represented the outcome of centuries of struggle and suffering for Jews in their quest to obtain political and religious freedom, and today, Israel remains the beacon of hope for hundreds of thousands of Jews who are finally being allowed to leave the Soviet Union, after years of tyranny and religious persecution at the hands of the communists.

During the past 42 years, Israel has survived and endured. It has perserved through its fight for independence and through further incursions in 1956, 1967 and 1973, by hostile Arab neighbors, who refused to recognize Israel's right to exist. After each encounter and each act of Arab aggression, Israel renewed its search for peace. Israel continues in this elusive objective on the difficult road to peace.

Although today Israel may be struggling internally over how to achieve lasting peace in the Middle East, and political parties may differ as to which may be the best approach to achieve this objective, most of the Arab world is intent on destroying this tiny nation. While the Arab community is still deadlocked over whether it should ever make peace with Israel at all, Israel remains committed to living in peace with these same Arab neighbors.

Mr. Speaker, on the 42d anniversary of Israeli independence, I am glad to join with the citizens of the State of Israel, and their many friends in the 11th Congressional District of Illinois, which I am honored to represent, and throughout the world, who are celebrating this milestone in the history of the Jewish people. May this year bring us closer to achieving a lasting peace in the Middle East, so that Israel may continue to grow and prosper.

LEGISLATION TO CLOSE THE STRATEGIC HOME PORT AT STATEN ISLAND, NY, AND STOP FURTHER CONSTRUCTION AT OTHER NEW STRATEGIC HOME PORTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join today with my colleague, Congresswoman PATRICIA SCHROEDER, to introduce a bill to close the new Navy homeport under construction in Staten Island, NY, and to put on hold all construction at the five other new homeports.

The Seapower Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee held a joint hearing on April 24, 1990 with the Military Installations Subcommittee chaired by Congresswoman SCHROEDER. At that hearing, the General Accounting Office testified that it was their firm recommendation that "We believe the expenditure of additional funds on new homeports should be curtailed until the Navy decides exactly what it needs."

Our subcommittee also heard the Mayor of New York, David Dinkins, testify persuasively that New York does not want and cannot afford a new homeport at Staten Island. Eleven of the 14 members of the New York City Congressional delegation and 16 members of the New York City Council urged us to close the base.

Our bill will implement the recommendations of the General Accounting Office and will close the homeport in New York. New homeports may have made sense when we were heading for a 600-ship Navy. However, today we have a force of 550 ships, and that number will likely decline. We need a thorough review of the Navy's future force structure and basing needs. Until such a review is completed and considered by Congress, our bill is the only reasonable and prudent step to take at this time.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, today Representative CHARLES BENNETT and I are introducing legislation to close the strategic homeport at Staten Island, NY, and to stop all further construction at the other five new strategic homeports. I was an opponent of the original strategic homeporting scheme when Navy Secretary John Lehman first proposed it. I did not find the rationales convincing and I found the cost exorbitant.

Now, 5 years later, instead of looking at 600 ships in the Navy, we are looking at 420. And, the General Accounting Office told us in 1986 that there would be no homeless ships even with no new homeports. Obviously, the cost of adding an additional ship to the ports at San Diego, Norfolk, or Jacksonville has got to be far cheaper than building a whole new port at Staten Island, Everett, or Ingleside.

Representative BENNETT's subcommittee on seapower and my military construction subcommittee held a joint hearing on strategic homeporting last week. The Mayor of New York, David Dinkins, testified that New York did not want the homeport in Staten Island. So, we decided to follow his recommendation and propose the closure of that facility in this bill. The General Accounting Office testified that the Navy did not know what ships would go to which ports. GAO recommended that we place a moratorium on further construction of the homeports, pending the Navy's review of its ship assignments. We followed GAO's suggestion as well.

Yesterday, Secretary Cheney extended the moratorium on most military construction and announced that construction at four of the six homeports would be candidates for rescission. Our bill goes further and proposes that work be stopped at all six homeports. Attached please find a copy of our joint letter to Secretary Cheney asking him to immediately freeze construction at all six homeports.

I would expect that this legislation will be the subject of debate on the defense authorization bill. I would hope that this legislation will be included on that bill.

BREAST CANCER AWARENESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, a few months ago at a mini-reunion with several women friends of mine, one of our group talked about her breast cancer discovered a week after a clean mammogram. Another friend of mine in Washington, younger than I, is currently recovering from a mastectomy and is now undergoing chemotherapy.

I thought I knew a bit about breast cancer and mammography, but these friends made me aware of just how little I know. For many women and for many men it is a subject of almost embarrassment. But the reality is that breast cancer now attacks 1 out of 9 women, an increase in frequency, and perhaps our daughters will face an even greater number. We have to know more. If women Members of Congress and men Members of Congress do not know, then maybe that is true for too many others of our constituents and friends, so this special order is an attempt by the women and men of Congress to talk in realistic terms as human beings to other human beings in the hope that one person will hear and her life will be saved.

Many of my colleagues are joining me today to focus on a matter of life and death: breast cancer and the importance of early detection. We want to talk about this disease openly to women and men in the hope that what we discuss today will make a difference in the way women address their health needs. What I have read and heard about breast cancer scares me. Breast cancer will strike 1 of 10 women this year, and it will claim the lives of more than 40,000 women.

Scientists don't know yet what causes breast cancer, but they do know some of the factors which may increase a woman's chance of developing the disease. Women at greatest risk are those over 50, women who have a family history of breast cancer, and women who have never had children or who had their first child after age 30. But every woman carries with her the risk of breast cancer. In fact, roughly 75 percent of the women who get this disease have no known risk factors.

As frightening as these statistics are, there is good news. Even though breast cancer is one of the most common cancers among women, if it is detected early, women do not have to die. Too few women, however, recognize the significant role they themselves can play in detecting breast cancer early.

Combined with mammography, regular, monthly breast self-examination is the best known method of early detection, yet only 25 percent of American women do self-examination. It takes only a few minutes, and the benefits cannot be overestimated. According to the National Cancer Institute, 85 to 95 percent of women whose breast cancer is detected early will be free from the disease 5 years later. What's even better news is that most will be free from cancer for the rest of their li ɔs.

Although 90 percent of all breast lumps are discovered by women themselves, tumors that won't be felt for 2 years can be detected through mammography. Studies show, however, that while a majority of women in the 40 and over age group have heard of mammograms, only 37 percent ever had a mammogram. For whatever reason, lack of knowledge, fear, expense, or inconvenience, less than 20 percent of women over 50 are getting mammograms on schedule. Yet, the death rate from breast cancer could be reduced by 30 percent if every woman at risk had a mammogram.

The best defense against breast cancer is information. Every woman at some time in her life will experience a lump in her breast. Finding one would scare any woman, and the thought of having cancer certainly would be overwhelming. But not all lumps are cancerous; in fact, 8 of 10 are benign. The important thing is to see a physician immediately. No woman should allow fear or embarrassment to stop her. Too many women will wait too long and face death.

Every 13 minutes, a woman dies from breast cancer. Women can change this statistic by taking advantage of early detection and mammography. Don't allow yourself or those whom you love to put it off any longer.

Mr. Speaker, at this point in my remarks, I would like to have inserted in the RECORD the courageous story of Cathie and Chris Warner's battle against breast cancer.

BREAST CANCER—CATHIE AND CHRIS WARNER'S STORY: MAY 1, 1990

We are CAthie Bennett-Warner and Chris Warner. You know us—a typical young married couple, thirty-something, and parents of a seven week old baby.

We also have breast cancer. This is our story so far.

This is also a story of a disease that is expanding rapidly in its attack on women aged twenty-five to forty. This spread is so rapid that breast cancer should be labeled the "Killer Epidemic of the 1990s" in the same way AIDS was the scourge of the 1980s.

Cathie was near the end of pregnancy, about to have her first baby. Ours is late parenthood; Cathie has barely reached thirty-five, the age when the American Cancer Society recommends women get their first mammograms. However, she had a breast exam when she first got pregnant, and was waiting until the end of pregnancy before scheduling her first mammogram.

Suddenly, on a Friday night, Cathie noticed a fair-sized lump in her left breast while doing a self-exam. We were scared, but felt sure that it was only a clogged milk duct or benign cyst, each of which is a common, non-cancerous symptom of late pregnancy. Cathie had no history of breast cancer in her family, no family history of cancer generally. Nor was Cathie a smoker or in any other of the high-risk categories for cancer. However, Chris impressed upon Cathie the importance of getting the lump biopsied as soon as possible, based on his own personal experience watching his mother go through breast cancer ten years earlier.

The next week, Cathie asked a friend for a referral to a breast specialist, a surgeon named Peter Richards. In between baby showers and full fifty-hour work week as Director of U.S. Senator Pete Wilson's Northern California office in San Francisco, Cathie saw Dr. Richards, who performed a needle aspiration on the lump. We still fully expected that the diagnosis would be related to the pregnancy and benign. That Friday, a week after finding the lump, Cathie was told by Dr. Richards that the lab reports on the lump were inconclusive, and that therefore he recommended a biopsy for the following Monday. Our nervousness increased over the weekend, but we still expected the biopsy would be fine. Cathie was more nervous about the biopsy surgery itself than about the diagnosis. At this point she was only three weeks from her due date for the baby.

Monday Dr. Richards performed the biopsy on Cathie, removing a 2.5 cm lump from her left breast. Cathie was under a local rather than general anesthetic, in order to spare the baby any risk.

Tuesday afternoon, we met Dr. Richards at his office, and he told us the bad news: Cathie had breast cancer.

Dr. Richards told us the options for treatment (a mastectomy with no follow-up radiation therapy, or a lumpectomy with follow-up radiation), the statistics (80 percent survivability for 5 years following surgery if the tumor had not spread to the lymph nodes), and the tests still to be performed (a hormone receptor test to determine the cancer's responsiveness to hormone therapy, and pathology of the lymph nodes following the surgery to determine the potential for spread of the cancer via the lymph system through the body).

But there was one thing Dr. Richards did not and could not tell us: That there is a cure for cancer, or that there was any guarantee that Cathie would live. These two simple facts—that there is not yet a cure for breast cancer, and that there is no doctor who can promise that you, the individual cancer patient, will live—are the two simple facts that have forever changed our lives, just as they change the lives of every cancer patient and their family.

The next few days were a blur, lived half in purposeful panic, half in desperate tears. Even though physically burdened by her near-term pregnancy, Cathie began organizing her initial battle against the cancer. At first, the tears and unbelievability of it all overwhelmed us. After all, breast cancer is supposed to be a middle or old aged women's disease, not a young woman's disease isn't it? And in the early days, we swung from the confidence that we had "caught it in time," to the abject terror that it had surely infected Cathie's lymph nodes because it seemed to have grown so fast during the pregnancy.

We also learned the first question the breast cancer patient learns never to ask herself: "Why me?"

In those first few days, however, we crammed an incredible amount of information into our brains about breast cancer. For example, we learned what we had already generally known, but never particularly worried about—that early diagnosis is the key to survival. We also learned that breast cancer is no longer the disease of middle-aged women—it is now one of the major killers of women in their thirties, especially women who have children late, who are childless or who have taken contraceptives for many years.

We also learned the most shocking statistic of all: One in ten women alive today in America will have breast cancer sometime during their lives. One in ten! The sheer magnitude numbs you—look around a roomful of your nearest and dearest friends: if there are twenty couples in the room, at least two will experience breast cancer. Or on another level, consider that twelve and a half million U.S. citizens, 5 percent of the total population of 250 million, will face breast cancer in their lifetime.

Finally, we learned that, unlike most cancers, the risk of women getting breast cancer appears to be increasing, not decreasing. The one in ten risk today was in fact only one in eleven only a decade ago. Now, researchers expect that some of the increased risks are simply due to earlier detection and reporting, but nonetheless the fact is that breast cancer is becoming the major killer of young and middle aged women in the '90's.

The second realization we came to in those first days was almost as shocking as the diagnosis itself. We learned that in treating breast cancer, there is no obvious treatment. Instead, there are options, and with the options comes the harrowing responsibility on the patient and her family to educate themselves in order to make an informed choice about treatment. This is where the numerous resources of the cancer support community, such as the American Cancer Society's "Reach for Recovery" program, become so crucial.

In our case, the treatment choices were complicated by Cathie's pregnancy. However, even without the pregnancy, we would have done what the American Cancer Society and the medical community now uniformly recommend—get a second opinion on every major treatment issue raised by your doctor. This is exactly what we did.

Because Dr. Richards was associated with Children's Hospital in San Francisco, we were referred by a friend for our second opinion to the breast cancer specialists at the University of California at San Francisco Medical Center. There we talked to Dr. Robert Warren of the surgical oncology faculty, and he in turn referred us to Dr. Francine Halberg, a radiation therapist. Finally, based on conversations with friends and family across the country, we learned that a chemotherapy expert with an excellent national reputation, Dr. Bryan Lewis, had recently left UCSF Med Center to work for Kaiser Permanente in San Francisco. Even though our health plan did not cover Kaiser Permanente, we eventually paid in cash to get an excellent consultation with Dr. Lewis.

Throughout the frantic process of getting first, second and even third opinions before choosing our preferred treatment, we kept reminding ourselves that even at the cutting edge of cancer treatment, it is vital that the patient be willing to learn something from each and every consultation with a doctor, even if the information initially appears to be outside that doctor's area of expertise. This is because it is essential that the patient "get up to speed" very quickly, in order to make an educated choice for her treatment. Thus, even when we ran into conflicting opinions from the doctors we consulted, we still were able to add a little bit more on "the state of the art" in breast cancer treatment to our rapidly expanding knowledge on treatment.

We also quickly put together our team of doctors at Childrens Hospital. Besides Dr. Richards, we talked to Dr. Sim Cantrill, a radiation therapist, and Dr. Richard Cohen, a medical oncologist and also chief of staff of the hospital. Even after talking with each of these doctors, and even though they were extremely responsive to our initial needs, we nonetheless did something that sounded so obvious that it is hard to believe so many breast cancer patients fail to do it: We checked out each doctor with several references, patients and other doctors alike. Not only did this confirm whether our choices in doctors were correct or not, it also helped us get to know the doctors as human beings engaged in the ever-sensitive, ever-complex "doctor-patient relationship."

Finally, thanks to our good friend Debbie Hardy who specializes in health issues here in Washington at Capital Associates, we were able to talk with research experts regarding treatment options and various investigative trials going on under the sponsorship of the National Cancer Institute for breast cancers of Cathie's type. This was invaluable, because several of the breast cancer treatment protocols today, especially those using adjuvant chemotherapy in lymphnode negative patients, were only being used in clinical trials at the National Cancer Institute a few short years ago. Obviously, our goal in talking to the National Cancer Institute researchers was to determine if there were any innovative chemotherapy or immunotherapy treatments undergoing trials that might not be the protocol today, but very easily could become the preferred treatment a few years from now.

You see, a breast cancer patient really only gets one shot at avoiding recurrence in another part of her body. If the treatment we are undertaking now does not work, we will not get a second chance because the cancer will have spread elsewhere, requiring different and far more radical treatment.

After getting all our second and third opinions, after checking and double checking every doctor's reputation, after educating ourselves through every book and every magazine article we could get our hands on, and after reviewing the excellent literature the American Cancer Society provides, we were able to make what we believe to be the smartest, most innovative choice for treatment available.

After carefully considering all the medical opinions which now say that a lumpectomy plus radiation therapy is as successful in treating breast cancer as a mastectomy without the radiation, Cathie chose to have a modified mastectomy. We made this choice not out of any prodding by our surgeon, but because we just did not want to face the risk of recurrence of the tumor in the same breast a few months or few years down the road when we still had a young baby at home. In addition, we found that breast reconstruction has now progressed to the point where a modified mastectomy may actually make cosmetic surgery more easy to perform than a lumpectomy.

We had our baby boy on March 13, 1990, and Cathie had her modified mastectomy less than a week later. Although the surgery indicated the tumor had been larger than we had originally expected (4 cm, not 2.5 cm), we received the wonderful news that we were "lymph node negative"—that is, the tumor had not spread to Cathie's lymph nodes. However, the newest protocol for breast cancer treatment is "adjuvant chemotherapy," that is, going through chemotherapy as an extra insurance against recurrence even if your lymph nodes are free of the disease.

Therefore, on April 19, 1990, Cathie went in to Dr. Cohen's office for her first chemotherapy injection. The hardest part about chemotherapy, especially where your lymph nodes are negative, is undergoing the side effects of these miraculous but ultimately toxic drugs for up to six months while under treatment. These side effects range from nausea and fatigue to hair loss, permanent sterility and potential heart damage. For many breast cancer patients, believing that you are sick enough to go through all these side effects when you have no outward manifestation of being sick, is the highest psychological hurdle to clear in the efforts to heal yourself.

In our case, Cathie will go through six months of chemotherapy, and we are steering ourselves to endure at least some, if not all, the side effects. The most immediate change in our lifestyle under "chemo" is that once every two or three weeks, for two days after she gets her injection, Cathie will probably feel sick as a dog. As a result, we will be scheduling our professional and personal lives to account for this regular bout of side effects that we psychologically know are not the symptoms of our disease, but in fact the symptoms of a potential cure.

It is during the chemotherapy stage that we intend to take advantage of the many community support groups and resources made available by the American Cancer Society and other groups. Cathie has already attended the first meeting of a support group of five women, most her age, who are going through breast cancer. There are literally dozens of other women in our immediate personal and professional lives whom we are learning are going through or already have gone through breast cancer. It is this silver lining in the cloud of the "one in ten" statistic that helps Cathie most: the knowledge that she is not alone in fighting this battle, and in fact will have a chance to help and support many of the women who come after her.

It is also during this chemotherapy stage that our employers will need to be the most understanding. At the time of the initial shock when breast cancer is diagnosed, a woman's employer is probably most willing to give her the time off to go through the necessary surgery. However, it is during later chemotherapy that the employer needs to recognize the lifestyle changes the woman is going through. This is because, for several weeks at a time, the patient will not feel any side effects of the drugs and may appear perfectly normal. However, in the first few days or week following the chemotherapy injection, the woman may be totally or partially incapacitated and unable to perform her job. Most of all, even during this period when the woman is physically 100 percent, she is still going through the mental hell of a recently diagnosed cancer patient who has also had major surgery on a part of her anatomy on which society places high cosmetic value.

We are lucky, in that Cathie's employer, U.S. Sen. Pete Wilson, is one of the most understanding men we have ever met and is also one of the nation's political leaders on health care issues. Chris' employer, Pacific Gas and Electric Company, is also extremely progressive and sophisticated in implementing counseling for employees with long-term health problems.

It is much too early for us to tell you how our story will end. Other recovering breast cancer patients tell us we will value every milestone, such as birthdays, anniversaries and especially the date five years from the end of our chemotherapy when we can be officially included in the group of statistical survivors.

But in the cold light of day, we know we can never tell the ending of our story, because we are really part of a much larger story, the race to find a cure for breast cancer. We are a very personal part of that race, because we know our own odds of survival will depend in part upon advances in cancer research and treatment uncovered and made available over the next five to ten years.

You see, another stark reality of breast cancer and the chemotherapy used to treat it, is that cancer cells tend to build up immunity to the drugs used to treat them. Thus, it is essential that the research go forward as rapidly as possible to find the new drugs, the new therapies, the new combinations of surgery and chemicals which can replace the existing drugs and treatments which may not be effective a second time around for Cathie and other women with breast cancer. This is doubly critical for young women of Cathie's age, who measure their lives not in five year survival rates, but in seeing their baby sons and daughters grow up to adulthood twenty, thirty years from now.

Today, Cathie Bennett-Warner and Chris Warner are among the lucky families with breast cancer. By catching the disease early, before it had spread to her lymph nodes or elsewhere, Cathie intends to emerge from her chemotherapy cured of cancer, even though the doctors will never grace her with that evaluation.

But we also intend to emerge from chemotherapy as part of a new women's movement of the 1990s—a movement whose goal is to wipe out breast cancer as a killer of women by the end of our sons and daughters' generation. We will achieve this goal through education and support of early mammograms and diagnosis for women all over America, and through support in Congress and the private sector for the research funding necessary to obtain the wonder drugs and treatments that can wipe out the disease once and for all.

One good place to start is with the FY 1991 National Cancer Institute budget. In 1990, 150,000 American women will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and 44,000 American women will die of the disease. Yet the National Cancer Institute funding for all cancer research—not just breast cancer—is $1.7 billion for FY 1991, compared to $800 million for AIDS research. Even if it were assumed that breast cancer research amounts to 25 percent of all cancer research, the National Cancer Institute budget should be increased 530 percent to over $9 billion per year, just to be on the same footing as AIDS research!

Over the next few months and years, Congress and the American public will be hearing more of our story, and the story of the millions of other women with breast cancer. We sincerely hope that our story will be heard, and our call for action answered.

To begin this very special order, I yield to the gentlewoman from Ohio, MS. MARY ROSE OAKAR.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman. I want to thank my colleague for having this special order, because it is time that we rallied together, as many of us have over the years, to really call attention to a disease that is a crisis in our country. I want to compliment you, LYNN, and BARBARA VUCANOVICH who has introduced some very fine legislation, and others who have been outspoken on this issue, and my colleagues who are here.

We have reached a crisis. One out of nine women will find this year that they have breast cancer; 43,000 women will die of breast cancer this year. It is not interesting that during the Vietnam war era when we lost 57,000 men and women, which is so tragic, during that same period we lost 330,000 women and men to breast cancer. In 1961, 1 out of 20 women were diagnosed with breast cancer. Today it is 1 in 9.

So it is a crisis in this country, and the statistics go on and on.

It was in 1984 that I was asked by a woman from Maryland that I did not know very well at the time, Rose Kushner, to do something about it. I was interested in doing something about it because, like just about every family in this country, my sister had breast cancer, and God love her, she might be watching tonight, she is doing fine, very healthy, and so on. But we were frightened by that disease, and it was a woman named Rose Kushner from Maryland who took the fear I think out of discussing that disease among other people. Nancy Brinker and others have been terrific in calling attention to his terrible disease. And what she tried to do was to make us aware that we ought to do something about it in Congress.

So the Select Committee on Aging, led by Senator Claude Pepper, had the first hearing I think ever in this Congress on breast cancer and the problem of breast cancer.

□ 1930

It is interesting that this year alone we had a colleague of ours who had his wife die of breast cancer. Another colleague just the other day, I was riding the subway with, said, "My wife has breast cancer." As a matter of fact, with the exception of this First Lady, all the past four First Ladies have had some kind of surgery related to breast cancer.

So what else do we have to say in this country? This is an epidemic.

The tragedy is that we have not done enough to make people aware of the problem. Women and their families ought not to be afraid of self-examination because we know one thing: If you catch breast cancer at an early stage, you are very likely, the person is very likely to live a productive and full life and really arrest the disease.

As a matter of fact, if a person engages in self-examination and then can get an annual mammogram after the age of 35 or 40, chances are very likely, even if they find a small cancerous tumor, the fact is that it will save a lot of money and save a lot of lives.

When we find breast cancer at an early stage with a mammogram associated with it, it costs less than $10,000; when it is at a later stage it costs $65,000 to $125,000.

And the person is probably going to lose his or her life.

So we are trying to do something to call attention to this crisis.

Mr. Speaker, I am dismayed, absolutely dismayed that in the catastrophic bill, when we had a conference committee related to that bill, they could have saved the mammogram coverage that was put in that bill and did not, and we were forced to vote up or down on a bill that included mammogram coverage. I think it is outrageous that in this Congress we cannot even pass a bill that is part of the preventive medicine, to have Medicare or Medicaid coverage for mammograms.

That is the least we ought to be doing.

Mr. Speaker, I have a bill, H.R. 3854, named after Rose Kushner that relates to this. BARBARA VUCANOVICH has a bill, and I am sure she will want to tell you about it; but it does not matter whose bill it is. We just want that bill passed.

We also feel strongly, I feel strongly that we do not do enough research in the area of breast cancer.

It is interesting to me that there is a strange bias against female-dominated diseases when in fact these diseases affect every person's family. This is a family issue, not just a woman's issue.

So we wonder why it is. Why is it that the budget just passed, which I supported, has a recommendation to increase AIDS research by $750 million, which I support? I am all for increasing aid for a disease that affects, we think, 1 out of 1,000 people. Now remember this is not 1 out of 9, this is 1 out of 1,000 people. It has all this terrific national attention. And it should, because they consider and I consider 1 out of 1,000 an epidemic.

But why is it that we can increase that area of research and we cannot increase in any proportion whatsoever the research for breast cancer? There is a bias against doing research there. So we are trying to get, I am trying to get a bill passed that would add an additional $25 million to target breast cancer research.

We feel that what we really want is to have every child in this country immunized against this type of disease, indeed all cancers.

Finally, we want women to be informed. We want women to know what their options are.

My sister had a lumpectomy. In my city of Cleveland, Dr. Kahlia and others revolutionized the way women are treated by saying, "Well, maybe you don't need all that surgery, maybe you can have other options."

So we also have a bill that would involve informed decisionmaking, just requiring the doctor to tell the woman what her options are. That can be done by simply giving out the NIH pamphlet, which is a terrific pamphlet explaining these kinds of elements.

Mr. Speaker, the Select Committee on Aging is having a hearing on May 16 on the whole subject of breast cancer. I am just terrifically thrilled that Marilyn Quayle, the Second Lady of our country, has come out and spoken out about this disease which killed her mother.

I think it is wonderful that she would come to these hearings to bring the public to the realization they should have with respect to this disease.

There is some very important research that needs to be done. I just want to close with these several areas very quickly.

We need to find out what has happened to the women, like my sister and others, who took DES when they were pregnant with their children. That was during the 1950's and the 1960's that they were taking that to prevent miscarriages. What happens to the children of DES mothers?

Well, we had a chance to do that study, but that kind of grant was not funded, for example.

What about diet? What is the relationship between alcohol and breast cancer? That particular grant was not funded.

What about hormonal imbalances? What effect does that have on cancers like breast cancer?

Those kinds of grants have not been funded. Why? Because there is only $17 million as compared to $1.6 billion in AIDS research.

I am not saying we should not do AIDS. I am all for it. I support it. I would like to do more.

But I will be darned, if you will pardon my expression, if we should not be doing the same type of research that affects each and every family, just about, in this country.

So we have reached a crisis, and I am delighted to participate in this special order, and I hope that this kind of activity will cause an outrage on the part of women and their families that this Congress is not doing more and this administration is not doing more on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Ohio for her testimony and wish her family and her sister well, whether she is listening or not. And I think she will be very grateful.

I would like to yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BILIRAKIS].

As the gentlewoman from Ohio said, this is an issue that may directly affect women but it is a part of all of us, our families, men and women alike.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. I thank the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] and the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] for their great work in this area.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to participate in this important special order. According to the American Cancer Society, breast cancer claimed the lives of 43,000 women in 1989. However, there are many women who are alive today because of the fact that their breast cancer was detected early and that they followed up with appropriate medical treatment. In some cases, these women have become volunteers for programs encouraging former cancer patients to provide support to persons currently undergoing treatment for breast cancer.

I wanted to take this time to share with my colleagues the personal experiences of three special women who bring a message of hope to all of us. All were diagnosed as having breast cancer, and through appropriate treatment they have been able to continue on with their lives.

During the week of her 28th birthday, Stephanie Dannemiller celebrated her third wedding anniversary. She was also diagnosed as having breast cancer. Two years later, she is pregnant with her second child who is due in September, teaching full time and attending school part time. Stephanie attributes her recovery to having a strong faith in God and maintaining a positive mental attitude. She is also active in a hospital support group and serves on a committee that is planning the first Northern Virginia Breast Cancer Conference. This conference, which will be held on June 9, will feature our Second Lady, Marilyn Quayle, as the the keynote speaker.

Stephanie believes it is important to educate all women as to the alternatives available once a diagnosis of breast cancer has been made. These decisions involve all phases of the illness including surgery, treatment, and the support groups that are available.

At age 34, Pat Edmundson also was diagnosed as having breast cancer. Through early diagnosis she, too, was able to receive medical treatment—and 13 years later she is living a full life. She is the mother of four children and will soon become a grandmother for the first time. She is a volunteer with the American Cancer Society's Reach to Recovery Program, a support group organized to provide support to new breast cancer patients.

When Pat visits new patients, she stresses the importance of a positive attitude to them. She tells them not to dwell on the disease itself. Pat has become grateful for every day and believes it is important that everyone know that breast cancer does not pick and choose—it affects everyone.

Five years ago, Pat Gonzales discovered a lump in her breast and was told by her doctor "to watch it." However, she pushed for the doctor to send her to a surgeon who confirmed her worst fears—the tumor was malignant. During her treatment, Pat suffered complications after the initial surgery. She also had 6 months of chemotherapy which caused her to lose her hair and become quite sick. Remarkably, she only missed 9 weeks of work throughout her illness. One year later, Pat discovered lumps in her other breast and in June 1986, she had her right breast removed and both breasts reconstructed.

Pat attributes her recovery to maintaining a positive attitude and keeping as busy as possible. She, also, will be a grandmother for the first time in a few months and continues to work full time. Pat has learned to appreciate every aspect of life and urges women to "remember that it is your body and your life and if there is something there, do something about it."

Pat wants to be an example to other people and shares her story with others to give them hope. She visits new cancer patients and believes that her visits have a strong impact because she has been through the experience herself.

All three of these women feel it is important to share their message of hope with others. They also believe it is important to educate all Americans about breast cancer through families and communities. By encouraging all women to have regular checkups and asking their doctor questions, more lives will be saved.

I believe it is important to provide this opportunity to all women, and that is why I am an original cosponsor of H.R. 4222, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Mortality Prevention Act of 1990. This legislation would establish a new public health program to provide preventive health screening and referral services for low-income women for breast cancer.

It is an important first step in providing appropriate care for breast cancer to all women. Again, I appreciate the opportunity to particiate in this important special order and hope that our continued awareness will save more and more lives each year.

□ 1940

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman again for the stories of the three women.

I yield to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BYRON].

Mrs. BYRON. Mr. Speaker, let me first of all thank my two colleagues, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] and the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] for taking the special order.

Let me discuss very quickly that we all like to talk about our home districts. I had an opportunity on Saturday to join with the Vice President's wife, Marilyn Quayle, as she opened the Regional Cancer Therapy Center in Frederick. This center is a joint project of the Frederick Memorial Hospital, the National Cancer Institute at Fort Dietrick in Maryland, and Georgetown University. This new facility houses radiation and chemotherapy programs, as well as experimental studies of attacking cancer. It is the only cancer center of its kind in the country. I am very honored to have it in my district.

It is interesting to note that Dr. Greg Rausch, the director of medical oncology there, has been very innovative, working together not only with the Federal Government and the National Cancer Institute, but also with the local government, and also with the private sector in the case of Georgetown Unviversity.

Mrs. Quayle said something that I think we all need to reflect on. She said, "We need to make men aware of breast cancer. We need to make sure that men insist that their wives, their daughters, their mothers have mammographs." It is not just the women in this country, it is also up to the men to make sure that their loved ones are protected.

The president of this center, one of the top national cancer research specialists, will be able to work very closely together, with my community, and I am very fortunate to have that.

In 1990, about 150,000 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer. One, a close friend of mine who just last week was diagnosed and has already had her mastectomy, tomorrow will be one of those numbers. Mammograms, combined with self-examinations, is the very best known methods of early detection. As we have seen by the statistics, and we all read our statistics, early detection of breast cancer is 90-percent curable. If every woman at risk had a mammogram, the cancer deaths could be reduced by at least 30 percent.

On October 11, 1989, the wife of the Vice President addressed a luncheon of the Susan Komen Foundation in Dallas, TX. She has become a leading light in that arena. The Hyde Center at Georgetown University is a leader in this arena. I am hoping that the Regional Cancer Therapy Center in Frederick is going to be another one of these areas that is going to be a leader. Their breast cancer detection, diagnosis, and treatment pamphlet is outstanding. It is easy to read. It is easy to understand.

For those that are afraid to ask somebody else, it is all here in a small book. Just take the time to read it.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I can say this as it is going out, if any person has any questions or wants any of these booklets, they can address to the U.S. Capitol for any Member heard, and we will try to get that information to your home. I assure viewers of that.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. SAIKI].

Mrs. SAIKI. Mr. Speaker, when I first received word of this special order on breast cancer I thought that it would be a good opportunity to educate the male Members of the House on the disease of breast cancer. After all, I assumed that my female colleagues are all well aware of the facts on breast cancer.

But as I began to prepare my remarks and thought about my own personal situation I realized that I needed to address my remarks to everyone.

Like many women, I consider myself to be well informed on the topic of breast cancer. I can probably quote chapter and verse the warning signs of breast cancer. I know the importance of monthly self check-ups, yearly mammograms, and what changes I need to make in my life in order to decrease the chances of getting breast cancer.

Yet, knowing all these facts did not mean I put that knowledge to good use. You may have seen a television commercial on breast cancer in which many women insist that they just don't have the time for a mammogram. Every time I see that commercial I feel a little twinge of guilt. Because for too many years, I was one of those women. I knew that I should have a mammogram, I knew the risks of not having one done but, I continued to delay, because I mistakenly believed I was too busy.

I was lucky. When I finally did have my first mammogram, the results were fine. I now take the time to have a mammogram yearly.

Mr. Chairman, not every woman is as fortunate as I. There are too many women who put off having the necessary tests and lose their lives as a result.

Sadly, the Native Hawaiian women of my State of Hawaii account for many of these women lost to breast cancer. Hawaiian women have the highest incidence of breast cancer than any other ethnic group in the United States. This year alone, 125 Native Hawaiian women will die of breast cancer.

Mr. Speaker, it is my sincere hope that enough progress will be made in the field of breast cancer research so that next year's report on the health of Native Hawaiian women will not be filled with statistics of death but, rather, stories of survival and recovery. And, it is also my hope that all women will take the time to do a self breast exam and schedule a mammogram.

I add my thanks to the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] for announcing this special order.

□ 1950

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. SAIKI].

I think everybody learns from all of us. That is what it is supposed to be about.

Mr. Speaker, I yeld to my colleague on the Rules Committee, the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER].

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding, and I do want to thank her for taking out this special order.

Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues this evening to discuss an issue of significance to the women of America—I am pleased to see Members of Congress speaking out on behalf of American women; but I am angry because after decades of having the technology to detect breast cancer early enough to save the woman's life, breast cancer still kills one woman every 13 minutes.

In January, women everywhere lost one of their most outspoken, most committed advocates. When Rose Kushner succumbed to breast cancer, she left us with a torch to carry. Tonight we gather on the floor of the House of Representatives to accept that torch.

Several critical pieces of legislation currently pending in the House would carry on Rose Kushner's legacy by educating the public about the ravages of breast cancer and giving women the opportunity to survive breast cancer by making available to all women in this country—regardless of age or income—the life-saving mammography screening.

Tonight I reiterate my unequivocal support for these initiatives and urge each of my colleagues to do so.

When the Pap test for cervical cancer was first introduced in 1933, by the Preventive Medicine Institute/Strang Clinic—formerly called the Kate DePew, Strang Clinic—in New York City, the procedure was not often used. It took a great deal of education of both doctors and patients before its use became commonplace. Now, almost 40 years later, we are finally at the point where doctors will insist on regular Pap screening for their patients. More than two generations of women have been educated about the importance of the Pap test, and yet, the life-saving mammogram remains an under-utilized tool in the fight against cancer fatalities.

In each of our districts, across the country, local efforts to fight breast cancer deserve recognition and encouragement. One woman at a time, these clinics and support groups work to overcome the fear and anxiety which often prevent the early detection of breast cancer.

In my own district, the Center for the Early Detection of Breast Cancer at the University of Rochester and the Breast Care Center of Women's HealthSource at Highland Hospital are committed to the fight against breast cancer fatalities and offer the women of the greater Rochester, NY, area comprehensive breast health care and education.

The Center at the University of Rochester is the only facility in the country to offer free mammography to all women, helping to make Rochester one of the "Ten Healthiest Cities in America" according to a 1988 survey by Health magazine.

Education and screening are only half the battle against breast cancer. The other is research. The same clinic which was dedicated in 1933 by Eleanor Roosevelt to facilitate the cervical cancer research of Dr. Papanicolaou is working today to prevent breast cancer. The Preventive Medicine Institute/Strang Clinic has established the National High Risk Registry to target research and educational and screening services to women at high risk of developing breast cancer.

I am proud to serve as the National spokesperson for the National HIgh Risk Registry. This ambitious and exciting research project by the strang Clinic seeks to identify and ultimately reverse the mechanisms of breast cancer. The registry enrolls women at risk of breast cancer based on a significant family history of the disease. DNA analyses of these women and their family members could uncover the link between breast cancer and genetics, paving the way for the development of effective prevention and even a cure.

The Strang Clinic, in cooperation with the University of Rochester and Highland Hospital, is planning to establish its Registry nation-wide, beginning with a pilot project in the 30th District of New York. Women in the Rochester, NY area will have a unique opportunity to participate in this exciting project which combines breast care education, screening, and counseling with innovative genetic research. This comprehensive attack on breast cancer will serve not only the women of upstate New York, but will advance breast cancer research to the benefit of women worldwide.

While it is true that as a woman gets older, her chance of developing breast cancer increases, statistics show that women as young as 30 are at significant risk, especially if they have a family history of breast cancer. Studies at the Strang Clinic show that 15 percent of American women will have at least one close relative with breast cancer. For these women—and we must remember here that we are talking about 15 percent of the entire American female population—their own chance of developing breast cancer doubles. For women who have two close relatives with breast cancer, the risk is five times greater.

Mr. Speaker, a whole segment of American women who, without knowing it, are just waiting for breast cancer to develop. We already know that by the time breast cancer has developed to where it can be felt at casual touch, it is too late. And while one might guess that high-risk women would be most likely to have regular screening mammograms, this just is not the case.

Studies of a large group of high-risk women at the Strang Clinic show that 50 percent of this highest-risk group did not have a mammogram in almost 2 years from their initial baseline screening. Twenty-two percent never had a followup mammogram at all.

Fear, anxiety, and the cost of the examination were cited as the major reasons these women did not take advantage of mammography screening.

Congress must act on the legislation introduced in order to break down each of these barriers and to allow all women access to the cancer screening services which have been proven to save lives.

We have a responsibility to make sure that every women knows about her risk of developing breast or cervical cancer and knows, as well, about the simple steps she can take to survive or even prevent these cancers. Only then we will be fully armed to combat these killers.

Mrs. MARTIN of New York. Mr. Speaker, what the gentlewoman says is absolutely true.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE], whose interest in this field is one of long standing.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding, and I would like to express my appreciation to my friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN], for organizing this special order on this very personal and difficult subject of breast cancer.

It is important, as everyone has said here this evening, that our message be heard so that American women may know how crucial it is that preventive measures be taken to stop the spread of breast cancer as a deadly disease.

I think most Members in this Chamber know someone who is a victim of this devastating disease, as many have indicated, be it a mother, a sister, a daughter, a friend, or a colleague. My own mother died at the age of 39 from breast cancer, and that has placed me in the high risk category of getting the disease. So for that reason I do have my annual screenings. Coincidentally, I had one yesterday, and everything was fine.

But I also had a chance to talk to the radiologist, and I asked her a number of questions about the number of women who come in to have their annual screenings. She indicated to me that what was interesting about it is that many of the women who are having this screening are insisting upon it. It is not because the doctor is recommending it. And the fact of the matter is that if we look at the statistics that have been released by the National Cancer Institute, they indicate that the main reasons women give for not having a mammograph are: No. 1, no need, or, secondly, their doctors never recommended one. They go on to say that only 50 percent of primary care physicians have ever referred an asymptomic female patient for a mammogram.

So we realize that we have an awful lot more to do in this country in not only making men and women aware of the necessity of self-examination and mammograms, but also educating our primary care physicians and nurses and everyone in the health care arena of the necessity and the importance of these kinds of tests.

The radiologists expressed surprise that in one case the doctor had told the patient, "Oh, wait another 5 years." That is deadly advice. For women who are approaching their forties, they should have a baseline by the end of their thirties, depending on their family histories and other high risk categories. You may have one mammogram every year between 40 and 50, or every other year, but one certainly annually after the age of 50.

We also recognize that the mammogram and self-examination is the most effective method of detecting breast cancer early, and as others have indicated here this evening, not only does that make it a much greater chance for a woman to save her breasts but also it reduces the mortality rate by 30 percent. Leading medical organizations recommend that women begin their periodic mammography screenings at the age of 40. And yet what have we seen? Only 37 percent of women over 40 have ever had a mammogram, and only 17 percent have had one in the past year.

There are several legislative remedies that have been introduced in Congress. In fact, there is one package of four bills that has been introduced by the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH], and this contains initiatives that will give access to affordability of mammograms through the Medicaid and Medicare program.

□ 2000

In addition, Mr. Speaker, many of my female colleagues have cosponsored legislation offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] calling for the establishment of a program of grants for the prevention and control of breast and cervical cancer. GAO recently concluded in a report to Congress on screening mammography, and it turned out that Medicare coverage for screening mammography would bring a life-saving tool to a large population of women at risk of developing breast cancer. The Congresswomen's caucus will shortly be introducing a package of women's health initiatives. We will include in the issues concerning research and funding for issues concerning breast cancer. The fact is I believe that we must increase funding for ongoing research into the relationship between estrogen and breast cancer. The National Institute of Child Health and Human Development is in the process of developing a study called the steroid hormones and reproductive cancers. This project will identify women who may be at potential risk of breast cancer from use of oral contraceptives or hormone replacement therapy.

Mr. Speaker, studies have been conducted on estrogen contained in oral contraceptives and their relationship to breast cancer. However, these studies, mostly performed in Europe, have released inconclusive evidence, so funding for this project, which is of necessity, by the Congress would help to allay the fears of American women who are shunning contraceptives because of a void in medical technology.

Mr. Speaker, we have also asked for a study. The gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER], the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] and I have asked for a study by the GAO concerning the quality of research on women's health conducted at the National Institutes of Health. We find that only 13 percent of their annual budget is devoted to research related to women's issues and women's health, and, therefore, we think we need to do more in that area, and in addition to requesting such a study, I will be introducing legislation to establish an office for women's health research in the National Institutes of Health so that it will coordinate women's health research among the various institutes, establish a network to track research and clinical trials affecting women and initiate a study into establishing an obstetrics and gynecology department at the National Institutes of Health.

Mr. Speaker, I would say one final comment. We need to realize, not only that this is a devastating illness to a number of American women; we also, it is devastating to find out, know that this is the No. 1 cancer killer of women between the ages of 35 and 54, and I think that that is an astonishing figure when one considers the impact on the women in this country, and I know that many have mentioned the figure of one out of nine in 1990 will be affected by breast cancer. But here we are. In 1960 it was 1 out of 20 women were diagnosed with breast cancer, and now it has gotten progressivley worse. We see 30 years later that it is now projected one out of nine.

So, Mr. Speaker, I hope that women heed, and our male colleagues and the women who may be listening this evening will heed our call and do what is necessary to prevent this deadly disease, and again I want to thank the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] for offering this opportunity to discuss this issue.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE], and I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. Bosco].

Mr. BOSCO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN], and I want to also thank the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH]. I think they have done a great service to the American women of this country by starting the process now, that I hope will continue, of drawing Congress' attention to this terrible epidemic.

Mr. Speaker, all of us who come from families who have experienced the trauma and tragedy of breast cancer know that it is not a matter only of women's concern, but for their children, their husbands, their fathers, their brothers and, indeed, all who know and love them, and yet we have not tried hard enough here in the Congress. If we had, it would be hopeful that we could come forward with a cure for this terrible disease.

However, Mr. Speaker, there is a little bit of hope, as has been mentioned, and that is that breast cancer, if detected early enough, does not need to be fatal. In fact, 90 to 95 percent of those who detect breast cancer early enough will survive to lead happy, productive, and healthy lives.

However, Mr. Speaker, if the tumor is allowed to grow, if it affects the lymph glands, a woman's rate of survival is substantially less. That is what we all want to prevent.

Yet the Congress has failed to do anything significant in this entire field.

Given the fact that fatality can be prevented, the fact that much human suffering and financial costs can be avoided, we do not cover mammography under Medicare or Medicaid. We do not require private insurers to cover it. Nor have we done anything to insure the quality, and dependability and the advancement of mammography technology. I feel that Congress has to act in all three of these fields.

Second, in the field of research we are close to being a complete failure. Of all the research projects that the National Cancer Institute believes can be productive, that are promising, that are worthwhile projects, not only the ones that are brought forward, but all the ones that are worthwhile, we only fund one out of five of those programs.

Can my colleagues believe that one of nine women will suffer from breast cancer, and yet we are only trying in one out of five instances to find the solutions, to find the cure, for this disease? I think that is shameful.

Mr. Speaker, this has also had a terrible effect on researchers because the pay for research is low, the cost of going though graduate school and/or medical school is $60,000, $70,000, $80,000, and the probability of being able to get one's grant funded, even if it is worthwhile, is one out of five or less. Most of the best and the brightest are not even going into breast cancer or cancer research.

I think we can take steps to reverse that in the Congress. We have to fund 100 percent of the worthwhile studies and scientific experiments, and I hope, if we do that, then in a year or two, or a short period of time, we can report to the women of America and their families breakthroughs in this tragic and far-reaching disease.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. Bosco].

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Florida [Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN], and I think it is especially important because, although the incidence among caucasian women is higher, and I should add this because our colleague, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. COLLINS] wanted to be here tonight, and illness prevented her from being so, but the incidence for death and fatality among black American women and Hispanic women is higher, and so that is an even more difficult statistic for all of us to meet.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] for spearheading this very worthwhile effort to bring this very serious issue to the forefront of our Nation's agenda, and the words that the gentlewoman from Illinois spoke about, the incidence of breast cancer and how it affects minority women, is exactly the point that I wish to address in my brief remarks tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to call special attention and make a special appeal to all minority women, blacks, and Hispanics, who may be listening to us tonight. This is a significant segment of our population and an important one because they may very well be the ones who do not get diagnosed at the early stages of breast cancer, and, as the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] pointed out, although the incident rates for black women is lower than those for white women, the mortality rate for black women is, in fact, higher. It is 6.2 percent higher than those rates for white women. Also, the 5-year relative survival rate for black women is dramatically lower.

Mr. Speaker, why are these rates so bad? Why are they so dangerous for minority women? Well, it is because many times these women may wait too long to get the problem checked out, and consequently the diagnosis for breast cancer comes at the later stage of the disease, and this translates into a tragic loss of valuable contributors to our society. Black women and Hispanic women have traditionally played a very important role in their family structure in their community, and, therefore, their loss is felt especially in their families. It is felt emotionally, it is felt spiritually, and it is felt economically in our community as well.

As we have noted previously in tonight's special order, the top three reasons that women give for not getting a mammogram are that these women may see no problem whatsoever and no need for the screening. Second, their doctor did not recommend it; or, third of all, these women put the mammographs off because of their busy schedule.

□ 2010

We need to do more as a society to encourage all women, but especially black and Hispanic women, to seek medical screening and to get the treatment at the early stages of cancer. We need to bring down the cost and encourage doctors to refer more minority women for mammograms.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Illinois for having this special order tonight.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from Illinois and the gentlewoman from Nevada for organizing this special order tonight.

I might say that I really think it is a shame that I give this presentation, rather than my wife who is in the gallery tonight, because 13 years ago Joyce did undergo breast cancer surgery. She had a mastectomy.

I have to tell you that our two children today have a mother and I have a wife and a companion because Joyce self-examined. She pushed her physician to continue looking for a problem which the doctor described earlier did not think was there, she was too young to have breast cancer. She had a mammogram and then surgery followed.

Today, 13 years later after the trauma, the terror of that experience for all of us, but especially for her, Joyce is an active volunteer and in reaching a recovery of the American Cancer Society. For the last 13 years I have accompanied her to talk to doctors and those in hospitals. She has also worked with many, many other patients to carry to them the hope and the promise of recovery which she personified.

Now, I know from reading and Joyce tells me from her experience that women are very often fearful of finding something and because of that they do not look. They are fearful of disfigurement from breast cancer surgery. There is a tendency on their part, as there is with people fearful of any other disease, to deny the likelihood that breast cancer could be a factor. Joyce would tell those women, "Don't do that. Don't wait. Do self-examine. Do have a mammogram and to push your doctor to follow up on suspicions and to see if there is not a problem."

Now, that is the best I can do to tell you what she would tell you. Let me tell you what I would say. I have today a beautiful companion, a wonderful wife, and it is kind of a delicate subject. I asked Lynn, "How do you say she is still physically attractive?" And she said, "Just say it." And she is.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Lucky wife, lucky husband. I think that is very nice.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. STEARNS].

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I also would like to thank the gentlewoman from Illinois for allowing me to speak at this time, and share with my other colleagues my concern.

Mr. Speaker, I am also a cosponsor of H.R. 3285, a bill to amend the Social Security Act to require State Medicaid plans to provide coverage of mammography screening.

Introduced by our distinguished colleague and friend from Nevada, BARBARA VUCANOVICH, this bill would attack a disease that is the leading cancer killer of women ages 35 to 54—breast cancer.

The rate of breast cancer has increased dramatically over the past two decades. In 1990 1 of 9 women were diagnosed and more than 40,000 women died of it. That is one death every 13 minutes! Thirty years ago, 1 in 20 women were diagnosed.

Congresswoman VUCANOVICH's bill is critical in our attempt to fight this dreaded disease. Mammography, combined with self breast examination, is the best known method of detecting breast cancer. Cancers may be detected by mammography up to 2 years before they can be felt.

Studies show that if every woman at risk had a mammogram, the breast cancer death could be reduced by 30 percent. The survival rate for breast cancer victims is dramatically increased when the disease is detected in its early stages.

What is particularly frustrating and sad is less than 20 percent of women who should be getting annual mammograms are getting them. Since there is no known cure for breast cancer, early detection by routine screening mammograms is the best course of action. Without early screening, treatment options include modified radical mastectomies and lumpectomies combined with chemotherapy.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of our colleagues in the House of Representatives to cosponsor H.R. 3285. By making mammography screening more accessible, this bill will save lives.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida.

I yield to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY].

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the distinguished woman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] for the key role that she has played in bringing the issue of breast cancer to the forefront of this debate tonight, and also joined by the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] who has been a victim herself.

Mr. Speaker, the figures concerned in this disease are really phenomenal. They have been quoted here tonight, but I think we need to repeat them and repeat them namely, that the American Cancer Society estimates that before the end of this year approximately 150,000 women will develop cancer of the breast, while another 44,000 will die from it. This is a disease that does cross all racial and economic lines and strikes adult women of all ages. There is really no limit on age, all those aged 50 and above are in the higher risk category.

We cannot emphasize too much, Mr. Speaker, but this also is a disease that in many instances can be detected and cured if it is caught early enough, and that is really the key. That is one of the reasons why the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] has House Concurrent Resolution 197 in the House that calls for the sense of Congress to state that all States should require health insurance providers to cover mammograph screening under their policies. It also asks the National Cancer Institute to develop screening standards.

Through proper therapy, usually involving radiation treatment or hormone manipulation, survival rates for affected women are dramatically increased. Again, we cannot emphasize that too much, Mr. Speaker.

Simply stated, these successes are dependent upon one key element, and that key element, of course, is early detection. Unfortunately, this part of the equation has always presented itself as an enormous hurdle, as has already been outlined here tonight, a hurdle that we can jump through a combination of proper screening techniques and increased education campaign.

Congress has made many attempts to find a solution to help those unfortunate women who are stricken by this type of cancer, but we still are searching for the best answer.

Mr. Speaker, the least that the women of America can expect from us is the opportunity for good health. The last few decades have seen a dramatic increase in the breast cancer survival rate and we must make efforts to continue to increase survival rates. To do any less is not good enough.

Again, I want to congratulate and commend the gentlewoman from Illinois for pulling this together.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentlewoman from Maryland, but the real thanks go to American women. All of us are getting more and more aware, and that is what this is all about. American men also know they must support us in our efforts.

Joining me tonight, and the real purpose of this, too, is not just statistics, as important as they are, but to make people feel there is a human element here that is perhaps best given by someone who has had the experience, as much as no one would want that of having suffered from breast cancer, and not just surviving, but glowingly, still giving to her State and Nation.

So I yield to the extraordinary gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH].

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I certainly appreciate the comments my friend, Congresswoman LYNN MARTIN has made. I really appreciate her organizing this opportunity for Members of Congress to talk candidly about breast cancer and what we can do to increase the odds for survival. Everyone has talked about the fact that I have had an experience with breast cancer myself. I came to the Congress, I was elected in 1982 and I came in 1983. Shortly after I came I went to our clinic downstairs to establish a health record and when the doctor examined me, he said, "Did you know that you have a lump in your breast?"

I said, "No, I didn't."

He said, "Well, we better get a mammogram."

And I have to tell you, I was 61 years old when I was elected. I thought I was an intelligent woman. I did not even know what a mammogram was. I think that is kind of shocking, and I hope that is not happening to other women, and I hope there are other women watching as we talk tonight. In any event, I did find out what a mammogram was. It is a very simple x-ray to detect early cancer, to see if there is a lump and if it is a problem.

To make a long story short, I had a mammogram. It was detected that I did have cancer. I had a biopsy, and shortly after, although I was given the opportunity to have other alternatives, I did choose to have a modified radical mastectomy. That is 7 years ago, and I am very happy to say that it saved my life.

I do not believe that a woman should have to become a Member of Congress to hear that she needs routine mammography screening over the age of 35 or 40.

And frankly, until physicians become better educated about this issue, we cannot wait until we are told by our doctors.

Breast cancer must become an increasingly political issue, and I think we're right to make it a political issue which crosses party lines.

My late friend, Rose Kushner, right up until her death this year, committed herself to raising awareness on the need for more funding and attention for breast cancer, and the rights of breast cancer patients to be informed of their surgical options.

It is through her tireless efforts that women are aware of informed consent and alternative surgeries like lumpectomies today.

My colleagues Congresswomen CARDISS COLLINS, MARY ROSE OAKAR, and BARBARA KENNELLY were powerful influences in getting screening mammography added to Medicare coverage in the 100th Congress.

When we lost this benefit following the repeal of the Catastrophic Care Act, we have all worked to try to restore this important benefit.

I would like to tell you about my approach, and to thank the many cosponsors of my legislation, some of whom are part of this special order.

H.R. 3285: A bill that would apply the same language as the statutory language in Medicare, regarding routine screening mammography for women, to Medicaid.

At the present time coverage of mammography screening is discretionary, covered by some States and not others. This bill would provide a mechanism to address poor and medically underserved women who would not otherwise be able to pay for mammography screening.

There is a critical need to address the higher rate of breast cancer mortality among poor and minority women, who may not carry private insurance.

The incidence of breast cancer among black women in lower, but the breast cancer fatalities are higher.

H.R. 3701, which I introduced along with Congresswoman COLLINS: A bill that would reinstate the mammography benefits struck by the repeal of the Catastrophic Act, and make annual screening mammography available for women over the age of 64 who are eligible for Medicare.

Repeal of the Catastrophic Care Act removed all screening mammography benefits from Medicare. Prior to that, women over age 64 would have been eligible for screening every 2 years, beginning in January 1990. Medicare-eligible women between 50 and 64 would have been able to receive annual mammography screening, although incidence of breast cancer markedly increases with age. If the mammography benefits are reinstated, it is better public policy to fund annual screening for the age groups at highest risk.

House Concurrent Resolution 197: A resolution urging State legislatures to pass legislation mandating mammography coverage for all third-party carriers licensed by the States.

At the present time 26 State legislatures have passed some type of legislation affecting third-party coverage for mammography, and legislation is pending in many others.

This resolution would emphasize the importance of these efforts in State legislatures.

At the same time it will underscore Congress' commitment to urge the private sector to assist in making mammography screening available and affordable for women nationwide.

Congress tends to respond to squeaky wheels, and women around the country need to become more vocal.

They need to tell their Members of Congress about their concern for making mammograms affordable and available, and for getting more Federal funding allocated to breast cancer research.

Today's special order represents a new beginning.

I am committed to continuing this effort in the House of Representatives until mammography is affordable, accepted, and commonplace.

Until there is a cure, the early detection is the only way to turn breast cancer from a death sentence into a disease which women can survive and to go on to live long and productive lives.

We have lost too wonderful women. For the sake of their families, their friends, and those whom they inspired, this is a battle we must win.

□ 2020

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleague and the doctor that said, "We are going to make sure you have a mammography, BARBARA VUCANOVICH," because that made a difference.

A couple of fast things. June 16, I think, there is a race for the cure here in Washington, DC, and in Illinois in Peoria, there is the Saturday before Mother's Day a race for the cure, too. I say this because all around the country there are ways that other people can be involved.

Very quickly let me just say this: it is not easy to talk about this. BARBARA and I have talked about coming from generations where one did not even really say the word "breast" and certainly in talking about cancer.

Very quickly, here is what happens when one gets a mammography, because we really do not have a lot of mammograms, and people do not know. You are nude in the upper portion of your body, but you are totally private. It does not hurt. It is not invasive. There is some pressure on the breasts, but I must tell everyone, and maybe this sounds funny coming from a Member of Congress, but pain is not my idea of a good time. I just am not great about that stuff. And it is not bad.

I now do have them on a regular basis. It is very fast, and really I cannot say, even I who like to complain, cannot even say it hurts. It makes the difference.

Until we get a cure, that early detection is going to be the answer for all of you hearing or listening or all of you who have a friend or a sister or love someone who is a woman who has not had a mammogram. That has to be your single best way until we find a cure so that 150,000 women who will be diagnosed can be diagnosed early enough so they can join us when we find the cure for breast cancer.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your interest this evening, too.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleagues, LYNN MARTIN and BARBARA VUCANOVICH, for giving me an opportunity to express my views on this very important subject.

Breast cancer will have a dramatic impact on all Americans at some point in their lives. Though this disease threatens only the lives of women, it affects everyone in our society. We are all acquainted with personal stories of great courage in the face of death caused by breast cancer. Today, we challenge America to become more aware of the prevalence of breast cancer, and better educated on the necessity for early detection.

There are many ways to raise public awareness of breast cancer, one of which is to participate in the "Race for the Cure." This race will take place across the country, including here in Washington, DC, on June 16, and in my home district in Peoria on May 12, and is devoted to finding a cure for breast cancer. Participants can run or walk the 5 kilometer or 1 mile course, and a large turnout would certainly help increase public awareness of this terrible disease.

Steps can also be taken for the early detection of breast cancer. In fact, if every woman followed the current guidelines for annual mammographies, deaths caused by breast cancer could be reduced by 30 percent.

One survey, though, showed that 62 percent of the women contacted saw no need to get a mammogram. One television advertisement shows a few women giving all kinds of excuses why they haven't had a mammogram. This demonstrates a common ambivalence which brings to mind another popular slogan, "Just Do it."

I am speaking on this subject because breast cancer is a family issue, and should be treated as such. Greater awareness for both men and women about the nature of breast cancer can only have a positive effect. Families, not just women, should participate in events like the "Race for the Cure." Families should seek to become better educated about the benefits of early detection, and about the necessity for mammograms. Families should do these things because breast cancer strikes the unit, and not just the individual.

More than 40,000 women will die of breast cancer this year. With greater awareness and better education, that number can be significantly reduced. I urge my colleagues and all concerned Americans to take part in the battle against breast cancer, by participating in the "Race for the Cure," by getting a mammogram, or by encouraging a loved one to get a mammogram. Just Do It.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to read part of a letter that was sent to the Susan G. Komen Foundation in Dallas, TX. The Komen Foundation raises funds for breast cancer research. The letter reads:

DECEMBER 12, 1988.

DEAR MRS. BRINKER: I was diagnosed as having breast cancer July 1986.

Six weeks of radiation to breast area, once a day with weekends off: April, May, June, 1987. The cancer within a matter of three months or so (with no chemo) had spread to my lungs. I was given a bone marrow transplant in December 1987. My bone marrow was beat on pretty bad; my counts seemed to be on a roller coaster for a while.

I have two children: one six years old and one three years old. I am thirty-four years old and ready to be healed.

The reason I am writing is to see if you might have anything that might help or cure me, I have no insurance and no way to pay for treatments.

Please write or call and let me know one way or the other. Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Unfortunately, this young woman lost her life to breast cancer. Breast cancer knows no socioeconomic boundaries—it can strike anyone—your mother, sister, grandmother, aunt or best friend—rich or poor.

Breast cancer is the leading cancer killer of women ages 35–54, and in the year 2000, 51 percent of the women in the country will be in the 35–54 age group.

Early detection is the key to saving a life from breast cancer. Women should have a yearly mammogram—which is an x ray of the breast tissue, as well as self examination to detect suspicious growths. Currently, 60 percent of the women over the age of 40 have never had a mammogram and it is predicted that the mortality rate due to breast cancer would decrease by 30 percent if every woman who should be screened did get a mammogram.

I understand that many women may not be able to afford to see a doctor for a yearly checkup; that is why Congress is currently working on legislation to include Medicare coverage for mammography screening.

Breast cancer, as all cancer is very frightening. Because not enough people know how to prevent it and not enough people are talking about breast cancer; early detection, mammography, and self examination must constantly be discussed until everyone understands the ultimate importance of these key survival procedures.

I believe it is important that people are aware of a woman and a friend to every women with breast cancer—her name is Rose Kushner. Rose Kushner, author of the book, "Why Me? What Every Woman Should Know About Breast Cancer," and through her personal experience with breast cancer was influential in changing the way breast cancer was treated; from one step radical surgery to a more conservative two-step surgery. Many of her suggestions and changes were first rejected by doctors, but are now standard practice. When she died, she was still fighting to require health insurance companies to cover mammograms. She is indeed missed by all and I am certain would be pleased that Congress was speaking openly today about breast cancer.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my colleagues, Congresswoman LYNN MARTIN and Congresswoman BARBARA VUCANOVICH, for arranging this special order and giving all of us, not just the women members, an opportunity to focus on the importance and seriousness of breast cancer.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to be here today to participate in this most important special order on breast cancer. I thank Mrs. MARTIN and Mrs. VUCANOVICH for giving Members an opportunity to speak on this issue and hopefully to share with viewers some of the important facts about this most serious disease. Unfortunately there is no known cure for breast cancer. However, early diagnosis and treatment are the keys to lessening the incidence and severity of breast cancer. We must reach more people with this message.

Breast cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in women. In women aged 34 to 54, it is the leading cancer killer. In 1989 alone, over 40,000 died of breast cancer. Another frightening aspect of breast cancer is that it has increased so dramatically in the past 30 years. In 1960, 1 in 20 women were diagnosed with breast cancer, in 1989, 1 in 10. The American Cancer Society predicts that this year over 150,000 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer. Although the risk of breast cancer is increased for those with a family history of the disease, over three-fourths of those who get breast cancer have no known risk factors.

However, there is a positive side to this otherwise negative issue. The detection and treatment for breast cancer has improved tremendously in the past decade. Early detection and localization of the cancer can greatly improve an individual's chances of survival—in the earliest stages survival rates for a 5-year period are as high as 90 percent. The most effective method of detection of early stage breast cancer is through mammography. Specialists estimate that if women followed the recommended guidelines for screening through mammograms, breast cancer deaths would be reduced by nearly one-third. Unfortunately, however, fewer than 20 percent of women over age 40, have had mammograms in the past year and—even more disturbing—60 percent of women over 40 have never had a mammogram. For many of these women the reasons for lack of this important test are the absence of a physician referral, the high cost of this screening, fear of radiation risk, and the attitude that they simply don't need a mammogram unless there are symptoms of breast cancer.

A nationwide survey of physicians conducted in 1984, found that only 11 percent of those questioned followed the American Cancer Society's guidelines for mammography testing. Fewer than half ever referred a woman for a mammogram unless specific symptoms of breast cancer were found. Fortunately this trend is reversing and more physicians now recommend routine mammograms to their patients. Several nationwide efforts, including Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October, are working to increase physician and public awareness and education on the incidence of breast cancer and the critical need for regular mammography screening and physical examinations.

The radiation risk from a mammogram is extremely low thanks to improved, modern equipment. It is estimated that the radiation from a mammogram is less than a standard dental x ray. According to the American Cancer Society, the risk "if it exists at all—is minimal."

The cost continues to be a major barrier to many women, particularly those with low and moderate incomes and those with no medical insurance. The average cost for this screening is between $100 and $150 but can run as high as $250. Insurance coverage for mammographies is becoming more common and legislation is pending in the House of Representatives which would extend this coverage to Medicare. Unfortunately, however, those without insurance coverage or financial resources are simply not likely to be screened for breast cancer. There must be a way for these individuals to have access to affordable mammography services. Not only to prevent the tragedy of breast cancer, but to save the thousands of dollars that it costs to treat this disease if it is not detected in its early stages.

I am hopeful that continued public awareness and understanding of breast cancer will lead to an increase in routine mammogram screening and self-examination. We have come so far technically in the treatment of this disease, but all the research in the world will not help those who are not diagnosed in time to stop the spread of breast cancer. It is up to all of us to share our knowledge on this issue and encourage women to be tested for breast cancer as part of a regular health checkup program.

Mr. BROWN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in expressing my deep concern about breast cancer in our country. I commend Representatives MARTIN and OAKAR for organizing this special order.

During the last 20 years, the incidence of this potentially fatal disease has increased from 1 woman in 15 to 1 woman in 10.

Early detection is key to controlling this illness. Educating women of all ages in the techniques of self-examination is very important. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists [ACOG] also recommends that women obtain their first mammogram at age 35.

Hopefully with early detection, the devastating effects of breast cancer will decrease for future generations of women.

Mr. CLINGER. I am pleased to be able to join with so many of my distinguished colleagues this evening to focus attention on breast cancer. I want to thank Representatives MARTIN and VUCANOVICH for organizing this special order, both of you are to be commended.

One of the most worthwhile things we can do in Congress is use our positions to highlight and dramatize issues and problems which affect our constituents. This evening, we are assembled to discuss a cancer which affects so many women—we've heard the figure for 1989 that 1 out of 10 women were diagnosed with breast cancer, and 40,000 women died of breast cancer in 1989—yet very few women over 40, only 17 percent, had a mammogram in the past year. Coupled with the fact that the incidences of breast cancer have increased over the past two decades, it is clear that we need to make more women aware of the things they can do to recognize the warning signals of breast cancer and realize the different treatments which are available.

The key words in breast cancer diagnosis are early and annually. The survival rate for breast cancer victims is dramatically higher when the disease is detected in its early stages. And women who receive mammograms at least annually are much more likely to have the tumor diagnosed in its early stages.

Mammography, combined with breast self-examination, is the best known method of early detection. Cancers may be detected up to 2 years before they can be felt. Detection of breast cancer at an early stage strongly influences the success of treatment.

Research shows that aggressive screening programs for women over 50 can reduce breast cancer mortality by 30 percent. The National Cancer Institute screening guidelines state that all women should be encouraged to do monthly breast self-examinations, physicians should do a breast examination during a woman's routine checkup and beginning at age 40, all women should be encouraged to have a mammogram every 1 to 2 years until age 50, when it should be done annually.

What is so frustrating about this cancer is that the detection techniques are very effective, yet few utilize them. Several studies have indicated that the reasons given by women for not having a mammogram are "no need" and lack of physician support or referral.

Recognizing that the general public lacks adequate knowledge about this cancer, several organizations like the American Cancer Society offer educational programs which encourage consumers and physicians to use mammography and physical exams for early detection of breast cancer.

In addition, I would encourage Members and staff and employees of the House of Representatives to participate in the "Breast Cancer Awareness/Race for the Cure," a 5-kilometer run to be held for the first time in Washington, DC, on Saturday, June 16. For those who do not wish to run, there is the option of a 1-mile run/walk. Money raised by the race will be donated to a local, low-cost mammography project, the Nina Hyde Center for Breast Cancer Research and the Susan G. Komen Foundation.

In closing, I want to again thank the organizers of this very special order, Representatives MARTIN and VUCANOVICH. By heightening awareness of breast cancer, I think we can encourage women to have a mammogram done annually. I also hope that Congress will enact Representative VUCANOVICH's bill to include mammography screening for Medicare patients. Hopefully, our efforts here tonight will increase the public's awareness of this serious health problem. Thank you for listening.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate today in this special order on breast cancer awareness.

The prevention of mortality from breast cancer is not an arcane issue. Breast cancer will affect almost every American—personally or because of the illness of a friend or a loved one. One out of ten American women will develop this disease during her lifetime. And this year alone, 43,000 women in this country will die of it.

Nor is this a hopeless issue. While there is much left to learn, we already know how to screen for breast cancer, how to detect it, and how to treat it effectively in its early stages. With existing technology, breast cancer deaths can be reduced by one-third.

But all of this technology is of no value if it is unused, and the sad truth is that few doctors recommend mammograms, and fewer women have them. Part of this problem results from a lack of knowledge. Part of it results from lack of accessible and affordable services.

To help address these problems, two pieces of legislation have been introduced in the House with strong bipartisan support.

The first, H.R. 4222, the "Breast and Cervical Cancer Mortality Prevention Act of 1990," is now pending before the Subcommittee on Health and Environment. The purpose of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, is to establish a new Public Health Service grants program to provide preventive health screening and referral services for low-income women for breast and cervical cancer. In the case of breast cancer, these services would include both a physical examination of the breasts and a mammography. In addition to the screening services, H.R. 4222 would provide support for both public education programs and inservice training for health care providers. Grants to support these activities would be awarded directly to the States. For fiscal year 1991, $50 million would be authorized to carry out these efforts. Identical legislation, S. 2283, has been introduced by Senators MIKULSKI and KASSEBAUM in the Senate.

The second proposal, H.R. 3880, the "Medicare Benefit Improvements Act of 1990," would provide Medicare coverage for—among other benefits—preventive mammography screening services. Such services would be covered for both elderly and disabled Medicare beneficiaries. For women 65 years of age and over, exams would be available every 2 years.

Last Monday, Mr. Speaker, the Health and Environment Subcommittee held hearings on H.R. 4222. Our first witness was Marilyn Tucker Quayle, the wife of the Vice President. Mrs. Quayle—whose own mother died of breast cancer at the age of 56—spoke eloquently and forcefully about the need to promote public education on breast cancer and about the need for preventive mammography services. She came before the subcommittee "to delcare all-out war against the tragedy of breast cancer" and to urge all Americans—women and their families alike—to take appropriate preventive health measures to help get the job done.

The two bills I have described today, Mr. Speaker, will also help get the job done. And I would urge all Members to support them and to work with me and their other cosponsors on their early enactment.

We, in the Federal Government, have waited far too long to begin to address this pressing health care problem. The tools have been at hand and public health and medical experts alike have been pushing for action, but the Federal Government has been slow to respond. I believe we are now ready to move forward and to make breast cancer mortality prevention among our Nation's top health priorities.

Breast cancer is an issue of awareness, of education—of both women and their doctors—of financing, and of will. It's time to put these in action today so we can save women's lives tomorrow.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to be here today to participate in this most important special order on breast cancer. I thank Mrs. MARTIN and Mrs. VUCANOVICH for giving Members an opportunity to speak on this issue and hopefully to share with viewers some of the important facts about this most serious disease. Unfortunately there is no known cure for breast cancer. However, early diagnosis and treatment are the keys to lessening the incidence and severity of breast cancer. We must reach more people with this message.

Breast cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in women. In women aged 34 to 54, it is the leading cancer killer. In 1989 alone, over 40,000 women died of breast cancer. Another frightening aspect of breast cancer is that it has increased so dramatically in the past 30 years. In 1960, 1 in 20 women were diagnosed with breast cancer, in 1989, 1 in 10. The American Cancer Society predicts that this year over 150,000 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer. Although the risk of breast cancer is increased for those with a family history of the disease, over three-fourths of those who get breast cancer have no known risk factors.

However, there is a positive side to this otherwise negative issue. The detection and treatment for breast cancer has improved tremendously in the past decade. Early detection and localization of the cancer can greatly improve an individual's chances of survival—in the earliest stages survival rates for a 5-year period are as high as 90 percent. The most effective method of detection of early stage breast cancer is through mammaography. Specialists estimate that if women followed the recommended guidelines for screening through mammographs, breast cancer deaths would be reduced by nearly one third. Unfortuately, however, fewer than 20 percent of women over age 40 have had mammograms in the past year and—even more disturbing—60 percent of women over 40 have never had a mammogram. For many of these women the reasons for lack of this important test are the absence of a physician referral, the high cost of this screening, fear of radiation risk, and the attitude that they simply don't need a mammogram unless there are symptoms of breast cancer.

A nationwide survey of physicians conducted in 1984, found that only 11 percent of those questioned followed the American Cancer Society's guidelines for mammography testing. Fewer than half ever referred a woman for a mammogram unless specific symptoms of breast cancer were found. Fortunately this trend is reversing and more physicians now recommend routine mammograms to their patients. Several nationwide efforts, including Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October, are working to increase physician and public awareness and education on the incidence of breast cancer and the critical need for regular mammography screening and physical examinations.

The radiation risk from a mammogram is extremely low thanks to improved, modern equipment. It is estimated that the radiation from a mammogram is less than a standard dental x ray. According to the American Cancer Society, the risk "if it exists at all—is minimal."

The cost continues to be a major barrier to many women, particularly those with low and moderate incomes and those with no medical insurance. The average cost for this screening is between $100 and $150 but can run as high as $250. Insurance coverage for mammographies is becoming more common and legislation is pending in the House of Representatives which would extend this coverage to Medicare. Unfortunately, however, those without insurance coverage or financial resources are simply not likely to be screened for breast cancer. There must be a way for these individuals to have access to affordable mammography services. Not only to prevent the tragedy of breast cancer, but to save the thousands of dollars that it costs to treat this disease if it is not detected in its early stages.

I am hopeful that continued public awareness and understanding of breast cancer will lead to an increase in routine mammogram screening and self-examination. We have come so far technically in the treatment of this disease, but all the research in the world will not help those who are not diagnosed in time to stop the spread of breast cancer. It is up to all of us to share our knowledge on this issue and encourage women to be tested for breast cancer as part of a regular health check-up program.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, in 1989 alone, more than 40,000 women died of breast cancer. In 1990, more than 150,000 women will be diagnosed as having this disease. Breast cancer is the leading cancer killer of women between the ages of 35 and 54. Because the survival rate for breast cancer patients is dramatically increased when the disease is detected early, it is imperative that women be made aware of the risks, and of how to detect the presence of the disease and of how they can fight breast cancer.

Mammography is the best known method of early detection. Cancers may be detected by mammography up to 2 years before they can be felt. If every woman at risk had a mammogram regularly, breast cancer deaths could be reduced by 30 percent. Less than 20 percent of women who should be getting annual mammograms are getting them. Women should understand how easy and safe it is to get a mammogram. The procedure is quick, relatively painless, and the radiation levels are less than a mouth x ray.

There is no known cure for breast cancer, but early detection by routine screening and mammograms would substantially reduce cancer deaths. This is a national issue affecting women, their spouses, parents, and children. It is essential that breast cancer prevention and detection become a public issue as well as an individual responsibility. In this way, we will make progress against this tragic and deadly disease.

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlelady from Illinois and my other colleagues for holding this special order tonight. This is a truly worthy cause and I want to express my appreciation to LYNN MARTIN for her caring leadership on this issue and many other issues before the Congress.

Mr. Speaker, fellow Members of the House, it is particularly difficult, but very necessary, that I join you tonight in discussing breast cancer. You see, my wife Nancy died less than 75 days ago from this dreaded disease. I know that she is watching now and wants me to be here. I'm here for you, Nancy. Not that this is comfortable. It is not. It's probably the most difficult thing I've ever done. But I know you want Americans everywhere to realize we must join together to do more to fight and defeat breast cancer.

Breast cancer is killing women around the world at an alarming rate. Today 1 in 10 women in America will be diagnosed with breast cancer. The American Cancer Society estimates that 143,000 women in the United States will develop breast cancer this year and 43,000 will die from it—43,000 deaths.This is a holocaust against the women of America and it must be stopped.

Having been by Nancy's side during her last months of life, as she fought the cancer, I can only tell you how horrible this disease is. My wife was an outgoing and beautiful woman, and she dedicated her life to our family, friends, and country. She was the last person on Earth who deserved to die of cancer. But she is gone now. With the billions we spend on medical research, we couldn't save her. It may take billions more before we find a cure, but we will.

God did not intend to see us helpless against this killer disease. We will fight and win. We must, to save those 43,000 lives which are lost every year. I urge Americans to realize that each individual in our Nation is part of the war on breast cancer. In our lifetimes, we will all be affected. There are many ways to help fight this battle.

First, we must encourage women, especially those over 35, to have mammography examinations followed by self-examinations. I have cointroduced legislation, H.R. 4109, to provide Medicare coverage for mammography screening for women over 35.

Second, we can all chip in to raise the money necessary to find a cure for cancer. Whether we walk or run in charity events, such as the Washington race for the cure on June 16, or simply contribute to the Cancer Research Fund of our choice, we help in the fight to beat breast cancer.

Third, we can watch our diets and intake of cancer causing substances, including tobacco. Americans can encourage family members to quit smoking. We can make a difference, especially with family members, in encouraging healthy lifestyles.

Finally, although there are many more things we can do to fight breast cancer, we can spread the word about this dreaded disease to our friends and neighbors. It's not a pleasant subject, but it may save lives discussing it.

Mr. Speaker, since Nancy died on February 16, the response from our friends and families has touched my heart. Thousands of letters and cards have poured in and the Nancy Schulze Memorial Cancer Fund has received over $20,000 in contributions. I want to thank all of those who expressed their love for Nancy.

I'm sure that Nancy is with us tonight. And that she is selflessly hoping that our words will move some to find a cure in the near future for breast cancer. I know that she would have sacrificed her life to find such a cure for others. If in some way this could happen, if her life and legacy can lead any one person to work or contribute to this cause, then that one action may lead to a cure.

Nancy's life was dedicated to helping others. I hope and pray that someone, any one of us, will dedicate enough energy to find a cure for cancer. A cure so that 43,000 women in each future year will be saved, and thousands of sons, daughters, and husbands with them, spared.

Mr. Speaker, we must find a cure for breast cancer.

Mrs. UNSOELD. Mr. Speaker, in 1990, some 44,000 American women will die of breast cancer, some 800 of them in my own State of Washington. Among cancer sites, breast cancer is the second highest killer among women, with only lung cancer killing more.

While the death rate from uterine cancer has decreased some 70 percent over the past 40 years—largely due to Pap smears and regular checkups—breast cancer deaths per capita have remained virtually unchanged. Unfortunately, the improvement in the 5-year survival rate for women with breast cancer over the last few decades has been offset by an increased incidence of this cancer.

We must all accept some responsibility for our own healthcare. The 5-year survival rate for localized breast cancer is now an impressive 90 percent. However, if the cancer has spread, that survival rate falls to only 60 percent. Mammography, combined with self breast examination, is the best known method of early detection—providing the important opportunity to discover breast cancer before it has spread. Mammography screenings are quick, safe, and involve little, if no, discomfort. If every woman at risk had a mammogram, breast cancer deaths would be reduced by 30 percent.

The American Cancer Society recommends the monthly practice of breast self-examination by women 20 years of age and older. The society recommends a mammogram every year for asymptomatic women age 50 and over, and a baseline mammogram for women aged 35 to 39. Asymptomatic women 40 to 49 should have a mammography every 1 to 2 years. In addition, a professional physical examination of the breast is recommended every 3 years for women 20 to 40, and every year for those over 40.

I am pleased to report that my State of Washington has recently joined with some 30 other States in requiring health insurance policies sold in the State to provide coverage for screening and diagnostic mammmography services. Such services will now be covered in Washington State so long as they were recommended by the patient's physician or advanced registered nurse practitioner.

I would now hope that Congress will soon move to provide screening coverage for the millions of older women in America who count on Medicare as their primary source of health care insurance. It has been estimated that extending biennial mammography screening for Medicare beneficiaries could save some 4,000 lives per year, not to mention thousands more who would have breast cancer discovered earlier than might otherwise be the case, thereby making their treatment less debilitating.

We all hope that it will not be too far in the future that advances in medical technology will permit us to significantly cut the number of women dying each year from breast cancer. However, until those technologies are discovered, women must take advantage of the very important tools we have available today in terms of self-examination and mammography screenings. Our good health demands it.

Mr. MCGRATH. Mr. Speaker, I would like to avail myself of the opportunity to call attention to a most important issue, breast cancer. This disease strikes 1 of every 10 women in the United States and will kill more than 40,000 women this year. The reassuring news, however, is that women can survive if breast cancer is detected early.

Mammography screenings and monthly self breast exams are two techniques which can lead to early detection of breast cancer.

More than one-third of breast cancer cases are currently diagnosed in women over age 65. Breast cancer is the most common form of cancer in women. Its causes are largely unknown and its incidence is increasing at approximately 1 percent annually. Age is the most significant risk factor, with incidence increasing dramatically after age 40. Because of this risk, guidelines endorsed and promoted by the National Cancer Institute and 10 national medical organizations recommend annual mammography screening after age 50.

Despite treatment advances, the mortality rate from breast cancer has not changed in the United States for the past 60 years. Large scale studies have demonstrated that older women die from the disease at a disproportionately high rate. The American Cancer Society has reported that more than three-quarters of breast cancer deaths are of women over age 54.

Survival data for older minority women is even more discouraging. Incidence of breast cancer is highest among white women, yet the 5-year survival rate among black women diagnosed with breast cancer is significantly lower: 62 percent as compared with 75 percent for white women, according to the American Cancer Society.

Economic factors play a powerful role in a woman's decision to have a mammogram. I believe that extending coverage which makes mammography more affordable will help motivate the Medicare population to go for screening. The Medicare population is principally persons with fixed and limited incomes, facing skyrocketing health care costs. I am a proud cosponsor of H.R. 3880, the Medicare Benefits Improvements Act of 1990. H.R. 3880 would provide Medicare coverage for mammography screening for aged and disabled Medicare beneficiaries. Medicare coverage for mammography screenings would cover biennial screenings for women ages 65 and older, a baseline screening for women between the ages of 35 and 40, biennial screening for women between ages 40 and 49, annual screenings for high risk women between the ages of 40 and 49 and for all women between ages of 50 and 65.

Education is necessary and valuable, and the National Cancer Institute's efforts concerning breast cancer have been commendable. Many women seem to have gotten the word that there is good news about breast cancer, and that routine screening is the most effective way to assure their continued good health. I believe that screening should be available to all American women. I am devoted to helping deliver the preventive health care that women need and deserve in order to combat destructive diseases such as breast cancer.

Mr. Speaker, as a public servant elected to serve the needs of our citizens, I urge women across the Nation to undergo routine screening in order to deterct breast cancer in its early stages. Until a cure is found early detection by routine screening mammograms is the best course of action.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I commend my colleagues for holding this special order today to draw attention to breast cancer and the need for preventive measures to combat this disease.

Unfortunately, the rate of breast cancer is increasing at alarming rates. In 1960, 1 of 20 women were diagnosed with breast cancer. Today, breast cancer strikes 1 in every 10 women in the United States and will kill more than 40,000 women this year.

Despite these grim statistics, women can survive breast cancer if it is detected early enough. Routine screening mammograms offers women a chance for early detection of breast cancer. In fact, cancers may be detected by mammography up to 2 years before they can be felt. Unfortunately, however, less than 20 percent of women who should be getting annual mammograms are getting them. Yet if every women at risk had a mammogram, the breast cancer death rate could be reduced by 30 percent.

Cost can be a factor in whether or not an individual has a mammogram, especially for older women who are most at risk. Consequently, legislation is pending in the House, which I am cosponsoring, which will provide annual screening mammography for all women under Medicare. This will ensure access to potentially life-saving mammograms for women who otherwise would not have access. Cancer prevention should be part of our national health policy and providing assistance for mammography testing under Medicare should be included.

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from Illinois and the gentlewoman from Nevada for organizing this special order.

We all know people—friends or family—who have had breast cancer. We all have stories with tragic endings—or with happier endings, thanks to early detection and intervention.

But we will all be repeating the same message tonight. And it cannot be repeated often enough.

In sum, the message is this: until there is a cure, early detection and treatment is the only protection women have against breast cancer.

The message is not meant to frighten women, but to increase awareness about breast cancer and to drive home the importance of preventive measures.

According to the American Cancer Society, 150,900 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in 1990—one every 5 minutes.

In 1990, an estimated 1,600 Kansas women will be diagnosed with breast cancer.

Until this disease can be cured, the only way women can protect themselves is through early detection and prompt treatment.

Women should follow these guidelines recommended by the American Cancer Society: first, a breast exam should be performed by a doctor at a regular health checkup.

Second, women over the age of 20 should examine their own breasts once a month.

And third, women 35 to 39 should have a baseline mammogram every year. Women 40 to 49 should have a mammogram every 1 to 2 years. Women 50 and over should have a mammogram every year.

Women at special risk—those with a family history of breast cancer, who first give birth after age 30, who never give birth, who are obese—should consult with their physician to develop a personalized prevention strategy.

I cannot emphasize enough the importance of having a mammogram.

Mammography can reveal cancers too small to be detected by even the most experienced examiner. The earlier the cancer is detected, the greater the chances for survival.

In addition, if a breast lump is found, mammography can help a physician determine if there are other lesions too small to be felt.

If every woman who should be screened had a mammogram, the breast cancer death rate could be reduced by 30 percent.

So please, if you haven't been performing monthly breast self-examinations, start now.

If you haven't had a mammogram, especially if you are at special risk, make an appointment.

And if your physician has not discussed breast cancer prevention measures wtih you, ask about it.

It could save your life.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my distinguished colleagues, Representatives LYNN MARTIN and BARBARA VUCANOVICH, in this special order about the threat of breast cancer in America today.

Let us first not make the mistake of thinking that breast cancer is solely a woman's issue. This is a national issue. Breast cancer will kill more than 40,000 women across the country this year. The trauma of breast cancer afflicts whole families. It has touched my own extended family.

The current statistics show a worsening trend. The rate of breast cancer has increased dramatically over the past two decades. There is no known cure for this dreaded disease; there is only treatment. And the success of that treatment is heavily dependent on early detection.

At this point, there are two weapons against breast cancer. The first is public education to the danger of the disease and the criticality of its early discovery. The second is a continued research effort in the quest of a future cure.

Education can save the lives of our mothers, wives, sisters, and colleagues. However, this educational outreach should begin in the high school health curriculum so that the younger generation has an early warning signal to the dangers of the disease and an awareness of various detection methods.

Of the research effort, I can say emphatically as chairman of the Science, Space, and Technology Committee, that scientific research of all kinds pays big dividends for our society. The fruits of research have made our lives healthier, safer, and happier over the long-term. I have no doubt that medical research will someday find a cure for cancer.

In the meantime we must remain educated and alert. I want to commend my colleagues for initiating this special order and I am proud to take part in it.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, today I join with many of my colleagues to participate in this special order on breast cancer. There are few of us in this room who have not been touched by this killer. Indeed, the recent death of the very gifted and talented Nancy Schulze, wife of our colleague DICK SCHULZE, reminds us that those statistics we read are people, not merely numbers. But even these statistics are alarming. One that I find particularly startling is that 60 percent of women over the age of 40 have never had a mammogram, even though mammography, combined with self breast examination, is the best known method of early detection. In addition, in 1989, one out of every 10 women was diagnosed with breast cancer.

My own awareness of the prevalance and impact of the disease was heightened through my interactions with a very special woman. Many of you may have heard of Rose Kushner, who died this past January. She was a compassionate, tireless, and extremely effective advocate for breast cancer patients. Many women who have had breast cancer may have benefited from her advocacy without ever knowing it. Rose was instrumental in the initiation of the two-step procedure, in which a woman is first told the results of her biopsy before any decisions are made about the treatment. This procedure is now the norm throughout the world. She participated in organizing the National Institutes of Health Consensus Conference on Breast Cancer, and founded the National Breast Cancer Advisory Center. She also organized Breastpac, a political advocacy and lobbying organization. Rose wrote many books and articles on breast cancer, and was scheduled to receive an award this month from the Society of Surgical Oncology for "outstanding contributions to the fight against cancer." Her husband, Harvey, and her family will accept it in her name.

In the words of Nancy Brinker, of the Susan G. Komen Foundation, "Rose Kushner lit the candle in the darkness, and now it is up to us to carry on the fight." It is my hope that through our presence here, our actions in Congress and our personal dedication, we present a united front for increased awareness, education, funding, and research to combat breast cancer.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, for all the tasks that we as legislators will be called on to perform, today's mission is perhaps the most difficult for us all.

Usually, we debate priorities in theory and quantify our objectives and agendas from a political perspective.

Most about which we will discuss professionally, we will never know personally—until this moment.

Few of us, as Americans, can hear the word "cancer" and not have our bodies immediately ache with the painful, lonesome memories of a person we lost to this insidious disease. Most of us can count on two hands the loved ones who lost this dreadful battle.

My grandmother, Sue Reigi, died 2 years ago from cancer. A cancer that invaded her body 20 years before in her breast.

There was undoubtedly no more difficult time in my life. The reality of her dying was compounded by my frustrated feelings of hopelessness and helplessness. There was nothing I could do to stop the devastation.

And while all the love in your heart cannot save a person's life, today's information and technology can.

Breast exams and mammography can now detect what was not too long ago hidden.

Treatment and after-care programs have seen the 5-year survival rate rise from 78 percent in 1940 to 90 percent today.

The problem compounding the fear of exploring this particular health threat is the embarassment and the stigma that we attach to this disease.

Its pervasiveness and encouraging treatment rate are underemphasized because it is largely a women's disease.

So I am proud today to join a group of women who will use the U.S. Congress to address this issue for all the women in America, especially for Sue Reigi.

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, the United States is spending $650 billion this year on health care, but just a fraction of that money on prevention and research. Today, we have a perfect example before us of the miracle of prevention.

Mr. Speaker, more than 40,000 women died of breast cancer in 1989. This year, 150,000 will be diagnosed with some form of the disease. And the incidence of this disease has doubled over the past two decades. At the current rate, 1 of every 10 women eventually will come down with breast cancer.

Mr. Speaker, I have appeared before the House several times to promote the value of preventive medicine. Since there is no cure for breast cancer, prevention is our best weapon. Early detection of breast cancer saves thousands of lives, but it could save thousands more. The 75 percent of women who get the disease have no known risk factor, so it is imperative that every woman routinely perform self-examination and routinely receive mammograms.

Mr. Speaker, this is not solely a woman's disease, because it affects all of us; it is a family disease. The plain truth is that early detection is the best weapon we have until we can find a cure. Simply put, the earlier a growth is detected, the greater the chances of survival. Self-examination is essential, but it is not enough. Mammograms can detect a growth up to 2 years before a lump can be felt. And mammographs expose a woman to less radiation than a dental x ray.

As always, education is our greatest ally. I commend my colleagues for calling attention to this life-saving matter.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on the subject of my special order on breast cancer this evening.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BATES). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

PROGRAMMED TO FAIL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman Maryland [Mr. BENTLEY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, Americans have been excited about the changes in Europe with the possibility of some new democracies emerging. And there is great hope for the growing structural changes within the Soviet Empire. These changes have sparked a number of articles about what we can do with our defense dollars and just what this means to the United States.

In all of this, it appears to me we have forgotten the old military expression "fighting a rear guard action." In a time of tightened resources, with no real knowledge of possible future needs, we should be looking to the strengthening of our own defense industrial base because alliances are shifting all over the world.

We must be ever more vigilant of what Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci stated in 1988 in Defense News. He was quoted as saying that the declining defense industrial base is "at present a dark cloud on the strategic horizon." We are worse off now than when he issued that challenge.

Our defense industry is being overtaken by foreign interests, Government rulings on "Buy America" bypassed in Government agencies and antitrust agreements reached offshore by foreign companies implemented inside this country to the detriment of U.S. companies.

One current U.S. law depended upon by our industries has proven to be not supportive of a strong industrial base and, is programmed to fail, is the current method under the licensing procedures for technology transfer.

The final decision on whether a product is strategic depends on getting three agencies to agree. Knowing government and human nature as I do, that takes some doing.

In this licensing procedure the Department of Defense is left in an advisory capacity as to whether a sale fits DOD regulations and rules. DOD may or may not be asked to weigh in the process. The decision on whether or not a product has commercial or defense applications is made by the Commerce Department and in the case of munitions, the State Department makes that judgment. The enforcer in this procedure is the Treasury Department.

This process can take quite some time and is in contrast with what the Japanese can do. Although there is constant competition between the Foreign Ministry and MITI [the Ministry of Internal Trade and Industry]—MITI can still wheel and turn on a strategic decision within 36 to 48 hours on a matter affecting Japanese industry.

In contrast, our system shifts. One minute Commerce is in charge, the next time the State Department is in charge, but the prime agency, the Department of Defense has only an advisory capacity in the decision. I don't know if this is lack of interest on the part of the Defense Department or not. The important point is—it allows national security considerations to fall in front of industry lobbying. There is something very wrong with this procedure and philosophy of doing business.

We have a real problem when you have the licensing arrangement working in such a defused manner, involving a number of agencies. Then if it is combined with Exon-Florio, the means with which to appeal the system for the sale of strategic companies to foreign entities—you come up with chaos. We cannot through default, through interagency jockeying for power or by chance, continue to give away our next generation of technology, and that is what we are doing with this present arrangement.

The intention may be good, but there is no way to know when a company is up for sale, and then the process itself is cumbersome. A strategic company for sale is not automatically reported to the Department of Commerce or any other department. You would think it would be, but it isn't. Often the sale is discovered by word-of-mouth, or someone happens to call a congressional office.

Again the same agencies, Defense, Commerce, State, and Treasury are involved in this process.

One agency can call for a hearing on the sale of a company, but then, it takes three agencies to agree to stop the sale. It is difficult to know just how these companies have performed.

According to recent House testimony by the State Department, one of their major concerns is whether a foreign company has a bad track record. If not, then why should there be any concern? The only foreign company, of which I am aware, where there would be a public record of wrong doing is the court action against Hitachi for trying to purchase IBM technology from National Semi-Conductor salesmen.

But, I do not understand this to be the intent of Exon-Florio. It was not to establish criteria for foreign purchasers, it was to establish criteria for the national security of the United States. This could include whether the company was a single remaining United States source of strategic materials as in the case of the loss of Union Carbide's silica production facility to a Japanese company.

It could encompass antitrust implications as in the recent Nippon Mining purchases of Gould and part ownership of Timet, a titanium sponge process. It should certainly consider the implications of the loss or transfer of strategic technology as in the Timet purchase where titanium sponge technology used in DOD top-secret applications now is available to a foreign company. Timet supplies over 50 percent of the Department of Defense requirements for titanium and its technology has direct application in aerospace development, a field targeted by Japan.

We should be concerned about the licensing procedures and the sale of our strategic companies to foreign companies for several reasons.

One was pointed out in a Johns Hopkins study on "Foreign Ownership of U.S. Defense Companies." It stated the effect of foreign "acquisitions can and have been used by foreigners to drive out competitors. Such behavior has special long-term negative consequences for American defense preparedness. Similarly, foreign acquisitions that result in consolidations of manufacturing facilities could adversely affect the U.S. defense industrial base."

Many American companies are disappearing due to mergers and acquisitions by foreign companies. Today, 4 out of the top 20 defense electronics companies are foreign, plus there is 1 American firm with a large foreign component. The surprise to me is that the fourth largest on the list is the French giant, Thomson CSF. When we sell a U.S. company then the technology becomes defused and we no longer have it.

Efficient use of our defense dollars is another reason for concern. It was reported in Defense News:

In the early 1980's, international contracting was virtually a one-way street, with $9 in business given to U.S. contractors for every $1 awarded to foreign contracts. By the late 1980's that had changed. Now, the auditors estimate, there is $2 in business awarded to U.S. contractors for every $1 in business awarded to a foreign contractor, making the need for scrutiny of other countries' cost estimates more critical.

Foreign firms are billing the Pentagon for unallowed contract costs that American firms cannot do. This is a loss efficient government spending and certainly a loss to the taxpayers.

□ 2030

Again, Mr. Speaker, we need to point out that when a dollar is spent in the United States, 42 cents of that dollar goes to taxes. It goes to local taxes, to State taxes, and to Federal taxes of all kinds. When that dollar is spent overseas, not a penny of that goes into taxes for any level of government in the United States of America.

A recent article in Defense News stated:

Foreign companies contracting with the Department of Defense routinely charge the U.S. Government for entertainment, bad debt repayments, and other expenses that might have U.S. contractors banned from selling to the government, U.S. auditors say.

It went on, according to the Defense Department auditors that,

Despite memorandums of understanding between the United States and Canada, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, the Federal Republic of Germany and France, these kinds of costs were rarely detected because the host country refused or ignored the agreement, usually claiming its own laws were supreme.

This is absolutely maddening. DOD auditors are reporting that foreign nations ignore our laws, but they are allowed to continue bidding against American firms who would be under the jail for such tactics. It is strange to me that Thomson CSF—owned completely by the government of France—was one of the companies featured in this audit. Now remember, it also has been reported to have received the fourth highest amount of money from the Department of Defense in the last year.

There is a lot more to be concerned about than the loss of profit and jobs for American workers. It is the growing appearance of a double standard in this Government working against U.S. firms.

In late 1987 Robert Reich wrote about the "two kinds of vulnerability—military and economic" in our dependence on microelectronics from foreign sources. In this case it was the Japanese. He cited a National Security Council report [NSC] that is more than thought provoking. It stirred genuine concern for me when I read it.

The NSC report stated:

By the turn of the century, microelectronics will certainly have major direct effects upon the performance of industries which will directly account for perhaps a quarter of GNP, and which have powerful effects upon military capabilities, economy-wide productivity, and living standards. These include automobiles, industrial automation, computer systems, defense and aerospace products, telecommunications, and many consumer goods * * * If the United States loses competitive advantage in these industries, its productivity, living standards, and growth will suffer severely. Moreover, these industries are dominated by a few nations and firms, so that competitive advantage brings significant economic profits and political influence. Thus if the United States becomes a net importer and a technically inferior producer, it would also become a less independent, less influential, and less secure nation.

This certainly is an ominous statement. It certainly appears to be the way for the rising power of foreign economies over the American economy. And, it definitely is the way to lose jobs.

Now that NSC report is something to think about when we talk about the process to approve the sale of strategic companies or strategic products. We need a process instead of what amounts to a catch-as-catch-can system of keeping the DOD in an advisory capacity on decisions.

We need some leverage in the process and some quid pro quo for these transactions. I realize this will be dificult to attain, since the President agreed in the recent Japanese trade agreements to use the Exon-Florio bill only as a last resort in the sale of a strategic company. It may be difficult, but we must be vigilant not to lose our technology.

We must have a sophisticated method with a reliable knowledge base to process a strategic sale. Careful thought must be given to how this system is changed and what power we leave in the hands of the regulation writers. Firm guidance, and one that favors the United States must be given in changing this process.

Mr. Speaker, the system we have now is programmed to fail and does not favor the American people, our economy in the long term, nor our businesses. It is time to protect our defense industrial base and to put our defense and other strategic dollars to good use. The American people expect it from us—and so do I.

TRIBUTE TO LEO L. BALDUCCI, JR., SENATE PAGE SCHOOL TEACHER AND ADMINISTRATOR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] is recognized for 5 mintues.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I learned of the passing this Saturday of a dear member of our Capitol Hill community. Leo L. Balducci, Jr., has been teaching English to our Capitol pages since 1976, and has been program director of the Senate Page School since 1984.

Leo was a native of Washington and is a graduate of Archbishop Carroll High School. He earned a bachelor's degree in English and a master's degree in educational psychology from the Catholic University here in Washington.

Leo began his career in 1959 at McKinley Technical High School in Washington, DC, where he taught English for 17 years, eventually serving as co-chairman of the English department and as sponsor of the school's award-winning yearbook. During his years at McKinley, Leo's commitment to the education of his students received much deserved public recognition on a number of occasions. In 1966, the D.C. Junior Chamber of Commerce named him "Outstanding Young Educator." Four years later, the members of the school's National Honor Society selected him as "Teacher of the Year." And in 1974 he was chosen by a national organization as an "Outstanding Secondary Educator of America."

As distinguished as his career may appear from the biographical information which I have already outlined, as one who has had the honor to know Leo since 1976, I can state that it is only the tip of the proverbial iceberg. The real story of Leo Balducci can only be told by his friends, his family and his students—many of whom considered him to be both a friend and family. One of his former students, a 1978 graduate of the Capitol Page School, told me yesterday,

"Most everyone can point to one of their teachers as their favorite, as one who had an impact on their life in some way or another. Leo was much more than that to me and, in fact, to most of the other students at CPS. He was a surrogate father, best friend, mentor, counselor, analyst and, of course, teacher to me and many others. As high school-age children working as Capitol Pages and living away from home for the first time, we needed those support mechanisms from time to time, and Leo was always there—anytime—all of the time. Perhaps it is unfair to others in the field of education, but Leo Balducci is my definition of a great teacher. He will always be a part of my life."

Mr. Speaker, that says it all. Leo's total commitment to quality education and a quality environment shows clearly in the total commitment of his students and former students to Leo Balducci. He has served the Congress well over the past 14 years. We, as an institution, are grateful for his service, and as individuals will dearly miss him.

Our heartfelt condolences go out to Leo's wife, Margaret; his two young children, Joseph and Maria; his father, Leo, Sr.; and his two sisters, Nina and Joan. We share in the sorrow of his death; but we also share in the joy of his life.

LEO L. BALDUCCI JR.—TEACHER AND ADMINISTRATOR

Leo L. Balducci Jr., 52, an English teacher for the past 30 years who also had been program director of the Senate Page School since 1984 died, of cancer April 28 at the Washington Adventist Hospital. He lived in New Carrollton.

He began his career in the D.C. public schools in 1959 at McKinley Technical High School. In 1976, he transferred to the Capitol Page School, where he taught until becoming Senate Page School director.

Mr. Balducci was a native of Washington and graduate of Archbishop Carroll High School. At Catholic University, he received a bachelor's degree in English and a master's degree in educational psychology.

He was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Landover. He was a past president of the Holy Name Society at Holy Rosary Catholic Church in Washington.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret Kelley Balducci, and two children, Joseph and Maria Balducci, all of New Carrollton; his father, Leo Sr., of Hyattsville; and two sisters, Nina Brown of Alexandria and Joan Balducci of Hyattsville.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. SMITH of Florida (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT), for today, on account of illness in the family.

Mr. ACKERMAN (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT), for May 1, May 2, and May 3, on account of official business.

Mrs. COLLINS (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT), for May 1, May 2, and May 3, on account of personal injury.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. BARTLETT) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. DREIER of California, for 60 minutes each day, on May 8 and May 16.

Mr. BARTLETT, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Ms. OAKAR) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. FAZIO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ANNUNZIO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. BENNETT, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. OWENS of New York, for 60 minutes each day, on May 7, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 21, 22, 23, and 24.

(The following Member (at the request of Mrs. BENTLEY) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. MOAKLEY, for 5 minutes, today.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend remarks was granted to:

Mr. WEISS, immediately before vote on House Concurrent Resolution 310, in House, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. BARTLETT) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. LENT.
Mr. OXLEY.
Mr. WEBER.
Mr. LAGOMARSINO in three instances.
Mr. SUNDQUIST.
Mr. CONTE.
Mr. DONALD E. "BUZ" LUKENS.
Mrs. BENTLEY.
Mr. GREEN.
Mr. GOSS.
Mr. SENSENBRENNER.
Mr. MACHTLEY in three instances.
Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut.
Mr. BROOMFIELD.
Mr. KYL in two instances.
Mr. BUECHNER.
Mr. FISH in two instances.
Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN in two instances.
Mr. GINGRICH.
Mr. LEWIS of Florida.

(The following Members (at the request of Ms. OAKAR and to include extraneous matter:)

Mrs. LLOYD in five instances.
Mr. HAMILTON in 10 instances.
Mr. DE LA GARZA in 10 instances.
Mr. STARK in five instances.
Ms. OAKAR.
Mr. ROE.
Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA.
Mr. PENNY.
Mr. ATKINS.
Mr. FAUNTROY.
Mr. DOWNEY.
Mr. FUSTER.
Mr. BOSCO.
Mr. BILBRAY.
Mr. DE LUGO.
Mr. DONNELLY.
Mr. KANJORSKI.
Mr. LANTOS in two instances.
Mr. WOLPE.
Mrs. SCHROEDER.
Mr. SCHUMER.
Mr. BRYANT.
Mr. HAWKINS.
Mr. ERDREICH.
Mr. JACOBS.
Mr. MAZZOLI in two instances.
Mr. WAXMAN.
Mr. LEVINE of California.
Mr. MILLER of California.
Mr. MURPHY.
Mr. DARDEN.
Mr. FAZIO.
Mr. UDALL.
Mr. DYSON.

ADJOURNMENT

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 8 o'clock and 45 minutes p.m.) under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 2, 1990, at 12 noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

3093. A letter from the Director, the Office of Management and Budget, transmitting the cumulative report on rescissions and deferrals of budget authority as of April 1, 1990, pursuant to 2 U.S.C. 685(e) (H. Doc. No. 101-184); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3094. A letter from the Director, Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, transmitting the 11th report on applications for delays of notice and customer challenges under provisions of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 3421; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

3095. A letter from the Chairman, U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, transmitting the 18th annual report of the activities of the Commission covering the period October 1, 1988, through September 30, 1989, pursuant to 20 U.S.C. 1504; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

3096. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting a report, "Patterns of Global Terrorism: 1989," the third of the annual country reports on terrorism, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2656f; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

3097. A letter from the Chairman, Federal Trade Commission, transmitting a report on the Commission's activities under the Government in the Sunshine Act during calendar year 1989, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552b; to the Committee on Government Operations.

3098. A letter from the Supreme Court of the United States, transmitting amendments to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure prescribed by the Court, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 2072 (H. Doc. No. 101-185); to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

3099. A letter from the Director, Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, transmitting the annual report on applications for court orders made to Federal and State courts to permit the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications during calendar year 1989, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 2519(3); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3100. A letter from the Director, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to reform the Federal pay system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

3101. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works), transmitting a supplement to his fourth annual report stating that one of the studies, Brevard County, FL, did have funds appropriated in fiscal year 1988 and therefore does not meet the criterion in section 710, and should be deleted from the list, pursuant to 33 U.S.C. 2264; to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

3102. A letter from the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to enter into enhanced-use agreements with respect to designated VA facilities and to direct the disposal of such designated facilities by special disposition; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

3103. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting a copy of a report entitled, "Tier III Agency Drug-Free Workplace Plans," and appendices thereto, pursuant to Public Law 100-71, section 503 (101 Stat. 391, 468-471); jointly, to the Committees on Post Office and Civil Service and Appropriations.

3104. A letter from the Chairman, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, transmitting the report on the nondisclosure of safeguards information for the quarter ending March 31, 1990, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 2167(e); jointly, to the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Energy and Commerce.

3105. A letter from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting a comprehensive report describing the project entitled, "Low NO_x/SO_x Burner Retrofit for Utility Cyclone Boilers," proposed by TransAlta Resources Investment Corp.; jointly, to the Committees on Appropriations; Energy and Commerce; and Science, Space, and Technology.

3106. A letter from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting a comprehensive report describing the project entitled, "Demonstration of Selective Catalytic Reduction (SCR) Technology for Control of Nitrogen Oxide (NO_x) Emissions from High-Sulfur-Coal-Fired Boilers," proposed by Southern Co. Services; jointly, to the Committees on Appropriations; Energy and Commerce; and Science, Space, and Technology.

3107. A letter from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting a comprehensive report describing the project entitled, "Development of the Coal Quality Expert," proposed by Combustion Engineering, Inc., and CQ Inc.; jointly, to the Committees on Appropriations; Energy and Commerce; and Science, Space, and Technology.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. UDALL: Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. H.R. 3248. A bill to revise the boundary of Gettysburg National Military Park in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. 101-467). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. UDALL: Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. H.R. 3209. A bill to modify the boundaries of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, and for other purposes; with an amendent (Rept. 101-468). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. UDALL: Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. H.R. 3058. A bill to provide for the exchange of certain Federal coal leases from the Alton Coal Field in the State of Utah for other Federal coal leases in that State; with an amendent (Rept. 101-469). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. FASCELL: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H.R. 4636. A bill to authorize supplemental economic assistance for fiscal year 1990 to support democracy in Panama and Nicaragua, and for other purposes. (Rept. 101-470, Pt. 1). Ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 5 of rule X and clause 4 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HANCOCK (for himself, Mr. EMERSON, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mr. TAUZIN, Mr. HYDE, Mr. STENHOLM, Mr. ARMEY, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri, Mr. COX, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CRANE, Mr. DANNEMEYER, Mr. DELAY, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. HERGER, Mr. HOLLOWAY, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. KYL, Mr. LAUGHLIN, Mr. PARKER, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. SHAW, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. TANNER, Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming, and Mr. WALKER):

H.R. 4683. A bill to amend title 28 of the United States Code to clarify the remedial jurisdiction of inferior Federal courts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BENNETT (for himself, Mrs. SCHROEDER, and Mr. PICKETT):

H.R. 4684. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Navy to close the strategic homeport at Staten Island, NY, and to provide a moratorium, pending a reassessment, of the Strategic Homeporting Program of the Department of the Navy; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. BLAZ (by request):

H.R. 4685. A bill to provide for the temporary duty-free treatment of certain sweaters manufactured in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands ; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BOSCO (for himself, Mrs. BOXER, and Ms. PELOSI):

H.R. 4686. A bill to require that State-licensed pilot operate vessels carrying oil or hazardous material in certain bays; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. CONDIT (for himself, Mr. LEHMAN of California):

H.R. 4687. A bill to amend the Wild and Scenic River Act by designating a segment of the Lower Merced River in California as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. Levine of California (for himself, Mr. BRYANT, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. MRAZEK, and Mr. SANGMEISTER):

H.R. 4688. A bill to protect the rights of victims of crime, establish a Federal victims' bill of rights for children, and improve the response of the criminal justice system and related agencies to incidents of child abuse; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PEASE (for himself, and Mr. FRENZEL):

H.R. 4689. A bill to implement the National Customs Automation Program and otherwise improve the administration of the customs laws; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PENNY:

H.R. 4690. A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to permit the deferral of payments on students loans during professional internships, regardless of duration; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. QUILLEN:

H.R. 4691. A bill to provide for the minting and circulation of $1 coins, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. ROE:

H.R. 4692. A bill to suspend temporarily the duty on butyl methoxydibenzoylmethane; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHAW:

H.R. 4693. A bill to temporarily suspend the duty on metal oxide varistors; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHAW (for himself and Mr. IRELAND):

H.R. 4694. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to treat all siblings as one shareholder for purposes of determining whether a corporation may elect to be an S corporation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH of New Jersey:

H.R. 4695. A bill to establish an Office of Global Change Information; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. STOKES:

H.R. 4696. A bill to extend until January 1, 1994, the existing temporary suspension of duty on tungsten ores; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VOLKMER:

H.R. 4697. A bill to amend the Solid Waste Disposal Act to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to provide grants for the purchase of recycling equipment; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

H.R. 4698. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide a 25-percent investment tax credit for recycling equipment; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

H.R. 4699. A bill to restore 10-year averaging and capital gains treatment for lump sum distributions from qualified pension plans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MILLER of California (for himself, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. CONTE, Mr. STARK, Mr. EDWARDS of California, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. MARKEY, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. BLAZ, Mr. ROSE, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. BEILENSON, Ms. SCHNEIDER, Mr. UDALL, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. BATES, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. SOLARZ, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. VENTO, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. WILSON, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. DINGELL, Mr. KASTENMEIER, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. NOWAK, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. MINETA, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. TORRES, Mr. BILBRAY, and Mr. FAZIO):

H.R. 4700. A bill to provide for the restoration of fish and wildlife and their habitat impacted by the Central Valley Project, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Interior and Insular affairs and Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. WAXMAN:

H.R. 4701. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act with respect to providing financial assistance for certain trauma-care centers operating in geographic areas with a significant incidence of violence arising from the abuse of drugs; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. HASTERT (for himself, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. HANCOCK, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. HYDE, Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. WEBER, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, Mr. PETRI, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. HORTON, Mr. LENT, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. LIGHTFOOT, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. ROTH, Mr. SMITH of Texas, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. SUNDQUIST, and Mr. SHUMWAY):

H.J. Res. 558. Joint resolution designating May 5, 1990, as "National Tax Freedom Day"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. SOLOMON (for himself, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. MCCRERY, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. MYERS of Indiana, Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. WELDON, Mr. HANSEN, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mr. ROGERS, Mr. HUCKABY, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. PARKER, Mr. BLAZ, Mr. HOLLOWAY, Mr. WILSON, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. EMERSON, Mr. STUMP, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. LENT, Mr. LEATH of Texas, Mr. RHODES, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. MILLER of Ohio, Mr. SCHAEFER, Ms. MOLINARI, Mr. DENNY SMITH, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. FIELDS, Mr. TAUZIN, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. PAXON, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. GALLO, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. BARNARD, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. ARMEY, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. DANNEMEYER, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. PACKARD, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. HANCOCK, Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska, Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, Mr. GOSS, Mr. BROOMFIELD, Mr. SKEEN, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. ROTH, Mr. HYDE, Mr. MARLENEE, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. BEREUTER, Mr. NIELSON of Utah, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. FISH, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. SUNDQUIST, Mr. GRANT, Mr. COURTER, Mr. COMBEST, Mr. WALSH, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. COBLE, and Mr. HASTERT):

H.J. Res. 559. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States authorizing the Congress and the States to prohibit the act of physical desecration of the flag of the United States and to set criminal penalties for that act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BONIOR:

H. Con. Res. 317. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress that the Social Security trust funds should be removed from deficit calculations; to the Committee on Government Operations.

By Mr. MURPHY:

H. Con. Res. 318. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress with respect to certain regulations of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII,

378. The SPEAKER presented a memorial of the Senate of the State of Minnesota, relative to restoration and preservation of the Civilian Conservation Corps buildings; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII,

Mr. TRAFICANT introduced a bill (H.R. 4702) for the relief of Andrew Susce; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 200: Ms. SCHNEIDER.

H.R. 201: Mr. SCHAEFER and Mr. MANTON.

H.R. 220: Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. WYDEN, Ms. SCHNEIDER, and Mr. BORSKI.

H.R. 290: Mr. CONDIT.

H.R. 496: Mr. CROCKETT and Mr. BILBRAY.

H.R. 581: Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. CLAY, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. MOODY, and Mr. FORD of Michigan.

H.R. 665: Mr. SMITH of New Jersey.

H.R. 929: Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. OWENS of New York, and Mr. COYNE.

H.R. 931: Mr. JACOBS.

H.R. 993: Mr. MAZZOLI.

H.R. 1095: Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, and Mrs. PATTERSON.

H.R. 1140: Mr. NEAL of North Carolina.

H.R. 1180: Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York and Mr. KOSTMAYER.

H.R. 1292: Mr. FISH.

H.R. 1317: Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. PORTER, Mr. GLICKMAN, and Mr. POSHARD.

H.R. 1490: Mr. JOHNSTON of Florida, Mr. BATES, and Mr. CROCKETT.

H.R. 1730: Mr. TALLON, Mr. CONDIT, Mr. BOSCO, and Mr. MARTINEZ.

H.R. 1883: Mr. PANETTA.

H.R. 1995: Mr. TRAXLER.

H.R. 2098: Mr. HUTTO, Mr. GRAY, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mrs. PATTERSON, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. TORRES, and Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS.

H.R. 2168: Mr. MOAKLEY and Mr. LEVINE of California.

H.R. 2273: Mr. MAZZOLI.

H.R. 2319: Mr. TAUKE, Mr. GRAY, Mr. TRAFICANT, and Mrs. SCHROEDER.

H.R. 2353: Mr. MOODY.

H.R. 2418: Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.

H.R. 2584: Mr. SMITH of Florida and Mr. FAWELL.

H.R. 2585: Mr. CAMPBELL of California, Mr. BEILENSON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. RINALDO, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. GUARINI, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. MILLER of Washington, Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. ROYBAL, and Mr. GOSS.

H.R. 2718: Mr. DELLUMS.

H.R. 2800: Mr. GLICKMAN, Mr. EVANS, and Mr. SPENCE.

H.R. 3004: Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. MINETA, and Mr. RAHALL.

H.R. 3048: Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota.

H.R. 3167: Mr. SISISKY.

H.R. 3271: Mr. SCHUETTE.

H.R. 3446: Mr. HUGHES.

H.R. 3512: Mr. HUCKABY.

H.R. 3537: Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland, Mr. ESPY, and Mr. DAVIS.

H.R. 3616: Mr. RHODES, Mr. UDALL, Mr. ORTIZ, and Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS.

H.R. 3654: Mr. SUNDQUIST.

H.R. 3732: Mr. NIELSON of Utah, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. THOMAS of Georgia, Mr. EVANS, Mr. SKAGGS, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. BATES, Mr. MYERS of Indiana, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. WOLF, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, and Mr. GINGRICH.

H.R. 3815: Mr. TAUKE.

H.R. 3817: Mr. ATKINS.

H.R. 3859: Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.

H.R. 3864: Ms. KAPTUR.

H.R. 3880: Ms. LONG, Mr. GRANDY, Mr. KOLTER, and Mr. MANTON.

H.R. 3889: Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. JAMES, Mr. LIPINSKI, and Mrs. UNSOELD.

H.R. 3914: Mr. KILDEE, Mr. EMERSON, Mr. AUCOIN, Mr. MILLER of Washington, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. LEACH of Iowa, Mr. DURBIN, Ms. LONG, Mr. PAXON, Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, Mr. YATES, Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN, Mr. SHUMWAY, Mr. RIDGE, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. PO-SHARD, Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. MCHUGH, Mr. ROTH, Mr. PEASE, Mr. STARK, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. JAMES, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, and Mr. LIGHTFOOT.

H.R. 3929: Mr. DYSON.

H.R. 3936: Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. DYSON, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. FROST, Mr. EVANS, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. UDALL, Mr. RUSSO, Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. DICKS, Mr. YATRON, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. PEASE, and Mr. STUDDS.

H.R. 3954: Mr. SKELTON, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. ROE, Mr. DE LUGO, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. REGULA, Mr. EVANS, Mr. HORTON, Ms. KAPTUR, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. UPTON, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. NEAL of North Carolina, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. GILMAN, Mrs. TOWNS, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. PANETTA, Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. PORTER, Mr. HYDE, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. BEREUTER, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. HOUGHTON, Mr. RAY, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. WEBER, and Mr. PURSELL.

H.R. 3957: Mr. BLILEY.

H.R. 3978: Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA and Mr. DERRICK.

H.R. 3984: Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. WALSH, Mr. HORTON, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. EVANS, Mr. LEWIS of Florida, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. FISH, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. FAUNTROY, and Mr. OWENS of New York.

H.R. 3986: Mr. FAWELL, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. RIDGE, Mr. SHUMWAY, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. KOLBE, Mr. BOEHLERT, Ms. LONG, Mr. PAYNE of Virginia, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. LEATH of Texas, Mr. LEVIN of Michigan, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. CLEMENT, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. PAXON, Mr. UPTON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. PORTER, Mr. GEREN, Mr. BRENNAN, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. DE LA GARZA, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. BAKER, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. WHITTEN, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. MURTHA, Mr. SABO, Mr. DICKINSON, and Mr. STANGELAND.

H.R. 4002: Mr. EMERSON.

H.R. 4003: Mr. BATES, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, and Mr. SABO.

H.R. 4038: Mr. ATKINS, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. HORTON, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. LOWERY of California, Mr. LENT, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. MACHTLEY, and Mr. NIELSON of Utah.

H.R. 4042: Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. BARNARD, and Mr. OWENS of Utah.

H.R. 4050: Ms. PELOSI, Mr. WISE, Mr. SHAYS, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. STARK, Mr. FRANK, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. FROST, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. VENTO, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. MOODY, and Mr. CROCKETT.

H.R. 4121: Mr. HANCOCK, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. BOUCHER, and Mr. DUNCAN.

H.R. 4147: Mr. MACHTLEY.

H.R. 4201: Mr. WEISS.

H.R. 4224: Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. FAUNTROY, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. MANTON, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. STARK, Mr. TORRES, and Mr. WYDEN.

H.R. 4250: Mr. UDALL, Mr. ESPY, Mr. RANGEL, and Mr. FOGLIETTA.

H.R. 4252: Mr. OXLEY.

H.R. 4253: Mr. DONNELLY and Mr. SAVAGE.

H.R. 4280: Mr. GIBBONS.

H.R. 4310: Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. TORRES, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. ECKART, and Mr. KENNEDY.

H.R. 4363: Mr. LANCASTER.

H.R. 4383: Mr. ATKINS, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. MRAZEK, Mr. BATEMAN, Mr. WILSON, and Mr. MAVROULES.

H.R. 4390: Mr. EDWARDS of California, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. EVANS, Mr. PAXON, Mr. PENNY, Mr. STAGGERS, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Ms. LONG, Mr. GEREN, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. WYLIE, Mr. JAMES, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. JENKINS, Mr. RICHARDSON, and Mr. BROWDER.

H.R. 4392: Mr. HUGHES and Mr. TOWNS.

H.R. 4424: Mr. BEVILL and Mr. MILLER of Ohio.

H.R. 4460: Mr. FAUNTROY Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. MILLER of Ohio, and Mr. REGULA.

H.R. 4481: Mr. HEFNER Mr. GRANDY, Mr. ANTHONY, Mr. MARLENEE, Mr. COMBEST, and Mr. DURBIN.

H.R. 4483: Mr. GRANDY, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. PRICE, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. COMBEST, and Mr. MARLENEE.

H.R. 4484: Mr. MURPLY and Mr. FAUNTROY.

H.R. 4494: Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. DREIER of California, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. BARNARD, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. TORRES, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. KYL, and Mr. NOWAK.

H.R. 4508: Mr. PETRI, Mr. BEREUTER, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. GALLO, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. SUNDQUIST, Mr. HORTON, and Mr. WALSH.

H.R. 4548: Mr. FAUNTROY and Ms. KAPTUR.

H.R. 4555: Mr. EVANS.

H.R. 4564: Mr. LIVINGSTON and Mr. WEBER.

H.R. 4574: Mr. BONIOR, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. ATKINS, and Mr. POSHARD.

H.R. 4594: Mr. LENT and Mr. NOWAK.

H.R. 4637: Mr. FISH.

H.R. 4641: Mrs. UNSOELD and Mr. DORNAN of California.

H.J. Res. 127: Mr. STUMP.

H.J. Res. 374: Mr. FRANK, Mr. RINALDO, and Mr. MURTHA.

H.J. Res. 427: Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. PORTER, and Mr. RUSSO.

H.J. Res. 436: Mr. BOEHLERT.

H.J. Res. 458: Mr. ASPIN, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. AUCOIN, Mr. BAKER, Mr. BALLENGER, Mr. BARNARD, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. BATES, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. BILBRAY, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mrs. BOGGS, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. BOUCHER, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BRENNAN, Mr. BROWDER, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. CLAY, Mr. CONDIT, Mr. COOPER, Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. COURTER, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. DANNEMEYER, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. DAVIS, Mr. DE LA GARZA, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. DERRICK, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DIXON, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. DYSON, Mr. EMERSON, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. EVANS, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. FISH, Mr. FLIPPO, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. FORD of Tennessee, Mr. FRANK, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. FROST, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. GALLO, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. GEREN, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. GORDON, Mr. GRANT, Mr. GUNDERSON, Mr. HAMILTON, Mr. HANSEN, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. HATCHER, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. HERGER, Mr. HOPKINS, Mr. HORTON, Mr. HOYER, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. HUCKABY, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. HYDE, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. JACOBS, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. KASICH, Mr. KASTENMEIER, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. LAFALCE, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. LEACH of Iowa, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. LEWIS of Florida, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. MANTON, Mr. MARKEY, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. MAZZOLI, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. MCHUGH, Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland, Mr. MCNULTY, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. MILLER of Washington, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. MOLLOHAN, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. NAGLE, Mr. NATCHER, Mr. NEAL of North Carolina, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. NOWAK, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. PACKARD, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. PAYNE of Virginia, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. PORTER, Mr. PRICE, Mr. PURSELL, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. RAY, Mr. REGULA, Mr. RHODES, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. ROGERS, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. SABO, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. SARPALIUS, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. SHAYS, Mr. SHUMWAY, Mr. SKAGGS, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. STALLINGS, Mr. STENHOLM, Mr. TALLON, Mr. TANNER, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. THOMAS of California, Mr. THOMAS of Georgia, Mr. TORRES, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. TRAXLER, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. UPTON, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. VOLKMER, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. WALSH, Mr. WATKINS, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. WHEAT, Mr. WHITTEN, Mr. WILSON, Mr. WISE, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. YATES, Mr. YATRON, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. GOODLING, Mr. PANETTA, and Ms. MOLINARI.

H.J. Res. 459: Mr. BRENNAN, Mr. MONTGOMERY, and Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.

H.J. Res. 463: Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. NEAL of North Carolina, Mr. PAYNE of Virginia, Mr. ENGEL, and Mr. LENT.

H.J. Res. 464: Mr. FAZIO.

H.J. Res. 467: Mrs. BOXER, Mr. COURTER, Mr. CARDIN, and Mr. ENGLISH.

H.J. Res. 501: Mr. DIXON, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. ESPY, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. MINETA, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. UPTON, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. MOODY, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma, Mr. EVANS, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. GRANT, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. COURTER, Mr. FISH, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. RITTER, Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. TANNER, Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. SANGMEISER, Mr. ASPIN, Mr. YATRON, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. PAXON, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. GALLO, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. NEAL of North Carolina, Mr. MARTIN of New York, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. SHAW, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. DOWNEY, Mr. LIPINSKI, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. CLAY, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. HENRY, Mr. HALL of Ohio, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. TALLON, Mr. STAGGERS, Mr. SKAGGS, Mr. PICKLE, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. TORRES, Mr. WASHINGTON, Mr. MILLER of California, Mr. FORD of Michigan,

Mr. BENNETT, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, and Mr. SMITH of Vermont.

H.J. Res. 517: Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. ANNUNZIO, Mr. BAKER, Mr. BARTLETT, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. BROOMFIELD, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. COBLE, Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri, Mr. CONTE, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. COURTER, Mr. DAVIS, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. DE LA GARZA, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. DICKINSON, Mr. DICKS, Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. EARLY, Mr. ESPY, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. FEIGHAN, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. FROST, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. GALLO, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. GONZALEZ, Mr. GRANDY, Mr. GRANT, Mr. GRAY, Mr. GREEN, Mr. GUARINI, Mr. HAMILTON, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. HATCHER, Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. HENRY, Mr. HILER, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. HORTON, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. HYDE, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. JACOBS, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. KASICH, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. LOWERY of California, Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. MANTON, Mr. MARTIN of New York, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. MRAZEK, Mr. NEAL of North Carolina, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. ORTIZ, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. PORTER, Mr. PURSELL, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. RHODES, Mr. RINALDO, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. ROE, Mr. ROGERS, Mr. ROTH, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. DENNY SMITH, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. STAGGERS, Mr. STALLINGS, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. TALLON, Mr. UPTON, Mr. VENTO, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. WEBER, Mr. WEISS, Mr. WOLF, Mr. YATRON, Mr. THOMAS of Georgia, Mr. MICHEL, Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. MCDADE, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. MCMILLAN of North Carolina, Mr. PRICE, Mr. SHAW, Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. RITTER, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. SABO, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. MAVROULES, and Mr. VANDER JAGT.

H.J. Res. 519: Mr. WOLF and Mr. ROBERTS.

H.J. Res. 523: Mr. UPTON.

H.J. Res. 531: Mr. FAZIO, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. HORTON, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. HERTEL, and Mr. WALSH.

H.J. Res. 540: Mr. JACOBS, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. YATRON, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. SOLARZ, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. FISH, Mr. MCDERMOTT, and Mr. WALGREN.

H.J. Res. 551: Mr. DAVIS, Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. WOLF, Mr. SPENCE, and Mr. FAUNTROY.

H. Con. Res. 5: Mrs. BOXER.

H. Con. Res. 252: Mr. STARK, Mr. PEASE, Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. SHUMWAY, Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN, Mr. LEATH of Texas, and Mr. KILDEE.

H. Con. Res. 264: Mr. DONNELLY and Mr. GOODLING.

H.Con. Res. 276: Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. GRANT, Mr. WHITTEN, Mr. GUARINI, Mr. COLEMAN of Texas, Mr. PAYNE of Virginia, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. PAXON, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. KLECZKA, Mr. LENT, Mr. YATES, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. MILLER of California, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. ANNUNZIO, Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. WALSH, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. MARTIN of New York, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. KOLTER, and Mr. MCDERMOTT.

H. Con. Res. 280: Mr. KILDEE, Mr. HORTON, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. PARKER, Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. SKAGGS, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. CARDIN, and Mrs. UNSOELD.

H. Res. 240: Mr. COURTER and Mr. YATRON.

H. Res. 349: Mr. KOLTER, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. MAZZOLI, and Mr. BEREUTER.

H. Res. 376: Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. COX, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. RITTER, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. HORTON, and Mr. CRANE.

H. Res. 380: Mr. HYDE, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. PORTER, and Mr. ATKINS.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 3978: Mr. TANNER.

H.R. 4038: Mr. LAGOMARSINO.

H.R. 4278: Mr. VALENTINE.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 4380

By Mr. DYMALLY:

MINORITY PARTICIPATION IN THE SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER

SEC. 304. (a) FEDERAL FUNDING.—The Secretary of Energy shall, to the fullest extent possible, ensure that at least 10 per centum of Federal funding for the development, construction, and operation of the Superconducting Super Collider be made available to business concerns of other organizations owned or controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, historically black colleges and universities and colleges and universities having a student body in which more than 20 percent of the students are Hispanic Americans or Native Americans, and minority institution (as defined by the Secretary of Education pursuant to the General Education Provision Act (20 USC 1221 et seq.) For purposes of this section, economically and socially disadvantaged individuals shall be deemed to include women.

(b) OTHER PARTICIPATION.—The Secretary of Energy shall, to the fullest extent possible, ensure significant participation, in addition to that described in subsection (a) in the development, construction, and operation of the Superconducting Super Collider by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals and economically disadvantaged women.

By Mr. SENSENBRENNER:

—Page 14, lines 8 through 18, strike paragraph (2).

—Page 14, line 19, redesignate paragraph (3) as paragraph (2).

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

CONGRESSMAN BEN CARDIN: GREAT ADDITION TO THE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, Congressman BEN CARDIN's recent appointment to the Ways and Means Committee has also been a gain for the Health Subcommittee, because of the Congressman's deep interest in improving health care for all Americans.

I recently enjoyed reading the April 3, 1990, Baltimore Sun piece entitled, "Cardin genial, but he grabs hard issues." From his work on the Health Subcommittee, it is clear that the article accurately reflects a hard-working, brilliant Representative.

The article follows:

CARDIN GENIAL, BUT HE GRABS HARD ISSUES

(By Tom Bowman)

One Friday night each month, a group of men assembles deep in the Baltimore area with a deck of cards and some poker chips etched with the letters "BLC."

The initials stand for Benjamin L. Cardin, D-Md.-3rd, who jokes that no matter what cards are dealt, he'll go home with all the chips.

"He does anyway; he's the best card player," says Baltimore County Sheriff J. Edward Malone, a player in the game that began in the early 1970s. "You can't read him. You can't read whether he's got it or he's bluffing."

In politics, Mr. Cardin often seems to walk off with all the chips. In Annapolis in 1979, he became the youngest speaker of the House of Delegates at the age of 35. A decade later on Capitol Hill, his star has been on the rise through a combination of reputation, skills and his recent elevation to the powerful Ways and Means Committee.

Along the way he also has been hard to read at times, more complex than his genial demeanor would reveal.

Laid back and shy—almost compulsively nice—he is a devoted family man whose tender talk with his wife on a car phone can make aides blush. A successful politician, he seems removed from the egocentric tendencies of many colleagues: his long career has been marked by inclusion and compromise.

Yet he was not shy about wielding power in Annapolis to push through a bill or gavel a recalcitrant lawmaker. And today, at times frustrated by the slow pace in Washington, he longs for the return of a strong House speaker.

Quietly driven, Mr. Cardin zealously pursued his Ways and Means seat even before he was sworn in. He "cracks the whip" for more briefing material, said a former aide. When he picks up a book he can never read a few pages: he must finish a chapter.

"We used to call him Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," recalled his wife Myrna, with a chuckle." "It's kind of a paradox; he's not the typical politician."

But Representative Steny H. Hoyer, D-Md.-5th, who served as Senate president in Annapolis shortly before Mr. Cardin ran the House, sees in his close friend an astute politician, who combines intellect and hard work with an "intuitive feel for what motivates people."

The man who once "ran the state," in the words of a Maryland legislator, settles into a chair in his office above North Baltimore's East Belvedere Avenue. Short and husky, with wispy gray hair and a wide smile, he is as approachable as the corner grocer.

"I try to be myself. I don't try to put on a show," said the congressman, a bit defensively. "I enjoy all aspects of political life."

Politics is in his genes. Both his father, Meyer, and uncle Maurice were elected to the House of Delegates and created a political organization in the Forest Park-Ashburton area.

The younger Cardin hoisted campaign signs as a toddler and held office as a schoolboy. "Theodore McKeldin [the former governor and Baltimore mayor] was at my bar mitzvah. He'd be at our house and would talk politics all the time," he recalled. "My father would talk politics all the time."

As a young married couple, Ben and Myrna Cardin considered moving out of Baltimore into the new apartments rising along Liberty Road. But Meyer Cardin, political patriarch, cautioned against the move. "He said, 'You should stay in the city you might want to go into politics,' " Myrna Cardin recalled.

The 22-year-old law student was elected to the House of Delegates from the Cardin stronghold in 1966.

Mr. Cardin set out to prove himself, not to overcome a notion of family favoritism, he said, but to rise to the strong tradition of 5th District lawmakers. "I had to feel worthy of the seat," he said.

Arriving in Annapolis, Mr. Cardin developed a reputation as an intense—if somewhat bland—legislator. He evolved from his family's backroom politics of patronage and organization into a legislator who found his niche "in substantive issues rather than politics for politics' sake."

Prince George's District Judge Gerard F. Devlin, then a fellow House member, remembers a legislative retreat in Ocean City with this new delegate from Baltimore. "Everybody was on the beach and Ben was preparing a report," he recalled adding with a laugh, "I think he took his tie off."

"I prefer to work on a bill than to try to win favor from my colleagues from being a social person," Mr. Cardin said.

The nose-to-the-grindstone style also has served him well two decades later in Washington, where he is viewed by colleagues and staffers as a "nuts and bolts" legislator.

Fellow lawmakers point to his work on national bills—such as reparations for Japanese-American internees during World War II—and to local concerns such as money for cleanup of toxic chemicals in Baltimore's harbor.

"He's a very professional legislator with an attention to detail, a quality lacking in some people," said Representative James A. Hayes, D-La., a former colleague on the Public Works Committee.

In December, Mr. Cardin finally realized his dream of a seat on the Ways and Means Committee, one of the Hill's most powerful panels, with a policy reach that extends to Social Security and health care, trade and taxes.

He came out swinging early. In a heated exchange with Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, Mr. Cardin sharply questioned the Bush administration's plans to cut the capital gains tax.

"He asks thoughtful questions, he digs beneath the surface," said Representative Sander M. Levin, D-Mich., a fellow Ways and Means member. "He's already making a mark."

"It really is a perfect match for what I want to do," said Mr. Cardin, who plans to concentrate on perhaps the two thorniest issues in Washington: the budget deficit and health care.

In January he called for removal of the Social Security trust fund from the budget calculations and for reduction of the deficit with a mixture of new taxes and spending cuts.

Many question the political will for such a move. Representative Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., recently told his Ways and Means colleagues that using Social Security surpluses was "fundamentally dishonest" but politically necessary since Democrats "don't want to make choices either."

"Dealing with the deficit probably will not be a popular thing to do because it means increasing taxes and/or reducing spending," concedes Mr. Cardin. "We're elected to do just the opposite."

Similar difficulties surround health policy.

"I was very much in favor of the catastrophic health care program," said Mr. Cardin, referring to the law that was scrapped by Congress last fall after outraged senior citizens objected to bearing all the costs for the program. Mr. Cardin—who caught some heat from constituents—vainly pushed a plan that would have reduced the Medicare premiums through increased tobacco taxes.

The congressman lapses into a lengthy discussion of health care issues. ("That turns him on," said his wife.) He chats about costs and policies in other countries. Facts and figures spill out: The federal role. The private role. He's on a roll.

"Why not let people under 65 buy Medicare?" he finally asks. "I would favor the development of a national program provided that we allow private insurers to write similar policies to compete with the federal government."

Ben Cardin often seems absorbed in the intricacies of legislation. But in his district, the politician shifts toward the practical, working his constituents like the ward heelers from the political heyday of his Cardin elders.

A recent night found two dozen South Baltimore voters seated in folding chairs in the sparse basement of a Methodist church.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

Before them is the man they elected with 73 percent of the vote.

"Ben's a good man," said George Jones, past president of the Beechfield Community Association, lighting up a cigarette and gesturing toward the speaker. "I think he works for his people."

The congressman receives high marks for his constituents' services, which involves more than helping with Social Security checks, said observers, who note that Mr. Cardin has organized mock legislatures where high school seniors draft bills. "It goes beyond the mundane to the visionary," said Baltimore City Councilman Anthony J. Ambridge, D-2nd.

Dressed in a gray suit and a paisley tie, Ben Cardin comes off like an earnest night-school professor. He chats about legislation, throws in some lame jokes and then tries to perk up the crowd using the Socratic method.

"How does the deficit affect us?"

They are young and old, black and white, residents of a "quilt" district that stretches from blue-collar Little Italy to middle-class Columbia. The 3rd District also is highly organized, with myriad political clubs and associations, each with assorted factions.

The congressman lacks a club but forges an alliance with this political polyglot. Still, true to his roots, he has "several thousand" people he can call on for money or political grunt work. "They've been extremely responsive," he said.

Mr. Cardin has had only token opposition since his decision to run for the seat in 1986 when Barbara A. Mikulski, then a representative, launched a successful U.S. Senate bid.

More formidable candidates—state Sen. John A. Pica Jr., D-Baltimore, and former Baltimore County Executive Theodore G. Venetoulis—decided against the race, given Mr. Cardin's stature and also his strong support. The latest federal election report shows Mr. Cardin led Maryland delegation in fundraising, pulling in $235,000 in the last six months.

Ben Cardin's quick rise to influence in Washington raises the inevitable questions about his future course.

Some political observers believe that if a U.S. Senate seat should open up, Mr. Cardin would be the first to announce his candidacy. This congressional district was the base of Ms. Mikulski and also the state's other U.S. Senator, Democrat Paul S. Sarbanes.

The congressman brushes aside such talk. But the poker player in him knows what to do when the cards are dealt.

"If opportunities present themselves," he said, "I'll be prepared to make quick decisions."

REMEMBERING THE HOLOCAUST

HON. VIN WEBER

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. WEBER. Mr. Speaker, last week our former colleague, Jack Kemp, Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, addressed the annual National Civic Commemoration of the Days of Remembrance. This ceremony pays tribute to the memory of the 6 million victims of the Nazi Holocaust and is organized by the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council.

I commend Jack Kemp's remarks to my colleagues. He underscores for all of us the importance of remembering this dark chapter in history and calls on us to honor the victims by supporting the "orphaned child," the State of Israel. At a time of continued tension in the Mideast and the prospect of wider emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union, this speech will help us put our current policies in the appropriate context.

REMARKS BY SECRETARY JACK KEMP

This annual observance of the "days of remembrance" of the Nazi Holocaust and the historically unprecedented, and unparalleled destruction of a thousand-year-old civilization, that of European Jewry, serves many purposes. It revives our memories. It honors the victims. It informs the young and it is vital to our understanding, not only of Jewish history, but to Jewish survival as well.

A few years ago at a small Passover Seder with Elie and Marian Wiesel and family friends of ours in Miami, FL, my wife and I learned what Jewish children have been learning for centuries about slavery and suffering, about struggle, and the exodus, out of the hands of Pharaoh's Egypt.

President Bush said on the eve of this years Passover celebration, that it has special significance because he said, "A great march of freedom is underway for Soviet Jewry, and this year many thousands will celebrate the Seder with their families in Israel. For these people, and for their brethren waiting to emigrate, "next year in Jerusalem" is becoming a promise fulfilled."

The Passover Haggadah specifically instructs Jews to instruct their children about the redemption from Egypt. Memory and remembrance means a fidelity to the truth of history and at this Holocaust Memorial we recommit ourselves—Jews and Christian alike—to the integrity of memory and to the truth of history. Thus this day, as Elie Wiesel pointed out recently, can be both sad and hopeful. And it puts us all in a correct frame of mind for contemplating the awful insights, the warnings and lessons that emerge from this particular moment in history that we recall and remember this day.

Why is there a holocaust memorial in Washington? There were no concentration camps here; but I believe no location for the U.S. Holocaust Museum could be more appropriate than within the site of our memorials to Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, and Abraham Lincoln.

What an exciting moment in history it is to know that these founders of our precious democratic institutions are being quoted in every language and in every corner of the world. President Bush called it the Revolution of 1989; perhaps it's but the Revolution of 1776, but not yet completed.

This memorial and this day of remembrance teaches equally important lessons, some of which are unpleasant but others so necessary to keeping our pledge, "Never Again!" This day whets our appetite for the true brotherhood of man. We yearn as did the Prophet Isaiah for the days of which, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks."

To think about and remember the Holocaust makes us sick of violence and war, but makes clear that good men and women, when threatened by aggressors and tyrants, may at times have no alternative to defending themselves than by force of arms.

As Elie Weisel reminded us at the first Holocaust Memorial, "indifference to evil is evil." Would that it were always possible to compromise and split our differences with enemies and adversaries—but we are reminded that Neville Chamberlain and Eduard Daladier came to learn at Munich in September of 1938 that not every enemy can be appeased. Not every conflict can just be negotiated away.

The Holocaust presents Jews with particularly painful and unpleasant lessons. It has, in particular, taught them that there were more people around the world willing to eulogize them than were there to raise a hand to save them when they were attacked by Nazis. It has taught Jews that there are more people willing to apologize to them for the past than are willing to stand by them when they are attacked by anti-Semites, vilified at the UN, and blasphemed with a resolution equating Zionism with the evil of racism. The victims cry out for that resolution to be repealed now!

Holocaust commemorations always culminate in the exhortation, "Never Again!" But it is vital that we remind ourselves that this is not just a plea. It is not just a declaration somehow aimed at would-be perpetrators urging them not to repeat the crime; rather it is our solemn and sacred pledge, our profession of personal resolve to prevent a new Holocaust. But as important as it is to take this pledge, I believe it is a profound mistake to see that pledge as the only meaning of the Holocaust.

In fact, to see it that way is in my view a great disservice to the memories of those who died and to the lives of those who survived. The Holocaust was not only an historical event. It was after all a specific event unleashed against a particular people at an absolute moment in time, and in a specific place. Besides the untold suffering of millions, the utter destruction of a thousand-year-old civilization, but of European Jewry, nazism destroyed not only a people, but a culture, a language, a way of life, and a millennium of memories.

It is true that Zionism predates the Holocaust, but in the broader historical sense the State of Israel is the successor, the orphaned child, of that great, now-destroyed civilization of European Jewry. Much of the culture, the way of life, as well as many individual survivors of European Jewry have taken new root and new hope in Israel, and while the Holocaust tragically decreed that not only would Europe be Jewry's past, it also decreed that Israel would be Jewry's future.

Thus the best way to honor the memory of that destroyed Jewish past is by cherishing, protecting, and nurturing its future as embodied by the rebirth of Israel.

It is not enough to mourn the parent unless we give succor and support to the orphaned child. Indeed it diminishes the memory of the vanished parent to do anything less.

Criticism of the State of Israel, is not in and of itself an act of anti-Semitism, nor is it necessarily an act of anti-Zionism. Those who would hector and abuse, those who would play politics with its very survival, those who would criticize it according to standards that no other country in the world is subjected to, are doing more than being unjust to one country. They are betraying the memory of a murdered people whose culture and civilization, whose hopes and dreams, whose sons and daughters have found their home at last in Israel.

It is not too much to say then, that when a Middle East tyrant threatens genocide by poison gas warfare against Israel, and proposed to turn into the last gas chamber, he is declaring himself prepared to finish the work of the Holocaust.

The lesson of this day, in this sacred place, at this moment in history, is that we must protect and defend what has come to take its place in Jewish and world history, the resurrected Jewish state of Israel.

I believe that helping Israel resist tyrants and tyranny and to resist others who would threaten to compromise and weaken the Jewish state, is, the best way to honor the victims of the Holocaust.

BOSTON HARBOR FUNDING

HON. CHESTER G. ATKINS

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Speaker, in the 1988 presidential campaign then-Vice President George Bush traveled to Boston and called Boston Harbor a national disgrace. Now, as holder of our highest national office, he has ignored this problem by failing to commit Federal resources to the $6.1 billion Boston Harbor cleanup effort.

Last year, Congress appropriated $20 million to ignite the cleanup and ease water and sewer bill rate shock for Greater Boston residents. In his fiscal year 1991 budget request, the President deleted those funds, and ignored the $39 million left from a 1987 congressional authorization. The citizens of Massachusetts are doing their part by accepting water and sewer rate hikes of close to 300 percent in the last 4 years, and the Massachusetts Legislature has done its part by creating a $1.4 billion revolving loan fund to pay for wastewater treatment improvements. Sadly, our environmental President, who exploited a tragic situation for his own personal gain, sits on the sidelines and does nothing.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit a statement delivered today by Massachusetts State Representative R. Emmet Hayes before the Appropriations Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies, which oversees the Environmental Protection Agency's budget. Representative Hayes has shown remarkable leadership on this crucial environmental issue by sponsoring the legislation that created the State's revolving loan fund. His statement eloquently summarizes the daunting task facing the citizens of Massachusetts and the progress that has been made so far.

STATEMENT BY ROBERT EMMET HAYES, MASSACHUSETTS STATE REPRESENTATIVE, CHAIRMAN, COMMITTEE ON FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Good afternoon, my name is Robert Emmet Hayes. I am a State Representative from the 7th Plymouth District in Massachusetts and I serve as House Chairman of the Committee on Federal Financial Assistance. I am here today to urge your support for the appropriation of $39 million for the Boston Harbor Clean-up effort and the full-funding of $2.4 billion for the Federal Clean Water Act authorization.

Boston Harbor encompasses an area of 50 square miles. It houses the largest population concentration of any area of the Massachusetts coast line, and is New England's largest seaport. For more than 350 years, Massachusetts has drawn its strength and its sense of character from its seacoast, with Boston Harbor as a focal point.

The sense of history in the Harbor is strong: In its waters the U.S.S. Constitution is docked; through its waters colonists were supplied with raw materials which nurtured the spirit of American independence. In a real sense, Boston Harbor has played a significant role in two presidential elections. A Tea Party there helped make George Washington our first president. Sewage there helped make George Bush our 41st president.

Candidate Bush was certainly correct when he called Boston Harbor's water filthy. Boston Harbor has accurately been labeled the dirtiest harbor in America and the public health implications are frightening.

Eighty-two percent of flounder and other fin-fish in the harbor are diseased; twenty-three percent have visible tumors. High levels of cancer-causing PCB's have been found in lobster tamale. Half of the harbor's 4,700 acres of shellfish beds are closed permanently—all of them are closed after it rains. Even those clams which can be harvested must undergo a purification process. Swimmers entering the waters of urban beaches are at risk for infections—not to mention the questionable aesthetics. But what was not mentioned during the Presidential campaign, however, was what is being done in response. The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, the agency created by the Massachusetts legislature in 1985 to clean Boston Harbor, is undertaking the design and construction of $6.1 billion worth of new wastewater treatment facilities to end the pollution of Boston Harbor. The program, which is under a federal court order, is well underway and most agree on schedule. It is a complex, expensive and challenging program of men, machinery and plumbing and I might add, controversial. As complex and challenging as the engineering and construction may be, the biggest challenge facing the MWRA and the 2.5 million users of its system is how to pay for it.

The MWRA is making a strong effort to draw upon its own resources to meet this challenge. In the last four years, water and sewer rates have increased 272 percent. The average family of four is currently paying just under $400 per year in user fees. The rates by the mid 1990's are anticipated to be in excess of $800; and by the turn of the century, ratepayers could be facing bills of $1200 of $1400 per year. In addition, the MWRA to date has issued over $1.1 billion in bonds. The most recent issue, 836 million, was put to market in January of this year.

There have been other efforts to meet the funding challenge of the Boston Harbor Clean-Up at the state level. The Massachusetts state legislature unanimously passed, and the governor recently signed legislation which I am proud to say I sponsored. This legislation will bring some measure of rate-relief not only to MWRA users, but all communities in the Commonwealth facing similar projects. The bill, Chapter 275 of the Acts of 1989, will allow cities and towns to be able to tap into a $1.4 billion revolving loan fund to help pay for water and sewer improvements. This new law is the culmination of a two-year campaign to come to grips with billions in federal water and sewer mandates in Massachusetts.

Chapter 275 will:

Establish a $1.4 billion trust fund to provide financial assistance to cities and towns for water and sewer projects.

Award assistance to municipalities based on financial and environmental criteria, with a maximum subsidy of 75 percent.

Create a $20 million watershed-protection grants program.

Create a $200 million revolving loan fund for water treatment facilities.

Allow cities and towns to participate in a state bonding pool so as to reduce the debt costs of building water and sewer facilities.

However, even with the increased user fees, maxmium share of state bond and revolving loan funds, additional federal funds are critical to prevent intolerable rate increases—increases that amount to devastating rate shock.

When it passed the Clean Water Act in 1972, the federal government began a federal-state partnership which would result in the transformation of the nation's water resources. Under this historic program, over $40 billion has been authorized to help fund over 15,000 projects. Rivers like the Cuyahoga, the Hudson, and your own Potomac, are being reclaimed for future generations. But make no mistake about it, there is much more to be done. EPA's own needs survey estimates that over $80 billion worth of work remains to be done.

In recognition of the Boston Harbor crisis, Congress authorized $100 million in the 1987 reauthorization of the Clean Water Act. To date, $61 million has already been appropriated and put to work on vital harbor projects such as:

Site preparation for the new treatment plant—$25 million

Marine borings for the effluent outfall tunnel—$17 million

Design of the cross harbor conveyance tunnel—$19 million

Congress has already made an investment in the future of the Harbor. MWRA anticipates spending the balance of $39 million for the construction of the conveyance tunnel which will transmit wastewater from the South System, under the Harbor, for treatment at the new Deer Island plant. Thus allowing the de-commissioning of the facility at Nut Island. This antiquated plant currently treats the sewage from 20 communities west and south of Boston. Though Boston Harbor gets all the attention, the problems do not end with the Harbor. The South Essex Sewer District, which receives and treats water from 5 communities north of Boston, is under a consent decree to build a secondary treatment plant. The water quality problems in New Bedford Harbor are so serious, parts of it are designated super fund sites. Many cities and towns through-out the Commonwealth are faced with massive capital expenditures to fix and in many cases replace aging sewer pipes. For these reasons alone, it is imperative that Congress appropriate the full $2.4 billion authorized for next fiscal year.

The harsh realities of the federal budget deficit are well known and I realize how strapped the budget allocation for your subcommittee is. As a state legislator, I understand the importance of the housing issue; as a state legislator, I have consistently supported each veteran's program that has come to the floor of the Massachusetts house. As an American, I look with pride, as you do, at our space accomplishments. But I can think of no better investment the government can make than investing in the environment in which we live. The interest in our recent commemoration of Earth Day indicates the public concern with a clean and healthy earth. I urge you to include in the budget $39 million for the Boston Harbor

Clean-Up and to fully fund at $2.4 billion for the fiscal year authorization of the Federal Clean Water Act.

Thank you for your consideration.

COOPERATIVE TRANSITION TO STRATEGIC DEFENSES

HON. JON L. KYL

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, when President Reagan introduced America to the opportunity of defense against ballistic missiles and led the way with the formation of the SDI Program, his critics went into high gear. SDI, they said, would never work and would destabilize deterrence if it did.

Well, 7 years of solid technical progress have routed the "it will never work" crowd. Yes, it will work, and innovative concepts like brilliant pebbles can be on the President's desk for a decision during his first term.

Now it is time to underscore that strategic defenses will be stabilizing. The fact is that survivable and effective defenses would strengthen deterrence and reduce the risk of war by significantly complicating the planning and execution of a first strike with strategic offensive forces. Moreover, a cooperative transition to deterrence which includes nonnuclear defenses would complement stabilizing reductions of strategic offensive weapons in the START Treaty.

And despite the noise level from Moscow on SDI, greater stability means greater security for Soviet people, too. All the better if the move can be made cooperatively.

A cooperative transition is precisely what the United States is proposing in the Geneva Defense and Space Talks. Our proposals would require 3 years of serious discussion with the Soviets on specific measures for a cooperative transition prior to either party's future deployment of advanced defenses beyond current ABM Treaty limits. Another key feature of the U.S. proposal is predictability, that is, confidence-building, measures to avert future technological surprises by opening for both sides an early wide window into the other's activities in the field of strategic ballistic missile defense.

Mr. Speaker, President Bush has a forward-looking approach in the Defense and Space Talks. On April 19, Ambassador Dave Smith, our D&S negotiator, provided a succinct overview of the talks to the Geneva Conference on Disarmament. I commend his statement to my colleagues:

STATEMENT BY AMBASSADOR DAVID J. SMITH, CHIEF U.S. NEGOTIATOR FOR THE DEFENSE AND SPACE TALKS

I

Mr. President, I appreciate this opportunity to share with the Conference on Disarmament our perspectives on the Defense and Space negotiations. My predecessor, Ambassador Cooper, spoke with you last August. Since then several positive developments have occurred, although key areas of disagreement remain.

Throughout the five-year history of the Defense and Space Talks the United States has had a consistent objective. We seek to facilitate a cooperative transition to a more stable deterrence which relies increasingly on nonnuclear defenses against strategic ballistic missiles, should they prove feasible. Today's strategic balance relies almost exclusively on nuclear offensive weapons. Advances in nonnuclear technologies now make it likely that greater reliance on advanced defenses can be combined with stabilizing reductions in strategic offenses to reduce further the risk of war.

To achieve these goals, the United States has a forward-looking approach in the Defense and Space Talks. We seek to assure full testing rights for advanced defensive technologies, as allowed in the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile, or ARM Treaty. We seek to free space-based ABM radars and their substitutes from outdated ABM Treaty limits. U.S. proposals would require serious and thorough discussions with Soviet Union on specific measures for a cooperative transition prior to either Party's future deployment of advanced defenses beyond current ABM Treaty limits. U.S. proposals would also assure deployment rights after those talks. Finally, the United States seeks, through predictability—that is, confidence-building—measures, to avert future technological surprises by encouraging greater openness in both sides' activities in the field of strategic ballistic missile defense.

II

The centerpiece of the U.S. approach is our proposed Defense and Space Treaty, aimed at facilitating a cooperative transition. The U.S. draft, updated last December, retains key understandings reached at the 1987 Washington Summit and takes into account the outcome of the September 1989 Wyoming meeting of Secretary Baker and Foreign Minister Shevardnadze. At that session the Soviet Union dropped its demand for agreement on a period of nonwithdrawal from the ABM Treaty. The Soviet Union also dropped its linkage between signature and implementation of a START Treaty and reaching a new agreement on Defense and Space. The United States welcomed this step.

The U.S. draft Treaty provides for procedures whereby either Party may declare its intent to deploy strategic defenses by giving notice and proposing specific measures for implementing a cooperative transition. The Parties would be required to conduct three years of intensive discussions of the proposed specific measures and the implications for strategic stability. Subsequently, unless agreed otherwise, if a Party decided to commence deployments beyond those allowed by the ABM Treaty, it would have to give a further six months' notice.

This proposed mechanism offers a more stable path for deploying advanced defenses than the current alternative, which is to exercise the supreme interest withdrawal provision of the ABM Treaty. The ABM Treaty permits a Party to withdraw and deploy after only six months' notice. Our proposed new mechanism would help ensure a meaningful and timely dialogue on how to achieve a stable, cooperative transition.

The revised U.S. draft Treaty also reflects the full rights of the Parties under the ABM Treaty to develop and test advanced space-based ABM systems and components. To build confidence and prevent misperceptions about such testing, the United States offered a Space Testing Assurance in October 1988. It assures the Soviet Union that U.S. space-based ABM testing which is permitted by the ABM Treaty could not constitute a prohibited deployment of defenses. The United States pledged that only from a limited number of ABM Test Satellites would it conduct testing of a component of an ABM system based on other physical principles and capable of substituting for an ABM interceptor missile. Such testing would be to counter a strategic ballistic mssile or its elements in flight trajectory. The number of U.S. ABM Test Satellites in orbit simultaneously will not exceed a number well short of that associated with any realistic deployed capability. To build confidence further, the United States has proposed as a predictability measure notifications for launches, tests, changes of orbits, and deorbits of ABM Test Satellites.

The United States has also proposed that both sides be permitted to develop, test, or deploy space-based ABM radars and their substitutes without restriction. This would avoid future definitional and verification problems likely to arise because of advancing space-based technology, and it would encourage the evolution of stabilizing space-based sensors.

Another major concept in the U.S. draft Treaty is ensuring predictability in the development of the U.S.-Soviet strategic relationship in order to reduce the risk of nuclear war. This objective was agreed at the 1987 Washington Summit. In 1988 the United States proposed predictability measures to implement this objective. These measures include annual exchanges of programmatic data, meetings of experts, briefings, visits to laboratories, and observations of tests in the field of strategic ballistic missile defense. These measures would be carried out on a voluntary, reciprocal, and comparable basis. Their purpose is to create a better understanding of each side's ballistic missile defense activities as early as the research stage—years before the appearance of advanced defenses in the field.

At the Wyoming ministerial, Secretary of State Baker began an effort to see whether the areas of agreement on predictability measures could be expanded to become a point of mutual advantage. To stimulate our Soviet colleagues' understanding of the U.S. predictability measure for "visits to laboratories," Secretary Baker offered a first-hand, practical demonstration. He invited a group of Soviet experts to visit two U.S. laboratories conducting SDI research. The visit took place last December and was very successful. Ambassador Youri Nazarkin, who led the group, described the visit as a useful confidence-building measure. The Soviet experts received briefings, saw hardware first-hand, and had an opportunity to ask numerous questions of U.S. scientists conducting the research. The visit was designed both to foster transparency and to stimulate the negotiations on predictability measures. Subsequent to the visit, we were pleased when the Soviet Union accepted the concept of visits to laboratories as a predictability measure.

At the meeting between Secretary Baker and Foreign Minister Shevardnadze in Washington earlier this month, the United States proposed that the two sides agree on predictability measures in the form of a free-standing agreement—not linked to the ABM Treaty. The U.S. draft agreement calls on the Parties to implement the predictability measures outlined above.

To illustrate how such an agreement might work and to inform our negotiations, last month in Geneva the United States proposed reciprocal pilot implementation of the U.S. predictability measures for a single project on each side. The U.S. chose as its project the Infrared Background Signature Survey. We have asked the Soviet Union to select a Soviet project for pilot implementation. The U.S. idea is that the sides should conduct a "try-out" before implementing the free-standing predictability agreement. In this respect the initiative is similar to "try-outs" in other negotiations—the Joint Verification Experiment in the U.S.-Soviet Nuclear Testing Talks, the Verification and Stability Measures in the START negotiations, and the Bilateral Data Exchange and Verification Experiment in the U.S.-Soviet chemical weapons bilateral discussions.

There has been recent and important progress on predictability measures. The sides agree that they should expand and strengthen it. On the remaining issues in our negotiations, much remains to be done to achieve a Defense and Space Treaty that provides for greater stability in the years ahead as new technologies open the way for reducing the threat posed by ballistic missiles. Attaining this goal would contribute to greater security for the entire international community, and be the first cooperative transition in the history of U.S.-Soviet strategic relations.

III

Having spoken about our diplomatic efforts to achieve a cooperative transition to greater reliance on strategic ballistic missile defenses, I thought it would be useful to discuss briefly the U.S. commitment to such defenses and the contributions they could make. On February 7 at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, President Bush stated, "in the 1990s, strategic defense makes much more sense than ever before. . . ." He added later that day in San Francisco, "Let's be clear: This purely defensive concept doesn't threaten a single person anywhere in the world. God forbid, if it ever had to be used, it would be used against missiles, not against people."

The President's emphasis on the value of defenses is best understood in terms of how they can contribute to international security for the balance of this century and into the next. There are four main reasons why effective defenses can bring about a safer world.

First, preventing nuclear war must remain a fundamental goal. Survivable and effective strategic defenses would strengthen deterrance and reduce the risk of war by significantly complicating the planning and execution of a first strike with strategic offensive forces.

Second, as the United States and the Soviet Union reduce substantially their strategic offensive arms, advanced defenses can play a growing role in ensuring against the consequences of potential abrogation, breakout, and cheating in connection with such reductions.

Third, new threats are emerging against which effective nonnuclear defenses can provide substantial protection. As more countries develop ballistic missiles, along with chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons, threats to the international community will increase.

Fourth, effective defenses can provide protection against accidental or unauthorized launches of ballistic missiles. If such a catastrophic event were ever to occur, the value of defenses in human lives saved would be incalculable.

Taking into account these purposes and their relevance now, the United States is determined to preserve the option to develop and deploy effective, advanced defenses when they are ready, at a measured pace and in a cooperative way. This is our goal in the Defense and Space Talks.

IV

Mr. President, it has been an honor to appear before the Conference on Disarmament today. I wish you the best for the successful conclusion of the Spring Session, and I hope to have the opportunity to address this body again in the future.

LAWRENCE LIVERMORE NATIONAL LABORATORY DEVELOPS NEW TECHNOLOGY TO DETERMINE STRUCTURAL SAFETY

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, one of the Nation's most advanced research laboratories, the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory [LLNL], which is in California's Ninth Congressional District, has created another important breakthrough that can help save thousands of lives and billions of dollars in years to come.

LLNL has created a supercomputer program which can draw and test the safety of buildings and other structures. It can test the safety of designs on everything from cars, to airplanes, to bridges, to buildings, to defense products. It can find safety problems in structures without having to spend time and money building miniature replicas which could only be used for one particular design. It is a fast, versatile, and comprehensive way to find safety problems in structures.

Computer simulations of structures can be very useful, but this advanced technology is currently being used mainly for defense products. This technology should be given the funding necessary to expand it into a national program that evaluates nondefense designs, particularly in the areas susceptible to earthquakes.

For a further explanation, LLNL has prepared a more detailed analysis:

COMPUTER SIMULATION OF THE BEHAVIOR OF LARGE STRUCTURAL SYSTEMS

BACKGROUND

After a structure is designed, but before it is constructed, it is necessary to evaluate the adequacy of the design and make required changes in order to arrive at an economical and safe structure. One possible means of evaluating a structural design would be to construct a scale model of the proposed structure. Loads could then be applied to the scale model and the displacements and stresses in the structure measured. In reality, construction of scale models is generally not feasible due to the cost of model construction and instrumentation. In addition, each time design changes are made a new model would have to be constructed.

In lieu of a scale model, engineers use computer models to evaluate the structural design. In place of the "glue and sticks" of physical scale model, a computer model uses mathematical equations which describe the behavior of the structure. The computer model can be used to determine the stresses and displacements in the structure and design changes can rapidly be incorporated in this model. The computer can also be used to generate pictures of the structure which visually show how the structure will respond to applied loads. As an example, a computer model of a ten story building, which was generated on the LLNL computer system, is shown in Figure 1. One could envision this structure as a scale model which resides in the memory of the computer rather than in actual physical form.

[Figures not reproducible in the RECORD.]

The use of large scale, fast supercomputers has revolutionized the structural design process. As part of this modern process, a computer model is constructed for virtually all complex structural systems ranging from airplanes to bridges to buildings. The computer aided design process allows a rigorous check of the safety of the structural design as well as an economical optimization of the design.

Over the past 15 to 20 years the Mechanical Engineering Department at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory has developed numerical analysis software tools (a systematic set of instructions which direct the computer to perform a desired task) for performing computer simulations of the response of large structures to static and dynamic loads. The primary application of the tools which have been developed has been in the area of design and performance verification of defense systems structures. The computer tools developed at Livermore have also been obtained by industry through the LLNL technology transfer program and pressed into use in the design of automobiles and aerospace structures.

We believe there is still an untapped potential benefit to be derived from bringing the computer software tools and unmatched supercomputer capabilities at LLNL to bear on non-defense problems. The unique computer simulation capabilities at LLNL allow a level of detail in the structural modeling which is unattainable with the resources typically available at universities and in industry. In addition, LLNL has extensive graphical generation tools which can be used to produce detailed visualizations, and thus enhance understanding, of complicated phenomenon (see enclosed film for example).

TRANSPORTATION STRUCTURES INITIATIVE

It is generally acknowledged that much of the transportation infrastructure in the United States is becoming antiquated. It has been estimated that of the approximately 600,000 bridges in the United States 40% of these bridges are substandard in their structural integrity. Typical types of problems that these structures suffer from are cracks, corrosion defects, soil settlement, and other unknown damage. In addition, many of these structures were designed and built in an era in which very limited knowledge of earthquake phenomenon was available. Consequently, many of these critical transportation structures may pose a significant risk to public safety. Unfortunately, there has simply not been funding or resources available to perform detailed investigations of the adequacy of critical transportation structures. The failure of the Nimitz freeway, the Bay Bridge and numerous other structures during the Loma Prieta earthquake clearly illustrated that many of California's most critical structures are not ready to withstand a more severe seismic event (e.g. a magnitude 7+ earthquake on the Hayward fault).

After the recent Loma Prieta earthquake, LLNL Directors instructed the Engineering Department at LLNL to help in post earthquake studies as a public service to the state of California. Engineering management decided that one way in which the Engineering Department could make a significant positive contribution was to make LLNL computer simulation capabilities and experienced engineering analysts available to researchers and organizations studying the performance and retrofit of critical structures. Currently LLNL is providing support to the California Department of Transportation post Loma Pierta earthquake studies. One group at LLNL is working in conjunction with a research team from the University of California at Berkeley in a study of an elevated structure (I-80 to I-580 connector) which was significantly damaged in the Loma Prieta earthquake. In this study LLNL is constructing very detailed models of the structure (the LLNL computer model of this structure is shown in Figure 2) which will be used to help understand how the structure behaves during an earthquake. One outcome of this study will be an estimation of the performance of this structure for a larger earthquake which might occur in the future (e.g. a large Hayward fault earthquake). For example, Figure 3 shows a "snapshot in time" of the dynamic response of the bridge to the Loma Prieta earthquake. This figure was taken from a single frame of the enclosed film which was generated on the LLNL computer system. The film shows a simulation of the dynamic response of the structure to actual Loma Prieta earthquake ground motion that was measured at the Oakland wharf.

Another LLNL team is studying column retrofits which may potentially be used on some of the older double deck reinforced concrete structures which are similar in design to the collapsed Nimitz freeway structure. Computer simulations of potential retrofits can be used as a predictive tool to evaluate alternate designs and narrow the range of choices prior to full scale testing of the retrofits. In other words, there are several proposed "fixes" for the various structures damaged in California and the use of LLNL's finite element codes and powerful computers provides a very effective and efficient means of evaluating these fixes and to choose the most economical as well as structurally sound option.

In addition to the aforementioned analytical computer methods, engineers at LLNL also have a demonstrated ability to experimentally evaluate the dynamic behavior of large civil structures. This is accomplished via a technology known as Modal Analysis. Briefly this process is to use some form of excitation (e.g., a hydraulic or electromagnetic shaker) to set the structure in motion. This motion is very small but still detectable using sensitive accelerometers which are placed at strategic locations on the structure. The data from the accelerometers (called time history signals) are then processed using sophisticated mathematical analysis on the computer to determine the natural frequencies and energy dissipation (damping) of the structure. In addition, it is also possible to obtain the mode shapes of the structure or, that is to say, the unique shapes that the structure assumes when vibrating at each of its natural frequencies. When properly interpreted this information is invaluable in assessing the structural integrity of the structure. It is also very useful to the computer simulation engineers in determining the accuracy of their models. This technology, coupled with other non-destructive techniques, is an excellent methodology for detecting damage (cracks, corrosion, soil failure, etc.) in substandard structures of interest.

SUMMARY

As a result of the Loma Prieta earthquake, much of our non-defense work has focused on California structures. However, the problem of decaying infrastructure is national in scope and we believe that a contribution could be made by LLNL at the national level. Engineers at LLNL are very enthusiastic about the possibility of utilizing their talents and LLNL tools to address non-defense problems important to the economic well being of both California and the nation.

In the past LLNL has not sought technical work in this area and consequently we have not developed the appropriate national contacts or funding sources. We are extremely interested in pursuing contributions which LLNL can make to this technology and would appreciate any assistance and direction that Congressman Stark can provide.

OSHA CRIMINAL SANCTIONS REFORM ACT

HON. TOM LANTOS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, on February 21, Senator METZENBAUM and I introduced companion bills to strengthen criminal sanctions for those employers who willfully and negligently violate Federal health and safety laws at the worksite.

Today, Senator METZENBAUM who chairs the Senate Labor Subcommittee held the first hearing on this legislation (S. 2154 and H.R. 4050). At this time, I would like to include my remarks presented at that hearing for the RECORD and a statement by my colleague ROBERT WISE of West Virginia in support of the bill.

STATEMENT OF HON. TOM LANTOS

Legislation before the Subcommittee today is the result of the efforts of its Chairman, many concerned Members, and hearings in both Chambers on the use and nonuse of current criminal sanctions in the law—the Occupational Safety and Health Act (the OSH Act)—for those who willfully and negligently fail to maintain a safe worksite. Some occupations are dangerous. Some are made more dangerous by the scofflaw attitude of those who own or manage companies and wish to squeeze a higher profit from their business or postpone safety expenditures, even if it means allowing life-threatening and dangerous worksites. I do not believe most businesses choose this course of action. But for those who do, management stands a greater chance of winning Lotto America than of facing criminal charges before a Federal judge under the OSH Act.

Legislation before the Subcommittee today would encourage Federal-OSHA to prosecute cases of employers whose willful and negligent actions result in a worker's death, or serious injury.

This Subcommittee's Chairman and I introduced the OSHA Criminal Penalty Reform Act on February 21. The bill evolved, in part, as a result of hearings held in 1988 by the Employment and Housing Subcommittee of the full Government Operations Committee which I chair. Our hearings and a subsequent report detailed the limited scope of OSHA criminal prosecutions—even in the face of unbelievable and avoidable tragedies at worksites which seemed like Dante's inner circles of Hell. At the time of my Subcommittee hearings, only 14 criminal cases had been referred from OSHA to the Justice Department in its 18-year history. The Subcommittee report entitled "Getting Away With Murder in the Workplace: OSHA's Nonuse of Criminal Penalties for Safety Violations," was unanimously approved and included recommendations to beef up criminal sanctions to encourage their use by the Federal government.

Things have improved only marginally since then. There have been two prison sentences imposed under the OSH Act—both within the last eight months and both involving only a few weeks jail time.

The penalty for removing a tag from a mattress is higher than penalties for allowing worksite conditions which kill workers and seems to be as much or more of a deterrent than provisions in the OSH Act. Most employers in violation of the OSH Act face civil, not criminal penalties and those are too often considered a cost of doing business. Even several highly publicized multimillion dollar fines assessed by OSHA in the last year are equivalent to a few one minute commercials during the Super Bowl. For those employers facing criminal charges, the potential prison time is so low that someone duplicating a rental video might spend five times longer in jail than a manager whose willful and negligent actions result in a worker's death.

When it comes to prosecuting employers for ignoring the OSH Act, we have gone from almost a complete standstill to a snails' pace. And that is progress. But it is not enough for those millions of workers who may risk their life just going to work.

To encourge criminal prosecutions under the OSH Act, the OSHA Criminal Penalty Reform Act would dramatically increase prison sentences for those employers found guilty of willful and negligent violations of OSHA regulations when there is a resulting fatality. Two additional categories of criminal violations are added to the OSH Act through this bill—violations of the OSH Act which cause serious bodily injury and violations which recklessly endanger a worker's health and life.

The bill also clarifies existing law by referring to increased fines for criminal violations which are available to OSHA through the Sentencing Reform Act.

The need for these changes have been made clear.

During my Subcommittee's hearing, testimony was presented which showed that one reason there were so few criminal prosecutions under the OSH Act was the paltry penalties compared to the time and effort needed by the U.S. Department of Justice to pursue a case. When priorities are developed at Justice—a case with a maximum of $10,000 and one year takes on less urgency than many other cases with high fines and significant jail time. Yet for those workers who risk their lives at some worksites every day, their priorities are very different and very clear.

Another problem the bill addresses was highlighted at my Subcommittee hearing. For those workers severely and permanently injured because of OSHA violations at the worksite, an employer may face civil penalties only. In one instance, a worker was exposed to liquid mercury which caused comprehensive and irreversible brain damage. The employers had the untrained worker handling mercury in an unventilated basement with no safety equipment provided. That worker will spend the rest of his life in a severely impaired condition—but the employer under the OSH Act is liable for a civil fine only.

This specific case illustrates the third and last section of the proposed legislation. The bill clearly states that the OSH Act does NOT preempt state and local law. The mercury case, for example, is moving through the courts of New York as a criminal case pressed under State law. If OSHA cannot or will not pursue blatant criminal violations of its own Act—then the states should be given an unequivocal green light to use their own laws and resources to pursue worksite offenses under traditional state police powers. Reiteration of the intent of Congress not to preempt state and local police powers adds an extra and important layer to enforcement of worksite health and safety laws.

The OSHA Criminal Penalty Reform Act is simple, just and long overdue. Support for the proposed Act is widespread, and includes a general letter of support from the Office of the U.S. Attorney General. I commend this Subcommittee and its Chairman from recognizing the importance of creating tough criminal sanctions within the OSH Act and the need for widening its scope.

STATEMENT OF HON. BOB WISE

Today I join with my colleague Mr. Lantos to co-sponsor legislation which will increase the penalties for violations of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) when an employee dies as a result of violations of OSHA standards. It will also add to the Act's criminal provisions violations for willful actions which result in serious injury and reckless endangerment of human life.

Annually, 7,000–11,000 workers are killed on the job and thousands more die from the long-term effects of occupational illnesses. Since enactment of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, more than 100,000 workers have lost their lives because of unsafe working conditions. These statistics translate into the disruption of families and economic hardship when mothers, fathers, sons and daughters die at the workplace.

The Government Operations Committee has documented the dismal record for prosecutions under this statute. By enacting this legislation we will remove one of the causes for this poor record. But legislative change is not enough. The Departments of Labor and Justice must give priority attention to the development and prosecution of these cases.

The Department of Labor does not refer very many cases to the Department of Justice and of those which are referred, most are declined for prosecution. It takes no genius to understand that over time there will be little incentive for OSHA investigators to spend the time required to develop cases to be referred to Justice for prosecution.

Accordingly last September, as Chairman of the Government Information, Justice and Agriculture Subcommittee, I urged the Attorney General to focus attention on this important issue. I recommended that he make clear to U.S. Attorneys throughout the country the importance of the prosecution of OSHA cases and review the cases which have been referred to Justice to determine the reasons for declinations. If problems are found, I urged him to take the necessary corrective action.

Giving serious attention to this project is one way that the Attorney General could give meaning to President Bush's Labor Day message. Last fall President Bush paid homage to America's working men and women by giving thanks for the "rights and freedoms our system of government ensures," including "freedom from health and safety hazards in the workplace." Holding people accountable for actions that result in death to innocent workers is an important way to insure that there is in fact freedom from health and safety hazards in the workplace.

Because there are only a handful of cases involved, the project would not require very much time, but it would be time well spent. Data obtained from the Department of Justice regarding the handling of six cases which were pending for 2½ to 3 years at the Department suggest that there may be some administrative problems which could be corrected. For example, in one case there was a five month delay between referral to main Justice and referral to the U.S. Attorney. The decision to decline the case was made 22 months later. Are there undue processing delays which mean that by the time a decision can be made the case is unattractive for prosecution? Could direct referrals or eliminating review steps speed up the process and make it more effective? Is there inadequate preparation of the cases in the first place? Do prosecutors need to be involved with the development of the case earlier in the process? If the Department would identify the types of problems which would make prosecution difficult, it could work with OSHA to correct the defects.

I recognize that prosecution of drug cases is a national priority, that the workload is growing and prosecutors must spend a lot of time on these cases. But it is important that our concern about drugs in our society does not intrude on effective implementation of this important regulatory statute. We can do a better job of preventing the loss of life from avoidable work place accidents. I look forward to hearing how the Department of Justice addresses these problems and anticipate that a stronger law OSHA statute will encourage more aggressive action on the part of the enforcement agencies.

STATEHOOD FOR HAWAII IS NOT THE SAME AS STATEHOOD FOR PUERTO RICO

HON. JAIME B. FUSTER

OF PUERTO RICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. FUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise again to point out to my colleagues significant articles and other observations about an issue which they will soon have to confront: the matter of a congressionally sanctioned political status plebiscite in Puerto Rico between the choices of statehood, independence or an enhancement of the existing commonwealth status. As you know, Mr. Speaker, I favor the latter option, because commonwealth status has proven itself to be in the best interests of Puerto Rico and the United States ever since it was created by Congress in 1952.

I of course have great respect for the institution of statehood itself but it is just not the best choice for Puerto Rico, given our economic and cultural-linguistic differences with the United States. Even the Congressional Budget Office, in a report issued this month in connection with pending plebiscite legislation in the Senate, outlined the almost prohibitive costs of statehood.

But some pro-statehood advocates in Puerto Rico are telling the people that statehood would result in a bonanza of benefits to them from the U.S. Treasury and are thus creating a "land of milk and honey" expectation level. For them, statehood would be the panacea for all the problems of Puerto Rico. They are doing this in the face of the CBO report. Their allies in the United States should set the record straight for them and warn Puerto Ricans of the very things the CBO report points out.

To that end, Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with my colleagues today a remarkably perceptive, no-nonsense column in the San Juan Star by Alex Maldonado. He is a former editor of two daily newspapers in Puerto Rico and a former Nieman fellow at Harvard. I hope my colleagues will carefully reflect upon the truths in Alex Maldonado's column, entitled "Hawaii vs. Puerto Rico," which appeared in the April 15, 1990, edition of the San Juan Star.

HAWAII VS PUERTO RICO

On July 29, 1989, here in Puerto Rico, a Cuban by the name of Javier Sotomayor leaped to a height of eight feet. A world record for the high jump.

Sotomayer has, of course, two arms and two legs.

Does this mean that since you and I also have two arms and two legs, if we really want to, we also can jump eight feet? Of course not. This is ridiculous. Even dumb.

This is exactly the kind of false logic that the Puerto Rican people are subjected to in our so-called political status debate. Forget economic reality, we are told, we can be what we want to be.

The latest example is the New Progressive Party reaction to the Congressional Budget Office report that includes a chilling description of the economic effect of statehood: a considerable reduction in industrial investment, a significant reduction in our economic growth and a huge increase in unemployment.

The NPP leadership, accompanied by economists, held a press conference last Wednesday to denounce the study. Its fundamental argument is this:

All the 50 states are much richer than Puerto Rico. There are states as small in size as Puerto Rico. Therefore, if Puerto Rico became a state, it must become as rich as the other 50 states.

Acting NPP president, Rep. Zaida "Cucusa" Hernández said:

"Not a single state has become bankrupt or has suffered an economic disaster upon being admitted into the union. On the contrary, absolutely all the territories that opted for statehood, including Hawaii, improved their respective economies, raising the standard of living of their citizens to among the highest in the world."

The last thing that the statehooders should do is to compare Pureto Rico to Hawaii. As a previous CBO report (Sept. 6, 1989) points out, when Hawaii became a state in 1959, its per capita income at current prices was $9,562. This was much higher than the U.S. per capita income of $8,882. Puerto Rico's per capita income in 1987, the report continues, was $5,300 compared to the U.S. per capita income of $16,931.

But the real point is that when Hawaii became a state, it was and had been an incorporated territory. That is, it had been under all U.S. tax laws. Its higher per capita income had been achieved under U.S. taxation.

So there was no need to analyze, and indeed agonize, over the economic impact of statehood. Statehood meant political, not economic, restructuring. Unlike Puerto Rico, there was no need to make endless studies and projections as to the effect of losing tax exemption, losing Section 936, no need to make an extremely difficult exploration into the unknown waters of attempting to predict the effect of almost totally restructing the Hawaii economy.

There are many more reasons why it's so dangerous to use Hawaii as an example. Hawaii is twice as big as Puerto Rico and back in 1959 it had less than a fourth of our population. Its economy is dependent on tourism, government spending and agriculture. Manufacturing is relatively insignificant and mostly related to its agricultural products. Less than a fifth of the population is native Hawaiian or part-Hawaiian. Historically, Hawaii's problem has not been unemployment, but a lack of workers English is the language.

Studying Hawaii, in fact, becomes a good case study that demonstrates why the CBO report is right, why statehood would have a disastrous effect on the Puerto Rican economy.

As we all know, it takes contrast to see things clearly. Back in 1966, my newspaper sent me to Hawaii for an extended visit. It dramatized the enormous economic difficulties in making Puerto Rico a state.

I vividly recall Hawaiian business people expressing amazement that we in Puerto Rico did not understand the economics of statehood. When I asked the president of the Hawaiian Manufacturers Association why there was so little industry there, he looked at me as if I had asked a really dumb question:

"You, from Puerto Rico, must know the answer better than anyone else. We don't have federal tax exemption to attract industry as you do. Why in the world would anyone come out here to manufacture anything if the costs are so much higher and thus the profits much less than in the United States or elsewhere?"

Yet statehooders insist on making this deadly comparison. False logic Puerto Rico is an island. Hawaii is made up of islands. Therefore islands that become states must prosper as much as Hawaii.

The thrust of the NPP attack on the CBO report is that it omits the tangible benefit of stability. The CBO report, one leader said, "does not quantify the number of industries and businesses that the stability of statehood will bring to the state of Puerto Rico."

Again, false logic. Yes, political stability is an important factor in industrial investment. But its like the air we breath. We need air to live, but we don't live on air. Investors need stability, but investors don't live on stability. They live, or die, on the return on investment on profits.

There's also a false premise here. Puerto Rico now offers investors total stability, the stability of U.S. citizenship. Puerto Rico and Hawaii prove the point that when you offer stability and profits, you attract industrial investment. If you have the first but not the second, you don't attract.

But let's get back to analogy. This fall more than 20,000 men and women will gather in Staten Island to run the New York Marathon. The idea is to run about 26½ miles and to get into beautiful Central Park in little over two hours.

These men and women will have two arms and two legs.

Come on! Sign up! If you, too, have two arms and two legs, don't tell me you can't do it!

RESTORE UNITED STATES CONTACTS WITH NEW ZEALAND

HON. ENI F.H. FALEOMAVAEGA

OF AMERICAN SAMOA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I want to share with my colleagues an article written by the distinguished chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Asia-Pacific, Mr. STEPHEN SOLARZ of New York. I believe the article has merit and it is time the administration should change its policy toward New Zealand, that is, we should maintain top-level diplomatic relations with New Zealand despite our differences of opinion on the nuclear issue. I believe also Mr. SOLARZ' arguments are reasonable and the State Department should change the policy now.

Mr. Speaker, I enclose Mr. SOLARZ' article for your consideration:

[From The Christian Science Monitor, Feb. 8, 1990]

RESTORE UNITED STATES CONTACTS WITH NEW ZEALAND

(By Stephen J. Solarz)

While Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger and National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft were toasting the butchers of Beijing in December, senior US officials would not meet with a visiting emissary of New Zealand, a staunch defender of democratic values. The irony could not have been lost on New Zeland Foreign Minister Russell Marshall, who had arrived in New York for a United Nations meeting.

One doesn't know whether to laugh or cry at this inconsistency. But what occurred in December is indicative of a deplorable double standard in American foreign policy. Neither President Bush nor Secretary of State James Baker were deterred, for instance, from meeting with President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire during a recent visit to the US, despite his government's systemic corruption, misappropriation of development aid, and arrest and torture of political opponents. Meanwhile, New Zealand Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer was in New York for the session of the UN General Assembly. Senior US officials—who could have used the Palmer visit to discuss the conflict in Cambodia and prospects for democratization in the South Pacific—would not see him.

This bizarre state of affairs results from a US decision, implemented in August 1986, to refuse New Zealand officials access to US defense and foreign policymakers above the level of assistant secretary, in response to New Zealand's refusal to cooperate with the US policy on port access for US military aircraft and vessels. In particular, the US objected to New Zealand's policy of approving entry of foreign military aircraft and ships only if the New Zealand government is satisfied that ships are not nuclear-powered and that neither planes nor ships carry nuclear weapons.

Compliance with New Zealand's policy would have been inconsistent with the US policy of neither confirming nor denying the presence or absence of nuclear weapons on board US military aircraft or vessels. The Reagan administration also suspended its defense obligations to New Zealand under the 1951 ANZUS Treaty and terminated defense and intelligence cooperation arrangements.

These measures were an appropriate US response to New Zealand's anti-nuclear policy. No one could expect the US to guarantee the security of an island nation whose waters our ships are not permitted to enter. The US does not have two navies—nuclear and nonnuclear—but only one integrated naval force, and New Zealand's policy simply made continued military cooperation impractical. Moreover, our "neither-confirm-nor-deny" policy is an essential component of our global nuclear deterrent. Had we acquiesced in New Zealand's decision we would have encouraged similar demands from other US allies, such as Japan.

While limiting military and intelligence cooperation makes sense, continuing the ban on high-level contacts does not. Whatever the initial justification for the suspension of such contacts, the passage of time has made the prohibition unfair and unwise. Not only has the ban led to embarrassing incongruities, it has also encouraged confusion, resentment, and anti-Americanism in New Zealand.

The willingness of senior US officials to meet with officials of regimes whose practices we abhor while refusing to meet with senior officials from Wellington threatens to strengthen those elements in New Zealand who would like to drive a wedge between our two countries. This is particularly unfortunate, as New Zealand has long been one of our closest friends and strongest supporters.

New Zealand's soldiers have fought with the US in four wars in this century. New Zealand was one of three Pacific Basin countries (along with Australia and Japan) to vote against the recent UN resolution deploring the US intervention in Panama. And as it supports fledgling democracies in the South Pacific, it also promotes respect for human rights and the rule of law worldwide.

While reasonable people can argue over the wisdom of high-level contacts with officials responsible for the slaughter of their own citizens, it is ludicrous to claim that a legitimate disagreement over nuclear policy provides justification for a prolonged diplomatic snub.

It is time for high-level foreign policy officials from our two countries to speak with one another again. Instead of continuing to sulk, the US should renew its relationship with New Zealand, recognizing that our common commitment to democracy and shared history of struggle and sacrifice is far more significant than whatever differences we have over nuclear policy.

SMUGGLING MASS DEATH

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring attention to a report, entitled "Nuclear Exports: The Challenge of Control", recently printed by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The report, released by the nuclear nonproliferation project of the endowment, found that nuclear smuggling similar to the situation recently discovered in Iraq has been an essential factor in Third World nuclear weapon programs. The nations in the report are those same nations which have not signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. The following excerpt about Pakistan illustrates the truly urgent need to enact my legislation, H.R. 4454, H.R. 4455, and H.R. 4456:

Since the late 1970s, Pakistan has relied heavily on covertly obtained technology and equipment to build its uranium enrichment facility at Kahuta, which apparently began producing weapons-grade uranium in 1986. As of mid-1988, information available publicly indicated that Pakistan has obtained clandestine assistance for the facility—and for an expansion of its enrichment capabilities either at Kahuta or at a second enrichment plant possibly under construction in the town of Golra—from firms in Canada, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Switzerland, and the United States. The assistance included: design technology for the gas centrifuges that are the heart of the Kahuta plant; essential electronic components and measuring equipment; special "maraging" steel for the construction of the centrifuges; and vacuum pumps and other equipment for handling uranium hexafluoride gas within the facility, some of which hardware was specifically designed to handle weapons-grade material. In addition, between 1977 and 1980, with the help of a West German businessman, who was subsequently convicted for the smuggling operation, Pakistan obtained an entire installation for converting natural uranium into uranium hexafluoride, the form of uranium processed in uranium enrichment plants. The facility was built near Dera Ghazi Khan.

During 1989, investigations in West Germany uncovered yet another major Pakistani smuggling network, involving two firms in the Federal Republic, Neue Technologien GmbH (NTG) and a subsidiary it established to mask its participation, Physikalische-Technische Beratung (PTB). Between 1983 and 1987, these firms reportedly assisted Pakistan's uranium enrichment efforts by providing specialized containers for the transport and storage of uranium hexafluoride and 130 metric tons of aluminum for use as centrifuge housings. (A metric tons is equal to 2,200 pounds, or 1.1 short tons.) Apparently, these were to be used in conjunction with Pakistan's expansion of its uranium enrichment capability.

In addition, NTG and PTB provided critically important assistance to a new phase of the Pakistani nuclear weapons effort, the production of tritium for advanced nuclear weapons. According to various press accounts, NTG or PTB provided Pakistan with test quantities of tritium gas, a tritium purification and storage plant, tritium precursor materials, the design for a reactor that could be used for tritium production, and material and equipment for fabricating fuel for that reactor, including special American-made welding lasers. Some of these items, like the uranium hexafluoride containers, were apparently exported from West Germany without the appropriate licenses, and in early 1990, several NTG/PTB employees were indicted for these acts. In other cases, however, involving principally "dual-use" items, the firms were able to obtain the necessary approvals from export-oriented West German licensing authorities by glossing over the strategic importance of the items involved and using dummy corporations as recipients—a practice that repeatedly succeeded despite frequent warnings by the United States to Bonn of the true purpose behind these transfers.

Pakistan is also thought to have received assistance in completing the "New Labs" plutonium extraction plant, near Rawalpindi. The unsafeguarded plant is not known to have begun operating. (All of Pakistan's plutonium-bearing spent nuclear fuel is subject to IAEA inspection and could not be processed at the New Labs facility unless the latter were also placed under the IAEA system, at least temporarily, a step Pakistan has not taken.)

In sum, six ongoing Pakistani nuclear projects depended critically upon materiél or design information clandestinely obtained from the advanced nuclear supplier countries: the original Kahuta enrichment plant; the Dera Ghazi Khan uranium hexafluoride plant; a major expansion of Pakistan's enrichment capability; the possible construction of a secret reactor for the production of tritium; a tritium purification plant; and various material and equipment needed for the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

MOTHER'S DAY TRIBUTE: EMS CLINIC IN DENVER

HON. PATRICIA SCHROEDER

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, as Mother's Day approaches, I can think of no more fitting testimonial than the story of Dyan Humphries' successful fight to establish America's first EMS clinic in Denver, CO. Ms. Humphries began her struggle when she learned her mother had been stricken by EMS, a blood disorder caused by L-tryptophan, a nonprescription drug used as a dietary supplement or sleeping aid. I would like to share with my colleagues the moving account of Ms. Humphries' achievement, which was published last month in the Denver Business Journal.

[From the Denver Business Journal, Apr. 23, 1990]

ONE WOMAN'S TIRELESS QUEST WINS CLINIC FOR EMS VICTIMS

(By L. Wayne Hicks)

The nation's first clinic devoted to researching the painful and sometimes fatal eosinophilia-myalgia syndrome will open in Denver this June with funding from the world's leading supplier of the dietary aid blamed for the blood disorder.

"You're watching another American Cancer Society get off the ground," said Dyan Humphries, founder and executive director of Eosinophilia-Myalgia Syndrome Foundation Inc. and daughter of one of Colorado's first diagnosed cases of EMS.

Since last November, a period Humphries now refers to as "way back in the Dark Ages," the Denver woman has driven herself to learn everything known about EMS and teach others about the disorder. An extremely energetic woman, she scarcely seems to stop for a breath when talking about EMS or plans for the clinic.

Humphries will fly to Washington, D.C., April 22 for a meeting the following Tuesday with officials of Showa Denko K.K., a Tokyo-based petrochemical company that supplied 80 percent of the world market for L-tryptophan, the non-prescription drug believed to cause EMS. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration recalled the drug last November.

Sold through health food stores and supermarkets for 20 years, L-tryptophan is a naturally occurring amino acid used in tablet and capsule form as a dietary supplement or sleeping aid.

Next week's meeting will determine how large Showa Denko's grant will be, but the amount discussed since Humphries first contacted the company last month is $20 million.

"They have agreed to help her," said Alan Wachter, a Washington public relations executive representing Showa Denko. "The extent of the help has not been determined. They haven't met yet."

The disorder is characterized by severe muscle and joint pain as well as flulike symptoms. It draws its name from the aches known as myalgia and the abnormal increase in a type of white blood cell known as eosinophils.

Since the FDA's warning in November about the suspected link between L-tryptophan and EMS, the number of cases reported to the federal Centers for Disease Control has grown to 1,463 from 287. The number of deaths has jumped to 21 from one. In Colorado, 44 cases have been reported.

Although a containment in the manufacturing process of L-tryptophan originally was thought to be causing the outbreak of EMS, an intensive search so far has failed to find anything.

No single batch of L-tryptophan or any one manufacturer's product has been tied to the EMS outbreak, although an Oregon woman who blames her EMS on ingestion of Showa Denko's product has sued the Japanese company for $20 million.

"At this point, Showo Denko could not have picked a more appropriate moment to step in and help," Humphries said. "They have the opportunity to create so much good press for themselves."

Showa Denko, with 5,000 employees, last year reported revenues of $5 billion and net income of $144 million.

Humphries began gathering information on EMS when her mother was diagnosed last November, but the disorder was so new there was little to learn. She intensified her research, drawing from a network of physicians with whom she made contact and started the foundation in December to share what she had discovered.

The foundation plans to open a clinic at the Colorado Neurological Institute when the institute moves into new offices at Swedish Medical Center in June. Early plans called for an EMS patient to be examined by specialists in two different fields at the same time, so the patient could avoid repeat trips to the clinic.

"We will bring in as many people as necessary," said Humphries, who is running the foundation from a drafting table at her home. "What we need is aggressive research. That's where we need the bucks."

Plans for the clinic have grown with Showa Denko's announced intent to contribute to its operation. Although the exact operations of the clinic won't be decided until Showa Denko makes its contribution, the preliminary idea calls for the addition of specialists in more fields, as well as counselors and physical therapists to help EMS patients mentally and physically.

"Kind of like one-stop shopping," said Dr. Neil Rosenberg, director of the neurotoxicology, neuroimmunology and neuromuscular programs at the institute.

Already examining EMS patients on his own, Rosenberg will be joined by specialists in other fields once the clinic opens.

"The big question is whether we are going to see a huge increase in the number of cases," he said. "We may be just seeing the tip of the iceberg now."

Rosenberg believes Humphries' plan to add counselors to the clinic is a good one.

"We need someone involved in the clinic to give counseling because people with any chronic disease need counseling, coping skills," he said.

The clinic also must serve as a research center into the cause of EMS and explore possible treatments of the mysterious disorder.

"Even the doctors at this point are not all that educated about it," Rosenberg said.

Rosenberg began seeing EMS patients last month and met Humphries when he made a house call to her mother's home. Humphries' mother, Gloria Smith of Littleton, took daily doses of L-tryptophan for years before becoming sick last October with what she thought was the flu. Smith responded by increasing her dosage of L-tryptophan.

EMS has left her a quadraplegic.

"It has so weakened her body that she is unable to lift her arms, lift her legs," Humphries said. "We don't know if she'll ever be able to function again, if she'll ever be able to walk again."

Although her mother's diagnosis originally propelled Humphries into learning about EMS, her interest in finding a cure now is more widespread. Humphries spends several hours a night leafing through a battered spiral notebook containing the names of EMS victims, as she calls them, and talking to them all across the country.

"I have a real vested interest," Humphries said. "And it's not just for my mom anymore. It's 1,400 others."

NAMING OF MARSHALL ISLANDS SENATOR JETON ANJAIN TO THE ENVIRONMENTAL HALL OF FAME

HON. RON de LUGO

OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, in honor of the recent celebration of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, Rolling Stone magazine has named Senator Jeton Anjain of the Marshall Islands to its Environmental Hall of Fame as 1 of 25 people and organizations who have made outstanding contributions to the environment over the last 20 years.

Senator Anjain was selected because of his leadership in the struggle to get the U.S. Government to live up to responsibilities to the people of Rongelap atoll, whom he represents. These responsibilities came about when out Nation's huge "Bravo" thermonuclear test in 1954 irradiated the atoll. Rongelap was then a part of the Territory of the Pacific Islands which the United States administered in trust for the United Nations.

Because the Insular and International Affairs Subcommittee, which I chair, has jurisdiction over Marshall Islands matters, I can personally attest to the effectiveness and dedication of Senator Anjain's commitment to improving the environment of his people's homeland and the treatment of people subjected to nuclear faliout.

His efforts are not only improving the quality of life of all of the Marshallese people adversely affected by U.S. nuclear testing; but also of people everywhere who have ever had problems with radiation.

Senator Anjain has been persistent and creative over the years in fighting wrong and bureaucratic decisions within the U.S. Department of Energy related to his people's concerns about their health and the safety of their atoll. His example is a model of responsible leadership in attacking difficult environmental problems.

For the benefit of all Members, I would like to insert in the RECORD at this point a copy of the press release Rolling Stone issued April 12 regarding its selection of Senator Anjain.

[From the Rolling Stone Magazine, Apr. 12, 1990]

[Press Release]

Statement by Howard Kohn, an editor at Rolling Stone, accompanying the announcement of Senator Anjain's selection to the Rolling Stone Environmental Hall of Fame:

"The individuals and organizations we have selected were considered to be the foremost environmental leaders world-wide of the last 20 years. These are leaders who have come to the forefront of the environmental debate since the first 'Earth Day' in April of 1970. Each in his or her own right has a record of long-term accomplishment.

"Many individuals and organizations with good intentions and significant accomplishments were considered. However, those we selected stood out from all others because of their unique dedication and the special sacrifice each in his or her own right has made. Those we honor have taken that extra step, gone that extra mile, or pushed themselves to the limits in order to achieve the particular justice each has sought. Significant to each of the 25 individuals and organizations selected is the fact that they have each dedicated their lives and their existence, year after year after year, to a better life for those they represent.

"Moreover, those finally chosen were people who history has shown to have been correct, however unpopular their stands might have been initially. Time and history have vindicated each respectively. These are people who were ahead of their time, whether their actions were on a local, national or international level.

"In honoring Senator Anjain, what impressed us more than anything about his leadership were the parallels we saw to another greater leader of an earlier time, Mahatma Gandhi of India. When it would have been so much easier for Senator Anjain to do just about anything else, he challenged a powerful foreign government by taking an unpopular stand on behalf of his people and at considerable personal and political risk.

"The 1985 move into exile by the Rongelap People was made in the face of considerable opposition. It was a courageous act of faith. Only recently has that move come to be viewed by others, including key members of the U.S. Congress, as justified.

"The People of Rongelap have expressed a desire no different from anyone else—that they and their children be allowed to live in an environment free from contamination. Their determination, as evidenced by their move away from their ancestral homeland, is an inspiration for all of us. For this reason, in honoring Senator Anjain, we honor too the Rongelap People.

"It is significant too that notwithstanding having asked the ultimate sacrifice of his people, Senator Anjain remains loved and revered throughout the Marshall Islands.

"Senator Anjain is clearly a leader of principal, integrity and courage. His dedication to his people and to the truth commands all of us to salute him in his efforts."

SHOW TO SUPPORT DEMOCRACY

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, my colleague and good friend, the vice chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, BILL BROOMFIELD has written a compelling analysis about the failure of the Congress to support in a timely fashion democracy in the Western Hemisphere.

After years of debate and after authorizing hundreds of millions of dollars in an effort to promote democracy in Nicaragua and Panama, the Congress is now in peril of missing the opportunity to secure the objective it has so long sought.

The new democratic governments in Nicaragua and Panama desperately need economic assistance now to prevent the collapse of their economies and the survival of their fledgling administrations. The Congress, after years of saying we should be sending economic assistance instead of military assistance, has the chance to do that very thing, and it is wasting time.

Congressman BROOMFIELD assesses this problem clearing in his commentary published in the Washington Times on April 24, 1990. I urge my colleagues to give his thoughts their most serious consideration.

[From the Washington Times, Apr. 24, 1990]

SLOW TO SUPPORT DEMOCRACY

(By William S. Broomfield)

For years, congressional Democrats have argued that we should "give peace a chance" in Central America, that U.S. aid should support peaceful democratic change, not continued warfare. Now, with the birth of democracy in Panama and Nicaragua, congressional Democrats are suddenly timid about being the midwives for political liberty and free enterprise.

One year ago, Nicaragua and Panama were firmly in the grip of dictators determined to maintain their power. The prospects for democracy were bleak. Twelve months later, a freshly elected government is in power in Panama and one will take office tomorrow in Nicaragua. But the victories for freedom in Nicaragua and Panama will be lasting only if we now act boldly to "give democracy a chance."

Central America was the focus of the most divisive foreign policy debate in the United States since the Vietnam War. The last decade saw vicious partisan struggle in the United States and bitter civil war in Nicaragua. Thousands of Nicaraguans died fighting for their freedom. Ultimately, the heroic efforts of Nicaragua's democrats—with strong international support—decisively repudiated the Sandinista dictatorship.

In Panama, after years of narcomilitarism and dictatorial rule, Operation Just Cause—with strong support of the Panamanian people—achieved the liberation of that country. In the process, 23 young Americans paid the ultimate price for freedom in Panama. The prospects for peace and democracy in Nicaragua and Panama have never been greater.

What has the U.S. response been? At a time when some are accusing President Bush of all sorts of timidity, lack of vision and poll watching, he developed a comprehensive answer to events in Central America. Mr. Bush lifted economic sanctions on Panama and Nicaragua. In January, the president requested a $542 million aid package designed to jump start the once-vigorous Panamanian economy. Immediately after the election of Violeta Chamorro, Mr. Bush requested $300 million for U.S. assistance to help rebuild Nicaragua and set a target date of April 5 for action by Congress on the aid package. Unfortunately, the rapid response of the president was not matched by Congress.

While Congress quickly approved $42 million in emergency aid for Panama, the majority of assistance to strengthen these emerging democracies in our hemisphere languishes. Despite all the political—and human—blood spilling over Central America in the last decade, congressional Democrats cannot bring themselves to work for the kinds of policies they claim to support; instead, they have resorted to neo-isolationism and inaction.

The president's aid request is fully funded by the transfer of existing resources from the Department of Defense. The president's package addresses long-term U.S. interests in Central America by laying the foundation for the institutionalization of democracy—if Congress will act. But aid for Panama and Nicaragua has not been approved because Congress is playing "politics as usual"—and in so doing is placing the future of democracy in our hemisphere at risk.

Action in the House was delayed, first by jurisdictional disputes and then by Democrats sensing an opportunity to fight yesterday's battle by restricting U.S. aid to El Salvador. Finally, on April 3 the House overwhelmingly passed the supplemental appropriations bill—but only after adding more than $1.2 billion in domestic goodies.

The Senate passed authorizing legislation but took no action on appropriating funds before the Eastern recess—and evidently does not plan to act soon. The Senate chairman of a key subcommittee recently said that Panama and Nicaragua are of "slight economic, security and foreign policy importance to U.S. national interests." One wonders if he has heard of the Panama Canal.

A number of Senate Democrats have said assistance to Eastern Europe should have a higher priority than aid to Panama and Nicaragua—despite the more than $700 million Congress has already approved for Eastern Europe, despite the $1 billion or more in aid that is curretly under consideration and despite the uncertain and unsettled conditions in many Eastern European states.

One powerful senator reportedly wants to divert funds to help workers dislocated by clean air legislation. And most disturbing, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell has announced that he wants to delay Senate action until the administration submits a "meaningful long-term foreign aid plan."

Aid for Eastern Europe, human rights in El Salvador, displaced workers and foreign aid strategy all deserve serious attention by Congress. However, they do not deserve to be used as roadblocks in the way of democratization in Panama and Nicaragua. Let's quit playing political games with the future of the Panamanian and Nicaraguan people. Let's see a real and immediate "peace dividend" by financing the democratization of Panama and Nicaragua from savings in the defense budget.

Thousands of Nicaraguan freedom fighters want to lay down their guns permanently. The planting season approaches in Nicaragua with the country desperately short of seeds, fertilizer and agricultural equipment. In Panama, hopes for self-sufficiency grow dimmer by the day as economic recovery remains on hold. Continued inaction by Congress only guarantees an anti-American backlash.

Nicaragua has seen an opportunity for freedom stolen by the Sandinistas in 1979. Panama has seen a bright future hijacked by Manuel Noriega and narcotics traffickers. These nations need our help and deserve our help. The longer Congress vacillates, the more certain it becomes that historic opportunities will again be lost.

WILLIAM P. GRIFFIN RETIRES AFTER 36 YEARS OF SERVICE

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mr. William P. Griffin who is retiring after 36 years of service to the school children of our area, with 30 of this 36 years having been given to the children of the San Lorenzo Unified School District in California's Ninth Congressional District.

Mr. Griffin began his career with the San Lorenzo School District in 1963 when he became assistant principal at Marina High School. He then served as both assistant principal and principal at San Lorenzo High School before coming to the District Office as director of pupil personnel. In 1984, he became assistant superintendent for educational service.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend Mr. Griffin for his dedication to our children and to wish him well in his retirement. I have no doubt that he was an inspiration to many of the young individuals that he came in contact with. He will be sorely missed by the school district.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MAYFIELD ELEMENTARY

HON. DONALD E. "BUZ" LUKENS

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DONALD E. "BUZ" LUKENS. Mr. Speaker, President Bush's 1,000 points continue to shine. After 50 years, Mayfield Elementary School in Middletown, OH, is still the center and pride of its community. This year marks the school's golden anniversary. It is not often you find a school where parents send their children to the same school they attended—in the same classrooms, and with the teachers, principals, and the same spirit of excellence that has marked this school from its inception in 1939.

I congratulate the dedicated staff and principals who have served at Mayfield over the years, and the parents who have worked to make the school a success. Mayfield has had great principals, three of whom account for 47 years of Mayfield's history—Ralph Mull, George Court, and Jess Wilson. I especially wish to honor Mr. Wilson who is retiring this year after 12 years with the school. I know the school will miss him.

Congratulations to Mayfield Elementary of Middletown, OH, on your golden anniversary. Mayfield—a point of light, of which we can all be proud.

MAYFIELD CELEBRATES 50TH YEAR

(By Phyllis Cox)

Mayfield Elementary is marking its golden anniversary year, still the center and pride of its community.

It is unusual today to find a city school where families send their children to the same classrooms and teachers they had when they went to school. But that is the case at Mayfield.

The school, built at the end of the Depression, has had a tradition of long-serving dedicated principals and other staff members. Only four principals have served during the school's 50-year span and three of these—Ralph Mull, George Crout and Jess Wilson—account for 47 of those years.

Mayfield also has a reputation for strong parental support for schools—a distinction that many credit to the leadership of the present as well as former principals.

"It's the parents' school," says Wilson, who at 50 is retiring this year after 12 years as principal at Mayfield.

"We welcome parents here," he says. "We want them to visit classes, have lunch here. Parents are the school."

SCHOOL OPENS IN 1939

Mayfield began its life under the Lemon Township school system. It was not part of the Middletown City School District until 1954, when the city and township schools consolidated.

It opened in October 1939, amid the "baby farms" of the then relatively new Mayfield subdivision, according to a history written by Crout and Wilson for the school's anniversary. It originally served eight grades.

Roses Mull, widow of the school's first principal, recalls the community's pride in its new asset.

"The community was so happy to have the school," she says in a recent interview. "It was a small community that never had a school before. . . . When the school opened, the community was very proud of itself. The community wanted to be a fine place because it had a good school. . . . Something good happens to a community when they have a school and a church."

Families in Mayfield had been sending their children to Amanda School, which at the time had swelled to an enrollment of about 1,000 students. The new school was built as a Public Works Administration project with matching funds provided by a $90,000 bond issue passed by voters in 1937.

When the new Colonial-style building opened at the corner of Burbank and Lamberton streets, children in Mayfield could now walk to school.

"Mayfield was like a little town in those days," explains Crout, who was a teacher at the school during its first few years. It had two groceries, a volunteer fire department, a couple of churches, some filling stations and later a hardware store.

"It was largely a self-contained community, and the social life revolved around the school," he says.

Former music teacher Ada Louise Weishaar, who collaborated with Crout on a school song, recalls the operettas and music programs presented at the school in an era when entertainment was not a quick flick of a TV dial away. The school even had its own 32-member orchestra.

School sports events—baseball and particularly basketball—held a prominent place in the community. Basketball is still an important after-school activity.

Kenny Gibson, president of the PTO, supervises a basketball program that plays matches against teams in the Cincinnati area. About 100 students participate and use the Mayfield gym to practice nearly every weekday night. Cheerleaders, Brownies, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts also use the school for meetings, and the playground is someplace where neighborhood children can go for some recreation and good old-fashioned fun.

Wilson "wants the school to be used," Gibson says.

Mull had that same philosophy during the 21 years he was principal there.

"If anyone in Mayfield needed a place to hold a meeting, he always said to accommodate them," Mrs. Mull says.

PROUD PARENTS

Mayfield has a reputation for parents who are proud of their school and are willing to work for it.

"The parents were interested in education, and they wanted their children to mind," remembers Crout, who succeeded Mull as principal in 1961 and served there until his retirement in 1975.

"Those are strict parents, family-oriented," says school board member Fred Finney, who was president of the Mayfield PTO in 1967 and 1968. "They're proud parents. Anything their kids do, they're proud of it."

The school is known for the strongest PTO in the city school district. Wilson says he only needs to make five or six calls to have 100 parents show up to help for a project.

"We have many dedicated parents who have spent numerous hours at the school," Wilson says. "I have many good memories of what parents have done."

In recent years, the PTO has purchased 20 computers for the school, as well as playground equipment and equipment for the gym. In addition, funds are used to recognize students and for class trips and other enrichment opportunities.

The PTO's annual cookie sale has been said to be the largest in southwest Ohio.

"A lot of PTO's draw 25 to 30 people," Finney says. "At Mayfield there are usually well over 100 in attendance."

Involvement in the PTO is almost a family affair for some Mayfield residents. Former PTO president Scott Messinger was the second generation in his family to head the organization; his father, Paul, was a president in the 1960s.

Tom Webb, who joined the faculty in 1941 as a teacher and a coach, recalls that the school had a strong PTO in its early years, too.

"Large numbers went to the PTO meetings. Parents were very much interested in their children, and that made it a good school," he says.

Pride in the school also extends to the building which has recently been spruced up with some new landscaping.

Gibson says there is very little vandalism at the school. Unlike playgrounds at many schools, no broken glass litters the ground because young people know their younger brothers and sisters play there.

Webb remembers that it was a well-built "beautiful school" when it opened with nicely finished woodwork and wooden doors. Over the years there have been some additions, including a west wing in 1954 with a second story added during the 1965–66 school year. But such care was taken to match the brick to the original building that today few differences can be seen in the construction.

But memory can change details about the building as Diane Hileman learned when she returned to teach at the school after having been away since the fifth grade. "When I first came back, I remembered the hill in the hallway," she says. "Well, the hill was not a hill anymore."

Hileman returned to teach at the school where two of her former teachers—Phyllis Barnthouse and Linda Lethgo—still teach. "The first day I taught here, it was so strange seeing you guys after having you in class," she tells them during a recent interview.

Lethgo is the senior teacher at the school, having taught at Mayfield 28 years. But Barnthouse is close behind with 27 years. Both are now seeing students in their clsssrooms, some of whom are the children of former students.

"Mayfield's really unique; it's like a family," Lethgo says.

NO PRINCIPAL BETTER

Like Hileman, school cafeteria worker Beth Rose also returned to work at the school where she graduated from the sixth grade in a white dress and her first pair of heels. She has also sent her two sons to Mayfield.

Why is Mayfield's pull so strong?

"The teachers have a lot to do with it," she says, "And there's no principal better."

The school is known for a dedicated faculty who have stayed with the school for years and years. Mayfield has the lowest turnover in staff, Finney says.

Geneva Wells taught at the school 33 years until she retired in 1984. She and her husband, Clifton, who worked as a custodian at the school are also observing their 50th anniversary this year.

Mayfield is the only school in Middletown where Wells taught. She had the chance to go to Creekview with Mull when he was named prinicpal there, "But Mr. Crout asked me to stay," she says.

Crout was always "for the children," she says. "If any needed books or pencils, he always supplied them with it." He also greeted the children in their classrooms each morning, a practice that Wilson has continued.

Mayfield residents say that what truly makes the school exceptional is its principal.

"That's the key," Gibson says. "You're just as good as your leader."

Wilson is a well-known sight at Mayfield, standing outside the school every morning and afternoon, greeting parents as they leave or pick up their children.

Gibson says Wilson relates well both to the kids and to the parents. "They know he cares," he says.

Mrs. Mull says Wilson has the same feeling about the community that her husband had when he was principal there.

"Ralph was always concerned about the school and the families and the total community," Mrs. Mull recalls. "For the principal, a community is like seeing one of your own children growing up.

"He always believes that children were good students when their parents were interested in school," she says. "He believes in a triangle of school, parents and children."

Similarly, Wilson says children benefit when everything comes together in a circle.

"The school is not the whole circle," he says. "It's school and after-school recreation and PTO."

"We're really going to miss him," Barnhouse says of Wilson. "It's going to be hard to fill his shoes."

EX-STUDENTS INVITED TO RETURN

Mayfield Elementary is inviting former students, staff members and community residents to come back to school to help celebrate the school's 50th-year anniversary.

Anniversary luncheons are planned at the school April 27 and May 4.

Sixth-graders who have been versed in the school's history will greet visitors to the building from 10 to 11:30 a.m. each of these two days. They will conduct tours of the building and help serve the luncheon which will be prepared by the Manchester Technical Center food service classes. A musical program in the gym will follow the luncheons.

Both days are also planned as "spirit days" at Mayfield. Students and staff will participate in "Green and White Day" April 27 and "Dress in '40s Outfits Day" May 4.

The school's annual lawn fete is planned May 12.

Principal Hess Wilson and former principal George Crout have written a short history of Mayfield Elementary School. An edition of 1,200 copies has been printed and will be available at the school.

Several displays, including many old photographs from the school's early years, will be on display. Student art work will also be on view for the celebration.

Wilson said activities are under way to involve all students in the celebration. Classroom exercises focusing on the school's history have been developed; and former faculty members, administrators and students are coming to classrooms to talk about the "school days of yore."

SO LONG, MR. WILSON—"IT'S GOING TO BE TOUGH TO REPLACE A GUY WHO'S BECOME AN INSTITUTION," SAYS EASTRIDGE

(By Phyllis Cox)

Principal Jess Wilson's office at Mayfield Elementary School is a cluttered room, but a visitor can tell at a glance that its occupant is an active man with many interests.

On the walls are photos of some of the antique cars he has restored over the years, needlepoint pictures, a large quilt made for him by the school's Girl Scouts and a smaller one by the first-grade Daisies. There is a recent gift of a watercolor of the 50-year-old school by local artist W.B. Rehse, and on a table a sculpture of a cowboy brings to mind Wilson's boyhood in Elk City, Okla. Family photos hang on the wall to the left of his desk and on the other side is a portrait of J. Edgar Hoover, a remembrance from his years with the FBI.

But Wilson draws attention to a child's drawing on paper that shows the imprint of little hands. "Now, that is probably something only a mother could love, but this little person wanted me to have it," he says.

"The children give me these, and I tell them I'll put them up in my office. And then they'll come look for it. It's important to them," he says. He points to a three-paneled louvered screen at the office door. "I just keep this here because it makes a good place to display their drawings."

Wilson, 50, is retiring at the end of this school year, after serving as an educator in the Middletown City School District for 27 years. He has spent 12 of those years as principal at Mayfield where the staff members and parents say they hate to see him leave. But he says it is time to do something different, although he plans to remain in Middletown.

"Jess has a unique style of leadership," Superintendent Harry Eastridge says. "He seems to have a down-home flavor in dealing with parents. He's great at the public relations part. He has almost a sixth sense of what parents want to see for their child. . . .

"It's going to be tough to replace a guy who's become an institution."

School board member Fred Finney, who was president of the Mayfield PTO in the late 1960's, says Wilson is probably "the top elementary principal in southwest Ohio" in terms of motivating students and staff. He says he has raised the academic level of the school " from mediocre to outstanding."

But Wilson gives credit to the school's teachers for the success of a program which tests all students in grades 2-6 to identify "trouble areas" where more instruction is needed. Average test scores were a half-year behind grade level before the program; three years later, students' scores improved to at grade level or above.

Wilson is a familiar sight at Mayfield beginning each day outside the building greeting parents as they drop off their children. At the school day's close, he again takes up his post outside the school, watching out for his students.

"I can meet more people on the street than I can in my office," he says.

"I enjoy getting to meet the parents. That's so much a part of the job, a big part of my job—to know the parents and for them to know me."

The vigilance of his FBI training is evident as he describes how far in each direction he can see from the school.

"I know just about 95 percent of the parents," he says, explaining he makes a point of meeting any strangers at the school. They usually turn out to be a grandparent of some other relative who has been asked by parents to drive a child home.

"I try to look after the kids like I would my own, in the same way I would want my own daughter looked after," he says.

Wilson and his wife, Hilda, who works as a secretary at Vail Middle School, have three children. Their daughter, Carla, named Ohio Junior Miss in 1988, is now a student majoring in telecommunications at the University of Kentucky. Their twin sons, Rodney and Robert, are multihandicapped and reside at Doty House where Wilson visits them every day.

Having two handicapped children has taught Wilson "a lot of patience," he says, and it has also helped him to understand parents of other children with handicaps.

"It's taught me a lot of patience with kids—to be patient working with little people, listening to them, hearing them out."

Coming to Middletown to teach was something of a fluke for Wilson. He had been working with the FBI, first in Washington and then in Oklahoma City for about three years. But in 1963, he began thinking about a career move. One of his friends got a packet of information from a teachers' placement bureau, and Middletown was one of the school systems described in it.

"It sounded nice from what was in the material," he says. "So I left the FBI and came here." He and his wife arrived in a car towing a U-Haul trailer with all their possessions. He says he thought at the time teaching was something he'd try for a while. He says he's leaving now before he started getting grandchildren of his first students.

Wilson taught at Sherman School for four years, and then was principal at Spring Hill for one year before returning to Sherman as principal. He was transferred to Mayfield in 1978.

Helping families in the community has been part of his job as principal. Wilson says there isn't a week that goes by that he doesn't refer someone to one of the United Way agencies. He also suggests families in trouble consult a clergyman if they attend church.

He is reticent about his religion, saying simply: "We've always been active in church." But back in his office, he keeps a large Bible on a table opposite his desk.

"I found it in a closet at Sherman School," he explains. It had been given to Sherman by the Daughters of America in 1915. He kept it in his office there and then brought it with him to Mayfield.

Wilson also serves as a go-between to help families in need. Businesses that want to help a family at Thanksgiving or Christmas contact him, and then he makes the arrangements being careful not to hurt anyone's pride.

"Some are a little proud, but if you say, 'Can I help you?' they generally will. . . . I appreciate their feelings and privacy, and I don't want to ever embarrass anyone," he says. It takes a few years to build up a relationship with a community like that, he says. "But they know I'm interested in their children."

PTO President Kenny Gibson says Wilson "relates to kids on all levels" and he relates to parents as well.

"I've never heard anyone say: 'he doesn't like me' or 'he's picking on me.'" Gibson says.

"He's good at what he does. You can't replace him. It's going to be hard to find another guy just like him."

But Wilson says his successor can look forward to a lot of support from the community.

"Whoever it is, they'll certainly be behind the person," he says.

In parting, he points out some more of the children's drawings. A heart still up from Valentine's Day is signed: "I love you, Mr. Wilson."

"Things like that I'd miss if I weren't around little people," he says.

ATTORNEY GENERAL COMMENDS DALLAS POLICE DETECTIVE TRULY HOLMES

HON. JOHN BRYANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh recently commended Dallas Police Department Detective Truly Holmes for his assistance in the investigation and prosecution of "skinheads" for racial violence and vandalism in Dallas.

As one who fully shares the concern of the U.S. Department of Justice, the Dallas Police Department the Dallas County District Attorney's Office, and numerous citizens' groups about the increasing incidence of hate crimes, racial and religion-related violence in Dallas and other major cities, I want to share with my colleagues General Thornburgh's letter of commendation to Detective Holmes.

And, of course, I add my own sincere appreciation to Detective Truly Holmes for his vigorous pursuit of justice in these cases, which are so important in helping to stop these detestable acts of violence and vandalism.

Attorney General Thornburgh wrote the following letter to Detective Truly:

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, DC, April 5, 1990.

Detective TRULY HOLMES,
Dallas Police Department, 2014 Main Street, Room 506, Dallas, TX

DEAR DETECTIVE HOLMES: I wish to commend you for your outstanding efforts during the course of the investigation and trial of United States v. Sean Tarrant, et al., a joint local and federal prosecution of acts of racial violence and vandalism by Dallas skinheads.

The Department attorneys who prosecuted the case have informed me of the exceptional investigative work you contributed during the initial investigation on this case, its lengthy grand jury investigation and its ultimate trial. Your tenacity in locating witnesses, your sophisticated interviewing techniques and your willingness to perform any service needed by the prosecution quickly were invaluable.

Acts of racial and religious hatred, such as those disclosed by the evidence in this case, are simply intolerable in a free society. That was the message of this prosecution and your efforts were its cornerstone.

It is always a privilege to have law enforcement officers like yourself on our prosecution team. On behalf of the entire Department of Justice, I congratulate and thank you for your fine work.

Sincerely,

DICK THORNBURGH,
Attorney General.

STEMMING THE TIDE OF ANTI-SEMITISM IN THE SOVIET UNION

HON. ROMANO L. MAZZOLI

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, over the past several months, we have witnessed incredible changes in the Soviet Union. I hope President Gorbachev is successful with perestroika—restructuring the Soviet Union's political and social framework—and with glasnost—freedom of expression and enhanced civil rights. I feel it is in the United States' best interest for the Gorbachev program to succeed.

But, there is one disquieting development clouding these positive maneuvers. It is the appalling and totally unacceptable re-emergence of anti-Semitic attitudes among certain nationalist groups in the Soviet Union.

The U.S.S.R. has an unhappy history when it comes to relations with the Jewish community, and Mr. Gorbachev's silence on recent events—while that does not establish that he condones them—does worsen the problem.

Among the more notorious Russian nationalist organizations advocating ill will toward Soviet Jews is Pamyat. Pamyat is the Russian word for memory. Pamyat is using the new era of openness and freedom of expression as a springboard to revive old and discredited theories which are not even worthy of recital here. Suffice it to say, Mr. Speaker, that Pamyat blames many of the U.S.S.R.'s and the world's ills on Jewish people.

While Pamyat is the most notable of the nationalist groups—reviving after a long quiescence under communism—there are other groups spreading virulent and dangerous rhetoric about Jews in the U.S.S.R.

A recent New York Times magazine cover story by Bill Keller detailed the wide range of nationalist activity in the Russian Republic.

I am proud to be a cosponsor of House Concurrent Resolution 264, which calls on President Bush to urge President Gorbachev to publicly condemn the growth of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union and to adopt any measures to protect Jewish citizens in the Soviet Union from harassment and persecution from nationalist groups such as Pamyat. I hope this resolution passes swiftly.

Mr. Speaker, the Soviet Government should act now to ensure the protection of Soviet Jews and the safe departure of any Jewish citizen who may wish to emigrate to another land.

At this point in the RECORD, I insert the New York Times magazine cover story of January 28, 1990, entitled, "Russian Nationalists: Yearning for an Iron Hand."

[From the New York Times Magazine, Jan. 28, 1990]

RUSSIAN NATIONALISTS: YEARNING FOR AN IRON HAND

(By Bill Keller)

The Revolution Day Parade in the western Siberian city of Tyumen has dwindled in recent years from a two-hour spectacle to a perfunctory 45-minute exercise, reflecting the collapse of the Communist faith. Last Nov. 7 the Tyumen city fathers, desperate to boost their ratings, agreed, to permit a small show of disent.

The parade began, as usual, with the local army regiment marching stiff-legged past the reviewing stands on Lenin Plaza, where the Communist gentry of Tyumen stood swaddled in woolens and fur against the first bite of the Siberian winter. Then came worker delegations from the brick factory and the motor works and the Oil and Gas Ministry, all tugging balloons and banners and responding with desultory "oorahs" to chants from the loudspeakers mounted above the square.

Near the end, the dissenters strutted into view, led by a pudgy and intense 30-year-old named Aleksandr P. Repetov. Reaching the square, they hoisted their banners high and slowed their pace to give spectators time to decipher the near white lettering on their placards.

"Russia, Russia, save yourself!" exhorted one banner, fluttering in the icy wind alongside an icon of St. George the Dragon Slayer, a popular saint of Old Russia.

"They need great upheavals, but we need a Great Russia!" proclaimed another, echoing a famous appeal uttered by the czarist minister Peter Stolypin in 1907, against the radicals then threatening the czar's government, and now directed against the radicals surrounding President Gorbachev. Then came this sonorous echo of czarist Russia: "For the faith, the people and the Fatherland!"

Repetov and his followers belong to a group called Fatherland, bent on saving ethnic Russian culture and values from the Communist melting pot. To them, Nov. 7—the anniversary of the Russian Revolution—is a day of infamy, marking the moment when Russian history was stopped brutally in its course and the Communists began their systematic extermination of Russian culture, the Russian church, the Russian soul.

Their presence here on this anniversary of the Communist state was not just an ironic protest, however, but a small sign of an intriguing political flirtation now going on between Russian nationalists and the conservative wing of the Communist Party, two forces that suddenly find themselves driven together by a common danger: Mikhail S. Gorbachev. More and more often during the past year, the children of the czar have found themselves marching alongside the children of Lenin.

In this era of glasnost, similar groups with names such as Fidelity or Renewal or Memory or Fatherland have sprouted in cities across the vast area of the Soviet Union inhabited by ethnic Russians. These groups are usually tight-knit and avowedly apolitical, devoting themselves to the preservation of churches and old buildings, combating drunkeness, or reviving Russian choral folk singing.

In fact, they are a political rear guard. While much of the Soviet bloc seems to be lunging toward Western freedoms, the Russian nationalists—or Russian patriots, as they prefer to be called—deplore the chaos of Western-style democracy and the materialism of Western markets. They pine for a romanticized, patriarchal Russia.

"Let other countries surpass us in the technology of computer production," said Mikhail F. Antonov, an economist and leading Russian nationalist ideologue. "But only we can provide an answer to the question: Why? For whose sake? We are the only legitimate heirs to the great, spiritual Russian culture. The saving of the world will come from Soviet Russia."

The Russian patriots are a disparate lot, ranging from the more paranoid factions of the Pamyat (Memory) society, whose members wear paramilitary-style black T-shirts or army greatcoats, to the cultural elite of the official Russian Writers' Union, now embroiled in a passionate fight about whether to exclude the Leningrad chapter for supposedly being dominated by Jews. Nationalists provide much of the passion of the growing environmental movement in Russia, and have largely taken control of the officially sponsored temperance organizations and cultural societies.

The nationalist spirit burns with new intensity, too, in the Russian Orthodox Church, where some dissident priests are trying to revive the fundamentals of Russian faith smothered by decades of secular, Communist state dogma.

So far, the Russian patriots are too divided, too indecisive about their own priorities, too ill at ease in the ways of politics, to be considered a formidable political force. At at time when ethnic politics has inflamed the Soviet Union, it sometimes seems there are more committed nationalists among the 4.6 million Soviet Armenians, now mobilizing for civil war against their neighbors in Azerbaijan, or the 3 million Lithuanians coolly charting their exit from the Soviet Union, than among the 145 million Russians. But Russian nationalism appeals to a deep conservative streak in the Russian psychology, a yearning for order and a distaste for individual ambition. And with the failure of Communism, it is the most potent ideology on sale.

Among ethnic Russians what is going on now is a frantic search, first for a coherent Russian faith and then for the political means to execute it. What results from this search will be more than an academic question, for the Russians are both the dominant nationality in the Soviet Union and the most imposing obstacle to Gorbachev's campaign of modernization.

Westerners often think of the whole Soviet patchwork as "Russia," a mistake that is as offensive to a Russian nationalist as it is to a colonized Latvian or Georgian. Uzbekistan and Lithuania may be Soviet, but they are not Russian. Indeed, a devout Russian nationalist even wonders about parts of Russia itself. A Siberian, for example, will tell you that Leningrad is too "cosmopolitan" to be truly Russian, and that Moscow, now the capital of world Communism, has been profaned.

Geographically, Russia is the largest Soviet republic, the heart of an empire enlarged in this century by acquisitions from Eastern Europe and Muslim Central Asia.

Ethnically, Russians are the largest Slavic race, kin to the Ukrainians, Byelorussians, Poles and Czechs. But Russian blood has been diluted since the Mongol invasions, and the Russian language has become the lingua franca of the empire rather than a badge of identity.

The Russian patriots consider themselves not the perpetrators of Communism, but its most punished victims. To them, the Communists are the villains who assassinated their monarch, who raped their precious villages and birch-forested tundra with some of the most heedless industrialization ever inflicted on any patch of earth. Under Communism, the traumas of crash urbanization, overcrowed housing, women entering the work force and easy abortion so reduced the Russians' birthrate that, according to the 1989 census, they have fallen to a bare 50.8 percent majority of the Soviet Union's population.

"Fifty-eight percent of Russian families have only one child," laments Sergei V. Vasilyev, a young Russian from Tyumen who has taken up the patriots' cause in the Congress of People's Deputies. "After another generation, we'll have nothing but costumes in museums."

The nationalists see a Russian countryside that has languished in poverty while Communist leaders colonized Central Asia and Eastern Europe; today they watch as Soviet leaders desperate for capital sell the Russian birthright—timber, oil, natural gas—to foreign bidders, and buy, in absurd exchange, meat from France, potatoes from China, wheat from the United States.

Under Communism, the Russian Orthodox Church, so central to the sense of what it means to be Russian, was humilitated, its houses of worship transformed into "museums of atheism" or smashed to the ground by wrecking balls, its hierarchy vetted and corrupted by the K.G.B.

In Tyumen, Aleksandr Repetov of Fatherland took me on a tour of the former Ilyinsky Church, a 19th-century Russian Orthdox Church that was gutted during the late 1940's and fitted inside with a vodka factory. As bemused vodka bottlers looked on, Repetov and I climbed to the cupola, where galvanized tanks of vodka drain down to a bottling machine that snakes through what used to be the nave. On the vaulted ceiling, a few splashes of gold paint remain. (One of Fatherland's Revolution Day slogans called for relocating the bottling plant—to Communist Party headquarters.)

This is what the Communists have done. And now, as the patriots see it, Gorbachev is allowing new currents of permissiveness and Western materialism to corrupt what remains of Russia's long-suffering spirit.

"The Revolution brought people to the fore who destroyed Russia," says Valentin Rasputin, a writer whose novels of Russian village life have made him a leading ideologist of Russian nationalism. "In the same way, this revolution—perestroika—is bringing forth figures who, willingly or not, are promoting the destruction of stability, and of the country."

Amid this continuing destruction, the Russian patriots feel themselves misunderstood. Either the word "Russian" is used as shorthand for the entire polyglot citizenry of the Soviet Union, and thus for the acts of aggression committed under the banner of Communism or, when the word is used correctly to describe a distinct people, that people is often caricatured as bellicose, superstitious, servile, lazy and anti-Semitic.

The most influential Russian manifesto of recent times is Igor Shafarevich's "Russophobia," a bitterly defensive tract serialized in the monthly magazine of the Russian Writers' Union, "Our Contemporary," a bible of the Russian patriots. Xerox copies have been distributed like scriptural tracts across Russia.

With bitter eloquence, Shafarevich describes the Russian-hater's stereotype of the Russian: "A slave psychology, the absence of a sense of personal dignity, intolerance toward the opinions of others, a groveling mixture of spite, envy and the worship of authority.

"Since olden days, the Russians have loved strong and cruel authority, and have loved its very cruelty, throughout history they tended to slavishly submit to force. Even now, authority and a 'nostalgia for a master' dominates in the psyche of the nation . . . but the Russians are incapable of understanding the cause of their misfortunes. Regarding everything foreign with suspicion and hostility, they tend to accuse anyone at all of their trouble: the Tatars, the Greeks, the Germans, the Jews . . . anyone but themselves."

As Estonians, Lithuanians, Georgians and others have built their own nationalist movements and demanded greater independence from Moscow, the Russians who live in those republics have had to endure deliberate snubs, which have in turn helped galvanize Russian assertiveness. In Estonia and Moldavia, the Russian minorities have staged strikes to protest local language and voting laws aimed primarily at limiting the influence of Russian "occupiers" and "immigrants."

"The self-awareness of Russia is growing," Rasputin said, sitting in the bright, snow-filtered daylight at the Irkutsk Writers' Union. "Strange as it may seem, our republics have helped us with this: the Baltic republics, Armenia, Azerbaijan and others. When self-awareness started growing among these small peoples, accompanied to a certain extent by the growth of Russophobia, it helped—or rather, it helps—us Russians too, to become aware of ourselves and to define our place in history."

Maybe, suggests Rasputin, not entirely facetiously, it is time for Russia to think of seceding from the Soviet Union. Get away from the ingrates. Preserve the integrity of Russia.

The crude caricature of the Russian, of course, leaves much unexplained. The greatness of Russian literature and music, the moral courage of an Aleksandr I. Solzhenitsyn or an Andrei D. Sakharov, or even the work ethic of a Gorbachev do not fit neatly into this Russian stereotype. But it also has elements of truth, and one is the Russian inclination to blame someone else. Self-pity is the life-juice of Russian patriotism. In their self-pity, the Russian nationalists look for culprits and they usually find the scapegoats of history: the Jews.

Russian nationalists never tire of reciting the names of Jews who played critical roles in the Bolshevik Revolution and in Stalin's terror. In Russian nationalist demonology, the belief that Lenin had a Jewish grandfather, that Jews (who had suffered heavy persecution under the czar) predominated in the Bolshevik Party, and of course, that Marxism itself was the eponymous product of a German Jew, make the Jews as a race responsible for the interruption of Russian history. That Jews were themselves cruelly victimized in Stalin's purges is overshadowed by the fact that Lazar M. Kaganovich, a Jew, helped mastermind the violence. Some Russian nationalists, in fact, are inclined to exonerate Stalin on the fantastic grounds that he was manipulated by the Jews around him.

It is not just the weird paramilitary order, Pamyat, that is obsessed by the Jews. In conversations with educated, cultured Russians who would never be caught dead wearing a black T-shirt, in the pages of official magazines and newspapers favored by the nationalists, and in debates at the Russian Writers' Union, "the Jewish question" looms large. And with the coming of glasnost, discussion of it has become much less inhibited.

"I think today the Jews here should feel responsible for the sin of having carried out the Revolution, and for the shape that it took," Valentin Rasputin, who had been chosen a member of the Congress of People's Deputies, told me in November. "They should feel responsible for the terror. For the terror that existed during the Revolution and especially after the Revolution. They played a large role, and their guilt is great. Both for the killing of God, and for that."

The killing of God? Well, Rasputin said, that is an ancient sin, and no Jew today can be held responsible for the crucifixion of Christ. But the crimes of Communism are not so quickly forgiven.

"In this country, those are Jewish sins," Rasputin went on. "Because many Jewish leaders took part in the terror, in the repression of the kulaks, of the peasants, and so on. The ideology was produced by Jews. But to make them answer for it and to say that we won't be able to coexist, is the wrong approach. We can't make all Jews emigrate, and it's not necessary, either, because they are the brains we need. And I think the two nations, Russians and Jews, have merged to such an extent that separation would be painful—painful for the Russian nation, too. With all their faults and merits, they need each other, because on the one hand it makes for a kind of spiritual competition, and on the other hand it spurs the Russian people out of their lethargy."

Shafarevich, in his tract, blames Jews for promulgating the current wave of Russophobia. Not surprisingly, many Russian nationalists see Jewish influence behind Gorbachev's reforms, and delight in searching out evidence of Jewish ancestry in the family trees of prominent Westernizing radicals. In Irkutsk, I heard locals complain about the prominence of Jewish Soviet émigrés on the Russian-language Voice of America.

"We need to protect the independence of Russia, and to do that we need to limit the influence of these forces," says Aleksandr Turik, the leader of Fidelity, another patriotic group, based in Irkutsk.

At the Russian Federation Writers' Union meeting in mid-November, one of the stormiest disputes was over which of two rival Leningrad chapters to recognize—the established chapter, whose 430 members included a high proportion of Jews, or a breakway faction of 80 Russian nationalists.

"How many Russian writers, the legitimate sons of the Russian land, native Russians, will moan under the heel of the oppressor, the usurpers," shouted the writer Tatyana Glushkova in defense of the Leningrad Russians, whom she imagined "begging and pleading like Palestinian children. We are obliged to help our brothers of the same blood, for they are in need."

The affection for Palestinians notwithstanding, the Russian patriots' distaste for Jews is rivaled by their horror of the Islamic peoples who populate the republics south of Russia. The Russians talk about their fertile neighbors as both a Yellow Peril and a White Man's Burden.

Other Russians, including many who are deeply devoted to Russian culture, find the incessant preoccupation with Jews and Muslims embarrassing or frightening.

"We cannot live in peace until we ourselves stop raising these artificial barriers," said Sergei Zalygin, the avuncular editor in chief of the country's leading literary monthly, Novy Mir (New World). Zalygin is close friends with many of the Russian nationalist writers, but he has refused to open his magazine to what he considers destructive polemics, and he does his best to avoid the nationalist quarrel.

What the Russian nationalists want is to resume the history broken off in 1917.

Most of them do not advocate restoration of the monarchy, though they would probably agree with Rasputin that if revolution had not intervened Russia would have evolved into a constitutional monarchy, and would be better off today. (Many, like Rasputin, also believe that the last Czar, Nicholas II, and his family should be canonized as saints in the Russian Orthodox Church.)

But if a return to monarchy is impractical, neither do the nationalists have much use for Western-style democracy. They want order, stability, an end to permissiveness. Gorbachev, Rasputin says, is a capable man, but "he's completely confused. He doesn't know what move to make in order to lead the country out of this dead end." He paused, and a smile flickered across his lips. "A dead end which he brought us to in the first place."

Perhaps if Gorbachev had introduced freedom gradually, Rasputin says . . . "Instead, he threw everything at the people all at once. Just like when the czar used to throw money at the crowds during the carnival. The people would scramble, and there would be a lot of victims. The same thing happened here with perestroika."

"We need more use of troops to stabilize the situation, and thereafter stricter laws on public morality," he says. "We need to forbid the propaganda of repugnant things." Sex in the movies, rock-and-roll on television, ridicule of authority, pointless consumerism—these are the poisons of Western thinking.

Gorbachev has won over some of the Russian patriots by allowing them greater license to speak and publish, and by loosening official controls on the church. But on the whole they believe Gorbachev and those around him are leading Russia into an imitation of the bourgeois West, egged on by new Russophobes and Westernizers.

"The light at the end of their tunnel is capitalism," declares Sergei Vasilyev, the deputy from Tyumen.

Russian nationalists are against free markets, wealthy entrepreneurs and free trade zones that they believe will make Russia a colony of multinational corporations. They are against "the video layer culture."

"Material values are of secondary significance," says Rasputin. "We should have what we need, we should be well fed, we should not feel the lack of essential goods. But to bathe in luxury leads to nothing. . . . Russia should not live in poverty, but in moderation. It's difficult to restore spiritual values now, Russia being as poor as it is. But we need moderation. Wealth leads to the decrease of spiritual values."

During the last year, the Russian nationalists have tried to convert their wounded feelings into a political strength, so far with little success. The few candidates who ran openly Russian nationalist campaigns in elections last March, such as the novelist Yuri Bondarev in Volgograd, were soundly defeated. (Rasputin did not face the voters, but was elected to one of the seats reserved for the Writers' union.)

In October, Vasilyev managed to assemble 51 Russian deputies in Tyumen to discuss a legislative program aimed at the special problems of Russia: promoting the language and culture, establishing a separate Russian Academy of Sciences and state television committee, demanding a greater share of the national budget for Russia. Only 28 of those who came signed the document, not a formidable force in a congress of 2,250 members.

The fact remains, however, that the Russian nationalists offer a potent ideology to a people who long for something to believe in. They also appeal to that darker side of human nature, the yearning for someone to blame.

But Russia itself is too sprawling and diverse to be easily united, as conquerors have discovered over the centuries.

Moreover, the ascetic message of the Russian nationalists has not caught on with a materialistic younger generation, which, unlike its parents, does not remember a time when things were worse. Some young people have drifted to the Orthodox Church, others wear the black T-shirts of Pamyat. One of Leningrad's biggest young television heartthrobs, Aleksandr Nevzorov, anchor of the sensational nightly news digest "600 Seconds," sports a Russian flag on the lapel of his leather jacket and tells interviewers he reveres the monarchy. But this is all dwarfed by the fascination with the West. The new icons of the Russian young are Heineken beer cans and flip-top cigarette boxes.

The nationalists are also handicapped by their inexperience at politics, especially at the new, quasi-democratic politics Gorbachev has allowed.

"The Russian people could put forward marshals and thinkers," said Rasputin, "but they were least of all capable of putting forward politicians. This is probably related to the delayed development of democracy in Russia." Rasputin and Vasilyev, both members of the People's Congress, said they felt ill at ease in a forum they find too Western.

"I'm a deputy, I take part in the Congress, but it's foreign to me," Rasputin confessed. "These people are foreign to me. It's not my business to deal with legal matters, laws, which laws are going to work, which aren't . . . I'm afraid there's a lot I don't understand, and which I never will understand, because for me, the most important law is the law on decency and justice. Like it used to be among the people: according to God's law or not, just or injust."

During the past year, Russian patriots have begun cultivating support in three important constituencies.

One is the military. Several prominent nationalist leaders have ties to the military and are given favorable attention in military publications. Nationalist groups have increasingly included in their declarations a call for strengthening the military and police.

"The ring of American bases around our country has not weakened," warned the 28 deputies who gathered in Tyumen. They expressed "serious concern over the attempts to discredit the army, and the decline of superpower patriotism among our youth."

The campaign has not yet produced any conspicuous results, perhaps, says Vasilyev, because the military has been subservient to the Communist Party since Stalin liquidated the officer corps in the 1930's.

"The army could be a guarantor of stability," the young deputy said wistfully, as we drank tea in his Tyumen apartment. "But the young officers are demoralized by bad living conditions, and the old officers are afraid."

A more promising target is the working class. There have been efforts to merge Russian nationalism with a kind of blue-collar populism, a combustible combination if anybody finds the right spark. Russians are disproportionately represented among the machinists and truck drivers of the Soviet society, and many are frightened that Mr. Gorbachev's program will leave them behind.

"Someone wants us to be Americans, or maybe Japanese," said a machinist at a Leningrad tractor factory last summer, explaining why he was sometimes drawn to Pamyat rallies at Rumyantsev Garden. "But we are Russians, and we must look out for each other."

Russian nationalism is evident in a new alliance of blue-collar groups, the United Workers' Fronts, which held its founding congress last September in the Ural Mountains industrial center of Sverdlovsk. This group joined with an array of nationalist clubs to form a United Council of Russia, which has attempted to find common ground among Russian nationalists, disgruntled blue-collar workers and party functionaries.

"They are too Marxist for our taste," said Aleksandr Turik of the Irkutsk patriotic group Fidelity. "But they actively oppose our opponents. We have serious differences with them, but we all understand that we are involved in the same business."

The third target of nationalist interest, and the most astonishing, is the Communist Party. This would be, perhaps, the ultimate marriage of convenience. The party apparatchiks, endangered by democracy, are desperately searching for an ideology that might win them a popular base, and some kind of national Communism might be the ticket.

In November, the Leningrad Party leader sponsored a rally of bused-in party workers where speaker after speaker railed against "millionaires" and Westernizers, an orgy of populism with Russian nationalist overtones. In December, a plenum of Communist leaders in Moscow voted to start a separate party bureau for the Russian republic, a concession to nationalists. The Russian patriots in turn are looking for an institution that will give form to their faith. If the Communist Party drops its ban on religious believers and its "internationalist" slogans—both entirely possible—many Russian nationalists would feel at home.

"The party should be reborn on a patriotic, national basis," said Turik.

"I don't feel any love for the party," said Rasputin, a non-Communist. "I understand perfectly well the harm it did to the people and to the country. . . . But I think that in the present conditions, when everything is shifting, and when there's a rebellion against the past going on everywhere, when people completely disregard the past, I think we have no other way out than to reconcile ourselves with this party and to let it restore a certain stability. . . .

"It seems to me," Rasputin went on, "that the situation in our country is so dangerous now that if we change the party, or even if we permit more than one party, it will only lead to greater danger. We need unification, even if it's based on this party. And then we'll be able to move on."

Vasilyev, a party member, agrees. Only 28, he has been a career functionary in the Communist Youth League, and he thinks the Russian patriots can pick up useful organizational skills.

"It is easier to reform the party than to replace it," he said.

When Alla Latynina, literary critic for the Literary Gazette, hears that kind of talk, it sends a chill up her spine.

She is one of a growing number of Russian intellectuals who are trying to find a liberal alternative to the Russian patriotic movement. They agree that the Revolution interrupted Russia's progress toward civilization, but disagree about where to resume that history. They are searching for a centrist position, combining the political and economic experience of Western civilization with what is humane in the Russian tradition.

"We have a different history, and different roots," Latynina said during a conversation in her living room, which is decorated with her husband's collection of Russian folk toys. "Despite all my affection for the Western world, I understand that we will never become France. In order to do that, 200 years of parliamentary work are needed. And we haven't done that. But I think we can become a state, a society with liberal economic models, a society where we can breathe freely and where our freedom is not denied."

The West, and the radical Westernizers here, tend to think of Russia's past as exclusively one of tyranny and serfdom. It is true that Russia never developed a property-owning middle class, the institutions of parliamentary democracy or a well-established rule of law. But as S. Frederick Starr, president of Oberlin College and an insightful observer of Soviet affairs, has pointed out, Russia does have a fragile, liberal countertradition dating back to the early 18th century, when Peter the Great exposed young Russians to Western ideas.

"When The Moscow News in 1799 conducted a poll to determine the most significant figures of the waning century," Starr wrote in The New Republic, "George Washington and the American Founders headed the list."

Before the Communists seized power, the land reform of 1906 had given land to peasants, and the czars had encouraged a flourishing private industry and foreign trade. Russia at the beginning of this century, Starr points out, was beginning down a path that Western democracies had followed earlier, toward political and economic pluralism and the rule of law. The strength of these impulses is evident in the brutal force that both Lenin and Stalin used to suppress them. And even after that suppression, the yearning for Western civilization and markets lived on her in underground publications and the shadow economy.

Today, magazines like Novy Mir are conducting an intensive search for a more humane Russian tradition, reviving the work of pre-Revolutionary philosophers like Nikolai Berdyaev, who argued for a synthesis of Western and Slavic values, and recounting the experience of Russian capitalism at the turn of the century.

"Maybe the slogan 'Workers of the World, Unite' seemed romantic at the beginning of the workers' movement," said Latynina, "but I feel closer to those of our historic figures who never got caught up in this romantic notion of creating the kingdom of labor, but who saw that all this would end in disgrace. They knew this experiment would not be successful, they knew that one can't build a society on hatred and on unleashed elemental passions."

Latynian's nightmare is that an opportunistic clique within the Communist Party, seeking new elemental passions to exploit, will seize on Russian nationalism—giving form to the raw emotion. As it becomes clear that Western-style democracy and markets will not instantly raise Russia from its economic slough, demogogues will find a wider audience.

An outsider who has watched the birth pangs of democracy here can only hope Latynina is wrong. But given how late the West recognized the political strength of the National Socialists in 1930's Germany or the Islamic Fundamentalists in 1970's Iran, it would be foolish to write off the Russian nationalists.

STATEMENT ON RELIEF FOR HIGH MEDICARE HOSPITALS

HON. PORTER J. GOSS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, southwest Florida has many characteristics that place it first in the record books. But one of our distinctions is not necessarily something to be proud of—it's sort of a double-edged sword.

Florida 13 has more high Medicare hospitals than any other district in the country—and that means that problems with the Medicare system are causing big problems for our area.

Our hospitals concentrate on the elderly—and so they end up serving a disproportionately high percentage of Medicare beneficiaries.

These hospitals are performing an invaluable service to our communities—but they are being squeezed from every direction. The Medicare system is already on shaky ground—and there are some who predict an earthquake ahead.

Many of our hospitals are operating in the red—some have been forced to shut down altogether. Why? Because the Medicare Program isn't addressing the needs of a hospital where Medicare beneficiaries account for 65 percent of the patients.

Mr. Speaker, it's time we revamped the Medicare payment system to reflect reality. These hospitals are operating in the trenches of the health care battle—we can't afford to leave them as stranded casualties.

E. CLAUDE GARDNER'S RETIREMENT

HON. DON SUNDQUIST

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. SUNDQUIST. Mr. Speaker, in a few short weeks, Freed-Hardeman University in Henderson, TN will mark the retirement of its president and leading booster, Dr. E. Claude Gardner.

I am proud to call Dr. Gardner my friend and proud to call attention to this House the record of achievement he has built at Freed-Hardeman.

Claude Gardner began teaching at the school 41 years ago. In 1969, when he became its president, Freed-Hardeman was a 2-year junior college, serving 758 students in 12 buildings. Today, Freed-Hardeman University is a fully accredited 4-year school, with a master's program, serving almost 1,200, students on a modern campus of 32 buildings. These great strides forward are due in no small part to Claude Gardner's vision, effort and enthusiasm.

For almost 21 years, President's Gardner's stewardship and Christian example have made a difference for good at Freed-Hardeman, as well as in Henderson and surrounding Chester County. Claude Gardner's involvement and spirit are evident in the local chamber of commerce and Rotary Club, which he helped establish.

On June 1, Claude Gardner will retire from the presidency of the proud university he has done so much to build, but that will not be the end of his service or influence there. He will become the school's first chancellor, and in that capacity, he will no doubt continue to influence for good the preparation and training of yet another generation.

His tenure at Freed-Hardeman has been one of uncommon accomplishment. His record will be the yardstick against which those of his successors will be judged.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE ROBERT F. WAGNER

BILL GREEN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to bring the attention of my colleagues to an event which will mark the 80th birthday of the Honorable Robert F. Wagner, one of the country's most distinguished public servants.

On Tuesday, May 15, Mr. Wagner's birthday will be marked by the naming of Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service at New York University. In addition, that celebration will be the occasion to present to the Honorable Ronald Reagan and Nancy Reagan, and Ambassadors Walter and Leonore Annenberg, the first Wagner Medals for Public Service. The extraordinary career of Bob Wagner could only be acknowledged in an extraordinary way, reflecting his lifelong dedication to the public good.

On that occasion, I should like to extend my best wishes to Robert Wagner for a healthy and happy birthday.

CONGRATULATING THE 1990 SMITH ACADEMY FALCON CHAMPIONSHIP BASKETBALL TEAM

HON. SILVIO O. CONTE

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, it is my great honor to extend my congratulations to the Smith Academy Basketball Team of Hatfield, MA. On March 17, the Smith Academy Falcons crowned their undefeated 25–0 season by beating Mission High School of Boston, to win the Massachusetts Division III Men's Championship.

Mr. Speaker, winning a State championship is no small feat for a team from western Massachusetts. It is often the case of David slaying Goliath when one of western teams heads east for State tournaments. This is why the accomplishment of the Falcons is all the greater.

In the championship game, the Falcons displayed all of the spirit and poise that it takes to make a great championship team. At half time, the Falcons trailed Missions High by a point. I don't know what Coaches Robert Pelis and Perry Messer told their troops at the half, but perhaps it was a mixture of Gen. George Patton and Red Auerbach. Whatever it was, it worked. In the second half, the underdog Falcons, led by point guard Luke Ryan and 1,000 career point scorer Jim Smiarowski, rallied and triumphed by a 10 point margin at the final buzzer. This is a team of diverse, multitalented players and all of them contributed to their teams ultimate victory. Jim Smiarowski, Luke Ryan, Brian Hurley, Herb Guyette, Sean O'Connell, Marc Mulherin, Kyle Cahill, Amit Patel, Travis Daniels, Mike Strong, Mike Theberge, and Bill Skorupski are all champions today. In the trenches, the squad was ably assisted by managers Jim Lavallee Tracy Banasieski, and Katie Flavin.

Basketball is, at times, a magical game. This season, the greatest magic was at Smith Academy. And so, Mr. Speaker, I join all of Hatfield, Hampshire County, and western Massachusetts in congratulating the Smith Academy Falcons—State Champions!

SANDINISTAS GIVE MILLIONS IN STATE ASSETS TO FOLLOWERS

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call to the attention of my colleagues an article in the Los Angeles Times which appeared April 25, 1990. The report describes the policy of the outgoing Sandinista regime in Nicaragua to turn over millions of dollars in state assets to government officials and party followers. The state-sponsored grand larceny carried out by the Sandinistas practically guarantees that the succeeding Chamorro government will lack the resources to govern effectively and efficiently.

SANDINISTAS GIVE MILLIONS IN STATE ASSETS TO FOLLOWERS

(By Richard Boudreaux)

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA.—Since losing the Nicaraguan election two months ago, the Sandinista revolutionaries who leave office today have given away millions of dollars in state-owned land, houses, cattle, vehicles, boats, radio stations and building materials to members of their own party, according to government workers and members of the incoming administration.

Aides to President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, after transition talks with Sandinista officials in each governmental agency, expressed alarm this week over what they called a systematic looting of public assets—and official moves to conceal it.

They said the losses could slow their efforts to revive an economy crippled by years of war with the Contras and Sandinista mismanagement.

"We are about to inherit the shell of a government," said Guillermo Quant, a Chamorro aide. "Until we look at the books, we won't know how thin the shell is."

Sandinista authorities have defended some giveaways, such as cars and houses, as legitimate rewards for revolutionary service, and they claim to have collected token payments for some property. But other cases involve mysterious pilfering and accusations of embezzlement.

In one case documented by Chamorro aides, three container ships and two tankers of the government-owned shipping fleet have disappeared and turned up for sale in New York. Also missing, neighboring farmers say, are 7,000 of the 17,000 head of cattle on a state-owned ranch.

Employees report that an entire resort—five bungalows in the Masaya Volcano national park—was dismantled and trucked away under army guard one night.

Big-time thievery has hit little towns like Diria, southeast of Managua, where 3,000 slabs of cement for a new cemetery wall and all 12 sewing machines at the sewing cooperative vanished, residents said.

"President Daniel Ortega is blaming the state of the economy on North American aggression, but in these last few weeks the aggression is more direct—it's from the Sandinistas themselves," said Salvador Murillo, a Tourism Ministry employee. "They're telling their people that they will soon be out of work, so it's time to grab everything they can."

The Sandinistas have denied some of the more blatant stealing of which they are accused. But they declined in recent meetings with Chamorro's transition teams to hand over the inventories, balance sheets and bank records of any government entity until the last day.

Jaime Icabalceta, a coordinator of the transition teams, said that the Sandinistas apparently sold cheaply or gave away most of the state's collective farms in recent weeks, along with most of the late-model vehicles assigned to government ministries. Some ministries are turning over fewer than five cars.

In southernmost Rivas province, he said, six of the 10 sprawling cattle collectives were privatized. One was given to the Sandinista army and another to Ivan Garcia, outgoing director of the state television network.

An irony of the situation is that the Sandinistas, after a decade of commitment to a fairly centralized economy, have suddenly embraced Chamorro's free-market principles. They are preempting her promise to sell most of the state's property—acquiring many of the goods themselves at bargain prices and undercutting her government's ability to raise cash.

"They are sucking the state dry to set up their own companies," said an American businessman. "They are creating a corporate state within a state."

Cars have been a hot topic of discussion in government agencies during the lame-duck period. At the Internal Commerce Ministry, 15 section heads already assigned cars got to keep them without charge, and 12 other Sandinista activists applied for the privilege of buying five other cars for $30 each, an employee said.

Some ministries even bought new cars just to sell them at huge discounts to loyal employees. Casa Pellas, a major importer, reported selling about 160 new Japanese cars, trucks and jeeps in March and April—double the pre-election rate. The government bought most of them.

When the opposition newspaper La Prensa reported that a state transport firm had given 12 trucks at no cost to Sandinista employees, company director Guileobaldo Lacayo defended the practice.

"It wouldn't be fair to let these trucks end up in the hands of people who never contributed to this enterprise," he said.

Aides to Chamorro, the first Nicaraguan opposition leader to assume office in a peaceful transition, say the looting is worse than in 1979, when the Sandinistas deposed dictator Anastasio Somoza and inherited a sacked, virtually bankrupt economy.

"When Somoza fell, people took advantage of the chaos and power vacuum to steal little things—refrigerators, television sets, sound equipment, furniture, food, clothes," said Vice President-elect Virgilio Godoy. "This time, there is an appearance of normality, but the looting is hidden and much bigger in scale. This time it is ordered and directed by the government."

Sandinista Vice President Sergio Ramirez and other officials have made strong statements denying such charges. But Ramirez admitted that a law passed last month by the Sandinista-dominated National Assembly had aroused suspicion. The law declared government officials immune from any crimes committed up to the time they leave office. Godoy called it "the first law in history to sanction looting in advance."

Another law passed last month gave Sandinistas title to homes confiscated over the past decade. Since then, Sandinista military officers have moved into a complex of 40 state-owned homes vacated by Cuban military advisers who were withdrawn from Nicaragua.

"An officer with several stripes on his uniform came to see this house where the Cubans lived," said a maid dismissed by the new owners. "The officer told this other man that he liked the house but would have problems because it had only one garage space and he drives two cars."

The high-level scramble for homes and cars appears to have fostered a now-or-never atmosphere in Managua, as the poor also try to improve their status. Thousands of homeless people have invaded empty lots and built shacks in the hope that the new government will not chase them out. Sandinista-led labor unions have staged eight strikes against government agencies in the past week, some of them winning 100% wage increases.

Alcides Altamirano, 29, the Sandinista Youth leader in the city of Granada, is doing well for himself in this atmosphere. The house and car assigned him by the government four years ago have just been given to him at no cost. A few days ago, he seized a plot near Managua's Roberto Huembes market, along with other squatters, and is building a new house with concrete slabs he says he acquired cheaply from "a contact" in the Construction Ministry. He expects to sell the other house for $2,500.

So blatant is the looting from the ministries, says Altamirano, that he feels his actions are within the limits of ethical behavior.

"Some of those taking advantage of this situation were never Sandinistas," he said. "They are technocrats, opportunists who called themselves Sandinistas to rise to high positions."

Fearing theft or sabotage by their Sandinistas bosses, employees have shut down the Ruben Dario National Theater until the new government takes possession.

According to an agreement between the incoming and outgoing governments, all state property is to be accounted for and handed over, a process that started Monday. But when Chamorro's media aides called on Arnulfo Urratia, president of a state corporation that owned 17 of the country's 35 radio stations, he announced that the corporation had been dissolved.

Fourteen of the stations, it turned out, had been turned over to local governments that will not change hands until May 10, and two had been sold, one for $5,000. The other, Radio Primerisima, had been given free to a cooperative of its Sandinistas workers, headed by Urrutia himself.

"After 10 years, we have a right to keep this," he told Chamorro's aides.

The 34 fishing boats of a state shrimp-fishing cooperative in Bluefields, on the Caribbean coast, met a similar fate. The cooperative—with its boats—was turned into a private entity, run by its Sandinista founder.

La Prensa declared last week that "de-capitalizers of the state" will be "condemned as common criminals" after the new controller general audits govenment agencies. It added a caveat emptor: Anyone buying goods stolen from the government runs the risk of losing them, no money back.

But the new administration is divided over how much can be done to receover the booty. Prosecuting so many Sandinistas, Godoy said, would be "uncomfortable," and in many cases impossible, given the likelihood that incriminating records are being destroyed.

As Chamorro's aides debated the issue, thieves struck the state-owned country club where the new president is to receive visiting heads of state tonight. They stole paintings, refrigerators and furniture. Workers there blamed the club's Sandinista management.

THE CALIFORNIA FISH AND WILDLIFE RESTORATION ACT OF 1990

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago, the world celebrated Earth Day. There was a great outpouring of sentiment for changing policies that destroy our air, our water, and endanger the future of life on this planet.

Really cleaning up the environment is going to take more than sentiment.

Today, I am introducing legislation that will initiate the most dramatic effort ever to restore the fisheries, wetlands, and wildlife of California—with firm goals, tough timetables, and a sharing of the burden.

I am pleased to say that the bill already enjoys substantial support. Fifty-one Members of the House have joined as original cosponsors of the California Fish and Wildlife Restoration Act of 1990. The bill is also supported by all of the major California and national conservation organizations.

I intend to move this bill. My Subcommittee on Water, Power, and Offshore Energy Resources will hold the first hearing on May 15 in Washington, DC.

My bill complements an important piece of legislation by Assemblymen Phil Isenberg and Bill Baker that is already moving through the California State Legislature. The Isenberg-Baker plan would protect and restore wetlands and to ensure that the State does its part to implement the North American waterfowl management plan.

These bills, one Federal, the others at the State level, share the same urgency.

For decades, the State and Federal governments have committed ecological genocide on the fish and wildlife in California. The repercussions have been felt up and down the Pacific flyway. The repercussions have been felt by commercial fishermen and by all of the people who go out on the weekends to fish with their children. The repercussions have been felt by virtually everyone who enjoys hunting, fishing, birdwatching, or just experiencing the natural environment.

Every year, more and more wildlife habitat has been dammed, drained, plowed under, paved over, reclaimed, and poisoned. Salmon, steelhead, and striped bass have declined by 80 to 90 percent. One run of salmon is on the threatened species list. Duck populations have dropped by 50 percent, reaching a record low last year.

We have wiped out 95 percent of all the wetlands of the Central Valley.

And the State's economy, as well as its ecology, are gravely endangered.

We used to have massive fish runs and busy canneries lining the Sacramento River in the delta, employing our citizens and generating a tremendous amount of economic activity. But no more. Today, billions of dollars in boating, duck clubs, commercial fishing, aquatic recreation, and related business are jeopardized by the current state of affairs.

We cannot allow these integral parts of the California economy to go the way of the old sardine canneries.

Some will point the finger of blame at the farmers, or the developers, or the urban areas. The fact is—we all share the blame. We have all enjoyed the prosperity that has come from the use, and the abuse, of our State's natural resources. And now, our State's future is endangered by our excesses.

The time has come for us to give something back to the State of California—and that is a sound ecological future. We have to leave California better than we found it.

The bill I am introducing is tough, but fair.

It requires the Secretary of the Interior to double the salmon and steelhead population by the year 2000 by implementing the upper Sacramento fisheries and riparian habitat management plan, and by protecting and restoring the anadromous fish in the lower Sacramento, the bay and delta, and the San Joaquin River.

It also requires the Secretary to implement the North American waterfowl management plan in the Central Valley, including an obligation to provide water needed by the refuges for the protection of wildlife.

We will all have to recognize that this urgent task cannot be accomplished quickly, easily, or cheaply. We're going to take all those promises of sacrifice and individual participation from Earth Day, and ask everyone to pay their fair share.

Our bill is funded jointly by the Federal Government, by the State, and by the Central Valley project water and power users. Central Valley project water rates are already far below comparable State and nonproject rates. Water users will meet their obligations by means of a $1 an acre-foot surcharge.

In addition, the Western Area Power Administration will issue bonds to pay for the fish and wildlife restoration prescribed by this bill.

We in California have enjoyed the benefits of cheap water and cheap power for decades. But there has been a price to that consumption. I believe the people of the State will be willing to share equitably in the effort to restore California for future generations to enjoy.

And that is the goal and the message of this bill. This legislation offers an opportunity for disparate, and sometimes adversarial, portions of our State to come together to accomplish a common goal: The restoration of our wetlands and our fish and wildlife resources.

Working together—environmentalist and hunter, farmer and urban resident, developer and preservationist—this bill can be a reality and our common goals of restoring the environment of California can be achieved.

Mr. Speaker, we have a unique opportunity and a great responsibility to protect our natural heritage.

I urge my colleagues to join me in this effort.

SUPPORTING REPRESENTATIVE GEPHARDT AND A NEW VISIONARY FOREIGN POLICY

HON. ROMANO L. MAZZOLI

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Majority Leader DICK GEPHARDT'S call for a new and visionary U.S. foreign policy.

I was recently in Poland where I met with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and other Solidarity officials. Lech Walesa had a vision in 1979 of a Poland free of Communist rule. Despite having to operate underground for years, Walesa's perseverance and courage proved successful. We now are beginning to see the results—all because Walesa had a vision.

DICK GEPHARDT is not calling for something radical in America's foreign policy. He is only advocating an open debate by those charged with the responsibility of addressing a changing world structure. This means the administration and the Congress.

So far about all our colleague, Representative GEPHARDT, has gotten in return for requesting a national debate on foreign policy is a lot of loose talk from his detractors and even some verbal abuse.

For my part, I applaud the majority leader for his courage in broaching this subject, and the graceful way he handled the resulting criticism.

Whether the administration likes it or not, DICK is right. The debate has to take place.

With the prospects improving for freedom and democracy in Eastern Europe and Central America—and with racial equality not a too distant dream in South Africa—America cannot afford to embrace all the old models of foreign policy. To remain the global leader, we must find new solutions to these new opportunities and new challenges.

Mr. Speaker, I do not necessarily agree with every initiative the majority leader espoused in his speech. But, his serious comments deserve no less serious a response from us, his colleagues in Congress, from the administration, and from the people of America.

TRIBUTE TO RETIRING CITY PAYROLL CLERK

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor a dedicated public servant, Mrs. Therese R. Gadoury, of Woonsocket, RI. Mrs. Gadoury recently retired after working 17 years as the city's payroll clerk. Her hard work and achievements stand as a shining example for other citizens.

Mrs. Gadoury didn't just work with numbers, she made a deep impression upon those who were blessed to work with her; her integrity and tenderness of spirit is noticed by all. Most fortunate of all is her family. A loving mother, Mrs. Gadoury has raised seven children.

I commend Mrs. Gadoury for all her accomplishments. I wish her all the best for a happy, healthy and enjoyable retirement and may she continue to bless all those who are fortunate enough to know her.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE RABBI ERWIN ZIMET

HON. HAMILTON FISH, JR.

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, when the spiritual leader of Temple Beth-El in Poughkeepsie, Rabbi Erwin Zimet, passed away last December, the Hudson Valley region lost an irreplaceable treasure.

Rabbi Zimet was a native of Berlin, Germany, and came to this country in the midst of the Nazi Holocaust against the Jews. Arrested one night with his father in 1938, he was sent to the Polish border, where he and his dad waited 3 days and nights in the snow, without food or shelter.

In America, Rabbi Zimet tirelessly devoted himself to his new duties as rabbi, first in New York City, and then in Poughkeepsie, where he arrived in 1946. He was an exceptional spiritual leader, visiting members of his congregation in hospitals, nursing homes and their houses.

But Rabbi Zimet's contributions extended far beyond his pastoral duties. He marched for civil rights in Selma, AL. He wrote letters urging a national holiday for Martin Luther King. Under his leadership, the Interfaith Council sponsored Vietnamese boat people in the country in 1980. He also served on the Dutchess Council of Human Rights and the City of Poughkeepsie Commission on Human Rights. He devoted countless hours to high schools, colleges and correctional facilities. He was always eager to help others.

In light of all these accomplishments on behalf of his county and country, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith of Poughkeepsie will posthumously present its Lifetime Achievement Award to Rabbi Zimet's family on May 5. No individual is more deserving of this honor. I commend the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith for its excellent choice.

CUSTOMS INFORMED COMPLIANCE AND AUTOMATION ACT OF 1990

HON. DONALD J. PEASE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, together with my colleague, Mr. FRENZEL, I am introducing the Customs Informed Compliance and Automation Act of 1990. This bill would strengthen the U.S. Customs Service's role as a trade facilitator.

In today's competitive business environment, imports, and exports play an increasingly important and often strategic role in bottom line performance. Delays in meeting delivery dates, either inbound or outbound, can wreak havoc on carefully planned production schedules, sales projects, and pricing strategies.

The Ways and Means Oversight Subcommittee, which my colleague, Mr. PICKLE, chairs, ably documented these delays and other mishaps in its report "Abuses and Mismanagement in U.S. Customs Service Commercial Operations."

The Joint Industry Group, a coalition of trade associations and U.S. businesses and the chief proponent of this bill, argues persuasively that the issue of Customs Commercial Operations should not be framed as a choice between moving commerce and enforcing the law. Rather, the issue is more correctly one of facilitating compliance with the law.

An effective compliance program has three elements:

First, importers and exporters need to know and be able to find out what the laws are. If necessary, they also need to have their questions answered regarding the treatment of new articles of commerce.

Second, importers and exporters need some measure of certainty that the law and interpretations of it will not be changed suddenly without due notice and opportunity for comment.

Third, importers and exporters expect the Customs Service to facilitate international trade, while at the same time ensuring that the laws are adequately enforced.

In recent years, many in the business community have grown concerned about the trend in Customs to focus on the third element of compliance to the exclusion of the first two. Catching problems at the Nation's ports is certainly good for making headlines, but it is only part of Customs' responsibility.

We believe that improving the ability of importers and exporters to comply fully with the law—before shipments reach the ports—will improve compliance rates and make it much easier to detect those who willfully commit fraud.

I urge my colleagues to give serious consideration to this bill.

PEASE-FRENZEL CUSTOMS BILL INTRODUCED

HON. BILL FRENZEL

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, today Mr. PEASE and I have introduced H.R. 4689, which provides some needed reforms in our Customs laws. The overall goals of the Pease-Frenzel bill is to facilitate trade by reducing some of the obstacles which Customs has erected over the past years. Some may argue that we have a new Commissioner of Customs who has nudged the Service back in the proper direction and that therefore there is no need for many of these changes. However, because of some of our past experiences, I believe it is very important to make these changes, most of which are merely clarifications of congressional intent, rather than to leave interpretation of the law up to the whims of future Commissioners.

Most of these changes are designed to protect the business community. For instance, we give importers more opportunity to comment on and to appeal Customs rulings. We also give them more information on audits conducted on their business practices. It would accredit private testing labs and provide a more fair transition to Customs' automation program. The ability to make prior disclosures of Customs violations is clarified to avoid the current situation whereby some companies feel they are discouraged from making prior disclosures.

There are some more controversial areas of the bill which are important to me and should be important sections of whatever Customs bill the Ways and Means Committee reports. One is clarification of seizure authority the congressional intent of which, in my judgment has been grossly misinterpreted by the Customs Service. The Congress did give the Service additional seizure authority under 19 U.S.C. 1595(a)(c) of the code, but only in instances where drugs were suspected in the shipment. Customs has been using this authority in many other cases, when it has plenty of authority to pursue violations of Customs laws under 19 U.S.C. 1592. H.R. 4689 would clarify that 1595(a)(c) seizure authority does not apply to civil penalties under 1592. While I would admit that Customs has made a lot of progress and no longer seizes nearly everything in sight, I would feel much more comfortable to have this clarification codified. A change as major as this one that conflicted with original congressional intent should have been a legislated change, not an arbitrary one by Customs. I was personally involved with the drug bill legislation which made the 1595(a)(c) change, and I distinctly recall Customs officials ensuring that this added authority would never be used for a case normally pursued under 1592.

Another controversial issue is the Customs regulation implemented last year which redefined the definition of fraud in order to make findings of fraud much easier. This was a very controversial change which should also have been legislated. The Pease-Frenzel bill would restore the definition to its original form, as used throughout the entire legal system.

One other change which I strongly support is the limit on detentions of merchandise to 5 days unless Customs gives a detailed account of why merchandise should be held beyond that period along with an estimate of how long the detention will be. We have all heard the horror stories of imports or exports being detained for months with no explanation. Most of the detentions were released without any charges. If a detention is necessary, Customs should not be shy about sharing its reasons with the company involved. This is another area where Customs will say they have cleaned up their act. They have, somewhat, but this does not mean that those companies that have future detentions should not receive some protection.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Trade Subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee has begun hearings on a Customs reform bill. It is needed, and I am hopeful that all of the elements of the Pease-Frenzel bill will be incorporated into a final bill.

"LAW DAY, U.S.A."

HON. JOHN G. ROWLAND

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to join many law professionals around the country in recognizing today as "Law Day, U.S.A." I am proud to know that many judges and officials from my home town of Waterbury, CT, have gathered to celebrate this event.

Law Day is more than a day to recognize the achievements of all law professionals. Whether advising the elderly or encouraging local students to pursue the study of law, the members of the Waterbury Bar Association are taking this day to work with the citizens of Waterbury so they may better understand the law. Their volunteer efforts on this day will not soon be forgotten.

I am proud to have this opportunity to praise the men and women who make up our legal system and am particularly honored to salute the Waterbury Bar Association for their recognition of Law Day.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. DENNIS J. MURRAY OF POUGHKEEPSIE

HON. HAMILTON FISH, JR.

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, May 5, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith will present Dr. Dennis J. Murray, president of Marist College in Poughkeepsie, with its Americanism Award. Dennis Murray is most deserving of this honor.

During Mr. Murray's 10 years as president, enrollment at Marist has nearly doubled and the school has become one of the most technologically advanced liberal arts colleges in the country.

Education is Dr. Murray's life. He has served on the American Council on Education's Commission on International Education and is a board member of the Commission on Independent Colleges and Universities. His tireless efforts to promote Marist regionally and nationally earned him an award from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education in 1986.

Dr. Murray is a native Californian, but when he came to New York he put his heart and soul into making Poughkeepsie a better place to live. He has served on the boards of the United Way, the American Heart Association, and Vassar Brothers Hospital. He also is a member of the Board of the Bank of New York/Dutchess Division, the Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt Institute, and a director of the McAnn Foundation.

One of his most noteworthy causes has been battling bigotry and promoting fairness to Jewish-Americans through his work with the Anti-Defamation League.

For these and many other solid contributions in education and to his community, the Anti-Defamation League and Poughkeepsie are proud to honor Dr. Murray with this distinguished award.

DEAF AWARENESS

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, last year this body passed legislation commemorating the achievements of hearing impaired individuals and designating the week of March 11 through March 19, 1990, as Deaf Awareness Week. I was honored to be a cosponsor of that legislation, House Joint Resolution 140, and today I am honored to call the attention of the House to the celebration of Deaf Awareness Month in California during the month of May, which starts today.

I might note that we in California may often be late, but we are always more elaborate. Adding a special dimension to this month's celebration is the fact that in the city of Ventura, CA, we will be kicking off the campaign for deaf awareness with a barbecue at Ventura Marina Park, under the auspices of the Tri County Office of the Greater Los Angeles Council on Deafness [GLAD], chaired by Scott Ellison.

Mr. Speaker, it's a little-appreciated fact that 20 million Americans suffer hearing disabilities, and that 1 out of every 10 people in California are hearing impaired. Because deafness is an "invisible" disability, deaf pecple often face barriers which can be alleviated by increased community awareness and understanding. The aim of Deaf Awareness Month is to help remove those barriers through education of the general public and also to take note of the many achievements of hearing impaired individuals and to encourage others to realize their full potential.

Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to take note and participate in the activities of Deaf Awareness Month in Ventura and to extent to hearing impaired people and their families the best wishes of the House of Representatives of the U.S. Congress.

RECOGNITION OF JASON AND SUSIE DITTELMAN

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Jason and Susie Dittelman, of East Greenwich, RI, who have been chosen as the 1990 Small Business Persons of the Year by the East Greenwich Chamber of Commerce. Jason and Susie were selected for their outstanding entrepreneurial spirit as well as for their generous community service.

Jason and Susie First opened their business in 1976. East Greenwich Photo began as a very small business, with Jason and Susie as the only employees. Through their hard work and enthusiasm, Jason and Susie made East Greenwich Photo expand and grow from its humble beginnings into a thriving store with a staff of over 20 employees. They have also expanded their goods and services for their customers over the last 15 years. Jason and Susie now have their own film processing lab and custom frame shop. They also carry a full line of cameras and accessories, VCR's, FAX's, and cellular telephones.

Their entrepreneurial spirit and activities are certainly impressive yet equally impressive are their activities outside of their bussiness. Jason and Susie raised two children during these years and have contributed countless hours to their community. East Greenwich Photo sponsors a Little League team each year. They also donate photo materials to a local camp for their photography classes. Jason serves as a member of the board of directors of the East Greenwich Chamber of Commerce as well as the East Greenwich Rotary Club. Susie does all the photography for the East Greenwich Chamber of Commerce at no charge. Their largest charity is the Rhode Island Special Olympics for whom they do photography for free.

It is with great pleasure that I salute Jason and Susie Dittelman for their outstanding entrepreneurial and civic spirit. Their contributions to their community not only in dollars but also in time and commitment are a tribute to their love of their community. I wish them, their family, and their business continued prosperity in the future.

TO SAVE A WORLD WAR II MEMORIAL

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, today in Miami all eyes can rest upon a beautiful memorial which honors those who bravely served and died in World War II. This memorial, which stands erect in Bayfront Park, acts as a remainder that many residents of the city of Miami paid the ultimate price for our democracy today. Look closely and you can see the pain and sacrifice which built this memorial. As you observe the memorial, you might see the coins collected for it so that our children and grandchildren will remember or sorrowful past of an entire world at war. Look today, because the World War II Memorial might be gone tomorrow.

Recently, an article in the Miami Herald profiled the World War II Memorial in Bayfront Park. The article, written by Howard Kleinberg, detailed the conflict which is surrounding the memorial. Currently, two different proposals to renovate Bayfront Park are under consideration by the Miami City Commission. Although neither proposal includes plans to preserve the memorial, the Miami City Commission should be inspired to rethink the renovation plan proposals. It is my hope that the Miami City Commission will save this integral part of our history. I congratulate the commission for allocating $10,000 toward this purpose.

There is no justification for destroying this important reminder of sacrifice. The memory of numerous young men and women who gallantly gave their lives for us should not be buried amidst the changing face of Miami. The permanent tribute to freedom and democracy through the World War II Memorial should remain eternal.

SPECIAL VOLUNTEERS IN CRIMINAL JUSTICE

HON. GEORGE (BUDDY) DARDEN

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DARDEN. Mr. Speaker, in the State of Georgia the citizens themselves are playing an active role in the criminal justice system. More than 2,000 citizen volunteers devote their free time to assist correctional officers in program for criminal offenders. We are well aware of the problems confronting our courts and prisons; overcrowded dockets and prisons are stretching our resources and our patience.

But in the great spirit of serving and volunteerism, many Georgians are willing to offer their skills, time, and compassion to assist in prison programs. Instead of giving up on those incarcerated, these citizen volunteers are encouraging inmates to not give up, and the volunteers are showing by their example that people do care. This week Gov. Joe Frank Harris will honor selected volunteers for their contributions, and I join the Governor and Department of Corrections Commissioner Bobby Whitworth in expressing my appreciation and respect for the efforts of these volunteers.

This year's honorees are as follows:

Bob Blackwell, Bill Bennett, Ernest Conyers, Joyce Cook, Hub Doyle, Richard Allen Elliott, Sr., Barbara Gifford, Charles Lewis Hood, Michael Irwin, Wray Kessel, Dot Pinkerton, Clarence Braxton "Brock" Pound, Jr., Gene and Kay Shephard, and Benay Tavett.

I commend these individuals for their commitment to volunteerism, and I hope that their example will be an inspiration for the individuals who benefit most from their efforts.

SUPPORT BETTER TRAINING FOR INDUSTRIAL TRUCK OPERATORS

HON. AUSTIN J. MURPHY

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced a concurrent resolution which calls on the Occupational Safety and Health Administration [OSHA] of the Department of Labor to act on an important matter that has been pending before them for far too long. As you may be aware, a petition was filed in March 1988, with OSHA to amend existing Federal regulations requiring training and certification for operators of powered industrial trucks. This petition seeks a clarification of the current regulations by specifically outlining the elements of an adequate training program for operators of these vehicles.

While I laud OSHA for what I hope has been a long and very careful study and analysis of this petition, I must now demand that they finally take action. Both the President and the Secretary of Labor have made better training and education of the American workforce a priority during their tenures in office. This petition provides them with an excellent opportunity to implement their policy goals. Yet, this matter has done nothing but languish in the Department of Labor's bureaucratic maze.

The value of a thorough training program cannot be underestimated. A properly trained employee will contribute to the reduction of job-related accidents and in the end make the workplace safer and more productive for everyone. I believe that my resolution provides benefits both to operators as well as those ultimately charged with the costs of job site accidents.

For these reasons I have introduced this concurrent resolution. I ask that you join with me today and support this measure because ignoring proper work training puts our future at risk.

BIRMINGHAM POST-HERALD RECOGNIZES ALABAMA'S TOP ACADEMIC STUDENTS

HON. BEN ERDREICH

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. ERDREICH. Mr. Speaker, as the United States works to maintain its role as an international leader, there is broad consensus that our educational system is a key to our future. We seek to attain greater excellence in education. One thing we must do is expect more from our students and recognize the achievements our students are attaining. Such an effort is going on in my State of Alabama.

A newspaper in my district, the Birmingham Post-Herald, sponsored a program that recognizes the top-notch high school seniors in Alabama. Students were nominated from seven all-State team districts across the State. Based on their academic and personal achievements, ten students were selected from those outstanding students and named to the 1990 Alabama All-State Academic Team. Judges representing seven education associations selected the top ten students.

The Post-Herald honored the all-State academic team, and the 60 regional winners, at a noon luncheon on Saturday, April 21, 1990. These students have been offered scholarships by Auburn University, Birmingham-Southern College, Jacksonville State University, Samford University, Troy State University, the University of Alabama, the University of Alabama at Birmingham, and the University of South Alabama.

While these are extraordinary students, to be sure, they are also young people who enjoy leisure-time activities, like most teenagers. As noted in the article in the Birmingham Post-Herald written by Michaelle Chapman, "Their top-notch grades and scores on college entrance tests show they are brains, but members of the 1990 Alabama All-State Academic Team do not think of themselves as bookworms. In fact, the 10 high school seniors—an elite group of students chosen for their academic and personal achievements—are involved in all kinds of extracurricular activities and have a long list of very ordinary hobbies."

The seniors named to the 1990 Alabama All-State Academic Team include Claire Elizabeth Cates, Greenville High; Risa Kaufman, Central East High, Tuscaloosa; Sandor Lehoczky, Virgil I. Grissom High, Huntsville; Trace Michelle Lynn, Albertville High; Kenneth F. Ostrom, West Limestone High, Lester; Donna Jane Shaw, Carroll High, Ozark; Shreyas S. Vasanawala, LAMP/Lanier High, Montgomery; Stephen Richard Welford, Theodore High; and Anna Yoo, Auburn High. I have saved the last member of the 1990 Alabama All-State Academic Team for last, because he is from my own district. His name is Anuj K. Dua, a senior at Vestavia Hills High, and all of us in Jefferson County are particularly proud of him and his outstanding academic record.

I would also like to mention the names of all of the students from Jefferson County who were nominated for the all-State academic team. They are all outstanding students, and are most deserving of our highest recognition and praise. They include Erica Battle, Wenonah; Craig Brasher, Mortimer Jordan; Meredith Buchanan, Huffman; Scott Carter, McAdory; Stacey Clark, Leeds; Reginald Clay, Gardendale; Dawn Davis, Bessemer Academy; Sheneen Garland, Shades Mountain Christian; Kimberly Hager, Shades Valley; Callie Hallmark, Warrior; Angie Harris, Holy Family; Raquel Hicks, West End; Kia Holyfield, Parker; Monica Hood, Fairfield; Kevin Hughes, Corner; Gregory Lawson, Oak Grove; Cheyanta Lee, Ensley Magnet; Gerald Marbury, Phillips; Jennifer Mathews, Ramsay Alternative; Jason Morris, John Carroll; Kristy Murray, Fultondale; Denina Parker, Carver; Chad Plumb, West Birmingham Christian; Daniel Reynolds, Jess Lanier; Paul Roberts, Midfield; Steven Shearer, Pleasant Grover; and Richard Ware, Hueytown.

It gives us all great hope when we see young people who realize the value of a good education and its direct effect not only on the outcome of their own future, but also, on the future of our Nation. I commend the Birmingham Post-Herald for recognizing Alabama's high school academic scholars, and congratulate these young people, whom I am certain will all have a bright future indeed.

JOHN BEN SHEPPERD: ATTORNEY GENERAL OF TEXAS

HON. J.J. PICKLE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, on March 8, 1990, Texas lost a leading citizen. The Honorable John Ben Shepperd, former Texas attorney general, secretary of state, political, and civic leader, died at the age of 74 after a battle with cancer.

As John Ben's eulogist, Mr. Glenn Biggs, of San Antonio, said, "If Texas had a royal family, John Ben would be king. He was a royal catalyst bringing about better schools, brighter economic rewards, and cultural enhancement. He was the classic constructor of good."

John Ben's legal, business, and political career spanned the State. He was a native of Gladewater in deep east Texas but lived and worked in the far west Texas oilfield town of Odessa for over 30 years. His interests and projects affected all 254 Texas counties.

He chaired the Texas Historical Survey Committee in the early 1960's and was responsible for the legislation which created local historical commissions throughout the State. John Ben initiated the roadside historical marking program which attracts so much attention along Texas roadsides. He loved history and passionately cared that future generations should understand their roots in order to appreciate the American legacy of democracy and heroism.

John Ben also chaired the Texas Industrial Commission and revamped that agency to work with local chambers of commerce in order to attract industrial diversification at a time when most Texans were convinced oil and cattle would never fail.

His influence was national. He had the ear of Presidents, Governors, and Members of Congress. He first became known from coast to coast for his leadership in the U.S. Jaycees. After organizing his local chapter in Gladewater while still in high school, John Ben went on to serve as president of the Texas organization. In 1947, he was elected national president of what was then known as the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce. He made and nurtured many lasting friendships, political allies, and business associates during his travels as national Jaycees president. He transformed a fledgling social organization for young men into a dynamic, vital group of concerned citizens whose leadership reaches into State legislative chambers, the Supreme Court, and Congress.

John Ben was named one of the Ten Outstanding Young Men of America in 1949 along with former President Gerald Ford. He also served as the president of the National Association of Attorney Generals in 1956.

I first met John Ben when we were both students at the University of Texas in Austin where he attended undergraduate and law school. Our friendship deepened during the heady days of President Lyndon B. Johnson's campaigns. John Ben was a loyal supporter and adviser to the President. His grassroots organizational skills and true affection for every Texas citizen were invaluable.

John Ben's political and people skills could have led him to be Governor of Texas or to a seat in Congress. But after serving two terms as attorney general from 1953 to 1957 he decided to leave public office because he felt he could be more effective in public service as a private citizen. He answered the calls of seven Governors and four U.S. Presidents and devoted his time, energy, and considerable talents to a variety of causes including education, tourism, beautification, and industrial development.

He was never too busy to help a friend or to serve a cause in which he believed. And John Ben's devotion to a cause was not in name only. He wrote thousands of letters, called at all hours of the early morning with brainstorms, held hundreds of meetings and traveled extensively giving speeches to promote his projects.

Texas Gov. William P. Clements, Jr., called John Ben "one of the most committed public servants Texas have ever known." Although John Ben was a lifelong and vocal Democrat, the Governor twice appointed him to the Texas Library and Archives Commission, on which he served at the time of his death.

As an elected official, John Ben's energies and ethical conduct were legendary. He was first appointed to state office by Gov. Allan Shivers in 1950 when he became secretary of state. Two terms as attorney general followed and were spectacularly active. He fought the corruption of south Texas' infamous spoils system, leading to literally hundreds of indictments against Duval County Judge George Parr and other school and county officials. During the Texas Veterans Land scandals of 1955 and 1956, John Ben successfully investigated and prosecuted Land Commissioner Bascom Giles, who spent several years in prison for misusing his public office. It was during Giles' trial that John Ben was threatened with a bullet in the back of the head. John Ben persisted—although with a bodyguard of Texas Rangers.

When John Ben left public office he became general counsel for Odessa Natural Gasoline Co., which evolved into the cornerstone of the West Texas petrochemical industry, El Paso Products Co. For over 30 years, John Ben was spokesman for the industry and for all West Texas entrepreneurs. He organized and served as president of the consortium West Texas Chamber. Under his tenure the Chamber first began hosting the Texas delegation to an annual dinner complete with home-grown beef, Texas trinkets for our spouses, and entertaining sing-alongs of favorite patriotic and spiritual songs.

John Ben was affectionately known as "the General" because he was never afraid to take charge but always encouraged and offered others the opportunity to take credit. He was the founder of many organizations to enhance leadership opportunities for young people. I have already mentioned his involvement in the Jaycees. He was also instrumental in starting the YMCA's Youth in Government Program and continually supported the American Legion's Girls and Boys State. He was a leading adviser in the creation of the Texas Lyceum and the inspiration for the John Ben Shepperd Forum on Public Leadership. He is credited for carrying the political ball for three decades to create and sustain the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa.

John Ben was a thoughtful and creative man. He did more listening than talking. His philosophy was to move ahead. If an idea is worth doing, it was John Ben's approach to do it today, not tomorrow or next year.

To honor John Ben Shepperd is not to honor one great accomplishment, but to honor the perseverance of a lifetime. His life is a blueprint for anyone interested in being a success in public service, whether in or out of political office. He was a man of great political strength because he always placed the interests of the community, the State, and the Nation above personal aggrandisement and conscience above convenience. He is symbolic of the "can-do" spirit of Texas, the visionary who always finds a way to surmount problems.

John Ben loved his family, his friends, his State, and his country. He was an advocate of free enterprise, good government, individual self worth, and democracy.

Mr. Speaker, I have lost one of the best friends I have ever had. Our friendship goes back to early University of Texas days where we first met and we have remained steadfast friends all these years. John Ben and his wife Mamie and a group of dear friends have kept together closely for nearly 50 years, and we cherish every moment of that time.

We will not forget and our State and Nation will not forget the great contributions of this outstanding public servant.

THE ARMENIAN RESOLUTION

HON. FRANK HORTON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. HORTONT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to praise our colleagues in the Senate and here in the House for their prudence in declining to endorse through legislation the allegation that Armenians were victims of a genocide in the Ottoman Empire 75 years ago.

I know that some have seen the Armenian resolution as a symbolic gesture of sensitivity to the suffering 75 year ago of the forebears of Armenian-American citizens. But this resolution, we have come to learn, is not a merely sombolic gesture of sympathy devoid of practical consequences.

We know that citizens of our ally, Turkey, citizens of all walks of life there, regard such a resolution as a gratuitous insult to a country and people that regard themselves with much justification as loyal and steadfast friends of the United States.

Eminent American historians tell us that enactment of such a resolution risks the legislating of faulty history. They have publicly declared and I quote "* * * much more remains to be discovered before historians will be able to precisely sort out responsibility between warring and innocent, and to identify the causes for the events which resulted in the death or removal of large numbers of the eastern Anatolian population, Christian and Muslim alike.

The Congress of the United States ought not to render judgments on controversial historical interpretations of events three generations ago in a remote area of a faraway land that now is one of our most steadfast and reliable allies. We must not allow compassion for descendants of one groups of victims to cause us to mistakenly and unjustly jeopardize relations with one of our most important allies, the Republic of Turkey.

MANY SMALL TOWNS ARE FLOURISHING

HON. MICHAEL G. OXLEY

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, we in Ohio have always been proud of our small town tradition, and I'm proud that two communities in the Fourth Congressional District have earned high ratings in the recently published book, "The Rating Guide to Life in America's Small Cities," by G. Scott Thompson. My hometown, Findley, was first of 15 Ohio micropolitans rated in the book. I am also privileged to represent Sidney, which was ranked 12th.

It is perhaps one of the best-kept secrets that many small towns are flourishing. They are able to develop their economic potential while working to preserve their history. Even in these modern times, the advantages of America's small cities provide what many people want; good schools, low crime rates, reasonable cost of living, abundant recreation and outdoor life, and professional opportunity. The town square is alive and well in my district and in many other areas of Ohio, and I'm grateful to the book's author for highlighting the fact that small cities exemplify much of what is great about America.

WHERE THE BUSH BUDGET TEARS DOWN, THE BUDGET RESOLUTION REBUILDS

HON. MARCY KAPTUR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Concurrent Resolution 310, the budget resolution for fiscal year 1991. I commend Chairman PANETTA for his fine leadership in crafting a budget that protects America's economic integrity and begins to rebuild America for the 21st century.

The budget resolution, unlike the Bush administration budget, provides a 5-year plan to fully balance the budget without relying on the Social Security trust fund to mask the true dimensions of the Federal deficit. The budget plan results in $497 billion in gross deficit reduction and $382 billion in net deficit reduction between 1991 and 1995. Net deficit reduction is greater than that in the President's budget in each year. The budget resolution's plan to operate under a pay-as-you-go system will result in interest rates dropping as the Government reduces borrowing huge sums of money from private domestic and foreign sources to finance its spending. A sufficient pool of capital will be released to the private sector to stimulate investment and advance productivity.

The reordering of priorities within this budget ceiling to invest in technology and the people to apply and advance that technology lays the foundation to rebuild America's economic competitiveness. The budget resolution's "Investments in Economic Competitiveness and Adjustment" initiative invests $2.8 billion more than the President's budget in programs to rebuild the competitiveness of the U.S. economy in cooperation with the private sector. Where the President's budget tears down, the budget resolution rebuilds.

The Federal Government's investment in basic and applied research and development is increased, particularly in new technologies that can be commercially applied—in manufacturing, in medicine and health research, and other industries of the future. Expanded trade and export opportunities for U.S. businesses are supported in this budget. Resources are also targeted to people and communities adjusting to economic dislocation. Education and retraining are emphasized, especially for laid-off and dislocated workers. The Government's commitment to math and science education at the elementary and university levels is deepened with the additional funds contained in this budget.

The budget resolution's investment in people is reflected in the $800 million increase above the baseline for the Job Training Partnership Act, the Community Development Block Grant Program, the Economic Development Administration, the Farmers Home Administration, and vocational education. These funds will be used to rebuild the lives of individuals and communities coping with economic dislocation. The funds will help dislocated workers adjust to the global nature of today's economy and educate a new generation of workers who have the knowledge and skills to further America's leadership in the international marketplace. The Bush budget, in stark contrast provides $2.1 billion less than the budget resolution—$351 million less than the baseline—for these programs. Where the Bush budget tears down, the budget resolution rebuilds:

The budget resolution contains a $300 million increase above the baseline to assist dislocated workers through the Job Training Partnership Act. This increase will assist approximately 170,000 dislocated workers who are stripped of their jobs and do not possess skills that are transferable to another occupation. The Bush budget requests $302 million less than the baseline—and $600 million less than the budget resolution contains—for dislocated workers. Rather than trying to rebuild the lives of dislocated workers so that they can again contribute to society in a productive manner, the President leaves them high and dry.

The budget resolution increases funding for important vocational education programs by $140 million over the baseline. This increase will be used for the Tech Prep Program and will result in the training of thousands of additional technicians. The budget resolution contains $169 million more than the President's budget for vocational education programs.

The budget resolution's investment in individuals is augmented with initiatives that alleviate the domino effect experienced by entire communities when plants or industries shut down or relocate offshore. The $200 million increase above the baseline for the Community Development Block Grant Program will be used to assist communities in finding alternative uses for existing industrial facilities, making infrastructure improvements, and carrying out other economic development projects to create new job bases for low- and middle-income workers. Funding for the Economic Development Administration is increased by $77 million above the baseline to assist communities threatened by sudden and severe economic dislocation. The Budget Committee recognizes the need to provide timely and adequate resources to assist communities such as those affected last year by Hurricane Hugo and the Loma Prieta earthquake. Apparently President Bush thought the Federal Government's response last year was more than sufficient as his budget cuts the Economic Development Administration's budget to $26 million below the baseline. The budget resolution also increases funding for rural development programs so that the Farmers Home Administration can provide grants and loans to communities to improve facilities, expand industrial development, and initiate water and waste disposal programs. Again, the President cuts assistance to needy communities to the tune of $76 million below the baseline for rural development programs.

The budget resolution recognizes the importance of educating tomorrow's work force in the areas of math and science. The resolution increases the National Science Foundation budget by $215 million above the baseline next year and doubles its budget over the next 5 years for investment in basic research and the scientific personnel infrastructure of the Nation. Part of the increase for the National Science Foundation reflects the committee's belief that science engineering education program investments are needed to raise the ability of our population to cope successfully with our new national economic challenges. Funding for Department of Education math and science education programs are also increased in the budget resolution.

The budget resolution recognizes that the Nation's budget and trade deficits are inextricably linked. Although elimination of the budget deficit will lead to a lowering of the trade deficit, the Government must also enforce its trade laws to eliminate other nations' unfair trade practices and create export opportunities for U.S. businesses. The budget resolution enhances export opportunities through a $125 million increase over the baseline for Eximbank's direct loan program and a $125 million increase over the baseline for Eximbank loan guarantees to assist businesses in tapping new markets in central and Eastern Europe. The President's budget makes no special provision for the Eximbank to target funds for the newly emerging democracies in central and Eastern Europe struggling to make the transition to market economies. Although President Bush certainly was eager to see the governments in central and Eastern Europe fall, he has not followed through with initiatives that involve our private sector in rebuilding their fragile economies. Further, the budget resolution contains $7 million above the baseline for the Foreign Commercial Service. Until the United States adequately staffs its foreign embassies in Japan and other important trading nations, domestic industry will be unable to penetrate markets, expand United States exports, and forge new trading relationships.

The budget resolution reflects the committee's belief that national security is synonymous with economic security. It also recognizes the synergy between reliable modern defense technologies and an industrial base that is up to date and technologically innovative. The committee supports research into generic technologies that will ensure defense-preparedness and simultaneously rebuild and strengthen the manufacturing and high-technology industrial base on which our economy depends. The Bush budget continues to pour increases into the military budget but refuses to acknowledge the great potential for commercialization of defense technology.

The budget resolution provides $281 million more than the President's budget in Function 050 for Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency [DARPA], including $100 million for SEMATECH, the collaborative semiconductor research and development initiative, $25 million for the National Center for Manufacturing Sciences, and a $20 million increase for high resolution information systems research. As the threat to our national defense lessens, it is imperative that the Department of Defense invest in dual use technologies. Investing now in dual use technologies will ease the economic dislocation that will be the inevitable result of downsizing the defense budget. The administration's defense budget request, coupled with the recent decision to remove Craig Fields as the Director of DARPA, illustrates the President's inability to envision a new world outlook which emphasizes economic, rather than military, competitiveness.

The budget resolution also invests in technology development and transfer programs that are administered outside of the Defense Department. The resolution contains $76 million above the baseline, $51 million more than the President's budget, for the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The Advanced Technology Program, within the National Institute of Standards and Technology, will receive an increase of $37 million above the baseline. An additional $2 million is provided for the Technology Extension Service, a program the President proposed to eliminate. The Technology Extension Service will give businesses access to a cooperative Federal-State network of information which will allow efficient dissemination of technology. The resolution also contains $11 million beyond the baseline for research support centers. Each region of the Nation will ultimately have a resource center for technology tailored to meet the needs of the industries operating within it. In addition to these increases, the budget resolution provides $75 million in loan guarantees so that the Small Business Administration can target technology development loans to small businesses.

Where the Bush budget tears down the manufacturing base of our Nation, ignores the plight of displaced workers and struggling communities, and fails to shift its emphasis from military expenditures to economic security, the budget resolution invests in initiatives to rebuild America. The resolution's "Investments in Economic Competitiveness and Adjustment" initiative lays out a path for America to follow to invest in people and technology in order to regain America's economic sovereignty and meet the challenges of the 21st century.

THE SECRET DISCHARGE PETITION

HON. NEWT GINGRICH

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, this editorial appeared in the Wall Street Journal last Wednesday. I feel this editorial is well worth my colleague's time as it correctly portrays how we as Members unfairly protect ourselves by keeping the discharge petition a secret.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Apr. 25, 1990]

HOUSE GAG RULE

The same congressional leaders who in the name of open government demand more and more access to executive-branch documents—even including Ronald Reagan's personal diaries—are the protectors of a secret list that prevents the American people from knowing where their representatives really stand. A lone Member has now decided to risk the anger of the House leadership by ripping away the veil of secrecy.

In the 1950s and 1960s, autocratic House committee chairmen routinely bottled up civil-rights bills and refused to let them come to a floor vote. Today, popular bills ranging from amendments to balance the budget and ban flag desecration are routinely buried in committee because the liberal House leadership opposes them and wants to avoid votes that could be used against incumbents.

There is only one real way a majority of Members can bring legislation to the House floor if it is blocked in committee: They must produce a discharge petition. If 218 Members—a House majority—sign a discharge petition, the relevant committee must either vote out the bill or agree to a floor vote. However, only 19 of 347 discharge petitions have succeeded.

This is because the list of Members who have signed a petition is kept secret—until the required 218 sign. Only Members can view the list, and then only briefly to make certain their name is on it.

They must first go to the Clerk's desk in the House chamber. They are handed a statement signed by the Clerk and Speaker informing them that disclosing the names of signers, or the number of names, is "strictly prohibited under the precedents of the House." The sole precedent is an arbitrary 1931 prohibition by Speaker John Nance Garner that was never made part of official House rules.

This restriction has made it easy for Speakers to squash discharge petitions. Whenever the list comes close to 218 names, the Speaker routinely pressures Members to drop off. The list's secrecy allows them to conceal their timidity from the voters.

Rep. Chuck Douglas, a former New Hampshire Supreme Court Justice, says the petition's secrecy is in direct conflict with honest and open government. "This covert list allows Members the best of two political worlds," he told us. "They can publicly support a measure, like protecting the flag, while quietly withholding their names from the petition that would accomplish that."

He notes that during last year's popular effort to repeal Section 89 of the tax code, 309 of the 435 House Members signed on to a repeal bill, but less than half that number signed the discharge petition, largely to avoid angering House leaders.

Mr. Douglas has decided to break up this cozy protection for hypocrites. He has just filed a discharge petition to force a vote on his amendment to ban flag desecration. While he is obliged to not reveal the names of signers, he has announced he will disclose the names of any Members who claim to have signed the petition but did not actually do so.

He plans to do the same with a second discharge petition to force a vote on a balanced-budget amendment. It has 246 cosponsors, but Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks refuses to release it. Rep. Douglas expects a lot of pressure from his colleagues to back down, but he has no intention of budging.

The secret discharge petition is only the latest example of how House Rules—or in this case merely a precedent—are used to shield Members from accountability. We tried to request documents on the history of the discharge petition's secrecy by using the Freedom of Information Act, but were informed that Congress has exempted itself from that law as well.

TRIBUTE TO THE BAR ASSOCIATION OF METROPOLITAN ST. LOUIS

HON. JACK BUECHNER

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. BUECHNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in tribute to an organization whose purpose is to safeguard the legal system that our forefathers worked so hard to develop. On May 4, 1990, the Bar Association of Metropolitan St. Louis will celebrate Law Day and will inaugurate its new officers. I am pleased to have this opportunity to salute this outstanding organization of which I am proud to be a member.

One of the most vital principles in the practice of law was dramatically reminded to me in the movie "The Verdict". Paul Newman, who plays an attorney partially disillusioned with the law, tells us that "the courts do not represent justice * * * they represent the chance at justice." In that simple statement, Newman expresses, quite poignantly, the importance of attorneys to our system of justice. Justice does not spontaneously happen; the best of laws is meaningless by itself. The American legal system is only as good or as bad, as effective or as ineffective, and as pure or as corrupt as the men and women who comprise it. Thus we see the importance of organizations like the Bar Association of Metropolitan St. Louis whose primary purpose is to ensure the quality of that system and guarantee to everyone that "chance at justice."

Evidence of this commitment is the bar association's "Justice for All" program which seeks to provide the chance for justice to those who might not otherwise be able to afford legal representation. Under this program, the largest law firms in St. Louis volunteer attorneys for pro-bono work for a certain number of hours per week. Although these firms could quite easily direct these efforts toward more lucrative pursuits, the membership of the bar association recognizes the fact that everyone has a right to qualified advocacy when it is needed.

Probably the most admirable aspect of this program, however, is its recognition of the fact that the greatest defense against inequities are people who have the courage to try to make a change on a personal level. Inasmuch as I feel that such altruism and community-mindedness merit commendation, I have nominated the "Justice for All" Program for one of President Bush's "Point of Light Awards" which have been established to recognize exactly such initiatives. Due to a backlog of nominations, no decision has yet been reached on this nomination; however I am confident that the Bush administration will recognize the value of this initiative and mark it as an example for other cities and bar associations to follow. Quoting President Bush himself in a statement last February, "This program illustrates a growing awareness of the fact that any definition of a successful life—in particlar, a successful professional career—must include service to others. The program shows how we * * * can use our skills and resources to help needy members of our communities."

Mr. Speaker, there are many attributes of the St. Louis bar which are to be commended; the above is but one. As a former active member, I know that the metropolitan bar and its membership will continue to work for the betterment of the legal system which they serve. On the occasion of "Law Day 1990," I ask this assembly to join me in saluting the Bar Association of Metropolitan St. Louis for its efforts to provide justice for all.

REGISTERED NURSES AT STATEVILLE CORRECTIONAL CENTER

HON. GEORGE E. SANGMEISTER

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. SANGMEISTER. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to salute the work of the registered nurses at the Stateville Correctional Center in Joliet, IL. These individuals provide high-quality nursing care to about 3,000 inmates and staff at the maximum security adult penitentiary. I am impressed by the professionalism which these nurses demonstrate in working under circumstances and conditions which at times may be extremely unfavorable.

I would like to submit to the RECORD a list of the names of the nursing staff at the Stateville Correctional Center.

Deng Baronia, Mary Beth Engel, Armella Frankowski, Sue Gurley, Laura Healy, Mary Ann Korwin, Jan Leibold, Michelle McGann, Barbara Miller, Mary Patterson, Karen Stanford, and Nancy Zlogar.

I know my colleagues will want to join me in congratulating this outstanding group of professionals for their compassion and dedication to the care of others.

TRAUMA CENTERS: A NECESSARY PARTNER IN THE WAR ON DRUGS

HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to introduce H.R. 4701, the Trauma-Care Center Revitalization Act of 1990. The purpose of the act is to help stop the closure of trauma centers due to increases in drug related violence.

Trauma centers—like their MASH predecessors in the Korean and Vietnam wars—are on the front lines of the drug war. The violence of the illicit drug culture is increasing. The number of trauma patients suffering penetrating trauma—generally gun and knife wounds—is also increasing. The responsibility for providing medical care to these patients, including many law enforcement officers, falls on the Nation's trauma-care centers.

In recent years trauma centers have experienced an increase in uncompensated medical costs because a growing number of patients injured by the drug war are unable to pay for care. As a result, many trauma centers have been placed in financial jeopardy. Many private hospitals have withdrawn from trauma center systems. Many public hospitals—particularly those accepting increasing numbers of trauma patients after the withdrawal of private hospitals—are approaching a stage of medical collapse.

Indeed, in the past 2 years, trauma centers have closed in Chicago, Miami, Philadelphia, Houston, and Los Angeles.

While the President's National Drug Strategy did not address the important role trauma centers play in the drug war, it is a simple fact that drug-related violence is a major factor in the decline of trauma care nationwide.

The closing of trauma centers is a serious threat to any community. When a trauma center closes, its lifesaving services are denied to all patients. Victims include law enforcement officers wounded in the line of duty. They include the thousands injured in automobile accidents—a risk each of us, our families and constituents face daily.

Mr. Speaker, if we are to effectively wage a war on drugs, we dare not allow the Nation's trauma-care system to fail.

Hearings on H.R. 4701 will be held by the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment on Friday, May 4, 1990.

Mr. Speaker, funding for this program should be made a part of the fiscal year 1991 National Drug Abuse Control appropriation.

I submit a copy of H.R. 4701 to be printed in the RECORD at this point.

H.R. 4701

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Trauma-Care Center Revitalization Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM OF GRANTS.

Subpart I part D of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254b et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 330A. GRANTS WITH RESPECT TO UNCOMPENSATED COSTS OF TRAUMA-CARE CENTERS OPERATING IN AREAS SEVERELY IMPACTED BY DRUG-RELATED VIOLENCE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants for the purpose of providing financial assistance for the operating expenses of trauma-care centers that have incurred substantial uncompensated costs in providing trauma care in geographic areas with a significant incidence of violence arising from the abuse of drugs. Grants under this subsection may be made only to such trauma-care centers.

"(b) MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS OF TRAUMA-CARE CENTERS.—

"(1) SIGNIFICANT INCIDENCE OF TREATING PENETRATION WOUNDS.—

"(A) The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) to a trauma-care center unless the population of patients that has been served by the center for the period specified in subparagraph (B) includes a significant number of patients who were treated for wounds resulting from the penetration of the skin by knives, bullets, or other weapons.

"(B) The period specified in this subparagraph is the 2-year period preceding the fiscal year for which the trauma-care center involved is applying to receive a grant under subsection (a).

"(2) PARTICIPATION IN TRAUMA-CARE SYSTEM SUBJECT TO CERTAIN PROFESSIONAL GUIDELINES.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless—

"(A) the trauma-care center involved is located in a State or political subdivision that—"(i) has established a system for providing comprehensive medical care to victims of trauma in the geographic area involved; and

"(ii) has adopted guidelines for the designation of trauma-care centers, and for triage, transfer, and transportation policies, equivalent to (or more protective than) the applicable guidelines developed by the American College of Surgeons and by the American College of Emergency Physicians; and

"(B) the trauma-care center is a participant in the system.

"(c) PRIORITIES IN MAKING GRANTS.—In making grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to any application made by a trauma-care center that—

"(1) for the purpose specified in subsection (a), will receive financial assistance from the State or political subdivision involved for each fiscal year during which payments are made to the center from the grant, which financial assistance is exclusive of such assistance provided under any Federal program requiring non-Federal contributions; or

"(2) with respect to the trauma-care system described in subsection (b)(2)(A)—

"(A) is providing trauma care in a geographic area in which the availability of trauma care has significantly decreased as a result of a trauma-care center in the area permanently ceasing participation in the system as of a date occurring during the period specified in subsection (b)(1)(B); or

"(B) will, in providing trauma care during the 1-year period beginning on the date on which the application for the grant is submitted, incur uncompensated costs in an amount rendering the center unable to participate in the system, resulting in a significant decrease in the availability of trauma care in the geographic area.

"(d) COMMITMENT REGARDING CONTINUED PARTICIPATION IN TRAUMA-CARE SYSTEM.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless the trauma-care center involved agrees that—

"(1) with respect to the trauma-care system described in subsection (b)(2)(A), the center will continue participation in the system throughout the 3-year period beginning on the date that the center first receives assistance under the grant; and

"(2) if the agreement made pursuant to paragraph (1) is violated by the center, the center will be liable to the United States for an amount equal to the sum of—

"(A) the amount of assistance provided to the center pursuant to subsection (a); and

"(B) an amount representing interest on the amount specified in subparagraph (A).

"(e) APPLICATION.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless an application for the grant is submitted to the Secretary and the application is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out such subsection.

"(f) LIMITATION ON DURATION OF SUPPORT.—The period during which a trauma-care center receives payments under subsection (a) may not exceed 3 fiscal years, except that the Secretary may waive such requirement for the center and authorize the center to receive such payments for 1 additional fiscal year.

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $200,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $300,000,000 for fiscal year 1993."

THE SENSITIVE WRITING OF DAN CARPENTER

HON. ANDREW JACOBS, JR.

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, I place in the RECORD Dan Carpenter's April 12 Indianapolis Star column.

It is typical of his sensitive writing. And it speaks for almost all of us.

HIS DAYS WERE NUMBERED; HIS FRIENDS WERE COUNTLESS

The sky against the awesome spires of Second Presbyterian Church was bright blue at 8:30 Wednesday morning, but the wind was nasty and the worst was yet to come.

"I should have worn two pairs of socks," Nancy Fleek lamented, doing an involuntary impression of the Michael Jackson moonwalk in her spring sandals.

Already, she and her friend Charlene Wiley had been on the go for two hours. They'd caught the bus from their neighborhood on the Eastside and barely made the Downtown transfer to this Northside palace of worship where Ryan White would be sent to his rest.

"He would have laughed," Charlene said, "to see two girls running after the Metro bus to get here."

She spoke as if she knew him personally, through she had never met the frail teenager with the mirthful features who became an international champion for AIDS patients.

"In God's way, I think we're all his brothers and sisters," she said. And it wasn't just a ceremonial cliche; it was real familiarity, and so many others among the hundreds who came to say goodbye seemed to feel it was well.

"We've been with him ever since he first found out he had AIDS," Nancy Fleek said. "He had such courage in keeping up the fight. He didn't dwell on death. Anybody who can do that is real special."

Nancy shares a birthday with Ryan—Dec. 6. She plays Nintendo, as he did. She considers herself his friend, like thousands of others who knew him only through television, newspapers or letters.

Like Jay Jackson, just a few months older than Ryan at 19, who drove all night from Chattanooga, Tenn., to see him Wednesday for the first time after writing him for many months.

Like white-haired Noma Goodman, who clutched a reporter's arm and said, "Ever since he got sick, the first thing I'd do was pick up the paper and see how he was doing."

Like Eric Lewis and Beth Lindsay, who stood in line for the morning visitation, clutching roses and fighting back tears.

"He was such an inspiration," Lewis said. "I think he opened a lot of minds."

For some, the unmet friend did more than that.

Andy Wall and Philip Hinds arrived at Second Presbyterian Church with family members and friends, wearing buttons calling for tolerance for AIDS patients. They know AIDS firsthand.

"When I was first diagnosed, my doctor said to look around for inspiration," Wall said. "I did, and I saw Ryan."

Wall is 24 and was diagnosed in 1988. Hinds is 23 and was diagnosed in 1986. They have been friends since third grade. They get depressed. They have suffered bigotry. They wonder if some of the celebrities who drew a horde of photographers to Indianapolis really care about Ryan White or his anonymous survivors, those who live with an incurable and despised illness.

"Ryan has helped a lot," said Hinds, thin and pale in his black overcoat. "I don't think we'll find someone to carry his torch."

The early arrivals, the friends who came before Michael Jackson and Barbara Bush and most of the news media, got to see Ryan, decked out in denim jacket and mirror sunglasses under a soaring stained-glass image of the risen Christ.

But the afternoon funeral, unlike the morning visitation, filled the vast church quickly, leaving hundreds in the cold and intermittent rain with the waiting limousines, deprived of the chilling choir music and Elton John's simple song of tribute at the piano.

Nancy Fleek and Charlene Wiley, just about the earliest arrivals, failed to beat the rock concert-style crush at the church door and ended up soaked after all those hours.

"I almost got in," Nancy said matter-of-factly. "But I got shoved out. It could have been better-organized."

She was still doing dance steps, this time trying to see who was in which departing car.

"Michael and Jeanne are in the first limo behind the hearse," Charlene told her excitedly.

"You can't see a thing through that tinted glass," Nancy said.

Oh, Lord, Was it truly Michael Jackson, superstar, and Jeanne White, Ryan's mother, friends among friends?

U.N. MEMBERSHIP FOR LITHUANIA

HON. WM. S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, this morning during the 1-minutes I suggested that the United States should advocate and support the inclusion of Lithuania in the United Nations. The United Nations already includes two Soviet republics among its members, Byelorussia and the Ukraine. Including Lithuania as a full member would be totally consistent with the existing situation and difficult for the Soviet Union to argue against.

Doing this would allow the Soviet Union and the Government of Lithuania ample time to negotiate Lithuania's eventual secession, while giving Lithuania its own independent voice in the international community. U.N. membership would fulfill Lithuania's long cherished desire to speak for itself and could open the door to a peaceful transition out of the Soviet Union.

In an effort to flesh out this proposal, I would like to include the following information on the U.N. membership process. This material is taken from "Charter of the United Nations: Commentary and Documents" by Leland Goodrich, Edward Hambro, and Anne Patricia Simons (1969).

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Process of Admission: The Roles of the Security Council and General Assembly

In requiring that an applicant for membership in the United Nations must be approved by both the General Assembly and the Security Council, the Charter departs from the League Covenant, under which admission of new members was a function of the Assembly alone. At San Francisco, there was considerable support for continuing the League system. On the other hand, it was emphasized that the primary purpose of the Charter was "to provide security against a repetition" of World War II, and that therefore "the Security Council should assume the initial responsibility of suggesting new participating states."

An application for membership is submitted to the Secretary-General and must contain "in a formal instrument" a declaration accepting the obligations contained in the Charter. In accordance with the Provisional Rules of Procedure of the Council, the letter of application is placed upon the provisional agenda and the Council decides whether or not to consider it. The Rules state that, unless the Council decides otherwise, the application is to be referred to the Committee on the Admission of New Members, a body composed of all the members of the Council. The Committee is charged with examining the applications and reporting to the Council thereon. It may, if it so desires, require information from the applicants. For several years, applications have been discussed directly by the Council without reference to Committee.

After the members of the Council and invited members (if any) have expressed their views, the Council customarily proceeds to vote upon a simple draft resolution stating that the Council has "examined the application" and "recommends to the General Assembly" that the applicant "be admitted to membership in the United Nations." The concurring votes of the permanent members of the Council are required for the adoption of the resolution. If the application is approved, the Council's recommendation, together with a "complete record of the discussion," is forwarded to the Assembly. If the Council does not recommend the applicant for admission, or if it postpones consideration of the application, it is required to submit a "special report" to the Assembly, together with a complete record of the discussion. Under this rule, the Council is required to make its recommendations well in advance of an Assembly session. It is not always possible for the Council to do so, since its actions are to some extent dependent upon the timing of the submission of applications. Generally, when an application has been received after an Assembly session has started, the Council has considered the application, and has submitted its recommendation to the Assembly as quickly as possible.

During the first ten years a large number of applications failed to receive the necessary majority support in the Security Council or the necessary unanimous support of the permanent members. The situation was seriously aggravated by the position that the Soviet Union adopted in making its support of certain applications conditional upon the "simultaneous" admission of candidates that had Soviet, but not Western, backing.

The search for ways to end the deadlock that developed over admission of new members took various forms. Efforts were made to minimize or circumvent the role of the Security Council. Australia introduced suggestions in both the Council and the General Assembly emphasizing the primary and final responsibility of the Assembly on membership questions. Australia had played a leading part in the efforts at San Francisco to restrict the Council's role by proposing that the Council be associated with the process only in the case of the admission of ex-enemy states, but was not more successful in the United Nations than at San Francisco in securing acceptances of its suggestions.

Argentina put forward an even more radical thesis concerning the process of admission. While conceding that the Charter gives the Council the power to recommend admission of new members, the Argentine position was that the Assembly should proceed to decide on applications regardless of the Council's action. When asked by the Assembly for an advisory opinion on this matter, the International Court rejected this interpretation:

"The admission of a State to membership in the United Nations, pursuant to paragraph 2 of Article 4 of the Charter, cannot be effected by a decision of the General Assembly when the Security Council has made no recommendation for admission by reason of the candidate failing to obtain the requisite majority or of the negative vote of a permanent Member upon a resolution so to recommend."

The second line of attack was against the use of the veto in the Security Council on membership questions. Apprehension about the use of the veto in this connection had been voiced at the San Francisco Conference. Some Council members have contended that the veto should not be considered applicable to the admission of new members, and the Assembly itself has recommended that the decision should be made by any seven members of the Council. These efforts were unsuccessful, as were the Assembly's related efforts to put pressure on the Security Council by adopting various resolutions concerning those applications that had failed, for one reason or another, to get approval by the Council.

In these resolutions the General Assembly adopted several different approaches: it requested the Council to reexamine pending applications and, in the cases of those applicants barred because of the Soviet veto, it adopted resolutions declaring that in the Assembly's judgment they fully met the conditions set forth in Article 4(1), and should therefore be admitted to membership. On two occasions, as mentioned, the Assembly sought the advice of the International Court. Subsequently, it established a "special" committee to make a detailed study of the question.

With the failure of attemts to put pressure on the Council, efforts were made to find some acceptable compromise solution. The Assembly itself established a "committee of good offices" to consult with the members of the Council with the object of "exploring the possibilities of reaching an understanding which might facilitate the admission of new members." Finally, at the tenth session of the Assembly in 1955, agreement was reached on the "simultaneous admission" of applicants with Soviet and Western backing.

TRIBUTE TO ORLANDO G. MARTINEZ

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to stand before my colleagues today and call their attention to an exceptional individual in my congressional district. Orlando G Martinez, who emigrated from Cuba in 1960, has been selected as chairman of the Hispanic Council. With a long list of community service achievements, it is no wonder that Mr. Martinez is so deserving of this position.

Orlando Martinez led the successful 1989 Festival of Americas as its committee chairman. He has been on the Hispanic Heritage Council since 1986 serving on several committees, as well as a standing officer. His driving spirit and poise brought about a thriving Festival of the Americas.

Mr. Martinez' goals are reflected in the continued emphasis on growth of such programs as the Discovery of America Day at Bayfront Park in Miami, FL. Mr. Martinez also assists the council as a liaison to the Quincentennial Committee for the 1992 celebration of Columbus' discovery of the New World.

Throughout his career, Mr. Martinez has been active in civic affairs, including the Kiwanis Club of Miami Latin, the Latin Chamber of Commerce, the World Safety Organization, the Advisory Committee of the Florida Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles, and the Central Florida Safety Council.

Congratulations to an active and caring citizen, Mr. Orlando Martinez.

A TRIBUTE TO ROBERT M. PHELPS

HON. NORMAN F. LENT

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, as students who must wend our way through the system of formal education, there is usually one teacher who stands out as having made a meaningful difference in our lives. Mr. Robert Phelps, a teacher with the Bellmore-Merrick school system for over 38 years, is just such a teacher. On May 29, his colleagues in the school district and the members of the community will recognize his outstanding contributions to the field of education with a special dinner in his honor.

This is a genuine outpouring of appreciation for his many years of dedicated service to the young people of the Bellmore-Merrick community. With that in mind, I'd like to take a moment to add my own words of thanks for his commitment to excellence in education and personal involvement in the lives of his students.

Mr. Phelps has been a physical education teacher with the school district since 1953. Working with the students in a variety of sports activities, he has a unique opportunity to instill the highly valued principles that build good character and good citizens.

Competitive sports teaches children some important lessons, such as how each individual contributes to the team's success, to have courage and confidence in one's abilities, the desire to do one's utmost best. Graciousness in victory and determination despite defeat are the essence of good sportsmanship. All these lessons stand young people in good stead throughout their lives and enable them to become leaders in their communities.

Mr. Phelps has also been actively involved in promoting countless school and community service programs. For his tireless efforts and selfless donation of time and energy, he was recently presented the Parent-Teachers' Association [PTA] Founders Day award.

Clearly, throughout his career, Mr. Phelps has touched the lives of many, providing inspiration, and serving as mentor and friend. And, although he is now retiring, I imagine that Mr. Phelps will remain a vital force throughout the Bellmore-Merrick community. I join with his colleagues and friends in wishing him much happiness and offering my sincere thanks for his contributions to education and the welfare of Bellmore-Merrick's citizens.

VICTIMS OF CHILD ABUSE ACT OF 1990

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the victims of child abuse bill of 1990. My legislation will help provide better protection for America's abused children.

With court dockets bursting with child abuse cases, and the number of children reported abused up 200 percent in the last decade and climbing, it is urgent that the United States find better ways to provide adequate protection for our children in the justice system.

Today, unfortunately, the criminal justice system too often fails to provide the support and protection necessary, and refuses to recognize the special needs of children. Too frequently, the child is revictimized by the trial itself.

My legislation strikes a careful balance between a defendant's rights and a child victim's needs.

The legislation is based on two central principles that underpin the child abuse court protection debate.

First, that children do indeed have special needs as victim witnesses. Only basic changes in our court systems can address those needs. Those changes should be codified in a child victims' bill of rights, which comprises a significant portion of my legislation.

Second, that there is a lot of good, innovative training being done across the country, but there just aren't enough resources to train all of the judges, prosecutors, and social workers adequately. For example, one reputable study found that from 1985–87, in a cross-section of States, there was a 55-percent increase in reported abuse cases, but only a 2-percent boost in resources to deal with them.

To meet this gap, my bill proposes a carefully targeted $30 million increase in spending to better prepare all court and other personnel involved in investigating and prosecuting abuse cases.

Other critical provisions in the victims of child abuse bill include:

Establish grants to fund multidisciplinary programs. Multidisciplinary programs bring together local law enforcement, criminal, justice, social service, health and other agencies to coordinate child abuse investigation, prosecution, treatment, and counseling services. By conducting joint interviews at a central site, such teams often spare the child the trauma of retelling the abuse story. My own district, Santa Monica, currently has one of the most successful sites of this kind in the Nation. Stuart House which should serve as a model for the rest of the country.

Guardian ad litem. Guarantee children the right to have a guardian appointed by the court to protect the best interest of the child.

Two-Way closed circuit TV. Under the appropriate circumstances, children should be allowed to testify from a separate room than the defendant, encouraging greater reliability in their testimony. To protect both the child and the defendant's presumption of innocence, an order for two-way testimony should only be allowed when the child's ability to testify or expected trauma can be linked directly to the behavior and presence of the defendant.

Videotaped deposition. Like President Reagan, children, should be allowed to give their testimony—in a normal court setting—in advance of the trial and have it recorded for later use.

Age appropriate questions. With a child witness, the court should take special care to protect the witness from harassment—such as the unnecessary repetition of questions—and ensure that questions are stated in a form which is appropriate to the age of the witness.

Competency. Children should be presumed to be competent witnesses—as they currently are under Federal law—and their age alone should not be considered a compelling reason to hold a hearing to judge their competency.

Courtroom closure. If the court determines that a child would suffer serious pyschological harm or an inability to communicate from testifying in an open courtroom, the court should exclude everyone from the room, including the media, who do not have a direct interest in the case.

As a package, these proposals are an important first step down the road to meaningful reform of our criminal justice system.

It is only in recent history that we have begun to take the charges of abused children seriously; we must continue that process and build-in more flexibility for the system to respond to the unique needs of our children.

We must make sure the justice system isn't stacked against our kids from the start, that through the trial, they do not become victims once again. Once again, I urge my colleagues to support this critical legislation.

CONGRESSWOMAN HELEN DELICH BENTLEY HONORS CLARISSE B. MECHANIC

HON. HELEN DELICH BENTLEY

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, May 2, 1990, I will have the honor and privilege to attend a testimonial dinner for Mrs. Clarisse Mechanic. A longtime friend of mine, I have come to know Clarisse Mechanic is a lady of high ideals and uncompromising integrity.

The long list of achievements and activities to which Clarisse Mechanic has selflessly given are so numerous that we should all be envious. As manager of the Blue Barron Orchestra, Mrs. Mechanic was active in scheduling Army and Navy hospitals, embarkations, USO's, war bond drives, and a variety of other charitable organizations. Later as president of the Ford's Theater in Baltimore, she worked to establish a place of permanent residence for the fine arts in Baltimore. Currently, Mrs. Mechanic is involved with the Charles Center Theater Complex which houses the Morris A. Mechanic Theater and continues to enrich the lives of Marylanders through the fine arts.

Perhaps one of her proudest achievements was the contribution of the Morris A. Mechanic Maternity Floor to the Johns Hopkins Hospital. However, her community involvement doesn't stop there.

As a member of the executive board for the Boy Scouts of America and Girl Scouts of America–Baltimore Chapter, Mrs. Mechanic has taken a vested interest in the young people of Baltimore. Clarisse is also chairperson, Fund Raising Project for the American Cancer Society, director, International Board of Children to Children's Hospital, advisory chairperson for Cystic Fibrosis, and chairperson of the Benefit Advisory Committee for Sheppard Pratt Hospital to name only a few. Mrs. Mechanic also has the distinction of being the first woman member of the Advertising Club of Baltimore. Indeed, it is literally impossible to list the number of organizations and charities to which Mrs. Mechanic devotes her time and energy.

I know of very few persons, who have given so much of themselves to benefit others. For this reason it is with great respect and admiration that I commend Clarisse on her outstanding sense of civic responsibility and awareness.

Through her hard work and dedication, Mrs. Mechanic has not only made Baltimore a better community, but she has made this a better Nation as well. Clarisse Mechanic is truly a remarkable person and always shall serve as an example for others to follow. At the end of each and every day we all should ask ourselves what we did to benefit another person. Whether it be a simple smile and hello to a passerby or as demanding as working with a charity to bring hope and compassion to the less fortunate, we should all end our day with the question of what we did today to make the world a bit better for someone else. Clarisse Mechanic personifies this belief as she clearly is someone who recognizes the beneficial impact that one person can have on others.

Unfortunately, every day we focus our attention upon the misdeeds of a few. Yet, rarely do we hear of the hard work and dedication of those who have recognized their potential worth to society. If everyone tried to do a good deed daily as the Boy Scouts emphasize, and the recipient of that good deed returns that good deed with one of their own, then possibilities of spreading good will become limitless. It is far too easy to become cynical, but the optimistic and spirited must fight a growing battle against apathy and pessimism.

Mr. Speaker, my fellow colleagues, it is with great admiration that I commend Mrs. Clarisse Mechanic for her commitment and devotion to her community, her fellow man, and her Nation. Her fortitude of character and selfless devotion is truly remarkable.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR NELL CODDING—APRIL 26, 1990

HON. DOUGLAS H. BOSCO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. BOSCO. Mr. Speaker, this week the spacecraft Discovery launched into outer space a giant telescope that will give us a view of our world and the reaches beyond that we've never seen before. Far above the limits and limitations of our atmosphere, it will vastly increase our vision, expand our horizons, enrich our minds and our lives.

There are people who do this same thing. Who rise above the limits that confine most of us and whose vision expands the lives of all. Today we commemorate the life of one of these extraordinary people—a person whose life shaped our lives, whose spirit helped mold the community she loved.

I last saw Nell in her hospital room. Her eyes were bright and clear and her wit as sharp as ever. While I've always known better than to say anything about her smoking, I did express surprise that she had successfully smuggled a pack into a hospital room and warned her about getting too close to the oxygen machine. A sluff of the hand told me a Member of Congress would have no more chance of affecting her thinking on the subject than a school child.

Only a few weeks before, Nell had held forth in true style at her splendid new home in Palm Springs. Friends came from near and far, people she and Hugh hadn't seen for years, friends from Nevada, Eureka, Santa Rosa. This was a spectacular, happy event for Nell, and she was in rare form. She was surrounded by many of the people she loved—her employees, her business associates, her friends, her family, her husband. And amidst the sparkle, and the glamor and the drinks of course the stories. Nell and Hugh the storytellers. Moving effortlessly through time and events—some of the stories heard before but told so well you could hear them a thousand times again.

Nell held court at a small table in the corner. I've noticed that she always liked tables, especially the luncheon table. This was her domain. This is where she met with her friends and cronies—this is where the stories were told.

Now we are deep in the jungles of India with Nell and Hugh in a tree—a stalking Bengal tiger a few inches below Nell's dangling feet. Now we are building a church from bare land to steeple—all in one day, with enough time left for a late afternoon wedding. Now we are secretly tunneling under Farmers Lane at night to connect a whole subdivision to the city sewer line.

Those were not the days of safari tourmobiles and impeccable tourists crossing the Masi Mara plain in air-conditioned comfort. Those were the days of white-knuckle, single engine flights into remote jungle airstrips. The days of machetes and tents, of real guns, real animals, real danger.

Nor was the Codding's half of Santa Rosa built with EIS's and EIR's and general plans and specific area studies. These houses went up fast and they went up affordable and real people raised real families in them and still do.

These were the days stories were made of, and those stories are what Nell was made of. They were earned stories, stories of business and intrigue and adventure. Like a kid at the soda fountain with a milkshake—our straws will be dipped into those stories and we'll draw on them deeply, each in our own lives, for years to come.

While Nell's skill as a businesswoman is legendary, she was above all a woman of abiding grace, "never say no," generosity, and unmatchable wit. While much has been made over the years on how Hugh differed from Nell and what each contributed to their material success—to me they seemed cast of the same mold—and as Nell so well put it were "one hell of a team." Romantics, risk-takers and doers, they entertained each other throughout life. Nell said, "Hugh is the most entertaining man I have ever known." One can only marvel at the ability to accomplish so much for so long as a team and still ceaselessly entertain each other.

Nell was a builder. She built homes, offices, shopping centers. And builder of people, too. She took people under her wing—often young women who would relish her asides, her quick and accurate ability to size up people and events. She adored her grandchildren Tara, Lisa, and Lois. She loved her employees and felt it was they who made her and not the other way around. She was inseparable from her dear friend, Judy Allen, who helped make her last weeks the joyful, friend-filled ones that they were. To these people and to David and Nell's sisters Edna and Molly, we share your grief and pray for you during this time of grief. And to Hugh—an entire community, one you helped so much to build—opens its heart and its arms.

Everyone who loves our Redwood Empire knows that the small communities that dot our coast and inland valleys each has a heart and soul. Created by the truly great builders who have gone before. I have had the privilege to know some of these people. Bill Grader the fisherman, Spud McNamara the lumberman, Jack Shea the lawyer, Nell Codding the businesswoman. Their passage marks our passage. Their spirit becomes our spirit. Yesterday the mothership Discovery parted with her precious cargo and each took a separate course in space. And so it is that we part with our beloved friend, our leader, our storyteller. But like the telescope, Nell's vision will continue to expand our lives. Her image, though far away, will always be clear and strong in our hearts.

PENNY INTRODUCES STUDENT LOAN DEFERMENT LEGISLATION

HON. TIMOTHY J. PENNY

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced legislation to permit the deferral of payments on federally insured student loans during professional internships and residencies, regardless of duration.

This legislation is necessitated by changes made last year as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 (Public Law 101-239) in the deferment provisions of title IV of the Higher Education Act. That legislation prohibited medical residents from being classified as students for the purpose of deferment of their loan repayment. As of January 1, 1990, medical residents and other students engaged in professional internships or residencies will be eligible for deferment of Stafford, SLS, and Perkins loans for a period of only 2 years. While a mandated forbearance provision was agreed to in the Reconciliation Act that will allow a borrower the privilege of delaying repayment and capitalizing the added interest costs, medical internships and residencies can typically last for 3 to 7 years. Under current law, once a borrower has exhausted his or her deferment and forbearance, repayment must begin. On a modest stipend, the average doctor in training cannot afford a loan payment of $600 or more per month.

The growing debt burden of professional students, particularly medical doctors, has reached unprecedented levels. Eighty-one percent of 1989 graduates of medical school were indebted; the average debt of these graduates amounted to $42,374; 29 percent of this graduating class had debts in excess of $50,000. Ninety-five percent of 1989 graduates of osteopathic medical schools were indebted; the average debt of these graduates was approximately $67,000; 64 percent of the 1989 graduating class had debts in excess of $50,000 and 20 percent had debts exceeding $100,000. Finally, 89 percent of 1989 graduates fo dental schools were indebted; the average debt of these graduates was $43,300; 32 percent of this graduating class had debts in excess of $50,000.

Furthermore, the educational indebtedness levels of underrepresented minority graduates are even greater than they are among indebted graduates as a whole. The average debt of 1988 underrepresented minority medical school graduates was $44,897—$6,408 above the mean for all indebted graduates that year.

The legislation I offer today will insure that a borrower can defer repayment for the duration of the internship/ residency training period. Without this grant of deferment, I fear many medical students will opt for specialties with short residency periods or forgo additional training. This view is shared by the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges and both endorse this bill.

Representing a rural area I am concerned that many medical students who might otherwise relocate to rural America will instead opt for higher paying residencies in urban areas unless the current limited deferment period is extended. Many small cities across the country cannot even attract a single doctor. Many rural hospitals cannot find physicians in certain specialties. Unless we change current law, an already significant rural health crisis will be exacerbated.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is modest and needed. I urge you and my other colleagues to study the bill, which is reprinted below, and to join me as a sponsor.

H.R. —

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the interest subsidy provided borrowers of title IV loans during periods of internship or residency is critical to the borrower's ability to complete his or her educational program;

(2) a number of professional degree programs have an essential postgraduate training component that can last from one to seven or more years;

(3) health professions programs, in particular, require periods of postgraduate training for reasons relating to qualification to practice, licensure, specialty certification, or access to hospital privileges;

(4) the educational indebtedness of graduates of professional degree programs has reached unprecedented levels;

(5) the educational indebtedness levels of underrepresented minority graduates are even greater than they are among indebted graduates as a whole;

(6) given the level of financial support provided to borrowers in postgraduate training programs (primarily through stipends), debt levels such as these can make loan repayment obligations extremely difficult to meet;

(7) growing debt burdens may discourage pursuit of advanced training, adversely affect career choice, create financial barriers to practicing in remote locations, and exacerbate minority underrepresentation in certain professions; and

(8) many health professional graduates who are committed to caring for underserved community find this career path infeasible in light of their enormous debt burdens and the inability to defer their loan payments throughout the period of residency training.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act—

(1) to permit the deferral of payments on student loans throughout the duration of post-graduate internships and residency programs; and

(2) to ensure that loan repayment obligations are not acting as a disincentive to advanced training and adversely affecting career choice and service to the poor and underserved by temporarily alleviating loan repayment requirements for borrowers serving in internship and residency programs.

SEC. 2. AMENDMENTS.

(a) GSL PROGRAM.—Section 428(b)(1)(M)(vii) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1078(b)(1)(M)(vii)) is amended by striking "not in excess of two years".

(b) FISL PROGRAM.—Section 427(a)(2)(C)(vii) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1078(b)(1)(M)(vii)) is amended by striking "not in excess of two years".

(c) NDSL PROGRAM.—Section 464(c)(2)(A) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1087dd(c)(2)(A)) is amended by striking out the following: "The period during which repayment may be deferred by reason of clause (vi) shall not exceed 2 years."

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by section 1 of this Act shall apply on or after the date of enactment of this Act with respect to loans made under the Higher Education Act of 1965 before, on, or after that date.

TRIBUTE TO DR. JUDYLYNN MITCHELL

HON. ROY DYSON

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DYSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to one of the distinguished residents of Maryland's First Congressional District, Dr. Judylynn Mitchell. A resident of Salisbury, MD, she has over 15 years of experience as an educator. Dr. Mitchell is an active member of her community, participating in several civic and church organizations. She has written three theatrical productions and over 50 articles on African American history. Her literary works are also featured in the Association for the Study of African Life and History 1989-1990 Kit, published by the Associated Publishers, Inc. Dr. Mitchell is also listed in "Who's Who Among Black Americans." A resident of Salisbury, with her husband, Fred, she also has two children, a daughter, Cortni, and a son, Frederick.

McDonald's recent "Salute to Famous Black Americans," was developed by Dr. Mitchell. McDonald's Restaurants recently carried this salute to black leaders on placemats in its restaurant chain.

Mr. Speaker, in February, we paid special tribute to the contributions of many great African Americans. However, as my colleagues and I know, there is no single day or month or even year in which we can adequately recognize all of the achievements of great Americans. Today I am honored to share with all of my colleagues a tribute to African Americans, written by Dr. Mitchell.

Nationwide and across all geographical boundaries, our country has joined together to celebrate African American History Month.

The first observance of this historical tradition was in 1926, when Dr. Carter C. Goodwon, father of African American History, established Negro History Week. In 1976, during the bicentennial, the observance was nationalized as a month-long event. During this month, individuals reflected and actively participated in events at universities, schools, churches, sororities, fraternities, and within the political-government framework to commemorate those individuals who have made—and are making—the world a better place to live.

With pride, Americans will agree that our country is the greatest in the world. Great because of its citizens. Throughout the historical and societal changes our country has experienced or is currently experiencing, African Americans have been positive contributors to the building and shaping of our Nation. These Americans have significantly been, and remain, an integral part of the artistic, social, economical, educational, and political development of our society.

Our American heritage is rich because of the knowledge, tenacity, productivity, and creative accomplishments that this important group continues to make. A few of these individuals are listed below:

AFRICAN AMERICAN AND CONTRIBUTION

Frederick Douglass: Orator, Diplomat, Abolitionist.

Harriet Tubman: Leader of the Underground Railroad.

Garrett Morgan: Inventor of the automatic traffic light and gas mask.

Benjamin Banneker: Astronomer and Mathematician.

Jan Matzeliger: Inventor of shoe lasting machine.

Sojourner Truth: Human rights adviser and Abolitionist.

Nat Love: Cowboy and western pioneer.

Martin Luther King, Jr.: Nobel Peace Prize recipient and Civil Rights leader.

Mr. Speaker, during our official celebration of Black History Month and throughout our history, we must continue to strive for peace and harmony. I join Dr. Mitchell and the American people in their salute to the outstanding achievements and contributions of African Americans.

MINIMUM WAGE RISE DOESN'T GO FAR ENOUGH

HON. AUGUSTUS F. HAWKINS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, according to the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1989, the Federal minimum wage was raised from $3.35 per hour to $3.80 per hour on April 1 of this year. There are many benefits to increasing the Federal minimum wage. It will restore purchasing power of the wage floor, putting needed money into the hands of low wage workers and into the economy. It will increase incentives to work and actually reduce the deficit. However much misinformation persists about the effects of a minimum wage increase. One assumption is that for minimum wage workers living in poverty, the increase will be offset by decreases in food stamps. This is simply not true. The following is a letter to the Editor that appeared in the Washington Post on April 14. The authors of this letter are Robert Greenstein and Isaac Shapiro who are, respectively, director and senior budget analysis, Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. It addresses one of the false assumptions of the minimum wage increase very effectively.

A copy of the letter follows:

MINIMUM WAGE RISE DOESN'T GO FAR ENOUGH

To the Editor:

The headline "Rise in Minimum Wage Offers Minimum Joy" (front page, March 29) was close to the mark in describing the effects of the April 1 increase in the minimum wage, but one part of your analysis should be re-examined. You suggest that, for minimum-wage workers living in poverty, the increase will be offset by a decrease in food stamps. This conclusion misses two points about the food-stamp program:

(1) Food-stamp benefits are reduced by only a fraction of any increase in earnings. For every additional dollar earned, food-stamp benefits are reduced 24 cents to 36 cents. Most of the increased earnings from a minimum-wage increase will end in the pockets of minimum-wage workers, even if they receive food stamps.

(2) Only 37 percent of eligible low-income working households receive food stamps. Various reasons explain why so many working-poor households do not receive food-stamp benefits, including lack of information on the program and concern about the stigma of receiving benefits. The point remains that for most of the working poor, the increase in earnings will not be offset by a reduction in food-stamp benefits, since they do not receive such benefits.

The real reason the rise in the minimum wage will provide only minimum joy is the modesty of the increase. The two-step increase, following more than nine years when the minimum wage remained unchanged, will make up less than half of the ground that the wage floor lost to inflation. The minimum wage of $3.80 an hour in 1990 is 25 percent below its average value in the 1970's, after adjusting for inflation. Even when the second and final step to $4.25 an hour occurs in 1991, the wage floor will fall 20 percent short of its average purchasing power in the 1970's.

ROBERT GREENSTEIN,
ISAAC SHAPIRO,
Washington, April 3, 1990.

OLDER AMERICANS MONTH

HON. THOMAS J. DOWNEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, each year, the month of May is designated by the President as "Older Americans Month," a month set aside to honor the millions of senior citizens residing in our Nation. Throughout May, each State undertakes programs and activities to honor the elderly, and to reaffirm our Nation's commitment to improving the quality of life for this special segment of our population.

As the chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging's Subcommittee on Human Services which has oversight responsibility over the Older Americans Act, I join in saluting our Nation's seniors. The success that the Older Americans Act has enjoyed for the past 25 years is largely due to the thousands of individuals who make up what is known as the aging network—the State and area agencies on aging, the service providers, the medical professionals, the academic segment, the care-givers, the employers, the volunteers and all those who strive each day to keep our elderly citizens independent. These individuals work tirelessly on often strained budgets to provide a variety of services to their constituencies.

Besides the many activities that have been planned around the United States to celebrate Older Americans Month, I think it would be a fitting tribute to all the older Americans of our Nation if President Bush would finally make the call for a 1991 White House conference on aging. Since June of 1989, I along with many of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, have been urging the President to call the conference, as authorized by Public Law 100–175, the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1987.

President Bush is the only President to delay calling such a conference this long. We were somewhat heartened by the fact that the administration included in its fiscal year 1991 HHS budget $1 million for a White House conference on aging under title IV of the Older Americans Act.

However, the continued delay in announcing the conference hardly sends a message of hope to our Nation's aged, and certainly does not indicate that aging issues will be a priority in the 21st Century. Time is running out, and if a successful and effective Conference is to be held next year, planning must begin immediately. Some States have already begun the process individually, but there is need for national leadership.

A White House conference on aging will provide an important opportunity to bring together people from all walks of life and begin the work on a national aging agenda. The aging population is growing at a rapid pace; we desperately need an opportunity to forge an agenda. The graying of America will continue well into the next century with the aging of the baby boom generation. Federal officials must have a much more active dialogue with gerontologists, activists, and the grass roots so that it can have a better understanding of the concerns and the needs of older Americans, and so that older Americans can have a better understanding of the constraints on public policy in the decades ahead. The 1991 White House conference on aging would be a perfect setting for this dialog, and I must, once again, urge its announcement.

In addition, I would like to urge my colleagues to celebrate Older Americans Month by cosponsoring my resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 276, which celebrates the 25th anniversary of the Older Americans Act. The Older Americans Act has been amended 12 times since it was first enacted in 1965, and has stood the test of time. The next reauthorization is scheduled for 1991, and the Subcommittee on Human Services has been working hard in anticipation of this event. The Older Americans Act is a success story that continues to bring dignity and independence to America's seniors who are in the greatest social and economic need by providing them with special support services. My resolution, which honors not only those who receive the services mandated by the Older Americans Act, but those who provide them, has approximately 135 cosponsors. Senator DAVID PRYOR, chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, has introduced an identical resolution, Senate Concurrent Resolution 99.

We have come a long way in improving the lives of older Americans. As we return to our Congressional districts during the month of May to attend events planned to honor our own senior citizens, we must commit ourselves not to forget about them during the rest of the year. We still have a long way to go. We must work together to ensure that the older Americans of our great country receive the care and attention they deserve.

SUMMARY OF 1989 TAX RETURN DATA

HON. THOMAS J. DOWNEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I am once again making a summary of my income tax return public because I believe that Federal officeholders should be forthcoming about the sources of their income. Therefore, I ask that the following summary be printed in the official record of the day's proceedings:

Hon. Thomas J. Downey

Summary of 1989 Tax Return Data

Salary—U.S. House of Representatives	$89,500
Less: Contributions to Sec. 401(k) Plan	(4,475)
Salary—U.S. Senate Disbursing Office (Mrs. Downey)	20,820
Interest Income	432
Dividend Income	619
New York State Tax Refund	955
Taxable Portion of IRA Distributions	5,544
Rental and Partnership Losses (after Application of Passive Loss Limitations)	(3,672)
Net Capital Loss	(240)
Business Income—Honoraria (Gross)	36,700
Total Income	146,183
Less: Contributions to Keogh Retirement Plan	(4,787)
Adjusted Gross Income	141,396
Itemized Deductions:
Taxes	11,543
Interest Expense (after 20% phase-out for personal interest)	21,498
Contributions	15,389
Miscellaneous Deductions (after 2% AGI Limitation)	4,349
Total Itemized Deductions	52,779
Subtotal	88,617
Less: Personal Exemptions	8,000
1989 Taxable Income	80,617
Federal Income Tax	18,838
Tax on Early Withdrawal of IRA	554
Total Federal Tax	19,392
New York State/New York City Nonresident Earnings Income Tax	6,688
Illinois Income Tax	70
New Jersey Income Tax	39

RAIL TRANSPORT OF HAZARDOUS MATERIALS IN FRA REGION 2

HON. WILLIAM J. COYNE

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, today I am releasing a new report from the General Accounting Office that contains disturbing information for everyone who lives and works in the mid-Atlantic region.

This report is called Railroad Safety: More FRA Oversight Needed to Ensure Rail Safety in Region 2.

I requested the GAO to examine how well the Federal Railroad Administration is regulating rail transport of hazardous materials in our part of the country. This report is the result.

Its findings indicate that FRA enforcement in Region 2—an area that includes six States and the District of Columbia—is wholly inadequate.

Let me give three examples.

The FRA is supposed to inspect shippers of hazardous materials, and the railroads themselves. One of its most important duties in this area is keeping close watch on these "inspection points," as they are called.

But the GAO found that in FRA Region 2, there are not even any complete, up-to-date lists of these inspection points. As a result, 70 percent of them were not inspected in 1987 and 1988.

Moreover, FRA Region 2 does not require shippers of hazardous materials to register. Thus, its inspectors may never identify some rail-related sites that handle hazardous materials.

Second, the GAO discovered that the FRA relies on the rail industry to enforce its own speed rules. As long as a track is maintained to its standard, the FRA's inspectors will not issue a speed violation.

One result is that even when a hazardous materials accident in my State was the result of excess speed—when a train was going 60 miles per hour on a curved track with a 40 miles-per-hour limit—FRA Region 2 issued no violation.

Why? Because the track was not defective.

Third, there are far too few personnel assigned to inspect hazardous materials. Indeed, as of March, FRA Region 2 had only six hazardous materials inspectors to cover Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia. This area includes 22,000 railroad route miles.

The GAO report suggests a series of reforms to beef up the Hazardous-Materials Inspection Program in FRA Region 2. Among the more important are increasing the number of inspectors in the region, and changing policy so that the FRA will issue speed violations when speed limits have not been observed.

I believe that the GAO recommendations are well-taken, and I urge Transportation Secretary Skinner to implement them.

It is true that some of the GAO suggestions would cost relatively small amounts of money. In a time of budget constraints, some may say we cannot afford such safety measures.

But when we consider how serious this problem is, and when we realize the great risk that we run with the lax program we have now, I would suggest that we have no prudent alternative. We should act before it is too late.

WHAT BEING AMERICAN MEANS TO HILARY WILLIAMS

HON. JOSEPH E. BRENNAN

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. BRENNAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Hiliary Williams, an 11-year-old attending Yarmouth Intermediate School in Yarmouth, ME, who is this year's eastern region winner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service's 1990 National Poster Contest. Last Friday, Hilary's entry took third place nationally at a ceremony held for the regional winners at the Department of Justice.

The INS contest in which Hilary participated calls the attention of young people to an American experience which ancestors of most of us share, whether those ancestors arrived in the 1630's or the 1930's, whether they were escaping religious or ethnic persecution or seeking economic prosperity in the "Land of Opportunity."

Hiliary's colorful entry showcases this immigrant experience. Though I am unable to show you her artwork, I would like to share with you the content of the 50-word essay she submitted to accompany her poster. The theme of the contest was "What Being an American Means to Me":

I am free, yet I belong. I am like others because I am equal, but I am one of a kind. Whether I am a leader or a follower, whether I am rich or poor, it doesn't make a difference—I am still an American with rights and opportunities.

I applaud Hilary Williams for her talent and eloquence, and I congratulate her on the recognition she received last week here in Washington.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. BETTYE COLLIER-THOMAS

HON. WALTER E. FAUNTROY

OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. FAUNTROY. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I offer my warmest appreciation to a gifted administrator, historian and "worker of miracles."

Through these last years, I have had the privilege of working with Dr. Collier-Thomas as we, together, guided legislation through the Congress of the United States that designated the Mary McLeod Bethune Council House a national historic site in 1982. Then began the struggle to make the Congress keep its commitment to provide even a token funding of this important historic site and its irreplaceable collections.

Today, the Bethune Museum and Archives is one of the most significant archival collections documenting the long-neglected history of black women and the black family. Because of her untiring and gifted work, future generations will have the opportunity to learn about their remarkable past. A nationally and internationally recognized site for archival research in this field, the collections are, in themselves, a tribute to Dr. Collier-Thomas' determination and powers of persuasion.

I congratulate Dr. Collier-Thomas upon her new, challenging posts at Temple University in Philadelphia. It is their gain—and our loss.

We will always remember her talented endeavors on behalf of the Bethune Museum and Archives, and my warmest personal wishes go with her.

A CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO ELMAR J. BAXTER

HON. GLENN M. ANDERSON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to, and acknowledge my deep respect for, Elmar J. Baxter. On Wednesday, May 2, 1990, after a long maritime career, he will be honored for this retirement at the Spruce Goose Dome. This occasion gives me the distinct pleasure to pay tribute to an institution in the southern California maritime industry.

A native Californian, Elmar Baxter graduated from the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, and sailed as a deck officer before launching a successful newspaper career. In 1969, he was public relations account executive for Princess Cruises before being named west coast Editor of Travel Weekly. Elmar first joined the harbor department in 1970, as public relations director. Five years later, after a restructuring of the department, his position was changed to communications officer.

Elmar Baxter's years of diligent and competent work have led to numerous honors for the Port of Long Beach. Since he joined the harbor department 20 years ago, Long Beach has been selected several times by the American Association of Port Authorities as having the most effective overall communications program of any U.S. port. His work on port publications has also won many awards for excellence. Such excellence led to his selection as the Long Beach Harbor Department's Employee of the Year in 1989, an honor he well deserved.

Elmar's service is not just limited to his employment with the port. He has also been a member of the World Trade Week publicity committee and served as its chairman three times. He is an honorary member of the Long Beach Port Ambassadors and the Propeller Club, and is port adviser to the Long Beach International Seafarers Center. Clearly, his absence will be strongly felt within the maritime community.

And so Mr. Speaker, I pay tribute to Elmar J. Baxter, a legend in the southern California maritime industry. And while he is leaving the harbor staff, I know he is not leaving the maritime community. As Shakespear once wrote, he will travel on to "unpathed waters, undreamed shores." In his honor, my wife, Lee, joins me in extending our congratulations on his retirement. We wish his wife of 43 years, Jeanne, and their two children, Ken and Jamie, all the best in the years ahead.

IN HONOR OF STANLEY H. KAPLAN

HON. CHARLES E. SCHUMER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to honor Stanley H. Kaplan, the founder and chief executive officer of the Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Center, Ltd. Mr. Kaplan's personal love for teaching has allowed him to build a test preparation organization which recently celebrated its 50th anniversary. I learned first hand of Mr. Kaplan's dedication when I worked as a tutor for the Kaplan organization in Brooklyn.

The Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Organization has helped more than 1,500,000 students reach their academic and career goals. The Kaplan Organization prepares students for more than 30 standardized admissions and licensure tests, which include the SAT [Scholastic Aptitude Test] and ACT [American College Testing Program Assessment] for entrance into college, the LSAT [Law School Admissions Test], MCAT [Medical College Admissions Test], GMAT [Graduate Management Admissions Test], the GRE [Graduate Record Exam], and other graduate admissions exams, and professional licensure exams, including the bar review, national medical boards, the nursing licensure exam, and others, in addition to self-improvement courses, like speed reading.

Stanley H. Kaplan invented test preparation. Through Mr. Kaplan's dedication to education, individuals are encouraged to reach their full potential and strive for excellence. Because of his commitment, people need no longer fear the standardized exam. Mr. Kaplan's programs have helped to ease the anxiety that so many students feel when confronted with their admissions tests.

Mr. Kaplan's commitment to education goes beyond test preparation. His scholarship programs and grants have made it possible for underprivileged students to enter college and the professions. One such program is the Double Discovery Center, run through Columbia University. This program helps talented high school students from disadvantaged backgrounds to succeed in school, attend college and choose a career. Many of these economically disadvantaged youngsters now attend some of the Nation's finest colleges and universities including City University of New York, Stanford, Yale, State University of New York, Cornell, and Columbia.

Together with his wife, Rita, Mr. Kaplan has founded the Rita and Stanley H. Kaplan Cancer Center at New York University Medical Center, where he is also a member of the board of trustees. Through their generous contributions, they have made possible the Rita and Stanley H. Kaplan House, a residential treatment center of the Jewish Board of Family and Children's Services. Mr. Kaplan also serves on the council of Overseers and in the domestic affairs assembly of the UJA—Federation of Jewish Philanthropies and on the board of the Roundabout Theatre.

I am honored to recognize one of Brooklyn's own native sons, Mr. Stanley H. Kaplan as the Stanley H. Kaplan Organization enters its 50th year of success. His contributions to our community and to the Nation have earned our deepest gratitude.

KILDEE HONORS HAROLD BEST

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has served his community with unceasing dedication for the past 30 years, Mr. Harold E. Best.

Mr. Best was born in Metamora, MI, on March 6, 1925. He grew up on a farm in Metamora, and he was active with the 4–H Club and the Boy Scouts of America, where he was awarded the coveted Eagle Scout Award. He married his wife Kathryn in 1947, and they have four children. In 1959, when his father passed away, Mr. Best took over the operation of the family farm, and he continues to be a dairy farmer to this day. He is a past president and active member for 35 years of the Metamora Lions Club, where he has attained life membership. In addition, Mr. Best is a member of the local Masonic Lodge.

In addition to running a dairy farm and being a dedicated family man, Mr. Best has spent countless hours helping others through his participation in town and county public service roles. Mr. Best started out by serving with distinction on the Metamora Township board and on the Lapeer County Road Commission. He also served on the Metamora Township Zoning Board of Appeals, the board of directors of the Lapeer Area Ambulance Service, and the board of directors of the Oxford Cooperative Elevator in Oxford, MI, where he currently holds the office of president. It is as supervisor of Metamora Township that Mr. Best has served with the greatest distinction. Beginning his term of office as trustee of Metamora Township in 1959, he was appointed supervisor in 1960 to fulfill the term of office of the prior supervisor. He then successfully ran for the post of supervisor, and has held that post continually until his retirement on February 1, 1990. I have always had a high degree of respect for the position of supervisor for it is at this level of government that one truly sees first-hand the problems affecting our constituents.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great respect and admiration that I rise to pay tribute to Mr. Best. Through his selfless dedication to helping those around him in his various posts, he has made Metamora Township a more enjoyable place to live. I commend Mr. Best for his many years of hard work, and I hope that he will continue to be active in his community in the coming years. It is with pride that I commend Mr. Best for a job well done, and on behalf of myself and everyone else in my district whose lives he has affected, I thank Mr. Best for everything that he has done. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Mr. Harold E. Best.

COMMEMORATING DR. ROBERT C. MAXSON, PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, LAS VEGAS

HON. JAMES. H. BILBRAY

OF NEVADA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to pay tribute to the 1990 recipient of the American Jewish Committee's Institute of Human Relations Award, Dr. Robert C. Maxson. This prestigious award will be presented to Bob at a dinner in his honor on Sunday, May 6, 1990 at Caesars Palace. I have known Bob for many years and he is truly deserving of this honor.

Dr. Bob Maxson is clearly one of the most influential and recognized civic leaders in Nevada. His efforts on behalf of our southern Nevada community have resulted in significant improvements in the quality of all Nevadans lives.

Bob assumed his duties as president of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, on August 1, 1984. Before coming to UNLV, he served as the senior vice president for academic affairs at the University of Houston. In that capacity, he was the chief academic officer of the 45,000 student university.

Bob earned his doctorate from Mississippi State University in 1970. He has written two college textbooks which together have been adopted in approximately 100 universities. He also has written numerous articles which have been published in scholarly journals.

In addition to his professional accomplishments, Bob is involved in numerous civic activities in Las Vegas and serves on the board of directors of such organizations as the Nevada Allied Arts Council, National Conference of Christians and Jews, Nevada Special Olympics, American Cancer Society, and the Las Vegas Symphony. He also serves on the executive committee of the Nevada Development Authority and on the board of directors of Valley Bank of Nevada and Freeport McMoRan Gold.

The American Jewish Committee's Institute of Human Relations Award was first presented in 1977. It is awarded annually to business and civic leaders whose contributions have enhanced the community, advanced intergroup understanding and promoted the cause of human rights. I am honored to have this opportunity to extend my sincerest congratulations to Bob on receiving this well-deserved award.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me today in commending Dr. Bob Maxson for his distinguished leadership in civic and community endeavors. His contributions to the State of Nevada have earned him recognition as an outstanding member of the Las Vegas community.

IN MEMORY OF JUDGE ROBERT VANCE

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3961, a bill to rename the existing Birmingham Federal building after Judge Robert Vance.

Judge Vance, as you all know, died senselessly when a mail bomb exploded in his home last November. His death symbolized the long road our country still has to follow to become a more compassionate, more reasonable, and gentler society. For some unexplained reason, someone, somewhere out there felt that sending death through the mail would send a signal to America. Such a cowardly act shocked our Nation, but in an ironic way reminded each of us of the potential day-to-day dangers involved in public service.

I did not know Judge Vance, but I did know of his reputation. He was one of those rare individuals who was held in high regard by those who knew him, and those who wished to know him. Bob Vance loved his family, loved public service, and loved his country. Bob Vance had so many strongly felt convictions and beliefs, working everyday to move Alabama and the Nation in the right direction. His values were concrete, and he was willing to voice them, even when they weren't universally popular. That, my colleagues, is the meaning of true leadership.

America needed Bob Vance, will miss Bob Vance, and must always remember Bob Vance and what he stood for. By taking this small step in renaming this office in his honor, I hope that his memory will never be forgotten.

Please support H.R. 3961.

GENEVIEVE U. GILMORE

HON. HOWARD WOLPE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I want to pay special tribute to a constituent of mine, Ms. Genevieve U. Gilmore, who recently passed away. On May 7, 1990, the Kalamazoo YWCA will recognize the life of Genevieve Gilmore and her countless contributions to Kalamazoo and the YWCA, which she served for years as a member of the board of trustees.

Genevieve chose to dedicate both her time and resources with the YWCA to those deserving and less fortunate. She inspired members of her own family to join her endeavors, particularly her daughter, Martha Gilmore Parfet, who is currently serving as honorary chairwoman of the YWCA's Opportunity 2000 campaign, and her granddaughter, Sally Parfet Williams, who is past president of the YWCA and involved in the founding of the Opportunity 2000 campaign.

Genevieve's support allowed the YWCA to better aid victims of domestic and sexual assault and to offer quality child care programs. It is because of efforts such as these, as well as the inspirational guidance Genevieve provided to many women and their families in the community, that the Kalamazoo YWCA has honored her by designating its most prestigious award, the volunteer leadership award, in her name.

I feel privileged to have had Genevieve U. Gilmore as a constituent in my congressional district and commend the YWCA for bestowing upon her this posthumous honor recognizing her extraordinary leadership as a YWCA volunteer.

SPECIAL RECOGNITION OF A DISTINGUISHED GENTLEMAN

HON. BRIAN J. DONNELLY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend special recognition to one of my constituents, Baron Hugo. This tribute was written by Mr. Morris Freedman, and appeared in the Milton Record-Transcript on Thursday, November 20, 1980.

Born with a musical beat 77 years ago, Baron Hugo, Milton and New England's living legend of the "Golden Age of Jazz and the Big Band Era" is still keeping feet tapping and dancing with his music, and his dixieland band.

"Tennessee Waltz, Always, Viennese Waltz, In the Mood, And I Love You So" as well as "Harlem Nocturne, One O'Clock Jump and Basin Street Blues" were the favorite songs of the thousands who heard the Baron Hugo Orchestra at the Totem Pole Ballroom in Newton.

The white-and-dyed-hair set, known as "The Stardust Generation," fondly recalls when dancing meant holding your partner around the waist, it was proper then, the closeness was decided on by the dancers. Many a romance began and was nourished to the music of The Baron at the Totem Pole, enhanced by the dimmed lights and sweet words of endearment whispered and heard.

The strains of his music were also heard throughout the years at the vaudeville theaters, on boat and moonlight cruises, Symphony Hall, the World Series at Braves Field in 1947, while hundreds of wedding receptions where made more meaningful by his tuneful presence.

The Baron's philosophy concerning music covers many aspects. He feels that all children should be introduced to music at an early age, and be encouraged to sing or play a musical instrument. To the younger set: "Enjoy the best of life, and make the most of it!" On retirement: "Retirement? Never! Music has never been work to me, so why retire from something you enjoy doing?"

His greatest desire has been to make people happy through his music, be it dancing or listening, a goal he set out to fulfill at an early age and hasn't stopped reaching for.

Shakespeare said it all: "If music be the food of love, play on!" Play on, Baron, play on!

POLISH UNION OF THE U.S.A. CELEBRATES 100TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Polish Union of the United States of America, located in Wilkes-Barre, PA. The Polish Union of the U.S.A. is a fraternal benefit organization and is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

The Polish Union was established on August 27, 1890, in St. Paul, MN, at the site of a flourishing Polish colony. In reaction to the large number of Polish immigrants who came to this country in search of freedom and opportunity, Monsignor Dominic Majer, a distinguished Roman Catholic prelate, established the Polish Union of the U.S.A. Monsignor Majer recognized the need for a national organization to help these people hurdle the obstacles they confronted as they came to America. The Polish Union attempted to help native Poles overcome the language barrier, protect them from unscrupulous strangers, provide them with adequate insurance benefits, orient them to the cultural differences, and preserve both their ancient Catholic faith and the culture and heritage of Poland.

In 1893, the Polish Union had 3,000 members. By 1896, the organization decided to move its national headquarters closer to the Atlantic coast to more effectively serve the Polish immigrants as they arrived in this country. The headquarters were moved to Buffalo, NY until 1906, then they were moved to Wilkes-Barre, PA.

Monsignor Majer and the other founders built the Polish Union on high principles and standards. The Polish Union established its constitution at a convention in 1933, held in Wilkes-Barre. The Polish Union still adheres to the goals established in 1933. The Union is dedicated to the following purposes as outlined in its constitution:

1. The collection and maintenance of funds for the issuance of death certificates to its members, for aid in accidental injury, or in disease, and for the aid in old age.
2. The collection and maintenance of funds for national and educational purposes, and such other funds as the convention of the Polish Union shall, from time to time, establish.
3. To strive for the moral, religious, and material development of the people of Polish descent living in America.
4. The commemoration of national anniversaries.
5. To instill love and loyalty for the United States of America.
6. To develop in the youth love and honor for the Polish people; respect for and obedience to the principles and teachings of the Roman Catholic Church; and at the same time to assist in bringing them up as good and useful citizens of the United States.

The Polish Union of the U.S.A. is working, as it has in the past, to serve the community. The organization conducts numerous cultural, civic, and family projects, including essay contests; coloring contests for youngsters; polka dance classes for all ages; bowling leagues; golf tournaments; self and social improvement classes; debutante balls; Christmas and Easter holiday parties for children; Easter egg coloring classes; holiday custom socials for the young and old; Polish language classes; bus trips; family day; fraternal youth frolic; and cooking classes.

In addition, the Polish Union has a scholarship aid program, an archive and library for the promotion of Polish ethnic studies among high school and college students. They provide students with information on how to obtain scholarships and graduate school grants, how to participate in summer school courses in Poland, and information on becoming enrolled in medical school programs abroad. The Union also offers a modern life insurance plan at an economical cost. They support civic, charitable, and patriotic movements, both local and national, and aid in genealogical studies.

Mr. Speaker, there are approximately 12,000,000 Polish Americans in the United States today. It is with great pride, as a Polish-American, that I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join me in honoring and congratulating the Polish Union of the United States of America as they celebrate their 100th anniversary.

CONGRESSIONAL TRIBUTE TO LA VOCE ITALIANA AND ITS PUBLISHER, CESARINA EARL, OF TOTOWA, NJ, AND THE LATE EMILIO AND MARY AUGUSTO

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, for nearly six decades, we in the Eighth Congressional District of New Jersey and, indeed, in the entire New Jersey-New York-Pennsylvania region, have been indeed fortunate to be served by one of the Nation's truly outstanding newspapers, La Voce Italiana—the Italian Voice.

This outstanding publication, which was established 58 years ago by the late Emilio Augusto, and his late wife, Mary Crapelli Augusto—gifted people who were true visionaries—has had its great tradition carried on by their daughter, Mrs. Cesarina Earl, who has run this great publication for the past 8 years.

Mr. Speaker, on Sunday, May 6, 1990, this great tradition of the Augusto family and their tremendous contributions to the Italian community of the greater New Jersey-New York-Pennsylvania area, and to all communities, for that matter, will be celebrated with a dinner at the Brownstone House in Paterson, NJ.

I know that just as Mrs. Cesarina Earl will be there in person, so will the inspiring presence of her late parents be there in spirit. And I know this event will be a great source of pride, not only to Mrs. Earl, but to her family; her devoted husband, Eugene O. Earl; her children, Douglas A. Earl and her daughter, Adrienne E. Earl.

Mr. Speaker, the late Emilio Augusto and Mary Crapelli Augusto came to America in the 1920's and, like so many immigrants, dreamed of a better life. They both worked hard to make that dream come true. Mary and Emilio, who had worked together for an Italian newspaper in New York in the late 1920's, were married in 1932. They decided to begin their own newspaper in Paterson, an Italian-American weekly which they called "La Voce Italiana"—the Italian Voice—and in the past 58 years their efforts and the efforts of their daughter have produced one of the most important and respected publications anywhere.

They worked hard together to make the paper a huge success. Emilio worked the presses while Mary sold advertising. Through their work Emilio and Mary Augusto became well known and highly respected in the city of Paterson. In 1947, Mary Augusto became the first woman to run for the office of mayor of Paterson.

After the death of her mother in 1982, and with her father in failing health, Cesarina Earl assumed duties as editor and publisher of the Italian Voice and has carried on the great traditions begun by her parents.

Mrs. Earl herself is a product of Paterson and has made great contributions to her community. She attended Paterson schools and graduated Seton Hall University in 1965 with a BA degree in history. She has furthered her education, taking coursework in library and information science at Caldwell College, Rutgers University, Seton Hall University, and the University of California at Santa Barbara. She holds New Jersey certification as a school librarian/education media specialist and as a professional librarian.

Mr. Speaker, Cesarina Earl has served the children of New Jersey through her fine work at the Paterson Free Public Library, the North Bergen Free Public Library, and at the Horace Mann Elementary School No. 9 in North Bergen. Along with her work both as a librarian and with the Italian Voice, Mrs. Earl has, throughout her life, been extremely active in professional and civic organizations.

She is a member of the New Jersey Educational Media Association, the New Jersey Library Association, the Bergen County School Media Association, the Passaic County School Media Association—which she founded in 1980, the Society of School Librarians International, the ZONTA Club of the Paterson area, the National Organization of Italian-American Women, the National Italian American Foundation, the Coalition of Italo-American Associations, the Association of New Jersey Professional Women, the Women of the Moose—Seaside Chapter No. 1248, the Italian Heritage Association of North Jersey, the American Italian Cultural Roundtable of New York, the Executive Committee of the Festa Italiana State Arts Center Heritage Festivals, Inc., the Horace Mann School PTA, the Working Press Association of New Jersey, and SIAMO. Mrs. Earl is also a member of St. Michael the Archangel Roman Catholic Church of Paterson.

Among her numerous honors and awards, Cesarina Earl has received a certificate from the New Jersey Educational Media Association for her research; a plaque from Passaic County Community College for her continuing contribution to the Italo-American Community of North Jersey, and the Faith in Paterson Award from the Greater Paterson Chamber of Commerce in 1984.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to present a brief profile of Mrs. Cesarina Earl and her late parents. Truly, in the work they have done, as civic leaders and as visionaries publishing La Voce Italiana, they have made their community, their State, our Nation, and the world a better place to live.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER

HON. F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, JR.

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 1, 1990

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, through the following statement, I am making my financial net worth as of March 31, 1990, a matter of public record. I have filed similar statements for each of the 11 preceding years I have served in the Congress.

ASSETS

Real property	Value
Single family residence at 609 Fort Williams Parkway, City of Alexandria, VA, at assessed valuation. (Assessed at $647,100.00. Ratio of assessed to market value—100%.) (Encumbered)	$647,100.00
Condominium at N76 W14726 North Point Drive, Village of Menomonee Falls, Waukesha County, WI, at assessor's estimated market value. (Unencumbered.)	69,400.00
Undivided 25/44ths interest in single family residence at N52 W32654 Maple Lane, Village of Chenequa, Waukesha County, WI at 25/44ths of assessor's estimated market value of $261,800.00 (Unencumbered)	148,750.00
Total real property	865,250.00

PERSONAL PROPERTY, COMMON AND PREFERRED STOCKS

Number of shares		Value
338	Firstar Corp., at $29.75	$10,055.50
450.225	American Telephone & Telegraph, at $42.00	18,909.45
558	Idaho Power Corp., at $26.875	14,996.25
22	Ogden Projects Corp., at $23.75	522.50
450	First Interstate Bancorp., at $34.00	15,300.00
139.604	American Information Technologies, at $59.875	8,358.79
92.098	Bell Atlantic Corp., at $94.375	8,691.75
208.052	Bell South Corp., at $54.50	11,338.83
94.385	NYNEX, Inc., at $81.625	7,704.18
148	Pacific Telesis, Inc., at $46.50	6,822.00
143.814	Southwest Bell, Inc., at $56.50	8,125.49

PERSONAL PROPERTY, COMMON AND PREFERRED STOCKS—Continued

Number of shares		Value
94.601	US West, Inc., $73.875	6,988.65
613.370	Tenneco Corp., at $66.875	41,019.12
580	Nevada Power Co., at $22.25	12,905.00
838	Newell Corp., at $24.625	20,635.75
720	General Mills, Inc., at $73.625	53,010.00
800	Kellogg Corp., at $61.125	48,900.00
2,000	Dunn & Bradstreet, Inc., at $45.125	90,250.00
1,000	Halliburton Co., at $45.375	45,375.00
18,576	Kimberly-Clark Corp., $64.625	1,200,474.00
500	Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, at $81.375	40,687.50
100	Rank Organisation ADR, at $13.00	1,300.00
2,132	Exxon Corp., at $46.125	98,338.50
1,162	Amoco Corp., at $53.50	62,167.00
1,080	Eastman Kodak Co., at $39.125	42,255.00
1,075	General Electric Co., at $64.25	69,068.75
408	General Motors Corp., at $45.875	18,717.00
20	General Motors Corp., Series H, at $22.875	457.50
5,213	Merck & Co., Inc., at $69.50	362,303.50
476	Warner Lambert Co., at $104.75	49,861.00
700	Continental Corp., at $30.375	21,262.50
200	Sears Roebuck & Co., at $39.25	7,850.00
910	Ogden Corp., at $25.875	23,546.25
455	OMI Corp., at $11.25	5,118.75
418	International Business Machines, at $106.125	44,360.25
26	Sandusky Voting Trust, at $70.00	1,820.00
711	Monsanto Corp., at $107.375	76,343.63
450	E.I. du Pont de Nemours Corp., at $38.375	17,268.75
450	Houston Industries, Inc., at $33.375	15,018.75
525	Pacific Gas & Electric, Inc., at $21.875	11,484.38
512	Wisconsin Energy Corp., at $28.50	14,592.00
900	Abbott Laboratories, Inc., at $65.75	59,175.00
1,410	Banc One Corp., at $26.375	37,188.75
127	Premark International, Inc., at $27.50	3,492.50
100	Unjsys, Inc., preferred at $35.75	3,575.00
333	Benton County Mining Co., at no value	Nil
	Total common and preferred stocks	2,717,694.62

LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES

Face amount		Cash surrender value
$12,000	Northwestern Mutual No. 4378000	$18,467.80
30,000	Northwestern Mutual No. 4574061	44,024.18
10,000	Massachusetts Mutual No.4116575	4,099.37
100,000	Massachusetts Mutual No. 4228344	77,100.91
25,000	Old Line Life Insurance Co. No.515950	19,404.18
	Total Life insurance policies	163,096.44

BANK AND SAVINGS & LOAN ACCOUNTS

	Amount
Bank One, Milwaukee, N.A., checking account No. 0046–2366	$899.85
Bank One, Milwaukee, N.A., preferred savings account No. 4158–8070	84,714.01
Bank One, Milwaukee, N.A., savings account No. 497–525	610.31
Federated Financial Savings & Loan of Butler, WI, savings account No. 2–0033296	1,245.11

BANK AND SAVINGS & LOAN ACCOUNTS—Continued

	Amount
Sergeant at Arms, U.S. House of Representatives, checking account No. 748	493.19
Burke & Herbert Bank of Alexandria, VA, checking account No. 601–301–5	1,300.69
Valley Bank, N.A. of Hartland, WI, checking account No. 03056664–06	1,423.38
Valley Bank, N.A. of Hartland, WI, savings account No. 03056544–11	516.31
Federated Financial Savings & Loan of Butler, WI, individual retirement accounts	27,363.32
Total bank and savings & loan accounts	118,566.17
Miscellaneous
1985 Pontiac 6000 automobile (at Blue Book trade-in value)	5,050.00
Office furniture and equipment (estimated)	1,000.00
Furniture, clothing and personal property (estimated)	105,000.00
Stamp collection (estimated)	25,000.00
Interest in Wisconsin Retirement Fund	35,301.52
Deposits in Congressional Retirement Fund	58,275.65
Value of deposits in Federal Thrift Savings Plan	16,115.44
Traveler's checks	6,850.00
Total miscellaneous	252,592.61
Total assets	4,117,199.84
Liabilities
Sovran Mortgage Co. of Richmond, VA (amount due on mortgage on Alexandria, VA, residence) loan No. 564377	183,044.64
Miscellaneous charge accounts (estimated)	2,000.00
Total liabilities	185,044.64
Net worth	3,932,155.20
Statement of 1989 taxes paid
Federal income tax	47,550.00
Wisconsin income tax	14,220.00
Menomonee Falls, WI, property tax	1,995.37
Chenequa, WI, property tax	7,064.13
Alexandria, VA, property tax	6,887.10

I further declare that I am trustee of a trust established under the will of my late father, F. James Sensenbrenner, Sr., for the benefit of my sister, Margaret A. Sensenbrenner, and of my two sons, F. James Sensenbrenner III and Robert Alan Sensenbrenner. I am further the direct beneficiary of two trusts, but have no control over the assets of either trust. My wife, Cheryl Warren Sensenbrenner, and I are trustees of separate trusts established for the benefit of our minor sons and are also custodians of accounts established for the benefit of each son under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act.

Also, I am neither an officer nor a director of any corporation organized under the laws of the State of Wisconsin or of any other State or foreign country.